LORD AUCKLAND'S SCIENTIFIC SOIRÉES.

The Governor-General's third soirée was equally attractive with the two preceding ones, although perhaps the number of articles displayed was less numerous.

The fine arts contributed their due and proper share to the entertainment, and threw into shade the less dazzling, but more rare, productions of the ancient world.

The eye on entering the hall was first drawn to the beautiful cups, presented to be run for at the ensuing Races by Lord Auckland and by Baboo Dwarkanath: they are indeed chef d'œuvres of the rival artists Messrs. Pittar and Hamilton and it is difficult to assign the palm of elegance, taste or good workmanship between them. But we must look upon these as adjuncts only to the proper and scientific entertainment of the evening.

On the same table with the Auckland Cup, was arranged for exhibition, the superb series of national medals presented to General Allard by the French Monarch, as a species of equivalent for the rich collection of Babylonian coins deposited in the Royal Library at Paris by the General on the part of their discoverer the Chevalier Ventura. They well merit a minute examination.

Of other beautiful works of art, we observed a marble mosaic chess-board inlaid with patterns copied from the Taj at Agra, exhibited by the Revd. Mr. Parish, and illustrated by a portfolio of drawings of every detail of that "pride of India."

A large copper-plate map of India in the devanâgaré character—the first proof of the Cochinchinese Dictionary and of the Atf-lela, were among the literary novelties. A wax model of the human brain, taken to pieces to exhibit its interior structure, excited a great deal of attention, and was explained to enquirers by Mr. Principal Bramley. In osteology, we had an opportunity of inspecting the wondrously slender and perpendicular frame of that solemn guardian of our steeples and chimney tops, the ajutant,—and at the other end of the room, of that near approach to humanity, the caricature of the skeleton of man, the ourangoutang of Sumatra.

Of fossils, the series selected for this evening exhibited an animal now wholly alien to the continent of India—the hippopotamus. The Asiatic Society's Museum is indebted to Colonel Colver for some very superb heads and fragments of jaws and tusks of this extinct species, (for it was pointed out that the fossil has six incisors in lieu of four, as in the modern species of Africa): a paper printed in the Researches by Dr. Falconer and Captain Cautley, with admirable plates was at hand to compare with the actual specimens. We noticed also a very huge fragment of a crocodile's jaw, fossil and differing much from its modern congener.

On one table was laid out a complete series of specimens of the Salt formation of the celebrated lake of Sambhar, collected by Lieutenant A. Conolly; on another, a dozen fragments of meteoric stones, stated to have fallen in India at various places and times. They so much resembled one another as to convince the mind that they must belong to one and the same asteroid. We heard it remarked as a new discovery, that more of these bodies were met with in the part of the earth's orbit traversed in the middle of November, than elsewhere. This is worthy of further attention from our naturalists.

A model of an ingenious method of discovering the existence of shoals and snags in River Steam Navigation was exhibited by Dr. Ranken, by means of feelers in advance of the Steamer; but we did not rightly see how the motion of the boat could be arrested so soon after their discovery as to be saved from the consequences.

After parcourant these various objects for a time, the Company was summoned into the central hall, where the oxy-hydrogen microscope was erected for exhibition.

The room was well darkened and afforded a clear view to a numerous assembly, among whom the native gentry were naturally there, whose curiosity was most awakened by this (to them novel) spectacle of wings, feathers, hair, silk, and creeping things of all variety magnified to the proportion of the unwieldy elephant. A large assortment of graduated objects was skilfully arranged by Dr. Haller, who stood in front and explained their names and functions. The living infusoria and larvae of various kinds caused the greatest amusement, as they seemed to chase one another over the field, or were swallowed by some more voracious inhabitant of the "ditchers" potable liquid! An experiment performed at Captain Forbes's suggestion, of pouring a few drops of brandy into the water, followed by the speedy extinction of the moving group, will doubtless be remembered and practised by many who have hitherto considered the sacred water of gunjare to be free from all vital contamination.

Among the objects exhibited at the Soirée were the two magnificent silver Vases presented by Lord Auckland and Dwarkanath Tagore to the Calcutta Races. The Auckland Cup is a splendid vase. The largest we have ever seen in Calcutta, of a noble design worthy of the donor; and the execution of the work by Messrs. Pittar and Co., his Lordship's Jewellers, has done ample justice to the taste of the Misès Edén. The lid is surmounted by a horse representing a miniature (we are assured very exactly) the famous Arab Godolphin. In the place of handles, there is on each side a horse springing forward, and the same emblem of the turf forms the principal ornament and support at the base. The Tagore Cup appeared to us little less massive than the other; the weight of it is about a thousand tolas. The design is of a character quite novel and emblematic of India: the pedestal is a cudjoor or date tree, supporting an Etruscan Chalice with a broad lid, in the center of which rises a lotus flower with two leaves, as beautifully executed as admirably designed. Round the base, and at the foot of the palm tree, are four gilt figures of horses and two of mares with each a foal at her side. The horses appear to support the Cup, the lower part of the date tree being hidden by a sort of beaded drapery, resembling clusters of the fruit, with vine leaves and grapes festooned between the figures. The Cup is gilt inside: it stands upon a frosted silver plateau, resting upon four horn-hoofs; and around the vase is an engraved representation of a race and the Calcutta racing stand. The workmanship is a chef d'œuvre of Messrs. Hamilton and Co.—Calcutta Courier, January 4, 1837.

MRS. ATKINSON'S SOIREE.

Mrs. Goodall Atkinson's fourth soiree took place on Monday night, the 9th Jan, and there was a good audience, considering the size of the room in which her musical entertainment was given. This lady sang in her usual effective manner, but was not, we think, well supported in some of the pieces by the other parts. The bass throughout was defective and the tenor often out of tune. Mozart's beautiful aria, Deh per questo, which followed the opening glee, was well executed and the minor parts given with much effect. The frequent transitions introduced in this composition require, for their correct expression, that sort of feeling and judgment so essential to the more elaborate and exquisite productions of that master spirit of the divine art. Mrs. Atkinson did not fail in this respect; but we will take the liberty of pointing out one fault which we have sometimes observed in her singing, and that is the habit she has of indulging herself in ornamental cadenzas out of place, a defect which certainly mars the effect of her style, and which we would suggest the propriety of her correcting. The giot no d' orrore from Rossini's Semiramide, was not so well sang as the terzetto, O dolce caro amante by Cimarosa. Here we must observe that the very indistinct manner in which the singers (Mrs. Atkinson excepted) articulated the words of this piece rendered it impossible to understand them. It is a great fault with many otherwise excellent English singers, that they hardly ever pronounce the words in singing sufficiently distinct. The structure of the English, German, and, with certain modifications, of the French language, is perhaps averse to the easy, flowing expression of words in vocal music, and this may be the cause of the fault being so general. But the same cannot be said of Italian, which is pre-eminently the language of music, and ought to be studied by those who attempt to figure in that department of the art which is more difficult of attainment than they imagine singing Italian music to be.

The piece, however, which Mrs. Atkinson sang the best, was the well-known Irish air of "My lodging is on the cold ground," with variations by Drouet, originally written for the flute. Nothing could have been more striking than the very beautiful effect which the chord of the flat seventh, introduced in the latter part of the first bar, created on the ear. Mrs. Atkinson very properly struck the notes pianissimo; and we have observed every composer, who has taken the air as a theme for a fantasia, or rondeau, adopt the same chord in that part of the air. The use of the diminished seventh in the following bar accurately expressed the idea of melancholy conveyed in the words.

The second part of the performance commenced with a quartett, 'ah grazie vi rendano, from Mozart's La Clemenza di Tito; we here also remarked the same indistinct articulation we have above mentioned. The arrangement of this second part we thought inferior to that of the first, and the singing altogether was evidently too much for one lady to go through. Cannot Mrs. Atkinson vary her Soirees by the introduction of more instrumental music? We are not exactly aware of her powers as a pianiste, but she might, perhaps, favour her hearers, with amateur or professional assistance, with some performance on one or more instruments. There are few solo or concert players in Calcutta; but there may be some who would have no objection to take a part in a duet, trio, or quartett; and with reference to the piano-forte itself, we are of opinion (though others may differ from us) that a fine well played concerto, or fantasia, from the compositions of Handel, Moscheles, Herz, or any other great composer, is as capable of creating pleasurable feelings and affording rational amusement, as the most finished vocal piece—to those who can feel the magic of harmonic sounds. To corroborate this we only instance the extraordinary impression and effect produced on the hearers by Paganini's performance on the violin.

The guitar accompaniment and songs in the first part were so execrably discordant that we hope Mrs. Atkinson will not inflict upon too sensitive ears a repetition of the same.—Englishman, January 11.

REMARKS.

The items of the foregoing Statement, which would appear to call for remark, are "Joint Liability Bills and Notes," "Purchasers of Pledged and Forfeit Securities," "Doubtful Debts," "Advance for Legal Proceedings," "Suspence Account, B. N.," and "Suspence Account." "JOINT LIABILITY BILLS AND NOTES."—This item is the balance of the principal amount of the Acceptances, (with charges) for which the Estates of Messrs. Crutenden, Mackillop and Co., Alexander and Co., Ferguson and Co., and Mackintosh and Co., are liable. For this sum the Bank holds the direct liability of the four Firms.

"PURCHASERS OF PLEDGED AND FORFEIT SECURITIES."—This item shows the Balance of the Acceptances for which the Collateral Securities of the Estate of Messrs. Alexander and Co. have been sold:—the Title Deeds of the several Properties remaining with the Bank pending payment in full of the purchase monies. Since the last Report the balance has been reduced in the sum of Co.'s Rs. 1,27,939-0-11.

"DOUBTFUL DEBTS."—The sum of Co.'s Rs. 80,630-0-11 is the balance of Co.'s Rs. 7,66,644-14 0, the difference having been written off as Bad Debt. This balance was valued by the Directors on the 31st of December last at Co.'s Rs. 1,65,144-2.

The profit on the Banking Business of the past three months, including the Premium of the New Stock lapsed to the Bank and sold by it on its own Account (under Section 6 of Act XIX. of 1836), amounts to Co.'s Rs. 1,96,742-3-4, or at the rate of Co.'s Rs. 10-7-10½ per Cent. per annum on the Stock. Of this sum the Directors have declared a Dividend at the rate of Co.'s Rs. 10 per Cent. per annum or Co.'s Rs. 1,87,500, for the Quarter ended the 31st December last, and the balance Co.'s Rs. 9,242-3-4 has been carried to Doubtful Debts, towards liquidation of that Account.

Exclusive of the Profit arising from the Premium on the New Stock sold as before-mentioned, the Profit will give an amount equal to a Dividend of Co.'s Rs. 8-10-4 per Cent. per Annum on the Capital Stock.

"ADVANCE FOR LEGAL PROCEEDINGS."—The amount of this item was advanced to meet the Costs of the Appeal made by the Assignees of Palmer and Co. against the Judgment obtained by the Bank in the Supreme Court, in the matter of Surplus Proceeds of the Company's Paper of the Estate of Messrs. Palmer and Co. held by the Bank.

"SUSPENCE ACCOUNT, B. N."—The sum at Credit of this Account is the balance of Outstanding old Bank Notes marked A. Since the Report of the half year ended 30th June last, only Co.'s Rs. 247-7-6 of Notes of this description have been paid.

"SUSPENCE ACCOUNT."—The sum at Credit of this Account consists of the interest on the Advances of Indigo made to the Assignees of Alexander and Co., and of other items relating to the Bank's transactions consequent on the failure of the late Firm of Messrs. Alexander and Co.—Calcutta Courier.

By Order of the Directors,

G. UDNY, Secy. to the Bank.
Bank of Bengal, 5th January, 1837.

UNION BANK.

The Annual Meeting of Proprietors, took place according to notice, at the Bank on Saturday morning, the 14th Jan., Capt. Vint, in the chair.

The Secretary read the following Report of the last half year's proceedings.

Report of the operations of the Union Bank, from 1st July to 31st December, 1836

The present half yearly report exhibits a continued favorable state of your affairs.

The net profits of the past six months, amount to Co.'s Rs. 29,902-11-11; being at the rate of 2-2-10½ per cent. per annum on the actual Capital Stock. This though rather more than 2 per cent. under last half year, is still very satisfactory: The difference may perhaps, in some degree, be ascribed to a diminution of more than a lack in the circulation of our notes. The highest and lowest points of issue last half year, were Co.'s Rs. 7,57,000, and 4,94,000; this year they are only Co.'s Rs. 7,05,000 and 3,23,000, a falling off in about the proportion of 5 to 6. It seems probable that the circulation is somewhat affected by the continual inconvenience of using Sicca Notes jointly with the new coinage in Company's Rupees, which renders troublesome fractional calculations and payments, necessary. This point however, will soon be put to the test; as the last advices from our agent in London, Sir Charles Cockerell and Co., assured us of the probable dispatch of our new Company Rupees Notes in the course of August, and they will doubtless, soon arrive and pass into circulation.

Of the thirty supplementary shares—the privilege of Proprietors in Europe—all have been taken up except six. The resolution of the 14th February last year, required shareholders in India to take them up by the 30th April and absentees in Europe, by the 31st December; in default of which, their privilege of subscription at par for supplementary stock would be forfeited, and sold among the other proprietors. These six absentee supplementary shares are now therefore liable to be sold as above; unless you should think it expedient to extend the time a little longer under all the circumstances of the case. The individuals concerned are only two; they have been several years absent, and are original bank proprietors; one a gentleman in the army, holding two shares; the other of the Civil Service, holding four; but the agent in Calcutta of one, has no power to act in this matter; while the Bank itself represents the other, under instructions left with us to carry his dividends to an accumulating account, large enough now to pay for 3 out of his 4 supplementary shares. No advices have ever since been received from the party. At present market prices the value of the three would more than pay for all four.

I shall conclude this report with a few words—and for the last time I hope—on the subject of the Bank "DEPENDENCIES."

In the last report it was shewn how this item, which formerly stood at the formidable amount of Sa. Rs. 2,72,201-4-10, or Co.'s Rs. 2,90,348-0-9, (representing all the losses of the Bank since its commencement) had been nearly extinguished within a comparatively short period, by partial recoveries and by surplus profits, amounting together on the 30th June last to Co.'s

Rs.	2,83,806-8-9
Leaving uncovered only (Co.'s Rs.	6,541 8 0
Against this is now to be set a further reserve of profits from the last half year, amounting to.....	21,783 2 6
Leaving an absolute balance in favor of the Bank.....	15,241 10 6

To this amount then—of Co. Rs. 15,241.106—there is at length a tangible nett surplus in hand, to which may be added any portion of the present divisible profit of 12-2-10½ per cent. or nearly 1,30,000 Rs. which you may consider it expedient to keep in reserve from the dividend which you are about to declare. Something more may be expected from the estate of Palmer and Co.—we are assured by the assignees—and something considerable we expect from the estate of Gopey Mohun Dass. These will henceforth reckon as so much clear gain; and the whole taken together, will more than enable us to write off the remnant of 7,000 Rs. of old notes, and to pay for the new ones estimated at £1,000 or 1,200 without deductions from future dividends.

If you now determine to divide 12 per cent. or nearly the whole six months profit as reported, namely Co. Rs. 1,29,902 11 11 there will remain actually in reserve only Co. Rs. 1,952
The dividend on each full share will be 162
On each supplementary do. 54

If you divide 11 per cent. a reserve will remain of 12,587 11 11
The dividend on each full share will be 148 8 0
On each supplementary do. 49 8 0

If you divide 10 per cent. a reserve will remain of 23,252 0 0
The dividend on each full share will be 135 8 0
On each supplementary do. 45 2 8

Union Bank, 14th January, 1837. J. YOUNG, Secy.

The following resolutions were unanimously carried.

I. Proposed by Mr. H. M. Parker, seconded by Capt. Sewel—That the Secretary's Report now read, is approved and that it be published.

II. Proposed by Mr. J. Mackenzie, seconded by Mr. S. Smith—That the accounts now submitted are approved and passed by this Meeting, and that the books be closed accordingly.

III. Proposed by Mr. W. Bruce, seconded by Mr. K. R. Mackenzie—That a half yearly, dividend at the rate of eleven per cent. per annum, being Co.'s Rs. 148-8 per full share and Co.'s Rs. 49-8, per supplementary third share be now declared.

An amendment was moved by Mr. Parker that instead of 11, the dividend be 12 per cent., which amendment was carried unanimously.

IV. Proposed by Mr. W. R. Young, seconded by Mr. J. Ferguson.—That the Directors nomination of Baboo Dwarkanath Tagore to act as Director for Wm. Carr, Esq. and R. S. Thomson, Esq. in the room of F. H. Burkinyoung, Esq., pending the confirmation of the Proprietors, are hereby confirmed accordingly.

V. Moved by Mr. K. R. Mackenzie, seconded by Mr. H. M. Parker, That six months more be allowed to Colonel Childers, H. M.'s Service, and E. Stirling of the H. C.'s Civil Service absent in Europe, to take up the six supplementary shares allotted between them, which will be sold peremptorily at the next half yearly meeting, if not availed of by the 30th June, 1837.

VI. The thanks of the meeting were then moved by Mr. R. S. Thomson, seconded by Mr. W. Bruce and carried unanimously, after which, the meeting broke up.

India Gazette, Jan 10.

THE NEW BOMBAY BANK.

Since our last there has been considerable bustle among the mercantile portion of our community, in getting up a Bank. We had heard it rumoured some short time ago that there was some intention of setting such an institution on foot, but we had not dreamt that it was so near a state of maturity as the proceedings which have taken place within these two last days would indicate.

At twelve o'clock on Monday, a Meeting was held on the subject, and it was then determined that the Capital of the Bank should be fixed at lakhs thirty, and that the same should be subscribed in three thousand shares of 1000 rupees each. Before the meeting had separated about one-half of that amount was subscribed, and within the following twenty-four hours the whole three thousand shares were engaged. Several further applications were made in the course of the day, but the parties were disappointed. Thus in the course of twenty-four hours thirty lakhs of rupees were subscribed as a capital for the Bank to commence its operations with.

It may be doubted whether, as the Bank is intended to rely for its strength on the community at large, the amount fixed on each share is not by far too high; in fact it is but a mere section of the public that have had an opportunity of purchasing shares; and we believe that the greater the body the greater the grounds of security and the better chance of success. Besides, the exclusion (for it amounts to an exclusion) of the bulk of the people from the benefit of the scheme, gives an air of selfishness to it which not only may most materially injure it, but which we believe the parties concerned in getting it up may not be justly charged with. So it stands, however, and the only course now left to be pursued is to lessen the value of the shares that the door may be open to such as may be disposed to enter.

The only other alternative that is left, is the encreasing the capital, but that we would not at present advise: the amount already fixed is enough to allow the Bank to try its strength and what its power may be; and should circumstances hereafter require an increased capital, the Charter will afford the necessary means, as it will provide for a contingency of that nature by authorising a further subscription; but in the meantime the amount subscribed is enough, and the only course left is, to lower the value of the shares.

The Agra Bank, if we recollect rightly, fixed the share at Rs. 250, and how that Establishment has succeeded we all have heard; the shares of our Bank ought to be fixed at that time, as then every individual desirous of subscribing would have an opportunity of doing so. Our Mofussil friends could also by these means establish an interest in the Bank, and many of them no doubt will be as anxious to patronize the institution as the people of the presidency. At all events let them have the opportunity of applying to advantage a little of their disposable stock.

But should Rs. 250 be thought too small a value (we do not think so, however, for we believe that in one month or even less the whole shares would be taken up) let the share be reduced to at the outside Rs. 500, and even that reduction would in some measure pacify the public, as it would double the shareholders.

The prospectus has not yet been completed, but we hope to see it in a day or two: it is a pity that it has not been made public ere this, as the community are naturally anxious to learn the principles on which the Bank is to be established.

What will remain to be done, after the adjustment of the value of the shares, is, the obtaining a charter. Some twelve or fourteen years ago an attempt was made to establish a Bank here, but the Court of Directors, with whom then rested the power of sanctioning the establishment of Banks in this country under charter, put their veto on it, so it was allowed to go to rest. It is urged by some, that the same controlling power still exists with the court, while others contend that the Government of India have full power to grant such charters, but we incline to the opinion (formed however from no other materials than an indistinct recollection of the tenor of the several late acts affecting this country) that the Government of India has not the power to grant a charter; but that can be of little consequence; the same reasons do not now exist which did in 1822, to induce the court to refuse that which may be of benefit to this country; the court represented a trading body whose interests would be affected by the grant of the gift coveted, so they had an alternative but to refuse it; now the case appears before them in a totally different aspect; it is now simply a question whether the existence of a Bank in Bombay will be of advantage to the public while it comes in collision with no interest chartered or otherwise, and while almost all the mercantile community represent that it will be to the advantage of this presidency that it be established? Little doubt need, therefore, we think, be entertained of the result, and indeed we should be wanting in what we owe to ourselves, were we any longer to stand as we do; Bombay is too tempting a mart for Banking interests to be much longer overlooked by those establishments which already exist in this country; nor should we be much surprised to find interlopers from places even still further removed; Calcutta had been just feeling its way here, so we have wisely resolved to adopt the old proverb for our rule—"to give our own fish guts to our own sea maws."

As bearing in some measure on the above subject we may allude to an application which we understand was made to Government a day or two ago by a few of the houses here, requesting an issue of treasury notes as a substitute for the more clumsy medium of silver. Doubtless such an issue would be a great convenience, as it would save an immense deal of labor and time, but we cannot see how that issue, if made to the extent pointed out in the application made, could in any way supersede the necessity of a Banking establishment; the one has nothing whatever to do with the other; the Bank is intended to give a wholesome impulse to trade, by placing money on easy terms at the disposal of the community; but how the Government issue could effect the same purpose we cannot discover.

If no doubt will be contended that the Bank, from the nature of its transactions and the facility it may afford to the raising money at a moment's notice, will be instrumental in leading to a spirit of speculation which may eventually be productive of very bad consequences, but the same argument could with equal propriety be applied to every institution of a similar nature under the sun; and it can with equal justice be said that the Bombay Bank can be placed under just the same wholesome restraint as all the other successful institutions of a similar nature are; there appears therefore very little in that objection, and it is only to be listened to as an admonition in framing the Charter now intended to be applied for.

We believe there is little else left for us at present to notice on this subject beyond the fact, as we have it on the very best authority, that five greater portion of those who have taken up the shares are perfectly willing to allow such shares to be reduced in value with a view to the admission of as many as possible of those who may feel desirous of becoming shareholders.

By our next issue we hope to be favored with the prospectus for publication, when we may take some further notice of this subject.—Bombay Gazette, Dec. 28.

PROSPECTUS OF A BANK FOR THE PRESIDENCY OF BOMBAY.

The prospectus of the Bank, which it is proposed to establish here, will be found below: in noticing it in our last we stated that the project had been received favorably by the mercantile community; and that two-thirds of the capital required for it were subscribed on the very day it became known to the public generally. We have merely now, therefore, to add that, on the day after, the remainder of the 30 lakhs was taken before 12 o'clock; and since then, the applications for shares have been so numerous that no doubt can any longer remain as to the sentiments of the community generally with regard to the undertaking.

Indeed, we believe some annoyance has been occasioned by the quiet way in which the affair has been conducted, from its having deprived many of an opportunity of joining the institution who would now gladly avail themselves of it. But this was unavoidable; or at least, was rendered expedient by very serious doubts as to the manner in which the plan would be supported; and that these were by no means groundless is proved by the way in which numerous individuals hung back at first, who have since applied, though in vain, to subscribe for large portions of stock. It is most unreasonable, therefore, now to complain of the course which has been pursued on the occasions. Common prudence required the parties who convened the meeting on Monday last to proceed with great care for the purpose of ascertaining how far individuals were inclined to support them, as a failure would have been attended with ridicule, and perhaps with consequences still more serious. We are, besides, of opinion, that it is almost indispensable for the success of projects of this kind, that they should be matured in private; and if some are thus prevented from joining them, all that can be said is, that the evil is an unavoidable one. Had the prospectus we publish to-day gone the round of the papers before it had been acted upon, and been criticized, as it undoubtedly would have been, the motives of those who had interested themselves in it might—nay, undoubtedly would have been misrepresented, and what is of more importance, it would have been almost impossible to get a large number of persons to agree to it. Every man who had ever been in a bank to get change for a pound note, would have had his amendment; and the result would undoubtedly have been as inconsistent and impracticable a scheme as ever emanated from the hasty resolutions of a multitude. We have merely to add, that we trust those who are still dissatisfied with what has been done will pursue an opposite course, will court publicity in all their plans and undertakings from their very commencement, and then mark the result.

We also publish to-day a memorandum which appeared in the last Gazette, containing an account of another plan for securing some of the benefits of banking to this community. The evils of a metallic currency seem to be admitted on all hands; and the day, therefore, we believe, cannot be far distant when some of them will be removed.—Bombay Courier.

The rapid extension of the commerce of Bombay, and a great increase of capital within the island, ready for profitable investment, render the present moment, it is believed, peculiarly fitted for the establishment of a Bank.

The want of such an institution has long been felt by the commercial community, and the recent withdrawal, by Government, of the privilege of making deposits and transfers at the Treasury, has increased it to a considerable degree.

The general principles of banking are so simple, its advantages so generally admitted and so thoroughly established by the practice of all large commercial communities throughout the world, that to bring forward general reasons in favor of its introduction into so great an emporium as this, is deemed almost superfluous.

To show, however, both the want and the opening in this place for such an institution, it may be noticed, that the average balance of sums placed in the Treasury by a small number only of merchants and other traders, as a place of mere deposit, has, for some years past, been upwards of 20 lakhs of rupees, the whole of which, it is believed, would be readily transferred to a secure and well conducted Bank.

Our metallic currency, occasioning serious loss of time, and other inconvenience, in the transfer of large sums, affords another reason for an establishment which would facilitate such transactions, and reduce the expences attending them.

As a place of discount, too, it is believed that a bank would afford here, as elsewhere, the most considerable facilities to trade by greatly economising the capital required for carrying it on; and as establishments of the kind have been so long in operation at both the sister Presidencies, and have been attended with the most undoubted advantages, nothing further can be necessary to prove the expediency of a similar one here.

It may be added, however, that, as projects of a like nature to the present are entertained, with reference to this presidency, both in England and Calcutta, and that, should they be carried into effect, its floating capital, the extension or contraction of its currency, and generally, the control and superintendence of all its great monetary transactions would be transferred from the spot to parties at a distance, and possibly with hostile interests, no time should be lost in anticipating designs that may prove so prejudicial to the trade and prosperity of the place.

IT IS PROPOSED THEREFORE.

1st.—That a Bank be established here, to be entitled the Bank of Bombay, and that a society be incorporated for the purpose of carrying it on.

2d.—That with this view a Charter be applied for to the proper authorities, and that the Bank do not commence operations until such Charter has been obtained.

3rd.—That the Charter granted to the Bank of Bengal be adopted as a model, and that all the provisions therein contained (which it is supposed will be sufficient) to guarantee the utmost possible security to the public, be admitted in the first instance, subject nevertheless to the adoption of such other practicable and reasonable rules and restrictions as may hereafter be considered necessary or advisable.

4th.—That the business of the Bank be strictly confined to banking; or in other words, to receiving deposits, and keeping cash accounts; to discounting bills and drafts, and other instruments of the kind; and lastly, to issuing bank notes, in the current coin of the place, and bank post bills payable at short dates.

5th.—That the principle in which the institution is conducted, be that of the most perfect publicity as to the general state of its affairs; without however exposing in any way individual transactions.

6th.—That the capital of the institution be 30 lakhs of rupees, to be divided in 3,000 shares, of one thousand rupees each.

7th.—That such capital be subscribed upon the clear understanding that the whole will be required, and must be paid up within a short period (say 12 months) after the Charter shall have been obtained. The date and amount of the several instalments to be fixed by the Committee hereafter mentioned.

8th.—That no individual be restricted as to the amount of his subscriptions; but that the rules in force in other institutions of the kind to prevent an overwhelming influence on the part of great capitalists be established. Provided, however, that no more than one-half of the proposed capital be allowed to be subscribed at the present meeting; or by the members present; and that the remaining half be offered to the public during two months; at the end of which period, if any should remain untaken, the original subscribers be permitted rateably to increase their subscriptions.

9th.—That of the above amount 300 shares be reserved for government in case they should be willing to join the institution upon the same terms that the capital of the Bank of Bengal is taken by the government of India.

10th.—That as soon as one-half of the capital shall have been subscribed a provisional Committee of eleven persons be appointed to superintend the application for, and the provisions of, the proposed Charter, and all other matters of a preliminary nature.

11th.—That on the Charter being obtained, the shareholders shall meet for the election of officers to manage the institution, and for the passing of bye laws for its government, and such other business as may then in due course come before them.

12th.—That Europeans and Natives be alike eligible for office.

13th.—That the parties subscribing hold themselves responsible, rateably under the above conditions for the amount of their subscriptions, and for all necessary and reasonable charges which may be incurred by the Committee in procuring a Charter, and generally in setting the establishment on foot.

14th.—That an instalment of one per cent. upon the amount of the subscriptions be paid within ten days of the time they are made, by the parties subscribing; and that if not paid at the end of that time their right to take stock be cancelled.

Bombay, 26th December, 1836,

At a Meeting held at the office of Messrs. Skinner and Co. on the 26th day of December, 1836, it is resolved, 1st.—That the above Prospectus be adopted.

2nd.—That the following gentlemen do act as a provisional committee for the purpose of securing a Charter for the institution, and of attending to the interests of the subscribers until it is in operation.

Messrs. F. R. Richmond, A. S. Finlay, J. Wright, D. Greenhill, W. Turner, Col. Wood, Captain Henderson, M. Brownrigg, Dadabhoi Pestonjee, E. C. Morgan, and G. Ashburner.

And that Mr. Ashburner do act as Secretary to the Committee.

3rd.—That Messrs. Dadabhoi and Muncherjee Pestonjee be appointed to act as Treasurers.

4th.—That the Prospectus be published in the Native and European newspapers of the Presidency.

G. ASHBURNER, Secy.

At a Meeting of the Bank Committee, held on the 30th December 1836, it was resolved, that, in consequence of the capital of the proposed Bank of Bombay having been all subscribed, and the applications for shares in the institution having greatly exceeded the number allotted by the prospectus, the Secretary be empowered to receive further applications for the same purpose and register them until the 1st of February next, and that the subject be then taken into consideration, and such further proceedings be recommended upon it, as may appear just and equitable.

G. ASHBURNER, Secy.

ISSUE OF TREASURY NOTES AND THE NEW BANK.

MEMORANDUM.

The present circulating medium of Bombay being silver, is felt by the Mercantile community generally, and more especially by the large establishments, to be a source of great inconvenience in their transactions, involving as it does, from the bulk of it required to make up any considerable sum, much trouble and risk in removal from place to place; while it occupies much time in telling it over, besides entailing great responsibility on the parties with whom it is deposited.

These great disadvantages, and as such they are felt, more or less, by all the mercantile community, might be greatly if not wholly obviated, by an issue by Government of Treasury Notes not bearing interest, and payable on demand. Such an issue would be of great convenience; and if granted by Government, would likely occasion little trouble beyond that of at first receiving the cash in exchange, and which would not probably be called for again by the depositors for a length of time, so that if the Treasury Notes were once issued in the shape of Bank of England notes, the consumption of time and labor attending the measure would be small, while the management would be simple and of easy performance.

Government, in the years 1825 and 1827, issued such notes from the Treasury bearing interest at 6½ reas, and afterwards at 5 reas per cent. per diem; to what extent the issue took place the subscribers have not the means of knowing, but a pretty correct judgment might be formed of the trouble that would be involved if such a measure were resorted to again; and it is submitted it would, under the proposition now made, be much less in extent than formerly, as no calculations of interest would have to be made.

At the periods adverted to, the notes, moreover, were issued payable at twelve months date, which consequently amounted to a recall of them at the expiration of that period; but as no limit would be fixed for their discharge, under the proposed plan, so long as a note was in good preservation, it would not probably be returned, or if so could be re-issued.

It is supposed that an issue of Treasury Notes to the extent of 30 or 40 lakhs of rupees, in notes of Rs. 1,000 and upwards, would be sufficient to facilitate the monetary transactions of the Presidency.

The subscribers contend, that if the accommodation now solicited from Government is granted, nothing further is wanted at Bombay to put the monetary system on a good and convenient footing: nor do the subscribers conceive that any advantage would flow from the establishment of a bank, while numerous evils would undoubtedly arise from an issue of paper notes, not the representatives of real capital, and of which the last twenty years have afforded abundant proofs both in England and Calcutta, while this place has escaped from the calamities which have visited them, which in the subscribers' opinion, has been greatly owing to fictitious issues and consequent false system of credit having prevailed.

The subscribers would respectfully draw attention to the evidence taken on the subject of Banks in India before a committee of the House of Commons, previous to the renewal of the present Charter. Signed, &c.

CEYLON, LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL.

The Governor, it will be seen, opened the proceedings of the legislative Council on Thursday last by reading a letter from Lord Glenelg to the body of merchants at Colombo, in answer to their memorial to the Secretary of State, respecting their non-acceptance of seats in council. The reply is just as was to be expected, and directs his excellency to fill up the vacant seat in the best way he can, provided the merchants adhere to their determination of not becoming members. This alternative Sir Robert Horton will, most probably, be obliged to adopt, as it is not likely that he will at the present stage, obtain the concurrence of any of those men who have publicly almost pledged themselves, individually and collectively, not to submit to the mode of introduction offered them. It will, therefore, be left for his successor, although the numbers may at once be completed, to fill the remaining unofficial seats of the council in such a manner as will be considered a high honour, as it ought to be, to hold the office of colonial legislator. This, we say, we rather fear will be the case; for as opportunities of reconciling all parties on this matter have been let slip, that would have been taken advantage of by persons of a little more tact, it becomes almost certain at this late period, when experience seems to have been of no profit, that affairs will not now be adjusted.

But on referring to the memorial of the merchants, and comparing it with this, so called, reply, it is apparent that Lord Glenelg has completely blinked or overlooked the main objection on the part of the merchants, which was amalgamation not precedence: and his lordship's not having even referred to the former is another proof of its having originated with the authorities here. When adverted to the constitution of the Legislative Council of Mauritius and the Cape of Good Hope, his lordship states, that the principle of precedence is observed at both those colonies. But permit us to ask him, are there negroes in the one, or Caffers in the other? and if so — is their sole qualification the receipt of Government pensions of a few hundred dollars monthly? Had Lord Glenelg given an opinion or information upon these points, his despatch might have been of essential benefit to Ceylon, instead of being, as it now is, satisfactory to neither party. To do this however, would have imposed upon his lordship the task of reading over the correspondence of the merchants to which he alludes as well as reams of despatches from Ceylon upon the subject. The easiest and most characteristic course for Lord Glenelg was therefore to take for granted some few short reasons furnished for his guidance. — (Colombo, Observer, Dec. 20.)

(From the Government Gazette, December 17th)

On the re-assembling of the Legislative Council on Thursday, the 15th Dec. The Right Hon'ble The Governor opened the proceedings with the following address:—
Gentlemen of the Legislative Council. — In resuming our duties here, I shall commence by reading to you a despatch which I have had the honor of receiving from the Secretary of State, relative to a Memorial presented by certain merchants of Colombo. The Despatch is as follows:—

DOWNING STREET, 8th July, 1836.

Sir, — I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your despatch of the 8th of January, with a memorial from the merchants of Colombo expressing dissatisfaction at the measures which you had taken for constituting the Legislative Council of your Government.

You also enclose a copy of the correspondence to which their memorial had given rise.

The memorialists complained on a former occasion of the delay which had occurred in completing the council.

This delay being occasioned by your anxiety to select fit and proper persons for the office of legislators, you had the satisfaction of receiving His Majesty's gracious approval of the caution which had regulated your proceedings.

The memorialists have again attributed your conduct in this respect to improper motives, but I see no ground for concurring in their opinions.

I learn from your present despatch, that having been able to select three natives of Ceylon for seats in the council, who together with three merchants would have completed the number of unofficial members, you had intimated your intention of conferring a priority of appointment on one of each class alternately, beginning with the merchants.

In consequence of this arrangement the merchants refused to sit in the council, denouncing, in terms which I need not here repeat, the principle of precedence as established by His Majesty's instructions, not only with reference to the unofficial members of the council amongst themselves, but also as regards the official and the unofficial members respectively.

The memorialists advert to the constitution of the Legislative Councils at the Mauritius and at the Cape of Good Hope.

You will inform them that the principle of precedence as regards the official members is observed in those councils, that amongst non-official members the principle of seniority, according to date of appointment, obtains universally in all His Majesty's colonial possessions — and that I cannot entertain any question which may involve a departure from either of those principles.

In expressing my regret at the determination at which the memorialists appear to have arrived, I am bound in justice to the Legislative Council of your Government to state, at the same time, that I entertain no doubt that notwithstanding the absence of the merchants from that body, the commercial interests of the island will always meet with that attention which their importance demands, and I am inclined to hope that the merchants themselves feel no apprehensions in this respect since they have refused their individual support on grounds which could in no way have affected their usefulness or importance at the Council Board.

Should the merchants of Colombo retain the opinions which they have now expressed on this subject, it will be your duty to select for the vacant seats, with the caution which you have hitherto observed fit and proper persons from some other class of His Majesty's subjects at Ceylon.

I approve of the step which you took, after the merchants had refused to enter the council, of swearing in the three members whom you had selected, and of the consideration which you appear to have shewn on that occasion to the body of merchants, by placing at the head of the unofficial members one of their class, who, you had reason to believe, would have accepted the appointment on his return to Ceylon, although he has since declined it.

I have the honor to be, Sir,

Your most obedient humble Servant,

(Signed) GLENELG.

Right Hon'ble Sir R. W. HORTON, Bart. &c. &c.

MEETING OF THE LAUDABLE SOCIETY.

The half yearly Meeting of the Laudable Society was held on the 26th of Jan. The following are the Resolutions that were proposed and adopted:—

Resolution.—Moved by Mr. W. G. Smith, seconded by Mr. W. G. Lloyd,—

That the Secretary be directed to publish an abstract of the Funds and Accounts of the Society for the information of Subscribers.

Resolution.—Moved by Mr. C. B. Greenlaw, seconded by Mr. Cockerell,—

That Longueville Clarke and William G. Smith, Esqrs. be appointed Directors of the Society in the room of T. E. M. Turton, Esq., gone to Europe, and B. Harding, Esq., resigned.

Resolution.—Moved by Mr. Cockerell, seconded by Mr. Greenlaw,—

That the Accounts and Statements for the last half year, now submitted to the meeting, be passed as correct and satisfactory

Resolution.—Proposed by Capt. Cockerell, and seconded by Mr. W. G. Smith, —

That Mr. Greenlaw's proposal connected with the surplus under the 28th Rule of the Society be submitted to the Directors for their consideration and eventual disposal.

The accounts shewed the Society to be in a very prosperous condition, having in hand Sa. Rs. 8,67,652, including the subscriptions (2,17,800) realized since the 31st December last, which sum divided by 100½ shares on the lapsed lives, gives Sa. Rs. 8,670 per share over and above the regulated advance of 4,000 already paid. There has been some falling off in the number of policies outstanding which, on the 31st December last, covered 1,092½ shares on 447 lives, against 1,183½ shares on 471 lives outstanding on the 30th of June preceding. This falling off is accounted for by the discontinuance of insurances on many old lives, chiefly by the Assignees of the Insolvent Firms.

A good deal of time was lost by waiting for a more full attendance before the chair was taken, (there being but five shareholders present) and Mr. Greenlaw expressed much regret that the meetings of this Society should be so much more neglected by the persons interested in its welfare, than were the meetings of the two other Life Insurance Offices, whose shareholders had a personal interest in the dividends. "If the public," he said, were made sensible of the very prosperous position of this Society and of the advantages it now held out, he was satisfied it would be the favorite. Mr. Greenlaw then drew attention to the large accumulated balance of more than six lakhs over and above the fixed sum of 6,000 rupees per share, which it had been agreed to consider the amount covered by every policy, and again brought forward the proposition he had made at former meetings for the ultimate disposal of the fund arising from these accumulations. By the existing rules of the Society, the surplus in excess of the 6,000 rupees per share was the property of the policy-holders, and to be all divided among them at the expiration of the present office, namely, on the 31st December, 1840. Mr. Greenlaw's plan is to divide only such portion thereof as shall leave a security fund of ten per cent. (we understood him to wish the fund eventually to be increased to 15 or 20 per cent.) upon the amount of the outstanding risks. For instance the present number of shares being 1,092½, and the fixed amount insured thereon, at 6,000 each, Sa. Rs. 64,35,000, the sum required for his guarantee fund, if now made up, would be Sa. Rs. 6,43,500. But Mr. Greenlaw does not intend to make this altogether a tax upon the first subscribers: he has suggested that their interest in it shall be preserved as a book debt. This, however, will be a matter of some intricacy, and in order to put present and future subscribers upon an equitable footing with respect to each other, so as not to give the latter the unfair advantage of all the benefit from a security fund to which they will have contributed nothing, the aid of a good actuary will be required; and if Mr. Greenlaw's scheme, when duly digested by the Directors, should be recommended by them for adoption, the aid of Mr. Curnin will probably be solicited to put it in such a shape as to give the shareholders, whose subscriptions from the security fund, a prospective advantage equivalent to their present sacrifice, without encroaching upon the Fund itself.—Calcutta Courier, Jan. 26.

MILITARY BANK MEETING.

The Military Bank Annual Meeting was held this morning at the Town Hall, and as usual was very badly attended, there being in fact none but Directors and the Secretary present as on the last occasion. The Statement exhibited shewed realizations during the past year amounting to Sa. Rs. 30,424 and payments to depositors Sa. Rs. 46,251, and Office charges Sa. Rs. 1,875, the balance in hand, which on the 1st January 1,836, amounted to.....Sa. Rs. 47,651 being now.....29,949 from which deducting Dividends unapplied for,, 27,087 there remain.....Sa. Rs. 2,862 applicable to a further dividend.

The Bank, it appears, has now returned to the depositors 59½ per cent. of their principal. Two claims are in process of compromise, which it is confidently expected will enable the Directors to declare a further dividend of five per cent. next month, without taking into account the mortgaged property advertised for sale on the 31st of Jan., the present estimated value of which is about 1,10,000 rupees, which would give the depositors about twenty per cent. more.

Calcutta Courier, Jan. 26.

TRANSFER OF MADRAS CAVALRY REGIMENTS TO BENGAL.

It was rumoured about town on the 6th Jan. that the much-talked-of order for incorporating the four Regiments of Madras Cavalry with that branch of the Bengal Establishment had arrived. We have not been able to gather any of the particulars of the proposed arrangement, but shall be anxious to learn how many of the details which appear to require very careful consideration, are to be managed. We allude more especially to the allowances, and to the conditions and usages of either service in as far as the native Officers and soldiers are concerned. The Madras Cavalry we believe are better paid than the corresponding native ranks in Bengal, and it would be out of the question to reduce the transferred men to the Bengal rates of pay; for tampering with Military allowances is a very dangerous thing, except, indeed, in the case of European officers in India. Almost equally awkward would it be, to have two bodies of troops of the same Arm, performing exactly the same service, at the same Station, but receiving very different rates of recompense. Unless some plan be adopted for seconding a large proportion of the natives of the four junior regiments upon the remaining corps, as supernumeraries, in addition to a large and liberal quantum of weeding out and pensioning off we do not see how the inconveniences to which we have alluded can be avoided. Future recruiting to fill up, will be easy enough.

With regard to the European Officers, we presume that the difficulties which also occur in that branch of this transfer question, may be more summarily disposed of; although not without giving room for many individual complaints of supersession and of brilliant command prospects deferred.

It is assumed that the four junior regiments will be those transferred; viz. the 5th, 6th, 7th and 8th. Their own Majors of course go with them, and along with those Majors, will naturally go their corresponding Lieutenant-Colonels and Colonels according to the system of promotion in the Honorable Company's service.

The effect among the Field Officers of the incorporation, when completed according to this system of removal, is shown by the second of the subjoined tables, in which we have printed in italics the new names and ranks as introduced from the Madras list; each in his proper place, as they will stand in the general seniority succession list of the fourteen regiments of Bengal Cavalry. The first of the subjoined tables contains the present succession list of Madras cavalry Field Officers, in which also we have indicated by italics, the names on which the think the lot will fall of bidding a final adieu to "the benighted Presidency," and migrating to the metropolitan establishment. We observe among these the name of Colonel Conway, the Madras Adjutant General; but it is to be presumed, that General Staff appointments will not be disturbed until otherwise vacated by the present incumbents.

MILITARY RETIRING FUND.

INFANTRY BRANCH.

- 1 Letter to the Commander-in-Chief.
- 1 Do. to Government.
- 1 Memorial.
- 1 Reply from Government.

The Committee appointed by the general vote of the Subscribers, in circulating the accompaniments, cannot refrain from offering their congratulations on this first step, and most important favour granted by Government towards the attainment of a very cherished object, — that of allowing subscriptions to commence from the 1st of January 1837. It may be justly viewed as the first dawn of a permanent Retiring Fund.

The Committee earnestly invite their brother officers to lay aside at present all feelings on minor points, by at once joining the fund. When the scheme is fairly brought into operation, any defects in its system will become apparent, and will be met by amendments. But as a preliminary measure, the Committee need not point out how desirable unanimity is on such a vital subject, and in making this appeal, the Committee do so with confidence that it will not be made in vain.

TO HIS EXCELLENCY LIEUT. GEN. SIR JOHN KEANE, K. C. B., G. C. H.

Commander-in-Chief of the Army, on the Bombay Presidency.

SIR, The Committee for carrying into effect a Retiring Fund for the Infantry branch of the Bombay Army, having concluded their preliminary duties, avail themselves of this opportunity to express, in the name of the Subscribers at large, their respectful and grateful acknowledgments for the favour so readily granted by your Excellency in sanctioning the circulation of the plan to the body of the Infantry Service.

Trusting that the Scheme for the establishment of a Retiring Fund, as now drawn up, may meet your Excellency's approval, we respectfully request that it may be laid before the Right Honorable the Governor in Council, accompanied by an earnest recommendation for its early transmission to the Honorable the Court of Directors, and entertain a confident hope that it may meet with that support which your Excellency may be pleased to consider it deserving.

We have the honor, &c.

(Signed) D. BARR, Lieut.-Col.
 and the other Members of the Committee.

TO THE RIGHT HONORABLE SIR ROBERT GRANT, G. C. H.
 Governor and President in Council.

RIGHT HONORABLE SIR.—Having with the sanction of His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief, been nominated a Committee for carrying the instructions of the Army in regard to a Retiring Fund into effect; we, with sentiments of the highest respect, beg leave to submit the accompanying Memorial for transmission to the Honorable the Court of Directors: and in so doing, deem it necessary to explain that the difficulties experienced in framing such a plan as would include the other branches of the Service have reluctantly compelled us to confine it to that of the Infantry only, however much it is to be regretted that such is the case, we are nevertheless confident, and hope that the Scheme, as now drawn up, may meet with that consideration which your Government has ever evinced for the best interests of the Army at large.

We entertain the hope that your Honorable Board will favor the plan with your approval, and support with the Honorable Court, in soliciting the establishment of this Retiring Fund from its moderate principles—for under the plan now submitted we neither avail ourselves of the rate of Interest granted at 9 per cent. except as a commencement, nor of the guarantee for any particular rate of Exchange through the Government Treasury; thus foregoing advantages, the expense of which to the State would be considerable; nor do we anticipate any objection to the trifling increase which may fall on the Pension List by asking for four retirements amongst the Field Officers, when we forego the benefits so liberally tendered in the Honorable Court's letter of the 6th March, 1832.

Considering it an object of primary importance to the establishment of the Fund, that we should commence subscribing from the 1st January next, we solicit your Honorable Board to grant us permission so to do, as well as to authorize Division Paymasters to make the necessary stoppages on account of subscription and donation, agreeably to the scale in the plan now submitted.

Should your Honorable Board be pleased to grant this request, we beg the favor of your allowing the Fund to receive the same rate of interest on the deposits, as Government granted the Medecal Fund previous to its establishment, viz. 6 per cent; until the Honorable Court's pleasure is received on the establishment of our Fund.

We have the honor, to be, &c.

(Signed) D. BARR, Lieut.-Col.

and the other Members of the Committee.

TO THE HONORABLE THE CHAIRMAN, DEPUTY CHAIRMAN, AND COURT OF DIRECTORS OF THE HONORABLE THE EAST INDIA COMPANY.

The memorial of a Committee for the Establishment of a Retiring Fund.

RESPECTFULLY SHewnTH.—That your Memorialists being nominated a Committee for carrying the intentions of the Army of this Presidency in regard to a Retiring Fund into effect, most respectfully beg leave to submit the accompanying Plan, which they confidently trust may meet the approval and ultimate sanction and support of your Honorable Court.

The Memorialists would wish to impress on your Honorable Court that the difficulties of providing a suitable General Retiring Fund for the whole Service, including the Artillery, Engineers and Cavalry, has been found insurmountable; and therefore your Memorialists have confined themselves to the Plan now submitted, which has been approved of by a majority of the Subscribers.

Your Memorialists would draw the attention of the Honorable Court to the first Plan—that of the Subscribers being allowed to purchase out a full Colonel annually, to be placed on the retired list and to provide a Bonus of 27,000 rupees each to three other field officers to retire annually. The merits of this Fund are:—

1st. That the Subscribers make good to the Honorable Court the difference of pay between Lieutenant-Colonel and Colonel to the Officer placed on the retired list, by the purchase of the value of the life for the number of years, agreeably to the usual Assurance Tables.

2d. The Lieutenant-Colonel promoted to Colonel is not to enjoy the share of Off-Reckonings until the same shall come to his turn by lapses above him, the Officer placed on the Retired List continuing still to draw the Off-Reckonings, as if he continued on the effective List.

3d. The entire expences of this Fund are defrayed by the Subscribers.

4th. No Interest will be required, as the money will be divided as soon as collected, agreeably, to the number of retirements allowed each year.

5th. The boon of effecting Remittance through the Honorable Company's Treasury will not be required, all payments being made in India.

Should the removal of one or more of the Senior Colonels to a retired List be deemed objectionable, your Memorialists respectfully submit, that the same result may be attained by bearing the newly promoted Colonel on a Junior List until vacancies occur on the regular establishment, to which, under ordinary circumstances, they would only a little later have succeeded: the difference of charge between the Pension of Lieutenant-Colonel and the Pay of full Colonel being, as proposed in the case of the removal of a Senior Colonel to the Retired List, borne by the Fund; the State being subjected to no other expence thereby, than the difference between the Batta and other Regimental allowances of the two grades, and that only when the newly promoted Colonel may happen to be in India; an expence we humbly submit, which would be more than compensated by the superior efficiency resulting from the services of younger Officers in the superior grade of your Army.

But should your Honorable Court object to the removal of a Colonel to the Junior or Senior Lists, which we do not anticipate, your Memorialists venture to hope, the second plan may be sanctioned, which offers a bonus of 27,000 rupees to as many Field Officers as funds may be obtainable for, whose time of Service enables them to accept the sum—the number being limited to four annually. This fund, like the former one, to be conducted by the Subscribers without expence to Government, but under the sanction of the Honorable Court.

Your Memorialists solicit from your Honorable Court a Retiring Fund based on such principles as you may be pleased to grant us. We are willing to make any reasonable sacrifice of pay towards its support, and we earnestly entreat, should neither of the present plans meet your approval, that you will substitute any other; so that this long looked for cherished object, which has been so frequently agitated and has so obviously impeded promotion, may be speedily and finally set at rest.

Your Honorable Court have, in its extended liberality, added to the Civil Service a Retiring Fund on a noble foundation: to the Medical Service also, you have granted a Retiring Fund which allows a Member £200 per annum in addition to the pay of the rank. Your best feelings have been displayed in the late boon towards those who are unfortunate in promotion, and therefore your Memorialists confidently entertain the Army an equal indulgence may be shown by sanctioning a Retiring Fund that may have for its basis, the relief to your old and faithful Military Servants, without entailing any serious loss on the State,

And your Memorialists, as in duty bound, shall ever pray.

J. F. M. Ried,	J. H. Crawford, Esq.

The Accounts of the Fund for the year 1835-36 were laid before the Meeting.

Moved by the Chairman, and seconded by Mr. Braddon:—

"That the Accounts be passed."

Carried unanimously.

Moved by Mr. Parker, seconded by Mr. Braddon:—

Moved by Mr. Parker, seconded by Mr. Braddon:—"That in future the Balance Sheet of the Annual Account Current be published for general information, together with, and as part of the Notice of Meeting."

Carried unanimously.

The first proposition in the Memorial of the Members of the Bombay Civil Service Annuity Fund, whereof a copy had been circulated to subscribers with the Secretary's Circular letter of the 2d November 1836, was read and considered.

Moved by Mr. Prinsep, and seconded by Mr. Dick:—

"That while this Meeting fully shares in the desire to co-operate with the Bombay Servants in all measures calculated to advance the prospects and interests of both Services; it does not appear to it to be proper that the Servants of this Presidency should apply to the Hon'ble Court of Directors for the benefit of permission to retire after a residence of 20 years, the Service having by their Managers' letter, dated 2d April 1830, made application for something very similar in effect and spirit, which application did not meet the approbation or sanction of the Court; and the subject not appearing to this Meeting to be of sufficient importance, as concerns the service, to warrant the revival of the application."

The Meeting divided upon this question, when there appeared—

The motion was accordingly lost.

Moved by Mr. Parker, seconded by Mr. Young:—
"That the Managers prepare a Memorial to the Hon'ble the Court of Directors expressing a general concurrence in the prayer of the Bombay Petition, for limiting the period of residence in India requisite as qualification for the Annuity, to 20 years."

Carried.

The second proposition in the side Memorial was then read and considered.

Moved by Mr. Young, seconded by Mr. Walker:—
"That the prayer of the Bombay Memorialists that Civil Servants hereafter appointed to Council shall, on the termination of their appointment, be deemed disqualified from returning to the Service"—be adopted in the Memorial of the Bengal Services.

The Meeting divided on this question, when there appeared—

For the motion—Present,.....	2 2

The motion was consequently lost.

The Chairman mentioned that he had received 21 written votes in favor of the motion, and 24 against it. But, as it was not supported by nine Members actually present, these votes were not called for.

Moved by Mr. Colvin, seconded by Mr. W. H. Macnaghten:—That the Members of the Service assembled at this meeting, not content with refusing their concurrence in the prayer that Civil Servants, after passing through the Council, shall not be re-admitted to general service, protest in the strongest terms against the adoption of a proposition so opposed to a just and liberal view of the Claims of Meritorious Service, and to the principles on which the Civil Services in India are constituted and by which it has hitherto been their pride to be regulated."

The Meeting divided on this question, when there appeared—

For the Motion—Present,.....	22 22
Against ditto—Present,.....	2 2

Majority for 20

The Motion was accordingly carried.

Moved by Mr. Prinsep, seconded by Mr. Braddon:

"That the following Rule be passed as an addition to Rule 37 and submitted for the approval of the Hon'ble the Court of Directors.

"A junior servant who may have already proceeded, or may hereafter proceed to England, and may desire to benefit by this Rule, will be required to submit his application to the Hon'ble the Court of Directors, with a tender of his conditional resignation of the Service; and if the Hon'ble Court be satisfied that his case comes under the Rule, his claim to benefit from it, according to his period of residency, will be considered on the first day of May next, after the receipt, by the Managers in India, of the Official Notification of the Hon'ble Court's approval of the measure. In cases in which an Annuity may be granted under this Rule, the amount of fine demandable from a Junior so circumstanced must be paid to the Fund in India, before the Annuity can commence."

Carried unanimously.

The Chairman mentioned that he had received twelve written votes in favor of this motion, and none against it.

Read a letter from the Hon'ble W. H. L. Melville, G. P. Leycester, Esq., A. Grote, Esq., the Hon'ble Robert Forbes, and J. J. Ward, Esq., proposing that the following Gentlemen be elected Managers for the present year, viz:

D. C. Smith,	F. Millett,	and
F. H. Madock,	F. Macnaghten,	H. Torrens.

After a Vote of thanks to the Chairman for his conduct in the Chair the Meeting broke up.

MEDICAL RETIRING FUND.

The first quarterly general meeting of subscribers to the Bengal Medical Retiring Fund was held at the house of the secretary, on Monday the 9th January. On Mr. Surgeon William Jackson being called to the chair, the following report was read:—

The committee are at length enabled to congratulate the contributors upon the fund being in actual operation. At the expiration of the period allowed for joining, three annuities were offered to the senior subscribers, and one has been accepted by Mr. Superintending Surgeon W. A. Venour. Several letters in reply to those of the committee have also been received, which will be opened in rotation on the 31st day of the present month, the date fixed for that purpose. And Mr. Surgeon N. Maxwell has declared himself willing to retire upon the annuity, should one of those now offered come to his turn."

"The committee have much pleasure in stating that the arrears of subscription are in process of realization. Several subscribers have already paid the full amount due from them and almost all have taken steps towards doing so; and at the time allotted, the 31st day of August next, it is confidently expected but a very small portion will remain uncollected."

"Some little misunderstanding appears to prevail with regard to the currency in which the subscriptions and arrears are calculated. One subscriber proposes that the collections shall be in Company's rupees instead of in sicca rupees. If this be merely meant as a change in terms, it is already done; the calculations being all made to subscribers in Company's rupees, the amount in sicca rupees being given merely in explanation, in like manner as it is still more or less used in most public offices and private establishments. But if it is meant to reduce the amount of subscription from its present standard, by making the number of rupees to be paid the same in the inferior currency as in the superior, the proposition is not well founded. A certain sum is required to purchase a certain number of annuities of a fixed value, and it matters not whether that sum is calculated in one currency or in another; the amount to be collected must be the same. It is the duty of the committee to take care that amount shall not be greater than is actually required, and it must not be forgotten that it is annually fixed at the fourth quarterly meeting, by the subscribers present at such Meeting, who would themselves suffer by a contrary course to an equal extent with other subscribers."

"Two members of the management, Messrs Corbyn and Bramley, went out in rotation at the close of the year, and have been re-elected; and Mr. Ludlow having left the Presidency Division, his seat has been filled up by the election of Mr. Ranken."

"Between the last quarterly meeting and the 31st of October, the time allowed for joining fund, there was an accession of 25 new members, and one who formerly withdrew rejoined. The application of one gentleman, Mr. Assistant Surgeon Gregory Vos, was sent some days after that date in consequence of indisposition having prevented his applying earlier, a plea the committee considered satisfactory, and Dr. Vos was accordingly allowed to subscribe. Two members have died during the quarter. The present list of subscribers is composed as follows:

Superintending Surgeons.....	10
Surgeons.....	78
Assistant Surgeons, 1st class.....	137
Ditto ditto, 2d class.....	33

"A wish having been expressed by several subscribers to know the names of those who are members, the committee have forwarded a list to the publishers of the Directors, who have obligingly assented to their request, that a distinguishing mark should be placed in the medical list opposite the name of each member of the fund."

"The receipts during the quarter ending 31st October last, in the Pay Department, amount to Co.'s Rs. 18,879 7 11, since which two Paymasters of Benares and Cawnpore have sent in their accounts for Nov. which give Co.'s Rs. 2,888 5 3, and the Sub-Treasurer credits the fund in the months of October, November, and December, Co.'s Rs. 16,445 7 7, and a further sum of Co.'s Rs. 347 7 3 has been received in the Revenue and Judicial Department for October, 1836, making a total of receipts, as per statements rendered since the last account of 38,560 12 0."

"The expenditure during the quarter comprises the following item:

• Including those of that rank on Furlough.

Appropriated balance to meet contingencies Sa. Rs. 30,000 Co.'s Rs.	82,000 0 0
Ditto ditto the value of the annuity granted to Mr. W. A. Venour, Sa. Rs. 26,010 or Co.'s Rs.	27,744 0 0
Salary and Office Establishment of the Secretary Co.'s Rs.	750 0 0
Drawing up, &c. &c. the deed of the fund Co.'s Rs.	1,135 7 0
Printing Circulars and Deeds of the fund Co.'s Rs.	460 12 0
Advertising Co.'s Rs.	92 5 0

A balance of Co.'s Rs. 62,256 10 8 is thus left to the credit of the fund, which will admit of 2 annuities being given in addition to the two at present declared, and which the committee will immediately offer."

"Thus it will be seen that the success of the fund, considering the difficulties it has had to contend with, has been more than equal to the highest expectations that could have been entertained. A large majority of the members of the service have joined it, the question of arrears has been happily set at rest; and a general deep impression prevails of the eminent benefits to its members it is calculated to confer."

The following resolutions were then submitted for the votes of the meeting:

Proposed by Mr. Surgeon H. Cooper, and seconded by Dr. A. Bryce, and carried unanimously,—

"That the report now read be confirmed and adopted."

Proposed by Mr. W. Raleigh, and seconded by Dr. Leckie, and carried unanimously,—

"That it be submitted to the service as a conditional amendment to Rule XXIV.

That in case the Hon'ble Court of Directors grant to the Medical Service the boon for which they have memorialized, subscribers to the fund may retire from the service without prejudicing their claim to the annuity after having served the reduced period specified by the Court as entitling them to pension."

Proposed by Dr. N. Maxwell, seconded by Mr. Angus, and carried unanimously,—

"That the cordial thanks of this meeting be returned to the managers and secretary for their valuable services in bringing into operation the Medical Retiring Fund and placing it in its present flourishing condition."

Proposed by Dr. A. R. Jackson, and seconded by Mr. W. Raleigh, and carried unanimously,—

"That the thanks of this meeting be given to the Chairman."

THE QUARTERLY JOURNAL OF THE CALCUTTA MEDICAL AND PHYSICAL SOCIETY.

As Secretaries to the Medical and Physical Society of Calcutta, we discharge to-day the gratifying duty of offering to the members of that body the first number of their Quarterly Journal.

The circumstances under which this Periodical originated are of too recent notoriety to need recapitulation or comment. Long since the question had been discussed as to the necessity for the publication. To decide the controversy the members were individually addressed. Their replies demanded a periodical, and left no alternative to the Secretaries, but the fulfilment of this new duty, or the resignation of the offices to which they had been called. Unwilling to incur the just disgrace which would have stigmatized the first procedure, we had no hesitation in undertaking this pleasing, because useful, labor. We do so the more willingly since the most malicious can scarcely assign an evil motive for our exertions. It is not for profit that we seek, for never, under any circumstances, shall we sell a single number for our own advantage. Neither is it for the gratification of the unwarlike self-conceit which leads so many to scribble with an editorial pen—for, by the plan of this periodical, we are restricted from the frequent privilege of passing critical judgment on the works of men far wiser and abler than ourselves. Nor lastly, is it for amusement for vacant and useless hours that we compile these pages, for we are truly of those, whose bread is earned by the "sweat of the brow," and the task work of the brain.

But the nature of our diurnal duties facilitates, to some degree, the performance of editorial functions. Placed as teachers in a new and experimental institution—surrounded daily by pupils whose national sagacity is sharpened by education—closely observed, too, by our professional superiors and contemporaries, our feelings of natural, and we trust, not unworthy pride, force us to a course of study which supplies ample materials for our columns.—these materials are drawn from attentive examination of all the British and foreign professional journals, and will, we trust, prove as useful to the members of the Society as we find them indispensable to ourselves.

The size of this journal and frequency of its appearance will depend materially on the nature of the modifications about to be made in the Post Office Regulations, and also on the degree of support we meet from our brethren in the Museum in the shape of original contributions. Should our wishes be accomplished in these points, we will issue a number every second month, of the same size as the present, but under any circumstances, while the funds of the Society permit the outlay, and while we continue in our present offices, we will publish every quarter a number such as we now present.

We cordially and earnestly, then, invite our brethren in the provinces to aid us in our useful undertaking. In the department of medical statistics and topography—in the investigation of the qualities of native remedies—in the observation of meteorological phenomena—in countless other pursuits, we know our associates are ever active in inquiry. We offer them now a suitable vehicle for the publication of their results,—one which will place the author of every deserving essay in the most favorable light before all those whose opinions he should value. Our arrangements secure the gratuitous transmission of copies of this Journal to every distinguished Society in Europe and America, and we will also be happy to forward a few copies to private friends of the writers of original communications.

We trust the inducements we are enabled thus to offer, will stimulate the members of the Society to active and prompt exertion. The Medical Society of Calcutta has already earned a high name in the list of scientific bodies. To sustain, to enhance that honorable renown, we should all enthusiastically co-operate. It must not be said of us in Europe, that expatriation has rendered us inefficient in the advancement of our profession. We will rather strive to excite among our brethren of the fatherland some surprise, that amidst the many impediments which beset us here, we still pursue with unabated zeal the various useful and ennobling branches of our truly philanthropic art.

MEDICAL AND PHYSICAL SOCIETY.

At a Meeting of the Medical and Physical Society of Calcutta, held at the Asiatic Society's Apartments on the 7th January, 1837.

R. L. Cumberland, Esq., proposed at the last meeting, was elected a member of the Society.

Letters from the following gentlemen were read:—

From F. Thompson, Esq., Assistant-Surgeon, Bengal, Thomas Key, Assistant-Surgeon, Madras; A. Wood, Esq., Surgeon, Bengal, stating their wishes to withdraw from the Society.

From Messrs. Arbuthnot and Co. of Madras, and from W. B. Thompson, Esq., and from J. Buchanan, Esq., on behalf of J. Harcourt, Esq., to the same purpose.

J. Forbes, Esq., Assistant-Surgeon of the Madras establishment, was proposed as a member of the society by J. Stevenson, Esq., senior, seconded by Dr. Goodrive. The society then proceeded to the election of office bearers for the ensuing year, previous to which a letter was read from Dr. Mercer, regretting that his time would not permit him again to seek the honor of being re-elected as Assistant Secretary. Dr. D. Stewart also stated his wish not to be chosen again as one of the committee of management.

After the ballot box had circulated, the following gentlemen were found duly elected:—

J. LANGSTAFF, Esq., President.
 N. WALLICH, Esq., M. D., F. R. S., Vice President.
 H. H. GOODEVE, Esq., M. D., Secretary & Treasurer.
 R. O'SHAUGHNESSY, Esq., Asst. ditto ditto.
 W. B. O'SHAUGHNESSY, Esq., M. D., Foreign Secy.

Members of the Committee of Management.

J. RANKEN, Esq. | M. J. BRAMLEY, Esq.
 C. C. EGERTON, Esq. | F. CORRYN, Esq.

Members of the Committee of Papers.

W. CAMERON, Esq. | F. H. BRETT, Esq.
 It was proposed by Mr. Brett, seconded by Mr. R.

O'Shaughnessy, that at the ensuing meeting a proposition should be laid before the society upon the propriety of collecting the votes of the entire body of members of all future elections of office bearers.

The following communications were then laid before the society:—

A case of death from necrosis of the femur after amputation, by A. R. Lindsay, Esq.

A letter from R. Foley, Esq., containing some severe comments upon Mr. Brett's case of cancer, read at a previous meeting.

UNIVERSAL LIFE ASSURANCE SOCIETY.

At an Annual Meeting of the Shareholders and Policy Holders of the Universal Life Assurance Society, held at the Office on the 31st December, 1836.

PRESENT.

Mr. John Stewart,	Mr. Charles Prinsep,
Capt. Thomson,	Dr. Garden,
Mr. Adam F. Smith,	Mr. John Jenkins,
Mr. Hutchins,	Mr. Rushton,
Mr. F. Macnaghten,	Mr. G. A. Prinsep,
Mr. M. Manuk,	Mr. John Lowe,
Mr. Henderson,	Mr. Beattie,
Mr. Charles Dearie,	Mr. Braddon, junior
Mr. R. H. Matthews,	and
Mr. Pattie,	Mr. George Dougal.

On the motion of Mr. Adam F. Smith seconded by Mr. Beattie, Mr. Pattie was called to the chair.

The following report by desire of the Directors was then read to the Meeting, and unanimously approved.

REPORT.

In conformity with the Provisions of the Deed of Settlement, the Directors submitted to the Proprietors and Policy-holders assembled a sketch of their Proceedings. During the past half year 137 new Policies have been issued for sums amounting in the aggregate to Company's Rupees 13,27,933-5-4—two lapses have taken place, which have collectively caused claims upon the Society to the amount of Co's. Rs 27,733-5-4.

The accounts of the Parent Society extending to the 31st March last, with the report of the Board of Directors to the second Annual General Court of Proprietors held in London, 11th May last, are before the Meeting. On the 31st March last, 210 Policies had been issued for sums amounting in the aggregate to £ 219,648-16-9,—three lapses had taken place, which had collectively caused claims upon the Society to the amount of £ 900.

From the statements and accounts laid before the Meeting as hereafter particularised, the following brief abstract of the present state of the Society is deduced, viz.

Policies issued in London and Calcutta,..... 703
 Discontinued, expired, surrendered and lapsed, . 58

Total number of Policies outstanding, 645

Amount of Policies in operation in London, 31st March last, £210,648-16-9 at 2s... Co's Rs 21,06,498 6 0

Amount of Policies in operation in Calcutta, 30th November, 1836.... 50,93,416 10 7

Which, divided by 645, gives an average of Rs 11,007. per Policy.

Amount of Funds in London invested in East India Stock new 3½ per cents. and other Securities as per Statement dated 31st Mar. last, £31,254 14 3

Remitted from India 2,287 10 0

Amount of Funds in India invested in Company's Papers, as per Statement, with Cash Balance in the Bank of Bengal,..... 3,72,921 1 10

Total Co's Rs 7,08,343 3 10

On the subject of the subscribed capital, the Directors have to remark that the Stock is at a considerable Premium, both in this and the London Markets, and that the Annual Interest of 5 per cent. on Shares payable on the 1st of January in each year, for which purpose applications must be made at the Office, and receipts forwarded according to a prescribed form.

The claims respectively amount to £900 and Company's rupees 27,733-5-4, or collectively at two Shillings Company's rupees 36,733 5-4, from which if we deduct the amount of Premium realised on the terminated Risk—say £240 and Company's Rupees 15,436-9-3, there remains only Company's rupees 21,296-12-4 to be set against Company's Rupees 4,66,300-7-0, which will appear by the Statement to have been received in Premiums. It is not necessary to stop to enquire how far the claims which have occurred correspond with those which might have been expected from the Tables of Mortality, on which the rates of the Office are founded as the result is so much in favour of the Society, that though the Directors may feel the highest satisfaction in congratulating their constituency upon a greater degree of exemption from the Casualties to which human Life is at all times subjected than is usual, they do not adduce the absence of claims nor the smallness of their amount as data from which to estimate the Society's future success, for the date of its foundation is yet too recent to warrant conclusions being drawn from its experience; still, each year's experience forms one link in a chain which will ultimately lead to very important results, and in the mean time it is most gratifying to the Board to be enabled thus early to announce that success has hitherto attended their exertions and that the amount of business already effected is sufficient to secure the stability of the Society. Your Directors have submitted for the consideration of the Board at home, several important propositions arising out of circumstances here which call for their serious consideration. Among them may be named—the obvious advantage the Society will derive from having the bulk of its funds invested in India, where the rate of interest is usually higher than at home,—the propriety of increasing the rate on Indian Lives beyond the present limit of 50,000,—which has been found insufficient to meet the wants of several applicants—and the propriety of fixing the terms on which Indian Policies may be continued in England. These and other important questions have received much consideration from the Board of Directors at home, and recent accounts which have been received lead your Directors to the conclusion, that the whole will be speedily settled to their entire satisfaction.

The appointment of Agents for the principal Cities and Towns in England, as well as for several important places on the Continent of Europe, was gradually progressing, and an application had been made by Colonel Napier, Secretary for Indian Affairs, for a Branch of the Society in Canada, which had been complied with, and it was expected that a considerable accession of business and much valuable information as to the Statistics and Mortality of that part of the Globe would result.

The Board of Directors, with a view to obviate inconvenience as well to secure an advantageous investment for a small portion of their Capital, have secured from the City of London a most eligible site in KING WILLIAM STREET, on which they propose erecting suitable premises for the business of the Society.

Before concluding, the Directors have to announce that on the 7th June last the ROYAL ASSENT was given to an ACT OF PARLIAMENT for enabling the UNIVERSAL LIFE ASSURANCE SOCIETY to sue and to be sued in the name of the Actuary for the time being, or of any one of the Directors of the said Society, and conferring on the society the usual powers and privileges.

The Directors fully expect that within the next six months they will be prepared to enter fully upon the extensive plan of the Society as originally proposed, embracing SURVIVORSHIPS, ENDOWMENTS FOR CHILDREN, AND THE PURCHASE AND SALE OF REVERSIONS AND ANNUITIES, as every preparation is making at Home for this purpose.

By Order of the Directors,

BAGSHAW & CO.

Agents and Secretaries,

Universal Life Assurance Society.

The Meeting then proceeded to ballot for two Directors in the room of Charles Robert Prinsep, Esquire, and Captain John Thomson, who go out by rotation, when C. R. Prinsep, Esq., and Captain John Thomson were re-elected.

Thanks were then voted to the Chair.—Calcutta Courier, January 4th.

JOURNAL OF THE ASIATIC SOCIETY.

Preface to the December Number.

Our aspirations on launching a fifth annual volume of the Journal into the ocean of literature are no longer tremulous from a diffident anxiety as to its reception; the tide of popular favor, or at least the diminutive wave of it which reaches the secluded estuary of oriental research, has buoyed us up with the most flattering encouragement, and an increasing body of constituents has still pressed forward to freight our humble bark with the productions of their industry and talent. To extract any of the too complimentary phrases of our correspondents in Paris, Vienna, and London, would be egotism; and we must not forget that a proportion of their praise may be merely stimulatory—inciting us to take advantage of the golden opportunities commanded by our position at the emporium, to amass a rich cargo for their more deliberate and erudite discussion hereafter. Our errors also have not escaped their due measure of criticism, but even thus they have been productive of a good effect in drawing forth more correct information from other sources. The commerce in which we are engaged, to continue the metaphor in the terms of late French prospectus, “multipliera le capital de la science comme l'autre commerce multiplie celui du numeraire.”

However we may thus boast of having added to the stock of knowledge, we fear the “capital du numeraire” has but little connection, beyond the analogy, with the out-turn of our speculation; although, if the pecuniary prospects of the Journal are not much bettered this year, we have none to blame but ourselves for the unpromising aspect of our account current!

By increasing the letter-press more than 100 pages, and the plates in proportion, we felt we were exceeding the bounds of caution; yet we could not resist the attempt to keep pace with the communications entrusted to us for publication, even at some sacrifice and risk. Had our edition been sufficiently extensive to allow a large reserve for future sale, there might have been hopes of retrieval—but the 500 copies have all disappeared, and of our early volumes it is almost impossible now to procure a copy. The only method, then, left to meet this difficulty, is to levy a heavier assessment on our supporters for the future; and to this step, however reluctantly, we shall be obliged to resort from the beginning of the year 1837, still always adhering to our engagement of giving the maximum of matter for our means, and reminding our subscribers that we are not in fact heightening our charge, but enlarging our work; seeing that from 32 pages we have gradually augmented the monthly quota to 80, a quantity which experience has proved to be more than can be covered by a rupee subscription. Our rates from 1837, therefore, will be 1½ rupees per number to subscribers; and two rupees to others. The pecuniary details on which this measure is founded are as follows:

If, in our last volume, we could not refrain from noticing, as the most prominent object of interest in its contents, the suspension of oriental publications by the British Indian Government, and the general discouragement under which oriental studies were doomed to languish, we must not, on the present occasion, omit to make honorable mention of the patronage and favor which has once more dawned upon science and literature in India under the present administration. The proceedings of the Asiatic Society, last year so full of painful discussion and unsuccessful appeal, this year shine forth with tokens of distinguished consideration. Consulted on the merit of propositions connected with historical research in the Peninsula and in Ceylon, its recommendations have met that attention which dignifies its proceedings, and tends more than any thing else to render it a substantive and useful institution. The sanction of its auspices has been courted, and has been extended beneficially to publications of great magnitude and importance. It has itself engaged in a new sphere of operations, devolved upon it by the discussions of last year, which promises, by a judicious combination with the sister Societies of France and England, to become equally advantageous to the European scholar, and profitable to itself. The Society of Paris has been the foremost to volunteer its co-operation in the completion of the series of suspended oriental works; but we have reason to know that the Royal Asiatic Society of London has not espoused their cause less warmly or less successfully, although the unavoidable delays of references to high authorities have prevented our yet reaping the fruits of their influence and intercession.

Many will consider with ourselves that the publication of a full edition of the oriental classics is a perfectly legitimate branch of labour for an Asiatic Society, and they may hope to see it permanently continued under endowment and protection of the Government itself.—It may indeed be regarded as a judicious modification of one of the earliest intentions of the institution promulgated in July 1806, but hitherto left a dead letter on its minutes, "that a series of volumes, to be entitled BRAHMERICA ASIATICA, be published by the Society distinct from the Asiatic Researches, containing translations of short works in the Asiatic languages, and extracts and descriptive accounts of books of greater length, gradually extending to all Asiatic books deposited in the Society's library, and given to all works extant in the languages of Asia."

The translation and critical examination of Oriental works at the present day can be better undertaken by the distinguished professors and philologists of Europe, and the only department of which we can hope to relieve them, with any chance of success, is the collection and correct printing of original texts through the supervision of our native Pandits and Maulavis. We therefore hope to see fresh volumes put in hand now that the series transferred by the Committee of Education is so nearly completed; and we would respectfully suggest, that the Government should make over to the Society all of the Sanscrit, Arabic and Persian works that have hitherto issued from the Education Press, in order that one system of distribution and sale may be regulated for the whole series; and that, under the name of the BRAHMERICA ASIATICA, this body of Indian classical lore may be encouraged and regarded in the light of a national undertaking, entrusted merely to the vigilant superintendence of the Society as the appropriate organ of their publication.

But we are dwelling too long on a favorite project, and have but little space left to allude to the equally prosperous fortune of the natural sciences during the present year. The sincere votary of science cannot have witnessed without pleasurable anticipations the introduction, altogether novel in this country, of the delightful and instructive experiments of natural philosophy among the social recreations of Government House. At these parties may be kindled into action many a dormant disposition to cultivate the sciences that have hitherto but wanted such a stimulus; and the community at large may learn to appreciate the studies they have been accustomed to eschew as vain or recondite, by witnessing their practical application and attractions. We have heard it suggested as an improvement on the plan adopted by the illustrious Patron of the Society, to hold these soirees directly at the Society's museum, where the objects to be explained or exhibited might be prepared more at leisure, and where they would remain classified with others in the same collection;—others again have advocated the giving of a more decidedly lectural character to the evening's exposition. In London, where the President of the Royal Society holds similar meetings, his visitors are already well grounded in the subjects treated of, and need but a glance at any new invention or experiment to comprehend its drift: but in India the majority have not enjoyed the same opportunities, and their curiosity is merely raised without hope of entire satisfaction. But against this view it may be urged that a monthly lecture would be but a tardy mode of communicating knowledge, more especially if the subject were to be changed on each occasion. A course of lectures might be a good succedaneum to the system, but the spirit of the monthly re-union must be general and exhibitory, to answer the object intended.

Again we are insensibly falling into a review of matters beyond the proper scope of a Preface, which should confine itself to the contents of the volume it proceeds, or to the mutual concerns of the editor and his constituents.

On the cover of more than one monthly journal we have already explained to what extent we have been enabled to increase the number and accuracy of our lithographed plates this year, by putting in requisition the talents of our mofussil friends. When the facilities of drawing on transfer paper for lithographic printing become more generally known, we may expect still further advantage from its adoption by travellers, engineers, botanists, and naturalists, who are, or ought to be artists also. It is now known from actual experience that a transfer drawing, packed in a tin roll, may be subjected to a journey of 1000 miles, either in the hottest or the dampest period of the year with impunity. Most of the imperfections in the plates of the Sewalik fossils are due to want of care in passing them on to the stone, rather than to imperfections in the original drawings.

Some confusion has arisen this year, in the numbering and placing of the plates, from continual and unavoidable postponements which it is needless to particularize. One plate (of the Bhitari inscription) has been reserved for the ensuing volume, that full justice may be done to the able elucidation of its important contents. And here we may be allowed a moment's exultation at the highly curious train of discovery, connected with this monument, which has been developed in the pages of the journal.

Not only has a dynasty before wholly unknown to the Indian historian, been traced by coins and inscriptions through seven generations in its own line, but two collateral alliances with other reigning princes have been brought to light; while extracts from ancient Chinese authors, independently scrutinized in Europe, have helped to determine their exact chronological epoch.

In numismatic research discovery has been no less rich. The theory of a Grecian origin has been extended to various other series of Hindu coins—and the only one (the Varaha series) which remained of a doubtful source, has recently been traced in a most satisfactory manner to the Sassanian coinage of Persia, as will hereafter be shewn. We may here correct an ignorant error into which we have fallen in describing the legend of SWINEY's coin of AGATHOCLEA—giving the epithet θεορρηγ, as if derived from ρηγω instead of ρηγω; to this our attention has been called by several correspondents; and we therefore thus conspicuously acknowledge our blunder. The true meaning of the epithet (written θεορρηγον though united to βασιλευσας) we conceive to be “godly-dispositioned.”

We must also caution our readers against implicitly adopting our version of the Barro-Pehlevi character—for we are now in possession of the comparative alphabet lithographed by M. JACQET, which differs in many respects from our system, grounding it upon the Syriac instead of the Zend. Not having yet seen the author's memoir on the subject, we are unable to make known his system, although we cannot doubt its superiority to our crude attempt.

In fossil geology one immense step has been made this year, by the discovery of the remains of a quadrumanous animal, the nearest approach to the human being that has yet been found in a fossil state in company with the extinct monsters of primeval antiquity. This important addition has enriched the Dâdupur museum; but no less interesting have been the additions to its worthy rival the museum of Seharanpûr. It is perhaps right to explain how it has happened that the papers of Lieuts. BAKER and DUNAN have mostly appeared in the journal, while those of Dr. FALCONER and Captain CANTLEY have graced the new volume of the Researches. This selection was made from no difference in the relative value of these most interesting papers, but solely to accommodate best the drawings which accompanied them. We hope at some future period, to see the whole series collected together into a complete and luxurious work on the fossil osteology of the Himalayan range; but such an undertaking should await the exploration of the whole line, and should be made a national concern. At present the great feat is, least the quantity of specimens dispersed in private collections on all sides, may deprive us of many fragments requisite to work out the forms of the curious new animals disinterred from this vast cemetery of the ancient world.

We have partly redeemed our promise to our meteorological contributors: sufficiently so, we hope, to revive their exertions, and procure us a combined series of observations in different parts of India for the coming year, more extended than the comparative tables we have now published. We regret having been unable to supply Barometers to the numerous applicants who have volunteered to use them. The duty now levied on philosophical instruments, will tend still more to check their importation.

Or readers will now readily excuse the absence of articles on the progress of the sciences in Europe, since that department has been zealously pursued by another periodical of extensive circulation, in consequence partly of our neglect of it; and a third rival has recently entered the field under promising and powerful auspices. These have so fully made known many local inventions of scientific interest, that we have less regretted our inability to find space for their re-insertion. We would, on no account, however, wish to confine our pages to subjects more strictly Indian; on the contrary, we shall ever study to infuse into them a pleasing variety of original information on all subjects, of man's performance or nature's production, within the wide range prescribed to us by our allegiance to the Asiatic Society.—Cour. Jan. 31.

BOMBAY BRANCH OF THE ROYAL ASIATIC SOCIETY.

At the monthly meeting held on the 28th Dec.

Captain Newport, having been balloted for, is duly elected a member of the Society.

A Marathi Atlas is presented to the Society, by the Author, Dadoba Pandurang.

A very able valuable and interesting Essay on the Arabic Language, by the late T. M. Dickinson, Esq. was read. It is devoted principally to the elucidation of the precision and copiousness of that ancient tongue. The capacity of the language to express simple and correct definitions must be admitted, it is contended, by all who will consider either its exact precision of structure, or examine a page of the Kamus, or any other approved version. The argument that the Arabic must be limited in its powers to express intellectual ideas, because it is in its roots, is considered unsound; and a part of the paper is spent in its refutation. The arguments against its copiousness, founded on the abundance of its synonyms, alleged to have been formed to get rid of the necessity of a paucity of ideas, is declared to be also unsound, because it is contrary to experience to suppose that any people ever coined even one word exactly synonymous with other words with which they were previously acquainted.

The peculiarities of the language are thus set forth:—“The earliest accounts of Arabia describe it as a wild and desert region, occupied by a number of wandering tribes or families, the descendants of Ishmael, the son of Abraham, Esau the son of Jacob, and the sons of Keturah the wife of Abraham, who finding the soil incapable from its dryness of maintaining large communities, were prevented from associating in large numbers, and founding towns and cities like the early settlers in the fertile provinces, on the banks of the Tigris and Euphrates, but wandering forth as they came to manhood, with their flocks and families, pitched their rude tents wherever they found all that was requisite for their wants, a well or spring which would afford water and pasture for their flocks, in which consisted their wealth and support; there they remained till the growing numbers of themselves and their flocks, became too great for the scanty supply of water to which they trusted for their subsistence, when the more active and adventurous part of the tribe wandered forth with their flocks and families in quest of another settlement. The consequence was, that in the course of years a large extent of country was peopled by a race of men descended from a common stock, and therefore speaking a common language, but separated from each other by the inhospitable sands of the desert, and unconnected by any of those links, by which arts and commerce have connected the most distant portions of the world. At first the lives of these early settlers and the scenes around them were unvaried and monotonous, and they were too much engaged in cares for their subsistence and preservation to devote much of their time or thoughts to reflect upon what they saw or felt, but as they became more settled and tranquil, and experience made them acquainted with new objects, or taught them to reflect upon those with which they were already familiar, they found themselves in want of words to express their new ideas, and here a striking feature of this extraordinary language forced itself upon our attention. It is natural and reasonable to assume that the Arabs were at the early period of which we are speaking, poor in their ideas, and unacquainted with many objects of nature, for we have no reason to suppose that they were and have every reason which experience of people in a similar state can furnish, to suppose that they were not, acquainted with letters without which it is impossible to preserve among a people for any length of time an idea of an object, which has never been presented to their senses. Several words, therefore which their forefathers used, as representatives of objects with which they were familiar, would, from the absence of similar objects in the places where their descendants settled, become obsolete and unknown and the idea was lost to their minds, till restored in the course of time by experience or reflection, when the word also being lost, they were obliged to coin a new one, but whenever the idea, whether sensible or intellectual was compound, or resolvable into any other simple ideas it was expressed by some modification of its most essential simple ideas. And it will be found upon enquiry that a few, if any, of those simple ideas which from the nature of things must have been early and constantly perceived by man are represented in Arabic by more terms than one, and that the compound ideas deducible from any are represented by modifications of that term, and, moreover, that those ideas, of which there are so many synonyms in our representations, are generally, if not always, sensible, and of such a nature that they could not along continue perceptible to the infant colonies of a wandering illiterate people without the presence of their objects, with which objects they might, conformably with the nature of things, be unacquainted long enough to forget and lose both the idea and word. The consequence was, that when in the course of time they again became acquainted with the object, and required a word to represent the new idea, if they could not refer it to any ideas of which they were in possession, they coined, at chance, directed, a new word, and hence the number of synonyms which are found in the modern Arabic, in which the various peculiar terms and idioms of the different tribes of Arabia have, as the writings of the host of authors which they have all contributed to furnish during the last 13 centuries, been united and embodied in one language.

In prosecuting this enquiry there are two points which particularly attract the attention, and excite the admiration. The first is the wonderful power and intrinsic richness of a language which, though used for centuries merely to represent the ideas of a race of pastoral barbarians was capable, when called upon, to explain to its people, and I may almost say to the world, the subtle reasoning of Aristotle, the sublime philosophy of Plato, the abstruse calculations of Euclid, and the delicate prescriptions of Galen and Hypocrites, and which, though strained as it was, by the immense influx of new ideas, which the writings of these sages and philosophers must have excited, was capable of furnishing words for them all, out of its own inexhaustible mines.

The 2d point, is the wonderful structure of this language which has preserved it from corruption or decay, just as it was for a period of above twenty centuries among a people who had neither colleges to establish or large communities to preserve their language, it has retained that peculiarly delicate structure uninjured by the hand of barbarism and neglect, and unimpaired by time, which has so particularly exercised the ingenuity of the Arabic Grammarians, and excited the admiration of the world.

As a written language the precision of the Arabic is equally peculiar. Without entering into a dissertation on the philosophical structure of its alphabet, it will be sufficient to observe that each letter has a certain essential sound which nothing can change or effect, and is either preceded or followed by a certain vowel point which also has an unchangeable sound, by the aid of which it is pronounced. But as the rules of grammar in all cases regulate the accent of the final letters, and custom has established that of all the others, the Arabs have not thought it necessary on ordinary occasions to make use of these diacritical points, and have consequently omitted them in all cases where the omission would not be attended with ambiguity and obscurity, except in treatises on religion, law, metaphysics, &c. in which there might be an ineligibility for ingenuity, to exert itself in perverting the obvious meaning of the text by a different but not inadmissible mode of punctuation with regard to making an active for a passive verb, or one person for another, it is almost needless to say that the context and a reference to the agent and thing acted upon, will always preclude the possibility not only of a mistake, but even of a doubt or hesitation.

Another peculiarity of the Arabic, is its remarkable application to harmonious composition. This may be ascribed to three causes.

1st The precision with which the length of the accent of each syllable is defined.

2nd The number of synonyms from which selection may be made of the word the most conducive to the harmony of the passage without at all affecting the meaning.

3rd. The circumstances of all derivative in which consists the bulk of the language being formed on the same model. But it is needless to support this argument by theory when a reference to the first page of the All Leilah in any other work, even in prose, will establish the point beyond the reach of controversy.

But there yet remains unnoticed, what may appear at first view a serious obstacle inherent in the nature of the Arabic language, which must prevent it from ever attaining a high degree of copiousness, or richness, and must doom it in the opinion of a superficial observer to be for ever a barren and unimprovable dialect. I allude to the absence of compound words, a circumstance essentially necessary and unfavorable in the construction of the language, and which must consequently ever prevent the Arabs from availing themselves of this mode of expressing new and complicated ideas; accustomed as we are to view the beautiful flexibility of the Greek and the other languages of Europe to which it has communicated so much of its own copious richness, it is natural that we should suppose that no other means than those which we have always before our eyes, the indispensable use and necessity of which we experience whenever art or science presents us with a new idea, could enable a language to expand with the advancement of science and to furnish new words for every new idea. But philosophy must not form her opinion so hastily, she must view the subject through the cold medium of reason, and weigh it in the severe scale of experience, she is aware that all the modern languages of Europe follow the example of the Greeks of expressing a variety of ideas by compounding several words together; and she sees what difficulty they would labor under, were it not for the rule universally acknowledged, which allows the coinage and adoption of any words. Si sequente cadant parca datoria. But these new terms are not understood except by those who have acquired a knowledge of the sources from which they are drawn, and consequently though distorted and arrayed in new apparel, they are as incomprehensible as if they had never been modernized. But circumstances so intimately connecting the rise of modern Europe with the decline and fall of the Greek and Roman Empires have established and preserved all that remains of these vast fabrics, save the names. Their language, though no longer spoken, is interwoven with every dialect of Europe. Necessity and subsequently custom, a law almost as strong, have made them the pursuit of all who have the means or opportunity of studying them; so that its fitness and their own natural convenience have induced the learned of all Europe, whether of Teutonic or Celtic nation, to diffuse their new ideas through the classical medium of Greek and Latin compounds. But had there been no such medium, and no occasion for a medium, supposing them to have had a common language, as the Arabs have, what would they have done? They would either have compounded words of their own language or have coined new ones, which would have been no more incomprehensible to the body of the people than the present classical terms actually are; and this we see constantly exemplified in those branches of science where the lower orders are engaged, for though they are presented with an infinite variety of new objects, which suggest a still greater variety of new ideas, they never are at a loss for terms to express them by, from their ignorance of the classical languages,—but either invent, or apply some words, which serves every purpose intended,—that of clearly and distinctly conveying their meaning.

Reason, therefore, clearly shows that compound words, however beautiful and natural they may appear to us, are not essential to the expression of new ideas. But experience and facts are still more stubborn arguments than reason itself. During the dark period between the 6th and 12th centuries, when the black fiend of superstition had cast its fetters over the minds and intellects of the whole of Europe, and ignorance had thrown its dismal mantle over the fairest portion of the globe, the torch of learning and literature was kept alive in the Saracen halls of Bochara and Bagdad, Damascus, and Medina, Cairo and Cordova, and other cities, under the sway of the successors of Mahomed. Those enlightened Arabs saw and admired the literature, science, and philosophy of the Grecian schools, but they saw the power and beauty of their own language, nor would they permit their youth to be opposed by the difficulties of a strange tongue in the acquirement of what they saw to be so desirable. By their order every thing which the wisdom of man had discovered conducive to the benefit of Society or the dignity of the mind, the polished and instructive beauties of history and romance, the beneficial details of botany and medicine, the abstruse calculations of geometry, algebra, and astronomy, the deep reasoning and elaborate philosophy of the grove, the portico, the lyceum and the academy, with stupendous works on jurisprudence, grammar, logic and rhetoric, were translated or compiled and diffused throughout their empire. But vast as was the influx of new matter and new ideas to these pastoral warriors, they found terms for them all in the unbounded depths of their own language, which seemed to borrow words from these sources from which the Arabs had derived so many ideas, and when in the course of ages the sun of the Saracen empire declined, the language retired to its native deserts, unexhausted and unfathomable as before; what it has not kept pace with the languages of Europe since that period, is owing not to its own imperfection but to the neglect of the Arabs themselves, who have relapsed into their original desert life as if they had never emerged from the wilderness. But it has been tried, severely tried, and has never been found deficient. Why then should we assume that it could not stand a trial, and on this assumption proceed to condemn it as crude and imperfect, on the contrary, when I view its internal structure unquestionably more perfect and comprehensive than any other known language, and find the impressions which this gives rise to so fully confirmed by the experience of centuries. I am disposed to think with Sir William Jones, Richardson, and the world in general, that the Arabic is a most copious, rich comprehensive, and wonderful language."—Courier, Jan. 7.

AGRICULTURAL AND HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY OF INDIA.

A General Meeting of this Society was held in the Town Hall, on the 13th of Jan., for the election of Office bearers for the present year.

MEMBERS PRESENT.

Dr. N. WALLICH, M. D., V. P., IN THE CHAIR.

The Hon. Col. Rehling; J. P. Grant, Esq.; Dr. Haffnagle; Charles Hutchins, Esq.; Archd. Grant, Esq.; J. W. Masters, Esq.; H. Walters, Esq.; W. Storm, Esq.; Captain T. Leach; David Hare, Esq.; H. M. Low, Esq., and John Bell, Esq.

Visitors—Dr. Helfer, M. D.; G. R. Campbell and G. A. Prinssep, Esqrs.

The Secretary informed the Meeting that Sir Edward Ryan was unable to attend in consequence of other engagements.

The following gentlemen proposed last month were duly elected members by ballot:—G. H. Smith, Esq.; John E. Baker; Dr. B. Burt; W. M. Dixon, Esq.; J. M. Macgregor, Esq.; W. G. Rose, Esq., and the Revd. Mr. Boaz.

The following gentlemen were proposed for election next month: F. Corbyn, Esq., M. D., proposed by Dr. Wallich and seconded by John Bell, Esq.

W. B. O'Shughnessy, Esq., M. D., proposed by Dr. Wallich and seconded by John Bell, Esq.

H. Goodeve, Esq., M. D., proposed by Dr. Wallich and seconded by W. C. Hurry, Esq.

John Haints, Esq., proposed by Dr. Wallich, and seconded by W. C. Hurry, Esq.

Alexander Colvin, Esq., proposed by J. C. Wilson, Esq., and seconded by H. M. Low, Esq.

H. Cowie, Esq., proposed by J. C. Wilson, Esq., and seconded by H. M. Low, Esq.

James Sydney Stopford, Esq., proposed by J. C. Wilson, Esq., seconded by H. Walters, Esq.

Alex. Beattie, Esq., proposed by J. C. Wilson, Esq., and seconded by H. Walters, Esq.

G. T. F. Speed, Esq., proposed by W. Storm, Esq., seconded by John Bell, Esq.

D. W. H. Speed, Esq., proposed by John Bell, Esq., and seconded by W. Storm, Esq.

E. Latour, Esq., (S. C. Malda) proposed by W. Storm, Esq., and seconded by F. McArthur, Esq.

M. Maclean, Esq., (Callna) proposed by W. Storm, Esq., and seconded by John Bell, Esq.

J. R. Colvin, Esq., proposed by J. P. Grant, Esq., and seconded by D. Hare, Esq.

G. A. Prinsep, Esq., proposed by Dr. Wallich and second by W. Storm, Esq.

The proceedings of last meeting having been read and confirmed, the Vice President called attention to the lists of officers for the past year, which lay on the table, and requested members present to substitute any other names they chose, intimating that Col. Dunlop, one of the Vice Presidents, being absent, that appointment required to be filled up.

C. K. Robinson, Esq., was accordingly elected in the room of Col. Dunlop: all the other officers were re-elected, the list therefore stands as follows:—

Patron.—The Right Honorable George Lord Auckland, C. G. B., &c.

President.—The Honorable Sir E. Ryan, Knight.

Vice-Presidents.—Dr. N. Wallich, M. D.; C. K. Robinson, Esq.; His Highness Nawaub Towaher Jung, and Baboo Radacant Deb.

General Committee.—Dr. Strong; W. Storm, Esq.; Joseph Willis, Esq.; D. Hare, Esq.; H. M. Low, Esq., and Baboo Radamadub Bannerjee.

Committee of papers.—Dr. Wallich, M. D.; W. Storm, Esq., and John Bell, Esq.

Agricultural Committee.—Dr. Wallich, M. D.; W. Storm, Esq., and John Bell, Esq.

Secretary and Collector.—John Bell, Esq.

The Vice-President stated that a very unfortunate mistake had been made by the Committee appointed to make arrangements for the ball proposed to be given to the Honorable Misses Elen, in fixing upon the evening of the day, last fixed for the annual exhibition of vegetables and the Society's dinner, and suggested that some definite understanding should immediately take place, as the season for vegetables had arrived.

Mr. H. M. Low proposed, and was generally seconded, that a committee be immediately appointed to wait upon the Hon. Misses Elen, or upon the ball Committee, to point out the injury which the matter would sustain, if any further delay were occasioned. A member present, however, stated that the circumstance had already been hinted to the ladies, who were quite indifferent to the evening that might be fixed, and Messrs. Low and Hatchins were accordingly requested to wait upon Mr. Shakespeare, who agreed to name the 17th for the ball, and that the 13th instant, as previously determined, should be reserved for the exhibition and dinner.

The President next called attention to a report which the Secretary had drawn up, of the Society's proceedings during the past year, which exhibited most satisfactory proof of the continued and greatly increasing prosperity of the Society. In the course of 1836, sixty-nine new members have been elected, but including 14 names proposed this day, while only four resignations had taken place, and those were Members leaving India. The pleasing view of the Society's progress was dampened by the record of the deaths of two highly respected Members, viz. James Kyd, Esq., and Captain William Bell.

Resolved.—That the Report read by the Secretary be adopted, and published in the Society's transactions.

The Collector's Report was next read, showing that from the 1st of January to the 31st of Dec. 1836, Rs. 11,531-1-1, have been collected, which, with the cash balance on the 31st of December, 1835, made up a sum of 13,433-2-1.

The disbursements had been very heavy; upwards of 4,000 Rs. had been expended on seed, and upwards of 2,000 Rs. on printing the Society's transactions in English and Bengalee.

Freight on seeds, the maintenance of the Society's nursery, medals and rewards, establishment, advertisements, &c. constituted the other chief items of expense, amounting in all, including those already stated above, to Rs. 9,740-13.

The Collector had likewise invested 3,207-10-6, in Government Securities, and placed them in the Government Agency office for further accumulation. The amount of fixed assets vested in 4 and 5 per cent. paper, is now 14,000 Rs. exclusive of current interest.

Resolved.—That the Collector's report be adopted and his account, and Abstract of Receipts and Disbursements, be published in the Society's transactions.

Resolved.—That the thanks of the Society be given to Mr. Bell for drawing up their reports.

Resolved.—That the special thanks of the Society be offered to the office bearers for the past year.

Read a very interesting and highly important series of suggestions by H. Walters, Esq., drawing the attention of the Society to the propriety of establishing Branch Societies throughout India. It would be injustice to Mr. Walters to attempt in this place, even an outline of his valuable paper. It will shortly be printed, and acted upon.

Dr. Hufnagle presented to the Meeting, a Catalogue of prizes and rewards dealt out by the Agricultural Society of Philadelphia, for the encouragement of Agriculture, Horticulture and Floriculture, which will form the basis for suggestions, in regard to the future operations of this institution.

Read a letter from Government to the Secretary, requesting the co-operation of the Society, in behalf of the objects, for which the services of that distinguished naturalist Dr. Helfer had been engaged, on his tour, to the Coast of Tenasserim, &c.

The Secretary informed the Meeting that he had immediately given effect to the letter of Government by putting up a valuable assortment of seeds, &c. which he had made over to Dr. Helfer, with all the printed information he had at his disposal.

As the business of the Meeting was principally to elect office bearers, the reading of all other communications were deferred until February. One more letter was however submitted from Mr. Liddell, Secretary to the Madras Society, stating that a model of Captain Dalrymple's plough might be obtained; but that the original plough had been offered by Captain Dalrymple at prime cost and charges which would be about 100 Rs.

Resolved.—That the Secretary be requested to write and accept Captain Dalrymple's polite offer.

JOHN BELL, Secretary.

THE HORTICULTURAL DINNER.

About eighty gentlemen attended the dinner laid out in the Town Hall on Thursday the 19th Jan. for the members of the Agri-Horticultural Society and their guests. Among the latter were Sir J. P. Grant, M. Bédif, the administrator of Chandernagore, Colonel Rehling, the Governor of Serampore. Sir Edward Ryan in the chair. After the usual compliment to royalty.

Sir Edward Ryan said, the stewards, who had been kind enough to take the trouble of the arrangements for the dinner, had taken care that the toasts should be appropriate to the subject of the meeting. He briefly stated that the one he had to propose was—'Prosperity to the Agricultural and Horticultural Society of India.' But, as some of the members present were not perhaps familiar with the proceedings of the Society, he ventured for a few minutes to trouble them with a short account. Sixteen years ago the Society was formed by the late Dr. Carey, a distinguished orientalist, a very distinguished botanist, but most distinguished as the founder of this Agricultural Society. He need not say, that it had been founded successfully; the table in the evening and the exhibition during the morning would answer the enquiry. It was true they had not succeeded with fruit trees, but the experiments had failed, not because the climate was ill-adapted for the purpose, but in consequence of having been tried on the wrong soil. He trusted the experiment would be repeated on a proper soil, and sure he was that it would be watched with interest by those who looked back at the description of vegetables they had a few years ago. He need not say it was then scarcely possible to procure good vegetables even in the gardens of private gentlemen. The result of establishing the society has been that the finest vegetable are easily procurable in the bazar. In truth that is the place where the most excellent are to be found! (Cheers). Up to 1829 the society had confined their attention to the extension and improvement of market vegetables and fruits, but since that period their views had been directed to the more important objects of agriculture, especially cotton and the sugar-cane. Before noticing these he briefly congratulated the society on the recent act of the English legislature in removing the sugar importation restrictions. The members had done their best to spread the Stabeite cane. It was true some of their attempts had failed; they had failed at Lucknow and two other places which he mentioned, but the accounts from Dr. Wallich were most cheering, and not less so were those from Captain Slesman, who is doing with the cane the best he can in Bundelcund. To cotton the society had turned their best attention, and with it they must succeed. A supply of American Cotton seed had some time since been forwarded by Mr. Richardson of Liverpool, and the result is now shewing itself at Singapore, on the Tenasserim coast, and in the North Western Provinces. Major Colvin and Colonel Skinner both spoke favourably of the cultivation of Upland Georgia, and Mr. Blundell was very sanguine, not only as to its success at Moulmein, but that it can be very profitably cultivated there. The chairman then went into the details furnished by Mr. Blundell of the expense of cultivating cotton, the result of which showed a very large profit. He also noticed the successful cultivation of arrow root by one of the members of the society, and alluded to the endeavour now making by Dr. Wallich in the Botanical Garden to grow the grass mentioned by Moorcroft as a preventive to the rot in sheep. Sir Edward congratulated the members on the prosperous state of the society, the increase of the number of members, the financial accumulations; the latter had enabled them to print the third volume of their Transactions, which was now printing under the superintendence of their talented member, Mr. Marshman. He thought, taking all things into consideration, he might say that the society was in a prosperous condition, and hoped that it may continue so, for it must tend much to the prosperity of the country. It was evident, if they could grow good cotton and good sugar, and increase the export thereof, the benefit would not be confined to India but extend itself to England also. He was sorry to say they were not supported by the particular class who interests were likely to be the most immediately benefited by the Society's exertions. There were a considerable number of members belonging to the civil service, but the merchants and indigo planters were more chary in giving their support. He hoped they would lend the society their aid for they had a deep interest in its proceedings.

The Chairman was loudly cheered at the conclusion, and the toast was drank with much applause.

Sir Edward Ryan, after noticing the applause with which the last toast had been received, was sure the members would not be less complimentary when he proposed the society's patron,

'Lord Auckland.' (Cheers.)

Dr. Wallich lamented his inability to speak as he could desire of the toast which had been assigned to him. But he was sure the members would readily supply the deficiency, when he proposed. 'The Society's friend and indefatigable supporter, our chairman.' (Much applause.)

The Chairman returned thanks. So far from having a deficiency to supply he was sure Dr. Wallich had said too much and spoken of him in terms which he did not deserve. His exertions had been very inefficient, nevertheless he had done his best.

Dr. Wallich.—How shall I, how can I possibly express what I feel when I propose the memory of my late friend, 'The illustrious founder of this society, Dr. Carey!'—(Solemn silence.)

The Chairman.—Fill a bumper, gentlemen! I propose the health of a gallant individual, not on account of the high rank he holds in this country, but because he is a distinguished and zealous member of this society. 'Sir Henry Fane.'

Sir J. P. Grant.—Gentlemen, I rise to propose the toast which has been put into my hands with much pleasure, both as a member of this society and as having been attached from a very early period of my life to agricultural pursuits. 'The Merchants and Shipping Interests of India.' I do not think any toast could have been better adapted to the present occasion. The prosperity of trade and agriculture are inseparable. The importance of one to the other might be illustrated by the remark of the French gentleman who translated Smith's 'Wealth of Nations.' He, when asked his opinion on the then much disputed point, whether agriculture or commerce were the more conducive to the national welfare replied that it was very like the question whether the right leg or the left is the more useful in walking. Their interest must keep pace with each other, and therefore all must unite in preserving the health of their agricultural and commercial members. If we have not enterprising merchants I do not know to what purpose we should employ our produce, but I appeal to this mercantile community, and ask if they too are not mainly dependant on agriculture? May they not by promoting the objects of this society, increase their means of profit, in a country, agriculturally considered, profitable beyond any country in the world? He trusted this hint would induce the mercantile community to lend the society their best support. Commerce had derived great benefit by being freed from her trammels, and Agriculture has to look for a similar lessening of her burdens.

Mr. A. Colvin was quite ashamed to acknowledge that, though he was aware of the importance of the purposes which the members had in view, he had, as yet done little in aid of their endeavours. This, however, was not to be attributed to a feeling of indifference but to other causes. However he promised something for the future, and did not doubt that his mercantile friends would improve by the lesson Sir John Grant had read to them.

Mr. W. P. Grant proposed the health of a body of gentlemen, who, he was happy to say, had good reason this year to be well satisfied with their condition. He proposed the 'Indigo Planters and a continuance of their prosperity.'

TUNE.—'Blue bonnets are over the border.'

Mr. Pontet had the pleasure of having been an Indigo planter, though, and he said it with much regret, he had to enjoy none of the profits. Nevertheless, the latter circumstance, untoward though it was, did not prevent him feeling grateful for the honor just conferred on his early profession.

The Chairman proposed 'the Agricultural Societies of Bombay, Madras and Singapore' to which he added the 'Branch Societies at Bangalore, Meerut, and Beerbhoom' with a few remarks describing the formation and progress of those institutions.

TUNE.—'Cherry Ripe.'

Sir J. P. Grant said he had much pleasure in proposing the next toast, being the health of a person whose interests are common with the interests of a community whose prosperity he was sure every European was desirous to advance. He alluded to the native community, one of whom, the Nawab Tahowur Jung, he had the happiness to see present, and another of whom, Dwarkanauth Tagore, would have been present had not indisposition prevented his attendance. He was proud to say that the distinguished gentleman then sitting at the table had always shown a lively interest in the proceedings of this society, and invariably expressed his anxiety to promote useful objects amongst his countrymen. He was sure this would have a beneficial effect, and hoped that the Nawab's excellent example would meet with many imitators, for it was quite clear, nothing could be done without the most strenuous exertions on the part of the natives themselves. Sure he was, that those exertions were well directed in promoting the improvement of Agriculture and Horticulture, the latter indeed an object of much importance, but when he reflected on the extent of soil, its fertility, and the means at hand to cultivate it, he could but consider the importance of improving agriculture as the greatest work on which they could be engaged. It was indeed prodigious. Sir John concluded by proposing the health of 'the Nawab Tahowur Jung and the native members.'

The Nawab returned thanks. He thought his name highly distinguished by being associated with those of gentlemen pursuing objects so important and so laudable.

Mr. Prinsep.—When Englishmen and Scotchmen and Irishmen are congregated together they are apt to extend their views beyond the place of meeting to that home, not of all their hopes but of their best affections. He hoped they would not neglect local objects,—he was quite sure the least attention must satisfy every one they had not neglected them; and however useful they may be, they redounded to the credit of that country to which some may retire and all hope to return. They should not forget those institutions from which they had emanated and without which these would be of very little utility. 'The Agricultural Associations, of the United Kingdom.'

TUNE.—'I have fruits, I have flowers.'

Dr. Mellis rose on the part of the Agricultural Societies of Great Britain, which, he said, was presuming a great deal, and not the less so, that he also rose on the part of the Agricultural Societies of the north of Scotland, to whose diploma he recurred with pleasure. In Scotland he was born, there he has been brought up, and there (for which they had honored him) he had taken from India a little of what had pleased them all that night, namely, coffee, plantains, pomegranates, and pines from Dacca. All of which were most excellent. He vaunted not of his agricultural knowledge, but, from the circumstance of his having attended the lamented Carey for ten years, it might be supposed that he was imbued with a little; neither could he say he was a floriculturist, but the love of flowers was in his soul, and from his soul it would issue on his return to that country where the hope to be considered, in consequence of the death of the Duke of Gordon, Marquis of Huntley, 'The Cock of the North!' (Much laughter.) The worthy Doctor, then, with infinite humour, lamented that the little should be extinct or in abeyance; he proposed that it be forthwith revived. 'And to commence,' said the Doctor energetically, 'let my 'excellent friend, Sir John Peter Grant, be Cock of the North in India!' Much laughter was excited by this, and we presume the dissentient voices, if there were any, were drowned in the round of applause and cheers which followed the proposal.

Mr. Masters here answered the chairman's call for a song.

H. M. Parker was labouring under the effects of a bad cold. But he thought the next toast conferred honor on him, and if his voice permitted, he would propose it with all his heart. He was proud to associate with his toast the name of the great nation who shared with us our ancient glories, the glories of agriculture, of art and literature; of Milton and Shakespear; of Poictiers and Agincourt; the glories of war and peace. There were few present who were not proud of their kindred with that noble race, their rivals in war, but who, hereafter, he hoped, would be rivals only in the arts beneficial to the interests of mankind Mr. Parker concluded by proposing 'the Agricultural Interests of the United States.'

TUNE.—'Yankee Doodle.'

Dr. Hufnagle would deservedly be considered deficient in feeling were he to allow the toast to be drank without an acknowledgement, though he much regretted his country had not a more efficient representative than himself. He dwelt on the different positions of the agriculturists of India and America. In the last mentioned country the population were comparatively few and scattered, the soil less productive. There the woodsman, with his augur and his axe penetrates the forest; the log-hut rises, and (wood being of little value) fire is applied, the ashes of which enrich the soil, and afford the husbandman an ample return. The mill and the village school appear, and then the rural population, who, he was sorry to say, are yet deficient in knowledge. Here however, the agriculturist met, with few difficulties: the soil is rich and the population dense. He assured the meeting that in common with many of his countrymen he felt a warm interest in the agricultural prosperity of India. (Cheers.)

The Chairman proposed the health of a gentleman, thus said, distinguished in the best way a man can be,—distinguished for his superior intelligence, and known not only in this country but in all Europe. 'Dr. Wallich the father of the Society.' (Cheers.)

TUNE.—'Old Robin Gray.'

Dr. Wallich returned thanks. He felt that he did not deserve the eulogy nor the distinction which the members had conferred upon him. To Drs. Carey and Marshallman and Captain Jenkins, the credit was due. He could but be considered, Dr. Wallich, who has been a long time associated with our society.

The chairman proposed the health of Mr. Bell, the secretary to the society, and eulogized the indefatigable industry with which that gentleman conducts its affair.

Mr. Bell returned thanks.

Mr. Low proposed 'The Gentlemen of the Press for the liberal manner in which they have given publicity to our proceedings.

Mr. George Finsep returned thanks.

The chairman then volunteered to toast a lady who had assisted the society at the exhibition that morning, whose husband, he was sorry to say, was not a member of the society. However, the chairman hoped he would soon become one. 'Lady Malkin.' The toast was drunk with much applause.

We can only briefly notice the remainder of the toasts. Sir J. P. Grant proposed the health of the Governor of Chandernagore, M. Bedier returned thanks. Sir Edward Ryan that of 'the Governor of Serampore,' who regularly attends the meetings of the society Dr. Wallich, Colonels Dunlop and Skinner; Captains Sleeman and Jenkins, whose exertions have been pre-eminent in the cause of agricultural improvement.' Mr. W. P. Grant, 'the cause of steam communication between India and England.' 'The Guests' by the chairman. 'The Bar,' by Mr. Bagshaw. 'Mr. Cracraft' by Mr. C. R. Prinsep, 'Prosperity to the Agriculture of Australia,' by Mr. Cracraft, 'Sir E. Ryan,' by Colonel Lehling. 'The Stewards' by Sir E. Ryan, 'Sir J. P. Grant' by Mr. Parker. 'Lady Ryan' by Sir J. P. Grant. The 'Memory of Mr. Kyd,' by Mr. J. C. Wilson.—Englishman, Jan. 23.

GENERAL CHAMBER OF COMMERCE.

It is now our pleasing duty to announce to the Public the formation of the General Chamber of Commerce in Canton.

This important even took place the 27th Nov.

In thus announcing the commencement of a new era in the Foreign Commerce of Canton, we trust we may be allowed to express our own heartfelt satisfaction at the establishment of an Institution which promises so fair to be a safeguard to many of the most important interests of that commerce.

Never before has there been such a union of different national and individual interests in this city.

Knowledge is power, union is strength: dull, then, and hopeless indeed, must be he, who does not sanguinely look forward to a no-distant amelioration of our commercial condition in this country.

Resolutions submitted, on the 28th of November, 1836, to a general meeting of foreign residents in Canton, held within the hotel of Messrs. Stanford and Marks, for the purpose of taking into consideration the expediency of adopting measures for the establishment of a general Chamber of Commerce.

At the appointed hour of noon, most of the foreign residents in Canton had assembled in the room where the meeting was to be held; one member, at least, of each firm was present, and the room was crowded.

Mr. Lindsay was unanimously called to the chair, and Mr. Boyd requested to act as Secretary.

Mr. Lindsay, when he had taken the chair, addressed the meeting in the following words:

I should feel considerable diffidence in accepting the honor conferred on me of presiding in this meeting, were not the duties I have to perform so clear and defined that I have no apprehension of the cause suffering from my inexperience in such affairs. We are now assembled for the purpose of taking into consideration the expediency of adopting measures for the establishment of a General Chamber of Commerce. The want of such an institution, as it is now proposed to establish, has long been practically felt by all of us; and I trust that before a year has elapsed we shall all find ample cause to congratulate ourselves that it has at last been adopted. The utility of Chambers of Commerce is now so universally recognized that there are few commercial towns of importance in any part of the world where they do not exist; and there is perhaps none where from the extent of commerce, the variety of interests concerned, and more especially from the peculiarity of circumstances in which we are placed, that this applies more particularly than in Canton. The general principles on which the proposed chamber is to be formed have already been laid before you, and I believe I may say have received your unanimous sanction. When the committee commences its labors, it will then be their duty to frame such regulations as may appear most likely to contribute to its general utility. Gentlemen, I know how valuable your time is, will no longer detain you, but proceed at once to the business of the meeting. Yet, ere we commence, allow me to offer one more remark. Our society has been accused, perhaps justly, of sometimes allowing party feeling to interfere with the public welfare. We have now an opportunity before us to show that such a slur upon our character is no longer justly applicable; and believe me when I say that the true and simple mode of preventing its recurrence is,—that we should all allow to our neighbour that credit which we with justice claim for ourselves, however much we may differ in opinion—namely: a sincere and earnest desire to forward the public good.

Mr. Dent.—In moving the first resolution, Mr. Lindsay's address has left little for me to say as to the objects of the meeting.

I should, indeed, have been better pleased if any one else had come forward to make the proposition, and especially Mr. Jardine, as the head of a house carrying on such extensive business; the presence, however, of Mr. Matheson, a partner in the Firm, is a sufficient guarantee of the concurrence. While I consider that our best thanks are due to those who have been so active in arranging the business, I may remark that I have hitherto refrained from taking any prominent share in the proceedings, not from any lukewarmness in the cause, but from a feeling that time alone would remove the obstacle which existed to the establishment of a General Chamber of Commerce: and these, I am happy now to believe no longer exist. The peculiarity of our position here, together with the increase of the trade and of the foreign community, seem particularly to call for such an institution; and a very little experience in Canton will point out when its influence is required. Amongst many other objects for consideration, I need only mention the restrictions on the exportation of silk; the want of accommodation for the accession of residents; the removal of the filth and rubbish in front of the Factories. It will be not less useful as a standard of authority on commercial questions, and the usages of the port. I therefore most cordially beg to propose the first resolution.

1st. Proposed by Mr. Dent, and seconded by Mr. Westmore—That it is desirable a General Chamber of Commerce should be established in China. Which to be really useful must comprise among its members the most respectable merchants resident in China of all nations. Carried unanimously.

Mr. Matheson, in moving the 2d Resolution said;

Mr. Chairman and gentlemen, I have been requested to move the second resolution, connected with the proceedings of the day, which I have much pleasure in doing, under the impression of its being generally concurred in by the meeting. Although I had no share in drafting it meets with my full approval; and as Mr. Dent has mentioned Mr. Jardine's name, I beg to add that he as well as the other members of our firm, freely and fully sanction the whole scope and tenor of the resolutions which we are here assembled to discuss.

When the information of a general chamber was proposed to us, and our concurrence requested, our first enquiry was whether such an association was generally desired by the mercantile body, and finding this to be the case, we at once agreed to afford our co-operation, our only object being, as it has always been, to join heart and hand in any measure that can tend to increase the prosperity of the general commerce of Canton.

2d. Proposed by Mr. Matheson and seconded by Mr. Fox—That the specific object of the chamber is purely commercial, it has nothing to do with political questions. Carried unanimously.

3rd. Proposed by Mr. Green, and seconded by Mr. Maclean That all firms established in China, and individuals interested in the trade are eligible to become members on the payment of the following entrance fee, and Annual subscription, which sums will be devoted to meet the requisite expenses of the Chamber. Carried unanimously.

Entrance fee for each firm Sp. Drs. 50. Annual subscription 25. Entrance fee for each individual 30. Annual subscription 15.

4th. Proposed by Mr. Turner, and seconded by Mr. Wallace. That a Committee, consisting for the present of 13 members, shall be elected by ballot from the general body, who shall, with as little delay as possible, proceed to draw up such rules and regulations as may appear best adopted to the case, and when completed they shall submit the same to a general meeting of the Members, when, if any alteration or amendments are proposed the sense of the meeting shall be taken by open voting and the decision of the majority shall be adopted. Carried unanimously.

5th. Proposed by Mr. Blonkin, and seconded by Dadabhoj Rustomjee—That the gentlemen present who wish to join the Chamber do now subscribe their names on a sheet of paper handed round, entitled—'Members of the General Chamber of Commerce.' Carried unanimously.

6th. Proposed by Mr. Bell, and seconded by Mr. Alexander Matheson—That each firm subscribing shall have two votes on all subjects, discussed at general meetings, and each individual one vote. Carried unanimously.

7th. Proposed by Mr. Gibb, and seconded by Mr. Inglis—That no two members of the same firm shall be members of the committee. Carried unanimously.

8th. Proposed by Mr. King, and seconded by Mr. Gray—That the Committee shall consist, at the commencement, of the following proportion of each nation. Carried unanimously.

English 5, American 3, Parsee 2, Dutch 1, French 1, open to any nation, 1, total 13.

9th. Proposed by Mr. How, and seconded by Mr. Stewart—That a ballot be held, for the purpose of electing the Committee, between the hours of 10 and 1 o'clock Wednesday, the 30th instant, and that Messrs. Bell, Gibb, and Gordon be requested to act as scrutineers on the occasion. Carried unanimously.

10th. Proposed by Mr. Dent, and seconded by Mr. Matheson, and carried unanimously—That the thanks of the Meeting be voted to Mr. Lindsay, for the trouble he has taken relative to the establishment of the Chamber, and for his services on the present occasion.

COAL AND IRON COMMITTEE.

It is with peculiar satisfaction we learn from a contemporary journal, that Lord Auckland has appointed a Committee of scientific gentlemen to examine the various localities of coal and iron in the country, with the view of developing the mineral resources of the empire. This enlightened course of policy is worthy of a great Government, anxious for the welfare and advancement of the community entrusted to their charge, and will, we are sure, be crowned with gratifying success. When a Government enters heart and soul upon a career of improvement, it is singular to observe how the work of benevolence appears to grow; how new wants arise, and at the same time new facilities are unexpectedly opened for the supply of them. Lord William Bentinck gave us the benefit of river steamers. The success of the enterprise has been unprecedented. At the present moment four vessels in active employment between Calcutta and Allahabad cannot receive and convey half the traffic which is crowded into them. No sooner is a vessel advertised to start from Calcutta than she is full; more than half the applicants for freight are disappointed. It is already found that double the present number of steamers must be laid on this line of communication to keep pace with the wants of the country. The multiplication of steamers brings into prominent view our present resources for the supply of coal, and it is discovered to be impossible to depend on the single source from whence it is now drawn, for an article which has attained a national importance; and hence the appointment of a Committee, to ascertain what mines may be worked in other places with advantage. The discoveries which are expected from the Committee will not only serve to keep down the price in the metropolis, but will furnish this important article at a more reasonable rate on the line of communication. The cheapening of this great element of Steam navigation will again lead to a reduction in the charge for freight, and this will bring on a demand for more steamers, till at length the internal carrying trade of these provinces, is conducted, perhaps exclusively, on the modern system of steam navigation. The search for coal leads in its turn to an enquiry for iron, and to the means by which these two most precious minerals in this golden age of iron may be brought to contribute to the improvement of the country, and to render us in a measure independent of machinery from England. Thus, link by link, the chain of improvement in India advances to its completion.

We ventured a fortnight ago to suggest the vast advantages which would necessarily follow from the establishment of a rail road between Rajmahl and Calcutta. The appointment of the Coal and Iron Committee gives a new impulse to the project, and brings its accomplishment within a nearer range. To such an enterprise the first, perhaps the only, impediment, is the large sum it will necessarily cost. The iron must be imported from England. In consequence of the amazing demand for iron arising out of the numberless schemes for intersecting the little island in every direction with rail roads, the price of the article has been nearly doubled. The cost to us of an imported rail-way will therefore be greatly enhanced. But we may anticipate from the labours of the Committee, now appointed, such accurate information as shall lead to the establishment of forges in India to work our own indigenous minerals. In this case the cost of the rail-way we have proposed, would possibly be diminished one half. Perhaps a rail road, upon a broad estimate might, with these advantages, be laid down between Rajmahl and Calcutta for 4,00,000 £. Cannot the community undertake such an enterprise? Might not Government employ their scientific officers to survey the line, and form an estimate of practicability and the expense of such a road; and if it be feasible, charter a Company for this object, and as in the case of the Bank of Bengal, take a certain number of shares themselves? We will venture to affirm that if the enterprise were ushered into notice under such auspices, the whole sum required for it would be raised by the community here and in England without the smallest difficulty. It might moreover be provided, that the shares belonging to the State should be disposed of by public auction, at a certain period after the road had been opened; and the funds thus liberated, might then be devoted for a time to some new enterprise. Thus Government by keeping a hundred thousand pounds, constantly afloat in such undertakings, might stimulate the employment of five times that amount of capital on the part of the community.—Friend of India, January 5.

STEAM MEETING AT BERMHAMPORE.

A Meeting of the European Inhabitants of Berhampore was held on Thursday, the 19th of January, 1837, to consider the question of Steam Communication with Europe.

The Hon'ble W. L. Melville, in the Chair.

First.—Moved by the Reverend M. Hill, seconded by the Hon'ble R. Forbes, and resolved unanimously,—

That this Meeting is desirous that there should be established a more rapid and regular communication with England, through the Mediterranean, than that which at present exists.

Second.—Moved by Captain Goldney, seconded by G. G. McPherson, Esq., and resolved unanimously,—

That although this Meeting would prefer a direct communication by Steam to the Port of Calcutta, yet regarding that point as secondary and subordinate, they are quite willing, in the first instance, to support any well considered scheme for conducting the intercourse through the channel of Bombay.

Third.—Moved by B. Burt, Esq., M. D., seconded by R. W. Bird, Esq., and resolved unanimously,—

That this Meeting is satisfied that any public or Mercantile Body, which may undertake to open the communication, will feel bound or may be required to arrange the dispatch of the Steamers at Malta and elsewhere, so as to prevent all unnecessary delay.

Fourth.—Moved by G. G. McPherson, Esq., seconded by Captain Goldney, and resolved unanimously,—

That should the route by the Red Sea be found impracticable for Steam Vessels during any portion of the year, this Meeting is of opinion that, during such interval, the communication should be carried on through Syria and the Persian Gulf.

Fifth.—Moved by the Hon'ble R. Forbes, seconded by J. Watt, Esq., and resolved unanimously,—

That this Meeting having had under its consideration the outline of scheme submitted by Major Head to His Majesty's Government, and to the Hon'ble the Court of Directors of the East India Company, according to the present state of their information, see no sufficient reason to disapprove of it, but on the contrary are willing, collectively and individually, to lend their cordial support to the establishment of it.

Sixth.—Moved by W. Hutchinson, Esq., seconded by J. Herklots, Esq., and resolved unanimously,—

That a copy of these Resolutions be published in the Calcutta daily Newspaper, and that another copy be forwarded to Major Head by the Chairman.

Thanks were then voted to the Chairman. The following Gentlemen, who took no share in the proceedings, have expressed their concurrence in the Resolutions:—

Major S. Speck, Mr. G. P. Leycester, Captain G. R. Wilton, Mr. W. Greaves, Reverend J. Paterson, Mr. A. Betts, Messrs. N. H. Hart and Co., Mr. H. Aikin, Lieut. Wilson, Lieut. Hill, Lieut. J. D. Cunningham and A. Kean, Esq., M. D.

THE BEIROUT AND BUSSORA ROUTE.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE BOMBAY COURIER.

DEAR SIR.—As one of the dissentients to the proceedings of the Steam Committee (or rather the portion of it, not amounting to one half, assembled) who voted the appropriation of 1,000 rupees per month for eighteen months, for the conveyance of packets via Bussora and Beirut, I request you will give a place in your columns to a few observations on the notice in which you have pronounced us to be in error, four times told. In this notice there is allusion to a foregoing expose of the "grounds on which the steam committee have acted" which is referred to also, as affording proof that our "assumptions" are erroneous.

The points on which your position rests, if I understand rightly, are, when divested of extraneous and unimportant matter, as follows:—1st, that the admiralty are not only said to have determined to send steamers monthly from Malta to Beirut, "but they have done so already," 2nd. That an Arab chief in whom the utmost reliance could be placed, would carry the packets from Bussora to Beirut. 3rd. That the vessels trading between Bombay and Bussora will do, "if nothing better offers," to convey the packets to and from that place, or, the Indian Navy vessels may do so, or, the new steamers, which are to be employed against piracy "it is hoped" will do the business.

With reference to the 1st point let me ask, how comes it, that all the long preconceived arrangement, which caused the voyage of the Hugh Lindsay to Bussorah, did not secure the desired result? Did your Beirut steamer fail in her task? or did your Arab chief break his engagement? (possibly neither, but to other equally unlooked for occurrences the failure may be attributed.) The Hugh Lindsay left Bussora on the 15th November. By your own shewing, a packet should reach Bussora from London in 36 days, consequently a mail from Falmouth the 4th October by steam, via Malta to Beirut, and thence by dromedaries to Bussora, should have reached that place on the 9th November. It has, however, (I believe) been said, that had the steamer remained a few days longer, a packet, it was expected, would arrive. Good.—The H. C. Sloop of War Coote left Bushire for Bussora on the 19th November. She must have arrived there by the 25th. If the packet had then arrived (which was ten days after the steamer left) and the Coote had started with it, she must have been here before now. I therefore infer, that no steamer was running between Malta and Beirut in October, and I further infer that if, when hopes were held out that steam would be plying on the Euphrates, the admiralty did not keep up a communication that could be relied on, until the route was entirely abandoned, there can be little expectation that they will do so for the next eighteen months. But sir, I will give you the benefit of the doubt. I will concede (for argument) that you have now, and that you will have, for the next eighteen months, an uninterrupted steamer monthly, between Malta and Beirut; and each month; it will avail you nothing without an equally regular transport of the mails between this and Beirut; for your Beirut steamer must start at a prescribed time, or she will miss the Malta steamer to Falmouth. You are doubtless too well aware of the fact, not to have given it due consideration, that each link in the chain of a communication connected with steam, must be preserved with the utmost precision and punctuality with respect to time, and that one link broken, the whole is for the time useless. We will, nevertheless, proceed in our examination of the points on which you rest the conclusion that our dissent is founded on "erroneous assumptions", and we come now to your 2nd point; "That an Arab chief in whom the utmost reliance can be placed, will convey the packets to and from, between Bussora and Beirut." In the exercise of hospitality, you may rely on his respecting the sacred character of an accepted guest; in some other matters too, to him points of honor, you may rely on him; in his dealings with the Giaour, where his cupidity is excited, some doubts might arise; but, for understanding the importance of punctuality, and its observance in the matter in question, is precisely this point at which my experience would lead me to say, reliance on an Arab chief must stop. I appeal to those who have had opportunities of observing even those Arabs who have been long engaged in commercial pursuits, and intercourse with us, and who might be supposed to have learnt the value of punctuality; whether they do not frequently evince a singular insensibility to its importance. Another thing to be observed, is the Sheikh in question may undertake to convey the packets between Beirut and Bussora, but I am much mistaken if he, or any one Sheikh, can regularly fulfil an engagement of the kind, without occasional interruption. Other tribes will be disposed to levy a tax on the passing packets; and sanguine indeed must they be, who will rely on the regular starting of a steamer from Beirut with mails having for its only security, the punctuality of one Arab chief, and the forbearance, and absence of cupidity in others. Something is said of an "European Agent" but it will be seen when tried, that he cannot remedy the inherent evils above spoken of, neither can he accompany the dromedary express, from Bussora to Beirut, and back again immediately with return packets; and if he could, his presence with the express, would only, by apparently enhancing the importance of the matter, offer greater encouragement to Arab cupidity, and double the chance of obstruction.

I come now to your 3d. point,—the means, of conveying packets, between Bombay and Bussora. With respect to trading vessel going direct from this to Bussora.

sora, such instances are too rare to afford any just ground of dependence on timing it with a steamer starting regularly from Beirut. As to the Company's vessels of war, their being available at the precise time required, is very problematical, and could they be so, the uncertainty at all times attapling the passage by a sailing vessel, coupled with the doubtful transport from Bussora to Beirut, would render the Beirut steamer useless. "The new steamers are, it is said, to be "for the prevention of piracy." They cannot therefore be available at stated periods, and if they could, it is to be supposed, that despatching them expressly to convey packets would be as much an infringement of the "prohibition" said to exist, as sending them to the Red Sea would be; besides which, there still remains the objectionable connecting link between Bussora and Beirut by means of our friend the Arab chief, which would ruin all.

To sum up, I will distinctly state, that had you a regular steam communication between Beirut and Malta, the attempt to edify packets from this to Beirut in the manner you have proposed, will be attended with repeated disappointment. In a word, that no good will result from it—I do not say your packets will not get home, but they will take their time about it; and at this stage of the business, when the question has excited the interest it has in England, it is by no means necessary that we should exert our ingenuity to devise means of throwing money away to keep alive the conviction that we earnestly desire the establishment of steam communication. Care should rather be taken, that what we do, should be calculated to create and increase confidence. With these opinions Sir, I signed the dissent, and I have endeavoured, at some length, to shew the grounds on which I hold them. I am content that they should abide the test of time to prove their correctness, and to that I shall leave them.

I take this opportunity of suggesting to the secretary to the steam committee, that in future, in promulgating the proceedings of that body (or more properly such part of it as may happen to meet) the following form be adopted, "At a meeting of the Steam Committee, present" (here give the names of those who are so,) "the following resolutions were carried." If unanimously, state so; if a difference of opinion exists, name dissentients. This may save much expenditure of ink and paper, and secure to each the credit due. In one part of your expose, you state that "the project did not originate with the steam committee, and if successful, they have no intention of taking credit to themselves for it." Such instances of self-denial; the extent of which may be better estimated hereafter; may be rendered unnecessary for the future by the adoption of the above suggestion.

Yours, &c.

J. H. WILSON.

Dec. 19, 1836.

I. N., Member of Steam Committee.

STEAM COMMUNICATION.

No less than three letters will be found in our previous columns relative to the steam committee's late proposal for spending a thousand rupees a month in keeping up overland communication with England during the suspension of the intercourse by the Red Sea. All these appear to have been elicited by some very brief remarks of ours upon the protest we published in our last against the committee's proceedings. How to reply to them all we do not well know, as time presses, and we have a good deal else to attend to. We shall, therefore, confine ourselves to Capt. Wilson, who on questions of this kind is a three-decker; and has opened a formidable broadside upon the committee; though it would appear with blank cartridge; for instead of blowing them to atoms, we are prepared to show that he has not even carried away a single spar.

To commence then with the late trip of the Hugh Lindsay, we are asked, how it was that "she failed to bring a packet after all the preconcerted arrangements?" The answer is very simple. When the Hugh Lindsay's trip was planned, the loss of the Tigrit was unknown here; and, therefore, the route by the Euphrates was depended upon; and although the melancholy news had arrived when Steamer did go, yet it was hoped that the remaining vessel might be rendered available by lessening her draft of water. This expectation was disappointed, as the public have already been informed, and hence the non-arrival of the packets. But what this question has to do with the route across from Bussora to Beirut by dromedaries we do not see; for it was never contemplated that the packets for the steamer were to come by it, and their non-arrival, therefore, cannot effect it in the slightest degree.

As for the non-arrival of the Coots, upon which Captain Wilson lays so much stress, we can only say, it is useless to hazard any conjectures at present. It may arise from a thousand circumstances besides the detention of the packets: and even were they not to come under the present arrangement it would prove nothing against the feasibility of the Beirut scheme. This appears to be the mistake under which Captain Wilson labors throughout the whole of this portion of his letter. He proceeds as if the monthly stipend which is to be given for the conveyance of the packets were now in course of payment, —and the agent who is to be established at Bussorah to receive and look after them were attending to his duties; as if every part of the undertaking were in full operation; and then triumphantly exclaims, look at the result? where are your packets?

With regard to the despatch of steamers by the admiralty, the course he pursues, however, is the very reverse. Instead of supposing them to arrive regularly doubts are thrown out whether they will come at all; although the fact of their regular arrival is the very essence of the whole plan; and it was only upon positive assurances of it that the Committee were induced to adopt the course they have pursued.

We have merely to add on this part of the subject, that the English merchants of Beirut —a large and now growing place—have succeeded in obtaining a steam communication from the Admiralty for their own special use; and, therefore, that there can be no danger of failure in relying upon it.

The next and most plausible objection which Capt. Wilson has started is the uncertainty of a regular communication between this port and Bussora; and he justly and forcibly observes that "each link of a communication by steam must be preserved with the utmost precision, and punctuality with respect to time; and that one link broken, the whole is for the time useless." In reply to this we have only to state that the new steamers are understood to have been sent out expressly for cruising in the Persian Gulf; and it is supposed their trips may be so arranged as to meet the packets at Bussora without interfering with the public service; but should this not always be practicable, the vessels of the Indian Navy in the Gulf are available; and though they may not perform the passage with quite so much regularity, the difference will not be more than 12 or 15 days against them. If the steamers therefore, fail us, we shall only have to put up with packet in about 60 days instead of in 44 or 45.—Surely this is worth trying to secure.

If, however, after all, the communication over this portion of the route fail, no great harm can result. One or two thousand rupees will be expended before the arrangements can be broken up, and that will be all.

With regard to the conveyance of the packets across Arabia Captain Wilson says his experience leads him to assert that no reliance can be placed upon the punctuality of an Arab chief. We confess we venture with great diffidence to take a different view of the matter; for Captain Wilson's experience is of very long standing. But how happens it, we should like to know, if he be correct, that the Parars, Cossids, or whatever else they are called, of Arabia, have obtained such a reputation throughout the east as the carriers of letters and intelligence. When despatched from Bussora to Constantinople they never fail to perform the journey in the shortest possible time. Why then fear a different result when they are despatched towards Beirut? The route is equally favourable and secure; the greater portion of it is now regularly traversed by caravans; and no difficulty is, or has been experienced in communicating with Aleppo or Scanderoun from either Bagdad or Bussora.

It is not, however, upon mere general reasoning, such as this, that the present plan was formed. We believe we are justified in stating, and that Col. Chesney will have no objection in acknowledging, it to be his own; and resting, therefore, as it does upon his intimate acquaintance with the Arab character, the state of the countries to be passed over, and the arrangements made in the Mediterranean, there is quite enough to warrant all that the Steam Committee have done with regard to it.—One word more and we have done.—Captain Wilson suggests that in publishing the proceedings of the steam committee the names of the members present, and of the dissentients to every proposition which is carried, should be given. To this, though it is in direct opposition to the invariable practice of similar bodies elsewhere, we see no good objection. The proper way, however to bring the matter forward, is to suggest it at the next meeting of the Committee, and this the gallant officer himself can do as well as any one else.—Courier, December 20.

The late resolutions of the Steam Committee have led to a discussion in which the public must take a considerable interest, in so far as it affects a project of vital importance to this country. When the resolutions first were made public we had not time even to read them fully, having merely glanced at them as we were marking them off for publication,—that is, before the appearance of that number of our paper in which they were published. In that number we certainly did refer to them, and casting our eye at the first and two last resolutions we for the time rested satisfied with the evidence those resolutions gave of the change in opinion which had been come to by the Committee as to the disposal of the Fund, leaving the further consideration of the subject until an after opportunity.

But little did we dream that the resolutions proposed so wide a departure from the scheme which all of us have been so anxious to see carried into effect; little did we dream that at the moment of all others when determination and perseverance were necessary a proposition could be made which would have the effect, if adopted, of frittering away our funds, making us the laughing-stock of our neighbours, weakening our position, and proving us to be so very—very easily pleased.—little, we say, did we dream that such a proposition would have been made, and as little did we dream that such a proposition would have been adopted. Its adoption however is as yet limited to those members of the Committee who set their seal on it, but it will—can have no more general parentage; it must go the way of all other living things.

We can hardly, now that we have read the resolutions of the Committee, hold ourselves excused for skipping them as we did at the time we first noticed them, but at the risk of being thought tedious we shall in limine just quote a part of the first and a part of the second resolution as well to show what impression they were likely to make on the mind, as to prove the inconsistency of the several resolutions with each other.

Resolved, say the Committee in their first resolution, "with reference to this unlooked for change of circumstances (they allude to the reported prohibition against sending the Hugh Lindsay to the Red Sea), and in compliance with the general feeling of the Community, that the resolution of the Committee of the 20th October last be suspended, pending, &c.;" and then, in their last resolution but one, they thus express themselves:—resolved, "that a copy of both resolutions (they mean those of 20th October and the present, be submitted to Government as an irrefragable proof of the unflinching anxiety of the public on this side of India for the maintenance of this mode of communication with England, and with an expression of the earnest hope of the Committee that the Right Hon'ble the Governor in Council may yet, under all the circumstances of the case, feel himself justified in despatching the Hugh Lindsay with this view, to the Red Sea, in the course of the ensuing month of January;" these are the words of the first and last but one of the resolutions, and naturally any person would conclude that the intervening resolutions between those two had reference to that which was the real winding up—the catastrophe of the plot as it were, and that catastrophe was no more or less than that the Bombay Government were to be again addressed, begging that the Hugh Lindsay might be sent to the Red Sea in January next.

But when we come to examine the other resolutions we find them adopt views which, however well intended as they undoubtedly are, are not only inconsistent with the immediately above alluded to resolutions but go to cripple the means of keeping up the communication via Egypt, (which is the professed object of the appeal to Government as recommended in resolution last but one,) as well as to withdraw attention from a route proved to be practicable. We are not now in the humour of trying experiment, nor have we the means of doing so however much disposed: nor is it the time to divide and subdivide our forces and dispatch them in search of adventures when the enemy are at our gates. We have not the excuse the Calcutta people had, for they were desirous of making their City Head Quarters, and so the waste of some thousands of rupees was considered by them a small sacrifice, where the gratification of the ruling passion was concerned; and what did they gain by their thirst for fame and exertions to secure it? why, the loss of their money; besides, when they thought proper to convert their silver into smoke matters had not approached that crisis which they have now done; the prospect was then comparatively blank; but now the scene is changed and almost cloudless day has succeeded murky weather, and the course is now to clear and the wind so fair that the voyage may almost be made without compass or helm.

The case is different with us; the advantage of our local position in reference to Europe is too well established to admit of a doubt, and the possibility of a speedy communication with Europe via Egypt has been made equally certain; no less certain is it that the chief portion of—may we say the whole of the mercantile body of England who have any interest in this country, have their attention directed to Egypt and the Red Sea as the best line, at the present time, of communications with this country; nor is it less certain that the Court of Directors look upon the Red Sea route as the one by which a permanent communication ought, in the first instance, at least to be established; we believe also, that the Board of Control are much of the same opinion; looking to these facts, we must say, we consider it extremely impolitic—sitting aside the waste of money which the experiment of the Gulf route would lead to, for a moment to allow ourselves be diverted from the object of our desire when the possession promises to be so near, in whatever gaily or gilded guise, the temptation may present itself.

Those resolutions—at least one of them, to which we now allude, propose the grant of a sum of Rs. 500 a month for eighteen months—for what purpose would our readers suppose? For keeping up the communication by the Red Sea would be concluded from the last but one of the resolutions and to which we have above alluded; but no such thing; it is for conveying the packets between Bussorah and Beirut! a sequelur of its own kind certainly; for, on finding a vote for that amount for that particular purpose we would naturally expect that the government would be requested to send the Steamer to the Gulf, so as to put the packet in the way of being sent on its journey by that route, but after resolving that the above sum is to be granted monthly for the above purpose, and that the rest is to be placed in the hands of Government for keeping up a similar communication by the Red Sea—that is, after the 1st of February next, the government is then requested to send the Steamer to the Red Sea in January!

Glad as we should be to find that the government were willing to accede to this request and had the power to do so, we must candidly confess that the mode in which the troops are marched up is not calculated to make a very striking impression; and this the more particularly as the difficulties standing in the way of the employment of the Steamer as a Packet Boat are understood to have some relation to the cost of her journey. We certainly should have thought it by far the fensible plan to have voted the whole fund in hand for the purpose, pro tanto, of keeping up the communication by the Red Sea, for a certain time instead of the remainder as has been recommended. If it is expected that the Government will avail themselves of the remainder of the Fund as proposed for steaming or sailing up the Red Sea, what is the use of wasting money where there is none to spare, in trying another route at one and the same time? But the committee express a wish that both channels should be used; this sounds rather odd; yesterday we were setting our wits to work how we should manage to keep the steam up during a solitary passage to the Red Sea in January next, but now, not content with one for practical purposes—that is, for furthering our more substantial interests, we must have that and yet another of a more showy and shadowy description which may steam us into regions all unknown and of course the more interesting—the one for business, the other as a sort of voyage of discovery, and pleasure, of course.

That however wont do; if it really be found that the Supreme Government will not allow the Hugh Lindsay to make the Red Sea trip in January at the expence of Government, the more judicious course for the Steam Committee to pursue would appear to us to be—and it is only as a choice of evils that we would recommend it at the present time, to vote the whole sum to Government as an inducement to that authority to incur a certain portion of the expense of a Steamer to the Red Sea, stipulating perhaps for a certain number of trips, by which time matters would assume a more decided complexion in England. If this view there is, every probability the Madras and Calcutta Steam Committees would also join, and thus we might be able to keep up the war until decisive measures were adopted at home, not relaxing however in our exertions to produce and hasten those measures in their march.

To the Committee and the Subscribers at large we offer these suggestions, assured that they will meet with such attention as they deserve; we are not willing to see our Steam Fund expended except in promoting the object for which it was collected, and we do not think that the resolution of the committee, if acted on, will in any way lead to that result; we have but to glance at their present scheme to see how rickety it is; amongst its many wants it wants the foundation stone, and that it will be allowed is an essential portion of a fabric, whether constructed of chaff as this is, or of a more solid substance as it ought to be. In all buildings it has ever been found necessary to lay a foundation stone, for, as we suppose, the good reason, that the buildings aforesaid could not preserve the perpendicular without it. Now let us look to this fabric—monument of the committee's good nature, we, if we were inclined to be facetious, might say, and see what its qualities of endurance are, for it must be a bad affair that wont bear to be looked at; well then, to begin at the beginning for we like to begin there, we find the committee voting a sum of money for conveying the India Packets overland; so far, good; and then we look to the road by which they are to send them;—by the Gulf; better still; there is something stale in the Red Sea route; it is now a beaten track which possesses no novelty, no new feature to gladden the eye or excite more than ordinary attention; there is a monotony about it which makes it tiresome: Egypt is like any other place to which the eye is accustomed, and mummies are as common as household gods; the Pyramids must have been mere Egyptian playthings, and the plague is nothing when one is used to it. Let us have the gulf route by all means; and as we cannot get there without the Steam committee's aid, why we must even walk in their wake,—following the leader as it were. Well, we are supposed to be in company with them, pinning our journeying propensities to their coat tails, when, after making a few enquiries as to the prospective pleasures of our trip and the facilities there are to the realization of our very sanguine expectations, we are astounded at finding that they suppose us and themselves "over the seas and far away" at some place or port in the Gulf aforesaid commonly called Bussorah! and then, say they, our walk on the wind is to commence: but we, in our day and generation being made of matter somewhat heavier than air (of lead, some ill-natured critics could sneeringly say), and not having the gift of skimming the seas in a corkle shell or astride on a broom stick as our grandmothers were wont to do in their day, imparted to us, either by legacy or heritage, find all the difficulty usually attendant upon the transportation of material bodies from one locality to another where seas intervene. The Committee have not provided us with the means of transport thither, and yet they provide for a portion of the journey beyond! Mr. Glas, in her Oracles on cookery, tells us we must first catch our hare before we stew it, and it might appear not less necessary for the Steam Committee to provide for the conveyance of their Packets from Bombay to Bussorah before they had provided for the conveyance of the same packets from Bussorah to Beirut.

There is an explanation offered in the Courier of yesterday of the calculations of the Committee on this point, but it does not bring us an inch nearer our journey's end; those calculations have nothing of that certainty in their data which could warrant us in devoting a single rupee on the project, even were the other calculations of the Committee warranted by existing circumstances which we fear they are not; let us inquire for a moment what those calculations are.

The first is, that movements, of the new Steamers will be so arranged, without interfering with the public service, as to meet the packets at Busorah; this we believe to be an idle hope,—“the wish is father to the thought;” it is admitted that the Steamers are for the express purpose of cruising in the Gulf for the suppression of Piracy; if so, how can we reckon on the regularity of their visits to Busorah; the very fact of their being engaged on other express duties which may—and very likely will require their presence here, there, and elsewhere, is just the best illustration that could be offered of the impropriety—folly perhaps we should say, of trusting to their aid; and coupled with that we must keep in view the determination of the Court of Directors that their Steamers shall not be employed in conveying packets; where then are our hopes so far as this rod of support is concerned?

The second ground of calculation is, that should the Steamers not be able to visit Busorah regularly and fetch the packets to Bombay, the vessels of the Indian Navy in the Gulf will be available; but this position is not only open to the objections which we have stated to the first, but to the further objection, that it is not likely that, after the Steamers are stationed in the Gulf, there will be any Cruisers kept there, the very object of the Steamers being placed there being to supersede the cruizers,—at least such is the report, and we think a report most likely to be founded in truth.

The are several other objections to the proposed appropriation of the money in sending dispatches by the Gulf, but they are so well met by Capt. Wilson, in his letter which appears in our columns of this day, that we deem it unnecessary to enter into a lengthened consideration of them; so Capt. Wilson's letter we therefore beg to refer our readers.

We give those members (for we understand but a mere fractional part of the committee had met) who passed the resolutions every credit for their desire to serve India and acquit themselves properly in passing the resolutions which we now notice, but they will we are sure see the force of the objections urged, and at once relinquish all idea of the intended disposal of the Funds by the Gulf route; they will also see that whatever funds can be commanded had better be placed at the disposal of Government for keeping up in the meantime the communication by the Red Sea as we have already suggested, and that they will by doing so meet the wishes of the whole community as well as the subscribers. Nor would we omit drawing to their attention the late effort made by the Chamber of Commerce to secure the January trip of the Hugh Lindsay; and a resolution by them at the present time to devote a certain portion of the Steam Fund to meet part of the expence of that trip, in case the Supreme Government may demur at incurring the expence, would come with a very good grace, while it likely would contribute towards securing that object, and prove that we were still united in our desire of establishing Steam communication with Europe on a permanent footing.—Gaz. December 24.

NEW POST-OFFICE REGULATIONS.

The remodelling of our Post Office Regulations has at length some prospect of being carried into effect, since we observe by the Bengal Harkaru of the 21st Dec., that the Customs and Post Office Committee have sent into the Supreme Government a third Report, accompanied by a Draft act and Draft Code of Post Office Regulations. The Public have been growing somewhat impatient under the protracted appearance of any legislative fruit of this Committee's labours; but we shall readily be reconciled to the delay, if the embryo measure gain thence from some inculcation of those liberal and sound principles, which we have of late seen exercising their influence in every direction around us. Our allusion now is to the postage tax on Newspapers; that on Letters we will simply dismiss with the remark that, while necessary tax for the general good of the Community, it becomes at the same time a bounden duty of the Government to make the return for it as fully efficient as circumstances will allow.

On Newspapers the postage hitherto levied in India has amounted in some respects to an absolute prohibitory tax; a fact but realizing the desire, which has striven to keep the deeds of our rulers from the busy meddling of those, who would seek a reason and demand a justification, where the will of power would have held itself conclusive. Though their declension is slow, we yet hope these scales of darkness are at length falling from the eyes of our Indian rulers; and while all around them is progressing, they will hardly remain stationary and rigidly adhere to maxims whose vicious effects are sufficiently read in the depressed moral condition of the people of this country. In Europe, England and France took the lead in those reciprocal arrangements, which must combine to diffuse through each country the varied and instructive intelligence that their respective Journals communicate: and other Continental powers we find are gradually meeting the advances, with a similar object in view, of our native country. In her internal arrangements, a notice in another column from the London General Post Office will shew on how liberal a footing the dissemination through Great Britain of all Newspapers from the Colonies is now placed; a measure the best adapted for securing to those distant possessions the interest that must follow opportunity of easily and regularly acquiring a knowledge of their local politics. Lastly the little Island of Ceylon promises to set us another shining example. After fixing the postage on Newspapers generally at the low rate of One Penny, the Governor has very favourably received an address from the inhabitants of Colombo, praying that all postage may be removed, on the ground of such a measure being calculated to benefit and improve the people by inducing them “to read and to think;” and there seems little doubt that the result will be a free circulation of Indian Newspapers in that Colony, and also of European as far as present necessity payment to the Captains, whose Ships bring them, will allow.

The infusion of some portion of this spirit into our Supreme Council, as we have already said, we hope may retrieve the too great procrastination that has been shown in adjusting this important question. An entire exemption from postage is what the country under existing circumstances can hardly look for, but that it shall be fixed at the lowest possible standard we trust may be confidently expected. One uniform rate also we deem it would consist with sound policy to establish, for distance should prove no bar to what is admitted as a medium of instructive information. This latter principle followed out, of course is tantamount to the imposition of a stamp duty, and it would be a matter for the consideration of Government how far the recommendations of the one might out balance those of the other. Our opinion has always supported the stamp as the fairest system for the public at large, the most calculated to realize all the higher objects in view, and the easiest mode of levying that revenue from Newspapers which the Government may still find it necessary to secure.

The mediocre quality of the general Press of India has often been a source of just regret to those who warmly seek the progressive development of the moral and intellectual energies of the country; but we have never seen the force of a public address put forth to remedy the evil which forms its cause—the prohibitive nature of the postage rules—which, by confining all literary efforts to the capitals of the Presidencies, has in an eminent degree not only paralyzed their energy, but changed their direction from the public good into petty local controversies, and thus defeated the grand object of exciting the sympathies and arousing the interest of the people in the measures adopted by the Government presiding over them. The same cause (of course we do not forget the censorship and the penal laws but the present has been a formidable accessory) has operated to keep down any thing in the shape of a provincial press. At very large stations, such as Agra, Meerut, Delhi and Cawnpore, it is true that public journals have in the last few years been established, but the origin of one, if not of more, depended on the adventitious aid of high talent gratuitously afforded; and, where this has been withdrawn, the papers have given evident proof that the limited circulation of the place did not leave sufficient resources at the proprietor's disposal to command a requisite ability for the Editorial task. Yet the practical information and sound judgment, gathered and matured on the spot, ought, while imparting value of a high degree of these journals, naturally to ensure them an extensive circulation. Postage has however stepped in, and, beyond the circle of their own town or district, they have been known only through the occasional extracts taken by contemporaries. The imposition of a moderate stamp would certainly relieve this. The peculiar intelligence a provincial Press is most calculated to convey would ensure to it a certain circulation amongst distant readers, when brought within the compass of their pecuniary means, and individual enterprise it is to be anticipated would readily embark where a fair prospect of remuneration was extended before it. People would then generally see the theory of the capital, tested by the practice of the Mofussil: observation and experience would take a legitimate ground that we fear is now too much usurped by crude speculation, and a spread of much useful knowledge be the inevitable result.

One great advantage of a stamp duty over postage on a newspaper is the indirect tax it proves to the reader. However trivial the postage be there is something irritating in its repeated and perpetual demand, which tends to create an indispotion where the liberal policy of the present day would rather sow a desire. There has also never been a sufficient reason advanced why the residents at the capital should be exempt from the pressure of a tax imposed (or rather substituted) to further a common end—the diffusion of useful knowledge at a cheap rate. The postage system disturbs this because it must fall with comparative heaviness on a section of the community, while the Stamp disperses the load so as to make it every where too light to be felt. Of the additional facility, in its collection to the Government we need not speak, it is sufficiently obvious; but we may observe that it would moreover tend considerably to simplify their Post Office arrangements, by dispensing with that excessive labour which now requires so elaborate a registry.

In fixing a Stamp, the size and weight of a sheet to receive it would of course require to be defined; and as in this country any suddenly introduced law of this nature could not but be productive of private injury from the inability of procuring material on the spot to conform with it, fairness to all parties would require that it should have a certain prospective operation.—Spectator, Jan. 4.

CALCUTTA DOCKING COMPANY.

At a Meeting held on Monday, the 16th January, 1837, at the house of Rustumjee Cowasjee, and numerous attended.

WM. BRUCE, Esq., in the Chair.

It was resolved—That a good system of Docking, Repairing and Building upon a liberal footing, and supported by the Capitalists of Calcutta, in a manner to secure good and substantial work with readiness and punctuality, being highly desirable.

It is determined that an Association be formed to be called the Calcutta Docking Company.

That the Capital of this Association shall amount to six lacs of Rupees, to be divided into 600 Shares of 1,000 Company's Rupees each.

That Subscriptions to the above extent having been already received according to the List and Prospectus laid upon the table, each Shareholder shall be called upon to pay the first instalment of six hundred Company's Rupees per Share into the Union Bank, and upon the completion of the Deed of Association, shall give his Promissory Notes for the further instalments as follows:

For Co.'s Rs.	100,	payable 1st January 1838
"	150	" 1st January 1839
"	150	" 1st January 1840

That a Committee be formed of five Members, to prepare the necessary deed of Association, and to conduct the detail of its affairs in the mean while, and until their Schedules of Establishment and plan of operations shall be laid before another General Meeting.

The following Gentlemen consented to become the Managing Committee—

William Bruce, Esq.	W. Prinsep, Esq.
T. R. Crawford, Esq.	and
W. Stofn, Esq.	Rustumjee Cowasjee.

That the Committee are authorized to pay the first instalment due for the purchase of the Howrah and Kidderpore Docks, and also to appropriate the surplus funds to the provisions of such stock and materials as are required for the carrying on the works in hand.

That the Committee are authorized to make all engagements for repairs, &c. &c., and to sign and receive all bills for work done at the Docks.

That the Committee are authorized to treat with Government for the sale of the Eastern end of the Kidderpore premises, upon terms fixed by the Proprietors.—Calcutta Courier, January 17.

THE TRADE OF BOMBAY.

We published some time since, an estimate of the trade of this presidency in some of the principal articles of export, showing that their amount had greatly increased; and that as a commercial place, Bombay was advancing with extraordinary rapidity. The correctness however of many of our calculations was doubted at the time; and we shall, therefore, take the present opportunity of publishing the actual returns connected with the subject, up to the close of last year, showing that, generally speaking, we were quite within bounds in our predictions regarding it.

To commence with our most important staple—cotton—the following table shows the amount of the exports in it during a series of years, and the increase last year over any preceding one.

	TO CHINA.	TO GREAT BRITAIN.	TOTAL.
1828	103,533	84,604	188,137
1829	87,927	38,987	126,914
1830	117,268	37,295	154,568
1831	122,264	81,434	203,698
1832	115,094	98,631	213,825
1833	109,741	94,152	203,893
1834	120,623	82,082	202,705
1835	53,771	103,707	157,478
1836	121,121	168,961	290,082

Thus the trade in this article, which in no previous year exceeded 213 thousand bales, amounted last year to 290 thousand; and allowing only 160 rupees a candy, so the average value of cotton throughout the season, it may be estimated as worth two hundred and thirty two lakhs of rupees.

We will proceed in the next place to opium, which stands second on the list of exports. The following shows the progress of the trade in this article during the last 8 years.

Export of Opium

In 1829	3,420	chests.
" 1830	3,506	do.
" 1831	4,472	do.
" 1832	10,105	do.
" 1833	6,937	do.
" 1834	11,206	do.
" 1835	8,785	do.
" 1836	16,234	do.

We have merely to add, with reference to 1832, that the great increase it displays was principally owing to the abolition of the Company's monopoly of the drug; and that estimating value of the exports last year at 1050 rupees a chest, they would, in round numbers be worth one hundred and seventy lakhs of rupees.

We shall also insert the following table showing the progress of the trade in wool; for although its intrinsic value is but trifling, this article, as we have already on one or two occasions stated, promises soon, by means of the Indus, to be among our most important staples.

	SALES.	CWTS.
1834	439	1719
1836	5125	14,645

As regards imports, our information does not extend to so late a period as is comprised in the above tables; nor can we state the quantities of the principal articles of which they consisted; but our inquiries as far as they go, show as satisfactory a result as in the other branch of trade.

For instance, the valuation set upon Imports in the Custom house book is in.

MERCHANDISE.	TREASURE
1832.. Re 2,63,19,569	Re 54,79,600
1833.. " 2,66,74,081	" 119,00,127
1834.. " 2,66,29,302	" 110,30,696
1834.. " 3,11,95,427	" 135,91,557

The exports of bullion, at the same time, have been rapidly decreasing; thus showing a want, throughout the country, of a large currency, which we need hardly add above betokens prosperity. They were as follows:

1832	Re.	26,45,685
1833	"	19,50,512
1835	"	15,43,414

The tonnage of the port, too, with foreign countries, has, as may be supposed, greatly increased.

In square rigged vessels the following are the returns connected with this branch of our subject.

	INWARDS	OUTWARDS.
1831	60,379	63,510
1832	56,051	63,200
1833	71,929	62,852
1834	69,803	87,930
1835	73,175	74,138
1836	102,571	104,424

A very large trade, it is to be observed, exists with foreign countries in other craft, of which we have not been able to obtain an account.

We cannot conclude this rough sketch of the trade of Bombay without adding a statement of the revenue of the presidency, which may be relied on as correct, having in a great measure been drawn from official papers recently published by the E. I. Company.

	TOTAL NET REVENUE.	CHARGES.	DEFICIT.
1831	32 .. 1,49,30,410	2,19,44,308	70,13,898
1832	33 .. 1,59,46,334	2,16,69,660	57,23,326
1833	34 .. 1,70,47,360	2,09,59,684	39,12,324

1835	36 .. 2,58,20,230	2,72,26,697	16,94,867

In the last year the total receipts and charges are given, for which of course, allowance must be made.

The revenue, in reality, appears to have increased during the year upwards of 20 lakhs, while the Bombay deficit has been reduced to the comparatively trifling sum of 17 lakhs of rupees.—Courier.

EQUALIZATION OF CREDITS ON SALES AND PURCHASES.

The following agreement, founded on a resolution, passed at the Chamber of Commerce on Monday, has been signed by all the principal British and Native firms in Bombay, and will form, after the 1st proximo, the commercial rule of this market :—

Bombay, 9th January, 1837.

‘ Considering it to be extremely desirable, that the credits on sales and purchases should be equalized in Bombay, we, the undersigned merchants of Bombay, do agree after the 1st February next, to adopt ourselves and recommend to others, the practice of reducing the credits on sales to one month, thereby making both purchases and sales effected at one month’s credit : and we further agree from the same date to adopt and recommend the practice of demanding and allowing as tare the actual weight of the packages, as more far and just to all parties than a fixed percentage, which is frequently very far from the real proportion.

THEATRICALS.

MR. LINTON’S NIGHT.—We are happy to observe, that notwithstanding the race ordinary, the change of day, the want of sufficient notice to the public, and the almost incessant and wearying round of gaieties and engagements, with which society is at present harassed, that the house was very well attended on Saturday evening. The Opera of Lodoiska, and several pieces of vocal music, Italian and French, constituted a pleasing variety of entertainments.

Of Lodoiska we can say that it went off very smoothly ; and considering the fact, that it was impossible, under circumstances, to have more than one rehearsal of it, we were, we confess, surprised that it was so successfully enacted. The music is very fine. Mrs. Atkinson, as Lodoiska, notwithstanding severe indisposition, sang her music, and acquitted herself of her part, very much to her own credit, and to the satisfaction of her audience. The piece was quant aux amateurs, very strongly cast, and we were delighted to observe in Khera Khan, an old and very deservedly favorite amateur, who has not appeared for some years. The audience appeared equally pleased with ourselves. The Count Floreski (Almaviva), sustained a very arduous part, both as to music and stag business, with unmitigated success throughout, in addition to which he sang a duett, from Tancredi, with Signora Schieroni ; the execution of which, we need not further characterise, than by observing, that it (the duett) very narrowly escaped an encorr.

In the Prince Lupauski, the audience at once recognized their old favorite, the Chowringhee Kean and the present stage manager, who, we are told, introduces into this, his new character, the same grace, courtesy, and blandness of manner, which constitute some of the many pleasing characteristics of this gentleman on, and off, the boards. His appearance in the insignificant part of Lupauski, was most warmly greeted. The Baron Lovenski, was exceedingly well dressed, and we thought very successful in the first act ; in the second, the noble Poland became slightly oblivious, and one or two un-rehearsed stage effects, interfered, by way of dampers, to check his sublime career of tyranny, perfidy, and illicit love of the lady Lodoiska. The Tartar choruses and the quintett, in the first act, were very good. We observed amongst the singers several professors, and one or two amateurs of considerable musical pretensions. Come we now to Varbel, the facetious servant of Floreski, the well-known Bob Acres : he was as usual laughter-moving, and apparently laughter-loving ; and the careless gaiety evinced by him on all occasions, either of peril or of pleasure, seemed to flow as naturally from him, as if part and parcel of his own individual character. We have to congratulate this amateur on his newly acquired or at least newly exhibited, talents as a musician. We hope to see and hear more of him in this line.

Signora Schieroni, appeared between the 1st and 2d acts, encostume as Tancredi, and sang a scena, which was rapturously received, and a duett, with Floreski, of which we have already spoken.

Madame L’Hém ry, appeared between the 2d and 3d acts, and sang a very difficult, and at the same time pleasing, morceau, exhibiting most felicitously the flexibility, clearness and compass of her voice ; and Monsr. Welter followed with “ Vallons de L’Helvétie,” from the Opera of Le Chalet, of which we have spoken in a former notice of this Opera. Truly, this gentleman is a most delightful singer :—pure in method, refined in taste, and with a voice at once rich and soft, as crimson velvet. The grand scena of the storming and burning the Castle of Lovenski, the red and blue lights, the fighting, firing, flaming, and choruses of Tartars, Princesses, prostrate Polanders, agonised fathers, victorious lovers, &c. &c., &c., was all very grand, and the curtain dropped amid much applause.—India Gazette, Jan. 9.

MR. LINTON’S BENEFIT.—There is a certain familiar phrase much reprobated by Euponists, but yet in common use, the undignified but expressive colloquialism—a flare up. It is a delicate bit of slang, so full of meaning that one uses it instinctively ; for instance one cannot say, ‘there will be a flare up at the Town Hall on the 11th,’ or announce that ‘the Chief Justice flared up with a dinner to the gentlemen of the bar’—or declare that ‘Mrs. Atkinson will flare up on such a night in her own house' or that a flare-up is expected' at G—— or any other great house—but every one will know that we mean by saying that 'Mr. Linton flared up at the Theatre on Saturday.' The expression puts a moving picture before our eyes, and fills our ears with extemporaneous discord. There we have the S——y to the C——e Th——e looking tyrannical in yellow and scarlet in an atmosphere of red fire; three gentlemen who do not know their parts concealing their confusion by prompting one gentleman who does know his; a crowd of guards without prisoners, and prisoners without guards; Count Almaviva singing through it all with a desperate effort at looking imperturbable; Master Walter trying to knock expression out of bombast; Mrs. Atkinson warbling her distresses in swan's down, and scarlet; Bob Acres making jokes out of dulness; guns, drums, tartars, and a host of supernumeraries knocking the skin off each other's knuckles with tin swords in what is called, in the stage directions, 'a general engagement.'

The piece was Lodoiska, one of those regular old staggers that every one has been to see when he was a little boy; a thing written in the days when inverted sentences were taken for fine language, and pathos was expressed by a triple repetition of the first person potential as 'could I—could I—could I leave you?' and so on. The talking part of these affairs is Radcliffe run mad; the musical, a selection of old melodies laid upon any of Haydn's quartettes, and then, as the silversmiths say, 'beat out fine.' The characters are always the same,—a tyrant in a castle with the usual complement of Eastern towers,—a heroine in the dungeon thereof,—a lover desponding on the outside,—a venerable and injured father,—a warlike hero endowed with an excess of stage generosity,—a servant who is brave and cowardly and sentimental and ridiculous and serious and silly and stupid and wise. The plot usually depends upon the dropping a letter which the servant aforesaid invariably picks up with a significant glance at the stage box (P. S.) saying with a deep meaning, 'This may be useful,' at which some people in the pit always laugh; we do not know why. The scious and sentimental style of the language we have above described: the jokes are generally such as—'Oh sir, I've lost my horse in the wood, and I'm quite hoarse myself with calling some one to catch him,' (laugh) or else 'well, here's a loaf and a bottle from the top of the tower: at any rate bread's down, and wine's lowered' (loud laugh)—or else, 'there, my master, the Count, fighting again! oh, sir, mind what you're arter, don't give any quarter, but make a Murtyr o' that Tartar.' (Bravo—enthusiastic applause.)

• Now we take upon ourselves to declare that these are much better than any joke in Lodoiska.

With two more rehearsals the piece of Saturday night would have gone off as well as such a thing can do. Mrs. Atkinson sang very well, and the scenery was beautiful. An old and favourite amateur took the part of Kera Khan. He has lost some of his spirit and expression, but no part of his stage knowledge or dramatic talent. We rejoiced to see him again on the boards in the hope that he may again appear and frequently: he was excellently dressed, and, with his commanding and graceful figure, looked and played the gallant Tartar chief to the life. Master Walter kindly took a very inferior part and Bob Acres, as the servant, was the gracious of the evening, the play whatever life it could boast of. He appeared for the first time as an operatic performer with great success. Count Almaviva sang with spirit, and the Secretary would have done well, had he known his words, and condescended to remember that the audience are quite content to dispense with stage directions aside.

Signora Schieronì sang an aria and a duet with the Count between the 1st and 2nd acts: she was warmly welcomed,—and performed both pieces (in the character of Tancredi) with her accustomed talent. Mademoiselle Lemery, and Monsieur Welter also assisted Mr. Linton in his benefit by singing after the second act of the opera. The former gains more upon us the more we hear her; the latter was in splendid voice and was much applauded. On the whole Mr. Linton had no reason to be disappointed, for in spite of the many other engagements of the evening, the numerous audience bore testimony to the estimation in which the community of Calcutta hold that talented and respected professor.—Englishman, Jan. 9.

DER FREYCHUTZ.—This Opera drew together a very large concourse of persons, consisting principally of the beau monde. The performance of the Opera was highly successful. Madlle. L'Hémery was in splendid voice, and made the Theatre absolutely ring; we were delighted with her in her grand scena, and found ourselves repeating to ourselves the question of our—old friend Scipio, "que diable allait-elle faire, dans cette galère?" What on earth could have induced this accomplished Vocalist, to have left la belle France for that cavern of the whirlwinds, the chosen retreat of Auster and Boreas, the sandy Isle of France? However, 'tis the wind that blows no one good, and the execution of this lady to the Mauritius, having given us an opportunity which we should not have otherwise enjoyed, we thank the favouring deities for that which they have given to us, and have promised to ourselves to make the most of our opportunities, while they are afforded, and not to miss a single performance in which Madlle. L'Hémery shall, in future appear, and so will resolve, we doubt not, the whole musical world of Calcutta, after hearing her singing on Friday evening. The bridal costume of the prima donna, was as pure as good taste and white silk could make it; her very shoes "cette chaussure mignonne" as Rousseau said of Madame D'Houletot, had a sort of pure and bridal simplicity about them and her appearance and performance in this part must be written down and marked as something eminently pleasing and successful. Monsr. Welter was admirably dressed as the wicked Richard, and executed his grand air and scena delightfully. We thought him tame in the drinking song, and our notions of stage business were violated by his singing it sitting! half the effect of the song is thus lost. In Theatrical phraseology, we beg to observe, that this bit of business was woefully ill conceived. Monsr. Bonniol sang his share of the music very pleasingly, and Mad. Thonon deserves some praise; pity this, that her voice was not suited to the music she had to sing, the choruses and band were much too thin. We suppose, however, that financial consideration render it inexpedient for the present to increase the numbers in these two departments. Fradin as Kilian in the opera, and as Chapolard in the vaudeville, was all but the death of us, our very sides ache at the recollection of poor Chapolard and his absurdities.

Lord Auckland, Miss Eden, and a party were present. The house was crowded, and every one apparently much pleased with the performance. We recommend an addition to the orchestra and choruses is possible. Fra Diavolo, the next opera, will present a new attraction. Our Count Almaviva will play Lord Althsh, and of course every one will go to see how he does it: we anticipate for him the same success which has hitherto invariably attended the musical efforts of this accomplished amateur. The music of Fra Diavolo is by Auber, and the plot of the opera is singularly attractive.—India Gazette, Jan. 16.

A NEW WAY TO PAY OLD DEBTS.

MY DEAR ———,

I send you, according to your request, and my promise, a dramatic notice for your next number of the Li- terary Gazette. I need not mention that it is written very hurriedly;—you know this already, and the reason why. I add my initials at your particular desire. It will at all events make me answerable for my own sins. Would it not be as well on this occasion to make some acknowledgment of my retirement from the editorial chair? I begin to fear that your readers will fancy they are still mine, and upbraid me in their hearts for my long non-appearance. An editor's continued absence is not readily forgiven. I ought in all courtesy to have made a formal bow to my old subscribers, and to have thanked them for their long and kind support. I am grateful, however, though I have not told them so. Wishing every success to a journal with which I have been so long connected, and hoping that my old subscribers will continue to be yours.

Believe me, my dear ———,

Your's very truly,

Massinger's "New Way to pay Old Debts."

When we look back to the personal history of Massinger, of which we have such slight and unsatisfactory fragments, and recollect the sad obscurity of his career, it is gratifying to observe that the justice which was refused to him in his life-time, and for more than a century after, has been so freely awarded to him in the present age. His name and his writings are at this day familiar to every student of English Literature, though when Johnson wrote his Lives of the Poets, he knew so little of one of our greatest dramatic authors, that he seems to have been ignorant that the Fair Penitent of Rowe was a plagiarism from the Fatal Dowry of Massinger. It is now well-known that Rowe had prepared an edition of the entire works of Massinger, of whose genius, at that period so rarely recognized, he appears to have been a warm admirer. When, however, his own avarice of distinction led him to covet the gold and jewels that adorned his idol, he determined to leave him in that obscurity from which alone he could hope for the concealment of his own sacrilegious theft. About the middle of the seventeenth century appeared an edition of Massinger prepared by Coxeter. This was an attempt, but a very unsuccessful one, to correct the numerous blunders of the old editions. It was followed soon after by an equally incorrect edition published by Mr. Davies, and to this succeeded that of Mason. None, however, of these reprints did any essential service to the poet's reputation, and it was not till Mr. Gifford produced his very careful and excellent edition in 1805 that the works of Massinger were generally read and justly appreciated. The only drawback from the gratification that every student of English poetry has received from this edition, is the excessive arrogance and acrimony which the editor has displayed in his very numerous notices of the errors of his predecessors. He never makes a silent correction, when he has an opportunity of expressing his malignant triumph over the ruins of another's fame. He seems to speak with the bitterness of personal hatred of men whom he never saw or who were at rest in the grave before he himself was in his cradle. This virulence and ferocity introduced into questions of no moral consequence, not only interferes materially with the more pleasurable and peaceful emotions which the contemplation of the poet's beauties is calculated to excite, but leads us to call in question even the personal character of the editor, and makes us less disposed than we otherwise should be, to recognize the indications of his laborious care and his critical acumen. Mr. Gifford is guilty of another, but a more amiable and more common fault—a highly exaggerated estimate of the genius of the poet on whom he comments. There is no question that Massinger was a most distinguished ornament of what is called the age of Elizabeth, which, in reference to the History of our Literature, is generally made to include the reign of James the first. But we cannot agree with Gifford that Massinger is, in any one respect that has relation to the higher qualities of genius, a rival of the immortal Shakespeare, or that his superiority to all his other contemporaries is quite so decided as he would have us think. Some commendatory verses, addressed to Massinger by a friend, ought to have suggested to Mr. Gifford the propriety of praising his favorite poet with somewhat more reserve. The following passage in these verses reminds us of a correspondent sentiment in Pope.*

"Yet whosoever beyond desert commends,
Errs more by much than he that reprehends;
For praise misplaced, and honor set upon
A worthless subject, is detraction."

It is but fair to presume from the following compliment, (a very awkward one if not well founded) that Massinger did not himself pretend to an equality with the greatest of his contemporaries.

"You are not, I assure"

Myself, envious, but you can endure
To hear their praise, whose worth long since was known,

And justly too preferred before your own,
I know, you'd take it for an injury
(And 'tis a well becoming modesty.)
To be paralleled with Beaumont or to hear
Your name by some too partial friend writ near Unequalled Jonson; being men whose fire
At distance and with reverence you admire,
Do so, and you shall find your gain will be Much more, by yielding them priority.
Than, with a certainty of loss, to hold
A foolish competition: 'tis too bold
A task, and to be shunned; nor shall my praise
With too much weight, ruin what it would raise."

In fact Massinger's modesty is placed beyond a doubt by the fact that the same poetical friend subsequently wrote a similar address to him, in which he says somewhat inconsistently with his first epistle:—

"You remember how you chid me, when
I ranked you equal with those glorious men,
Beaumont and Fletcher * * * * *

I did but justice when I placed you so."

Perhaps after all, Gifford's fault was not so much an undue partiality as defective judgment. For though an acute and clever critic within a certain limit, and endowed with a quick sense of the tesser proprieties, the minor morals of literature, he had not a true relish of poetical excellence of the highest order. He would have written a better essay on Pope than on Shakespeare. As a critic he was of the school of Johnson, who wrote so much more ably on Dryden than on Milton. He was readier at the discovery of slight errors than of great beauties. He was a kind of legal critic who deemed it more his business and found it a more congenial task to discover a flaw or condemn an infraction of certain arbitrary laws, than to recognize and applaud those noble but irregular virtues that rise above them. He had evidently no sympathy for those poets,

Who snatch a grace beyond the reach of art.

When he criticised in the Quarterly Review the poetry of Shelley, he could discover not a single indication of sense or genius in the rich and wild imaginings of that daring genius. To him it was a midnight chaos fitfully illumined by unwholesome meteors—a darkness visible, that served only to discover dismal vapour and demoniac phantoms. He who could speak of Rogers with enthusiasm could see no merit in the author of the Revolt of Islam. A critic of this sort is precisely the kind of person who would be likely to prefer Massinger to Shakspeare. Mr. Monk Mason had remarked the general harmony of the former's versification, which he pronounced superior to that of any other writer with the exception of the generally acknowledged monarch of the English Drama. Mr. Gifford most unreasonably objects to this exception, and asserts that rhythmical modulation is not in the list of Shakspeare's merits! He thinks that Shakspeare has been overrated; that Beaumont is as sublime, Fletcher as pathetic, and Jonson as nervous; and that wit is the only quality by which he is raised above all competitors! Here is a critic that would have pleased Voltaire. It would have been amusing enough if Mr. Gifford had been compelled to give a reason for the faith that was in him. He would have afforded a strong illustration of the absurdity and presumption of a mere satirist—an acute fault finder—

* Praise undeserved is censure in disguise.—Pope.

"A word-catcher that lives on syllables," attempting to take the measure of such a gigantic mind as that of Shakspeare. It is not difficult to understand why a critic who counts syllables upon his fingers should prefer the verse of Massinger to that of Shakspeare. It is more uniformly smooth, correct, and regular. But it has nothing of the freedom, the variety and expression that characterize the voice of

"Sweetest Shakspeare, Fancy Child, Warbling his native wood-notes wild."

We wish not to under-rate the real merit of Massinger's versification. The march of his verse is noble and majestic, and his diction is singularly pure and perspicuous. The latter has quite a modern air, though written two hundred years ago. We prefer both his metre and his diction to those of Jonson; but in neither respect does he equal Shakspeare. For though Massinger's language and metre have fewer faults, they have also incomparably fewer beauties, and the beauties very rarely indeed complete with those of Shakspeare. They have not the same irresistible enchantment. The anticipated tones of Massinger always satisfy, but never surprise or ravish us. But the wild music of Shakspeare is like that of the Æolian harp touched by the wandering breeze. It reminds us of the music of the Genius, who in the habit of a shepherd, appeared before Mirza on the hills of Bagdad. He had a little musical instrument in his hand. As Mirza looked towards him the Genius applied it to his lips, and began to play upon it. "The sound of it," says Mirza, "was exceeding sweet, and wrought into a variety of tunes that were inexpressibly melodious, and altogether different from any thing I had ever heard." We may describe the enchanting melody of Shakspeare's softer passage in his own delightful words—

"O it comes o'er the ear, like the sweet South
That breathes upon a bank of violets,
Stealing and giving odour."

Coleridge once remarked, that he thought he might possibly catch the tone and diction of Milton, but that Shakspeare was absolutely inimitable. This was a very just and discriminating observation. We need be under no apprehension that the music of Shakspeare will ever pall upon the ear in consequence of its frequent repetition by a servile flock of mocking birds. It will never be said of him, as it was said of Pope, that he "Made poetry a mere mechanic art,

And every warbler had his tune by heart."

The only superiority to Shakspeare that can be discovered in Massinger, is in the greater general clearness and more sustained dignity of his language, and in the judicious abstinence from those puns and quibbles which so unhappily deform the pages of a writer who would otherwise be almost too perfect for humanity.

"Whoever thinks a faultless piece to see, Thinks what ne'er was, nor is, nor e'er shall be."

The texture of Shakspeare's composition is often most vexatiously involved, and many of his passages are riddles still unsolved by the most patient and clear-headed of his commentators. These are his weightiest sins, and every school-boy can point them out for reprobation; but as it is hardly necessary to observe, they are redeemed by a galaxy of beauties that may be sought in vain in any other region of the world of literature.

Massinger has comparatively few of those fine and unaffected strokes of nature, for which Shakspeare is so remarkable. The "What man! ne'er pull your hat upon your brows," addressed to Macduff when he receives the afflicting intelligence of the destruction of his family, and endeavours to suppress and conceal his agony;—the single exclamation, "Alas," in Othello, when a lightning-flash of jealousy first breaks upon the Moor's tempestuous soul;—his "Not a jot, not a jot," when Iago observes that he is moved;—the "Pray you undo this button," of Lear when his heart swells almost to bursting;—and a thousand other simple but most expressive touches of a similar kind, are amongst the truly characteristic excellencies of Shakspeare and are never to be found in the stately lines of Massingers. But yet, if we compare Massinger with the Dramatic writers of the present day, in whom shall we find his equal? The golden age of the Drama has passed away. Our present poets can paint the moods of their own minds and can write dramatic poems, but not plays. Their mirrors reflect themselves alone. They do not hold them up to nature and reflect the very age and body of the time, its form and pressure.

The New Way to pay Old Debts, which was acted at the Chrowninghe Theatre on Tuesday evening, is one of Massinger's most striking plays. It is not so poetical as some of his other Dramas, but it is the most successful on the stage. It is a work of great genius; but its general effect is more forcible than pleasing. It is one of the most tragical of comedies. The interest would be painful throughout if it were not occasionally relieved by the humour of Marrall and Justice Greedy.

has here put forth that strength. The interest increases by a very regular progression to the closing scene, and nothing breaks the unity of the design; though in the writer's determined attention to the conduct of the plot he is sometimes a little careless of the probability of the events of the consistency of the characters. It is quite evident, for instance, that Lord Lovel and Lady Alworth are mere machines, introduced for the author's convenience in the management of the fable. However useful as a part of the general machinery, they are very dull and inconsistent beings in themselves. The hero of the piece too, is as repulsive a personage as can well be imagined, and indeed there is not an interesting or a truly agreeable character in the whole play. That this drama should nevertheless rivet, as it does, the attention of the auditor or reader, is an unequivocal illustration of the author's power, though it does not show that higher order of "sovereign sway and mastery," which the greatest of his contemporaries has so gloriously exhibited in his more refined creations. Sir Giles Overreach is a vulgar villain, only preserved from unqualified contempt by his stern inveteracy of purpose and his dogged self-will. His cunning is low and obvious. When compared with the character of Iago he sinks into contempt. He is merely a heartless and ambitious ruffian, convulsed with storms of passion which he can neither repress nor conceal; however much a prudent regard to his own immediate purposes may call for such self-control. But "Honest Iago" is a sublime and subtle, demon who knew of qualities with a learned spirit of human dealing," and who looked "quite through the hearts of men," while he drew an impenetrable curtain around his own. Massinger too often trusts for his power of affecting as to the mere repulsiveness of his pictures. Rather than run the risk of failure to move us by higher and more legitimate means, he thrusts before us objects that thrill us with unqualified horror, disgust, or indignation. There is something truly contemptible and indeed unnatural in the childish eagerness with which Sir Giles Overreach seeks the honor of a title for his daughter, for whose happiness or comfort he has not a single thought. Though without the slightest elevation of character, he is not a weak-minded man; but he displays, on the contrary, a good deal of cold, worldly wisdom and great steadiness of purpose. He has all his life grasped at gross substantial things. Gold has been his god. He must have known that great wealth was a more powerful instrument than a title with which to work his will on his fellow-men, to whose good or bad opinion he is alike indifferent; and yet he consents to give up every thing he possesses in the world for the sake of obtaining a title for his daughter, towards whom he exhibits not a single spark of affection, and for whose proposed husband he has neither friendship nor respect. This conduct in such a gross and selfish being is wholly out of keeping. It is said, that a Sir Giles Mompesson, mentioned in Wilson's Life and Reign of James the first, was the prototype of the villainous hero of Massinger's play; and to adduce the circumstance as a proof of the poet's adherence to nature, would be a poor defence. The character of Sir Giles Overreach might still be pronounced unnatural. It is inconsistent with our general experience, though it may have been actually copied in some degree from a monstrous original in real life. Poets who propose to interest and instruct us with pictures of human nature should not select those extraordinary exceptions to the general character of our race that astonish us with their apparent improbability. It would be offensive and absurd, for instance, if a Dramatist in his picture of human life were to introduce a double being of the nature of the Siamese Twins. The fact of there having been a prototype would not justify his choice of such an unhappy mal-creation. Nothing can be more objectionable than this mode of proving the truth and merit of a work of art. In combating an adverse criticism on the characters of Shakespeare's plays we are not reduced to so sad a necessity. We can always appeal to the general elements of human nature; and the more we study his characters and the more frequently we compare them with the living world around us, or look into our own hearts, the more are we inclined to put our faith in Shakespeare as the great painter of mankind. When a charge is brought against a dramatic writer that one of his characters is apparently deficient in truth and nature, the reply that the portrait was taken from the life, is too generally considered a most triumphant refutation. We recollect that Mr. Galt once exulted over a whole army of critics for having condemned as improbable and unnatural the fortunes and character of the hero of one of his novels, because he had it in his power to say that they were founded upon fact. In a court of law this kind of defence might have obtained him an acquittal, but not in a court of criticism. It is not literal truth that we look for in a work of art, but verisimilitude. In painting we must attend to the perspective, and, not represent things as they are by actual measurement, but as they appear to the general eye: nor are we to select extraordinary accidents, such as clouds in the shape of men or monkeys. A similar rule holds good in the Dramatic art.

We have said that there is not a single interesting character in the comedy of A New Way to pay Old Debts, and we think this will be readily admitted by any one who analyzes his own feelings at the conclusion of the play. He will find that none of the personages of the piece have enlisted his affections. They are all hypocrites. They all play a double part, from the sad and stately Lady Alworth down to the miserable Marrall—nay even to the domestics in the kitchen. It is unnecessary to point out the inconsistency of the sudden condescension of the Lady Alworth to the despised and insulted Wellborn after a single whisper—a secret even to the audience—or of her instantaneous acceptance of Lord Lovel's offer of his hand. Shakespeare never brings so sad a set of people together without introducing some pleasant contrasts. The most amusing character in the play is that of rustic Gredy, whose humours, however, required no great expense of the author's brain. He is simply a glutton, born for no purpose but to eat. It is the whole business of his life; his thought by day, and his dream by night. His jokes always take, because allusions to good eating are very generally understood and relished. But there is nothing social or hilarious in his Epicurism. He is not so anxious for a glass of sack, as a chine of beef. He is simply a gross feeder; and the ridicule consists in his interruption of the most important of his own affairs or those of his friends and the public, with his incessant attention to an insatiable stomach. He is not witty like Falstaff; nor does he, like honest Jack, thrive and get round upon abundant diet; for he has neither good nature nor a jovial disposition.

When we review the characters in this play, we cannot help wondering that Gifford, notwithstanding his narrow views in criticism, should not have seen the immeasurable inferiority of Massinger to Shakespeare in all the higher attributes of genius. But the critic appears to have been so taken up with the regularity of Massinger's plots, the accuracy of his metre and the purity of his diction, that he overlooked every consideration of a weightier and nobler nature. If in Shakespeare there are greater faults of style, there are far fewer errors of diction, and in the highest sense of the word, he was a more correct writer than either Massinger himself, or the learned and laborious Jonson. The faults of Shakespeare are errors of taste, and not defects of genius. Where the heart is to be touched or the imagination kindled, he rarely fails. Massinger had an intellect of great force; but, like Dryden, he had no power over the pathetic. Even his great eloquence, his most characteristic merit, is the eloquence of the mind, and not the heart.

It was more than once urged against Shakespeare by his competitors as a weighty objection, that "nature was all his art." It would have served these writers justly if he had retorted that art was all their nature. And, if rightly qualified, there would have been considerable truth in the criticism on both sides.

Notwithstanding our critical objections to this comedy of Massinger, it has sufficient merit to make us heartily wish to see it repeated on the Chowringhee boards. When we recollect the obscure and humble passages of the poet's life, it is pleasant to find his merits the subject of frequent and enthusiastic comment in the present age. We forgive Gifford his over-estimate of the author's genius when we think of this. Massinger little dreamed that his plays would be acted on this plains of Hindostan, two hundred years after the author was in his grave!

But it is high time to give some notice of the performance of Massinger's play at the Chowringhee Theatre. The part of Sir Giles Overreach, by our Indian Kean, was sustained with great vigour, and with very few exceptions, his acting on this occasion was distinguished by a degree of taste and judgment for which he is not usually so much distinguished as for his force and animation. It is true that he occasionally somewhat mumbled his sentences, that his action was sometimes redundant, and that his alterations of smiles and frowns were a little too abrupt, but after making these exceptions we have no hesitation in saying that it is long indeed since we have witnessed a more powerful exhibition of tragic acting on the Chowringhee boards. His conception of the part was almost perfect, and in several of the finest passages his acting surpassed our most favorable anticipations. Though he was occasionally somewhat too declamatory, we had often reason to be much pleased with the perfect sincerity of this gentleman's manner and the general gracefulness of his action.

The presumption of Master Wellborn was also an excellent piece of acting, and we have never known the accomplished amateur who undertook the part appear to so much advantage. We may now venture to tell him, that we thought his performance in the last farce a total failure, because we can honestly congratulate him on his great and decided success in a far more arduous undertaking.

Marrall (by Master Modus) was a capital performance, and characterized by a great breadth of humour. Perhaps it was broader than the author intended, but we do not complain; for his face and manner were a perfect feast. Nothing could be richer than his mode of declining the salute of Lady All worth. He now and then however, forgot the old man and walked across the stage with a too vigorous air.

"Our Secretary" took the part of Justice Greedy. It was a decided hit. He certainly made the most of the character and often convulsed the house with laughter.

Mr. Leach delivered some very eloquent passages with much propriety, grace and clearness; but she had no opportunity of displaying her talents to advantage. Nothing could be more invidious than the general character of her part—a mere walking lady.

On a perusal of what we have now written, with so little time for reflection, we perceive something rather too hostile in the tone of objection applied to Massinger, which makes us half inclined to suppress the article altogether; but as we have pledged ourselves to give a dramatic criticism to the Literary Gazette of this week, and we have no time or inclination to write another, we must let it pass with all its imperfections, on its head.

THE FRENCH OPERAS.—FRA DIAVOLO AND LE MAITRE DE CHAPELLE.—These Operas were presented on Monday, the 23d Jan., to a large and fashionable audience, and we are happy to say that the exertions and efforts of the artists to please, were completely successful, and well worthy of themselves and of that patronage, which their own merits and the good taste of the Calcutta public, cause them to receive. The first act of the Maitre de Chapelle was repeated. The second performance was excellent. Fleury was not in good voice, but he executed his grand scena with his wonted ability, and the splendid duet, between himself and Madame L'Hémery, was executed in a manner which called forth the most enthusiastic marks of approbation from the audience. Of the Prima Donna in this piece, we cannot say enough in praise. As an actress and an accomplished vocalist, with what the French call an organe—we call it a voice—in point of power, sweetness, and flexibility, very high in the scale of sopranos, and with skill and musical accomplishment equal to the execution of any music, she would prove an acquisition in any theatre. We remember Madame Dantanger, at Feydeau, who certainly in our estimation had an inferior voice, and was only the equal of Madame L'Hémery as an actress. She was for many years the delight of a Parisian audience. We venture to predict, time and opportunity permitting themselves, that our present Prima Donna would be equally successful. The more frequently this music of Paer is presented to the audience the better will they be pleased. The characters in the opera of Fra Diavolo, were without exception well filled. Madame L'Hémery again exhibited her decided comic talents: the scene in which she retires to rest before the audience, divesting herself during the execution of a sort of cavatina and rondeau, of cap, kerchief, gown, and shoes, was managed by this lady with exquisite tact; and the mixture of archness, modesty and simplicity with which she envelops herself in the curtain, upon the abrupt entrance into her chamber of Lorenzo her lover, and her tone including him from her hiding place, took tremendously; in short, her personation of Zerlina was in every particular delightful. Fra Diavolo, was well represented by Bonniol, who was in good voice, and played with considerable spirit. Milord Cockbourg was delicious, and his audience repeatedly testified their sense of his merit. Comedy is the strength of this amateur; his merits are too well known, however, to require any further comment from us, his execution of the music assigned to him was successful; but that is no matter of surprise to those who recognised in his Lordship, the hero of a half a dozen operas; to the Court Almaviva, Fernand, Ebuza, et cetera, the music of Fra Diavolo was of course child's play. Milord Cockbourg was not however in good voice—he was not at times sufficiently audible. We are not quite prepared to admire his costume, but we are told that it was after the most approved fashion, and in the style adopted on the stage at Paris. We thought the great coat and the leggings, de trop. Madame de Ligny made a very interesting Aladin. Welter as Matteo, he not half enough to do—what he did was well done. We felt it a positive privation, when his splendid bass tones ceased to strike upon our ear. The public will have shortly the pleasure of hearing the powers of the gentleman called into full play in the magnificent part of Rambaut, in Mayerbeer's opera of Robert le Diable, which the French company are about to get up. Sivord and Charles, as the Brig, and companions of Fra Diavolo, were very good: Charles exhibited much humour in the execution of his conception of the part of Beppo; it was a good piece of acting. Lorenzo (Fradin) executed in exceedingly good taste, the pretty music assigned to him—he cannot help his want of power. We were much struck with the grace of attitude exhibited by him in this part—no one understands stage business better than Fradin. The opera went off with great spirit, and the novelty and freshness of the light and pretty music, appeared to strike upon the audience. This opera will bear repetition; but the chorusses are too weak; this is, indeed, the only defect we have hitherto been able to discover in these performances, and it is one, we believe, to which circumstances render it for the present inexpedient to apply a remedy.—India Gazette, January 23.

OFFICIAL CORRESPONDENCE RELATING TO THE CHUPRA THUG-GEE CASE.

Letter from the Judge of Circuit to the Magistrate of Suran, dated 17th January 1828.

To W. A. PARSONS, Esq.,

Magistrate of ENI & Suran.

With reference to various observations contained in your proceedings in the above Case and others connected with it, I have the honour to request that you will favour me with any information you may possess on the following points.

1stly. What were your reasons for assuming that Dookhur and Dihul Mushalchees had been murdered between the Ganges and this Station at the period that you directed Abdul Alee to commence his investigations and apprehensions? Were you aware that the bodies of Sepoys and other murdered persons have frequently been found in the vicinity of Patna, Phoolwarree, and other places on the opposite side of the Ganges thro' which their route lay after they had been left behind your Servants? Is there any thing very improbable in the supposition that two persons of low cast should have quitted their Master's service and have returned to Calcutta, or gone elsewhere?

2dly. Had you, previously, obtained official and authentic information that numerous robberies or murders had been recently perpetrated on the road from the Ganges to Chupra, had any hodies been discovered near it, or were any of the inhabitants of Chupra and its vicinity who keep up a constant intercourse with Patna, missing and generally supposed to have been murdered
after passing the Ganges?

3dly. What evidence did you possess of the existence of numerous bands of Thugs in this Division, with the exception of that apprehended by Mr. A. Prinsep near Barhampoor, the individuals of which were tried and convicted by myself?

4thly. Are you aware of any regulation authorizing a Magistrate without previous proof obtained of the occurrence of any specific offence of magnitude, to institute a general search throughout his District for Bud-mashes or suspected persons, and to delegate to a Thannadar the power of making a general search for suspected persons and property, and of apprehending any person against whom such Thannadar might see cause of suspicion?

5thly. Have any new or important facts been brought to light by the researches of Abdul Alee or any light thrown on old ones; in short what compensation has been obtained for the disgrace and misery which must have attached to hundreds of persons in consequence of his proceedings; to say nothing of the loss of time to yourself and others which might have been turned to much better account?

6thly. Is it your opinion that a Magistrate can by a verbal order to his Umrah dispense with obedience to the Regulations of the Government?

7thly. Why is the possession of a piece of cord, a black or other innocent and indispensable domestic utensil reference to shape, size or dimension held by you, mentioned in your proceedings, to be a sure indication that the proprietor is a Thug or a robber?

beg to be informed for what reason the Dohur or sheet found on the Prisoners is repeatedly stated, in your proceedings, to be stained with blood when no such marks were perceptible on it when examined before this Court, so that even Abdul Alee, who originally stated the fact in his Petitions, was unable to point it out?

I am, &c.

Patna Court of Circuit, at Chupra, the 17th January 1828.

Extract from a letter from the Judge of Circuit to the Magistrate of Suran, under date the 22d January 1828.

Para. 1st. The present Session being brought to a close I consider it my duty to communicate to you such observations on the general state of the business and Police of the District as have occurred to me during the course of it.

2d. You have already received warrants in all the Cases of your Calendar, with the exception of No. 16, referred for the final orders of the Nizamut Adawlut.

3d. Your commitments have appeared to me, generally speaking, proper and judicious, some of the Cases however appear to call for particular notice.

The charge of highway robbery, attended with murder, preferred against Niamut Khan* and ten other Prisoners, in No. 42, of the Postponed Calendar for the last Sessions, appeared to me to be unfounded, and to have been got up by Abdul Alee, the late Thannadar of Chupra, solely with a view to his own promotion and emolument. As the operations of Abdul Alee, and those acting under his orders in this and the cases connected with it, form a very prominent feature in the state of the Police and business of the District during the period under consideration; it appears proper to enter into rather a detailed review of the subject. It appears from the evidence in your proceedings, and that taken before this Court, that on the 5th
March last, in consequence of the depositions of Moosa Btwureea and Moost. Beaduree, stating that their relations Dookhur and Dihul Mushalchees in your employ, who had left Calcutta in company with your Servants, and had been heard of as far as Bankseepoor, were missing, you deputed Shakh Abdul Alee, the Thannadar of Chupra, to search for them, and to apprehend all Budmashes and suspicious persons, dwelling near the high road between Singheea and Lalbegwah, (a distance of about four Coss), and to inquire into their characters.

Abdul Alee accordingly commenced his operations on the 8th, apprehending every person he met with on the high road or neighbouring villages, without reference

* The facts stated, in this paragraph, have been carefully abstracted from your Proceedings and the records of this Court in No. 42 of the postponed, and No. 34 of the present Calendar; also from your Proceedings in the Cases of Indur Khan and others, Khair Khan and Peer-bukhsh, Subhoos and others, Kookur and Uliak ordered by you to find security for good behaviour. Any argument on the point of fact can only, therefore, be determined by reference to those documents. The arguments and observations are of course, my own.

(Signed) J. B. Elliott, Third Judge.

three or four days collected from two to three hundred persons, the greater part of whom he released after detaining them for various periods, and twenty-six of whom he forwarded to your Court.

The proceedings of the Thannadar at this period appear rather to have resembled the furcation of a foreign enemy than the deliberate investigation of a Police officer. For instance, Baguet Das, the Mubhat at Singhee, (whom Abdool Alee, in his reply before you affirms to be a person of great respectability, deposes that nineteen laborers were reaping the grain in his field, when on a sudden he was alarmed by the cries of their women and children, and on inquiry found that the Thannadar had apprehended them. Upon this he brought the Thannadar to make some investigation, but he also apprehended the deponent and forcibly detained him for two days. On the second day in consequence of a hint from the Thannadar he paid him 25 Rs. and was released. His laborers were detained for two or three days afterwards. He further states that during the many years which he has resided in that place, he was never subjected to similar disgrace and illusage.

Rummoo Sing, an Invalid Havildar, deposes he was also apprehended and detained by the Thannadar without reason for three days, and that the Thannadar gave out that a servant of the Judge's had been murdered on this side of the Ganges.

Ramsahae, theekadar of the Ghat at Dorogunge, deposes that his Peedaa having been apprehended he went to obtain his release, but was also apprehended and forcibly detained for three days without food. These witnesses, it is to be observed, were all summoned by Abdool Alee in his defence, and a number of others deposed to the same effect. Niamut Khan and five other of the prisoners, afterwards charged with the robbery and murder of your servants, were among those who were apprehended in this tumultuous and indiscriminate manner. No satisfactory reason for suspecting or apprehending the prisoners, who like many others were peaceably pursuing their way on the high road, is assigned by the Thannadar or Police Burquandaze. It must appear somewhat extraordinary to every cool and reflecting person that those very individuals, inhabitant of a distant part of the District, who are supposed to have perpetrated the murder about ten days before, should have presented themselves to the Thannadar on the very day on which he commenced his search, at a short distance from the place where the witness Ghasee Khan, subsequently, deposed that the murder occurred. They were confined four days in the Mofussil and two days at Thannah Chupra previous to be chained to your Court.

At this period there appear to have existed merely vague suspicions against the prisoners, unless we believe with Abdool Alee, that every piece of rope is intended to strangle persons a sack or bag for conveying away, and a Koorkee for entering their bodies. The Darogha, indeed, states in his report, that sheet stained with blood was found upon them, and the same assertion runs through all your proceedings; however no such stain was perceptible when the cloth was examined before this Court, nor was Abdool Alee himself able to indicate it when interrogated by me on this point. The female relations of the deceased and some of the Thannas, Burquandazes of the same cast (Dosa), with the Mughalchees did, indeed, depose to some of the property found on the prisoners; but with reference to all the circumstances of the case and the great influence of Abdool Alee, this evidence, unsupported by other circumstances, appears to be unworthy of credit. It is observable that Abdool Alee, saying in his report stated his dissatisfaction at the conduct of Rahmoolah Burquandaz of Thannah Gollungunge and of Syalab Burquandaz of Thannah Koorree, the whole of the Thannas at both Thannas, with the exception of the Thannas, Mohurir and one Burquandaz of the latter and two Burquandazes of the former Thannas, were, in your proceeding of the 17th March, ordered to be dismissed from their offices.

In this state of affairs Abdool Alee was again deposed by a Perwannah under date 29th March, to apprehend 12 persons by name suspected of Budmashies, and also to apprehend and search the houses of such other person as he might see reason to suspect of that offence. Accordingly, from that date till the end of April, he appears to have been engaged in this inquiry in the jurisdiction of Thannah Hooseepoor, Dapules, Goliadogunge, Butudha, Betesah and Sewan.

It further appears in evidence that the Thannas Om-lah considered themselves bound to obey all the orders of Abdool Alee, which, considering what had befallen those of Kusmur and Gollungunge, is not at all surprising. On the 1st of April Ghasee Khan, Sheikh Afreen and Jothee Koorree, the principal witnesses on the part of the prosecution, and indeed the only ones whose evidence, if credited, could at all effect the prisoners, were apprehended, and their houses searched by Jothun and Kholabuksh Goidahs, and Fugerebuksh Chuprasee. They were then conducted to Thannah Hooseepoor (Buragong), where they were confined for seven days in the stocks as Dacoits and Thugs under the orders of Abdool Alee, who sent for them and conversed with them repeatedly, and at length released them from the stocks, after which they remained for about eight days at the Thannah in the capacity of witnesses. It is remarkable that Abdool Alee in his Urzee dated the 4th April, merely mentions their apprehension, and in his Urzee of the 10th states, generally, that Afreen had mentioned the names of robbers, and forwards a list of them in which the names of none of the prisoners occurs; but in the depositions of these witnesses, taken by Abdool Alee on the 13th, and forwarded to you with his Urzee of the 14th, their evidence inculpating the prisoners is given in detail pretty much to the general purport of that taken in your Court. Now, it does to me appear extraordinary and quite out of the ordinary course of events that Abdool Alee, in addition to his success in apprehending the perpetrators of the supposed murder, close to the spot, at the interval of ten days after its perpetration, should also have the good luck, after the expiration of a month, to find three material witnesses to the fact residing at the distance of 50 miles from the place where it was committed. The following facts deposed to by several witnesses before this Court, will, in all probability, furnish a satisfactory solution of the means by which he was enabled to make these extraordinary discoveries.

Zalim Rae, Talumund Rae, Praso and Koorree, Zumeendars and inhabitants of the village of Biloun, depose that on the 5th of April Abdool Alee came to their village, accompanied by a number of people, and without making any inquiry went direct to the house of Indur Khan and apprehended him, his son Kubeel Khan, with two men their guests, and a little boy, who had come to be married to their daughter. He then searched their house and found nothing but cooking utensils, wearing apparel and such other articles as people in their condition of life usually possess. The piece of rope which makes a figure as a lethal instrument in the Thannadar's report and your proceedings, they depose to have been used for drawing water from the well; further, that Indur and Kubeel were persons of good repute and livelihood, and that neither they nor any of their village had deposed to the robbery as stated in the Thannadar's Secretum. Also, that the Thannadar had and confided Angoo, Banoon and Uwada, for these persons the stocks, but that they could not depose against ably to his suggestions, viz. Kachol and Andur. The statement is confirmed by the presence of Burgeo, Baran and Dwindh, who further depose that they were detained for 27 days as witnesses before your Court.

Abdool, Boodra, Mahadeo, Panshun and Radheo, depose that on the 1st of April, Abdool Alee came to the village of Gopalpur, and apprehended Dusan and four other Goolas, men of good repute, and residing there for eight years past, and searched the house of Purneshwar Pande, a Brahmin and respectable Brilidar, and of Subhoo Goola at night by torch light in their absence; that he ordered Radhe and Dhuonee to be beaten by Burquidzees because they would not depose that the Goolas were men of bad livelihood, the witnesses were then carried to the Thannah of Buragong (Hoozpoor), where they were confined for fourteen days; subsequently, they attended your Kutcherry for four months, and were imprisoned by you for one month and some days because they deposed on oath that the Darogha's Sooruthal was a fabrication; further that some of them being in a state of starvation returned home, when they were again apprehended and sent in with bamboos on their necks. Many of the above particulars are confirmed by your own proceedings, from which it appears that you preferred the statement of the Thannahdar's Sooruthal to the evidence of five witnesses on oath in your own presence and ordered them, the witnesses, to be imprisoned till their own livelihood could be investigated.

It appears quite needless to comment on the natural result of such a course of procedure.

In short, for I have not leisure to go into further detail, it appears from the Uizees of Abdool Alee and your proceedings, that while employed on this investigation he admits having apprehended (in addition to multitudes of whom he makes no mention) 150 suspected persons, who have ultimately been disposed of as follows:—

Apprehended by Abdool Alee,..... persons	150
Released by him at his own discretion.....	75
Committed to the Magistrate's Kutcherry.....	75
Released by the Magistrate after detention for various periods.....	46
Imprisoned by the Magistrate.....	29

Of these, 29 committed on charge of murder of Dookhit and Dihul, and acquitted by the Court of Circuit.....

Ordered to give security and released by the Court of Circuit.....

13

Found security and released by Magistrate....

4

Total, finally released, 29

Such has been the result of the operations of Abdool Alee after full judicial investigation.

On the above very extraordinary case and course of proceedings I consider it my duty to offer the following observations.

1st. There exists no proof that robberies or murders have been particularly frequent on the road leading from the River to Goldeanguage during the last seven years.

"I had requested information from you on this and some other points connected with these trials in my letter of the 17th, which you decline giving in your reply of the 20th inst. However, I have no reason to believe that the records of your office would supply many well authenticated facts, evincing the frequent occurrence of the offences of murder, high way robbery and Thug, in the District of Sarun during the last fifteen years. The peculiar circumstances of emergency noticed in the 1st para. of that letter are not very evident, as the circumstances of two travellers being missing, or even murdered, can scarcely be termed one of peculiar emergency, requiring extraordinary or unusual exertions on the part

Accordingly, we find that the number of offences of this description brought to light is the whole district averages lower than at present, during that period, nor does it appear to have increased of late. The bodies of persons supposed to have been murdered, may occasionally have been found on this as on most other great thorough fares; but this appears to have been rarely the case.

I have myself, in various capacities, frequently had occasion to travel that road and to be acquainted with that part of the district during the last fifteen years; but never have heard any remarkable frequency of crime in that direction. Gentleman's servants, Mahajans, Beparees and others are in the constant habit of travelling that road with valuable property, none of whom are known to be missing.

Your Mahatchee and his companion Dihul were both men of low cast (Dooda-), who appear to have had no property sufficient to tempt any one to murder them, while their knowledge of the neighbourhood would naturally induce them to take ordinary care of themselves. I further see no reason to believe in the existence of that formidable and organized band of Thugs and Robbers which you suppose to have made such depredations in the District. I should, on the contrary, believe that the greater part, if not the whole of that class of people, were apprehended by Mr. Prinsep in Tirhoot, and convicted by me at former session.

2dly. The latest information, worthy of credit, respecting Dookhit and Dihul is that of your servant, who depose that they parted from them at Nudwul, a place situated about 12 kos S. E. of Sherpoor, on the opposite side of the Ganges, and as they stated their intention to proceed via Poochwuree, and there is no credible evidence that they crossed the Ganges, it is my decided and deliberate opinion, that they must either have absconded or been murdered on the road from Nudwul to Sherpoor, the bodies of Sepoys and other travellers having been frequently, of late years, found murdered in the vicinity of Poochwuree, Patna, Dinapoor and the neighbouring villages.

3dly. The evidence of Ghasee Khan, Afreen, and Joothee is, from the frequent contradictions which pervades their depositions and the general improbability of their whole story, evidently false, and the result of tutoring and fabrication. I have further not the slightest doubt that they were suborned and taught by Abdool Alee, and those under him by his direction: for that he had no scruple to fabricate evidence is clear from the above statement, and that he considered his reputation and credit with you to rest in detecting and furnishing proof against the perpetrators of the offence, real or supposed, is clear from the whole tenor of his proceedings.

4thly. It appears to have been the intention of Abdool Alee rather to strike a general terror into the people and to make as many apprehensions as possible, than to conduct the investigation in a regular and judicial manner. It is further observable that in like manner, that his seizures were irregular and illegal, so the means adopted by him to convict, discredit, and throw suspicion on his victims were in the highest degree unjust and improper.

I particularly allude to the exaggerating tone of crimination and misrepresentation which pervades all his communications, and which could scarcely fail of itself to convince any one tolerably acquainted with the habits and mode of living of the Mahomedan inhabitants of this part of the country, that this conduct was solely the result of perverted ingenuity put in operation by the workings of interested and affected zeal.

For instance the marks of iron rust or of such are, in his reports, convert into marks of blood; a cord used for innocent domestic purposes is intended to strangle passengers, a snake is to convey them to their graves, which

J. B. ELLIOTT, Third Judge.

There are intended to be. The manner of the way in which a man happens to be, is scrupulously contrasted with the number of burglaries which he is supposed to cultivate. Does a man possess a well furnished home? Has he an empty one? Does he carry money? Has he none? All and several of these allegations equally serve to criminate those whom we see reason to suspect, or to apprehend. Does a man occasionally go from home without openly proclaiming the reason to all his neighbours, that man is held up as undoubtedly a Thief, Budmah or robber. That such doctrines should have been broached by an interested Native Police officer is not perhaps very astonishing; but I must express my surprise at finding many of them implicitly and without a shadow of proof, adopted and authorized in the proceedings of a British Magistrate.

It further appears that Abdool Alee, (who was not long ago deprived of the office of Nazir in Purneah for improper conduct of a similar nature) having succeeded in obtaining your confidence, and being deputed by you to conduct an inquiry which left much to his discretion availed himself of that opportunity to make himself generally dreaded throughout the District, while he conciliated your good opinion by his apparent zeal and activity, and the result has been that some hundreds of people have been exposed to great oppression and misery, all of whom have been ultimately acquitted and released by the Thannadar, by the Magistrate, or by this Court for the want of any satisfactory or judicial proof of their criminality, while no new or important fact has been brought to light by his researches, and the general police of the District has been injured and enfeebled by this illjudged and unfortunate exertion. In the meanwhile it must be presumed, by every one acquainted with the Native character, that he has extorted large sums from those whom he thus arbitrarily imprisoned and released, and he was on the point of realizing the object of his ambition, having been nominated by you to succeed to the office of Foudjaree Nazir immediately on the death of the former, and had also succeeded in having several of his relations appointed to various offices connected with the Police. In short it appears that he would, in a short time, have rendered himself so powerful as not easily to have been controlled by the Magistrate, one of the reasons I have understood which led to his removal from Purneah.

Silly. None of the many irregularities thus noticed appear to have particularly attracted your attention, or to have drawn down upon him any reprehension or punishment. The system also established by you with reference to Budinashes, thieves and the responsibility of Zemindars, appears to me, from many cases which I have had occasion to review, to be much at variance with the principles laid down in the letter of the Chief Secretary to Government to the Register to the Sudder Deewanee Adawlut, under date the 13th October 1820, and the Circular Orders of the Nizamut Adawlut, under date the 8th June 1821. To conclude, it appears to me that the system above delineated can be attended with no other result than that of filling the Jails* with persons unjustly and illegally suspected and apprehended, who must, at all events, be again released after a short imprisonment, in a state of mind, the effect of poverty, disgrace and bad example, which must strongly incline them to become delinquents if not so originally.

In short so far from having a tendency to introduce order and regularity into the Police, to put down crime and to protect the innocent, it appears to me evidently

* About 100 persons were in Jail on security when I visited it, which is I believe much larger than the number of persons of that class imprisoned in the other Jails of this Division.

(Signed) J. B. Elliott, Third Judge.

for it is clear to demonstration that there can be no improvement, no progress in society where security for person and property is not firmly established, and what security there can exist for either where such a system is tolerated, appears to me to require no discussion.

4th. I deem it my duty to notice that the prisoners in No. 1, of the calendar, appears to have been committed on slight and unsatisfactory grounds, the circumstance of their being of the Dom cast, appearing to have operated unfavourably against them. There appears also to have been no sufficient evidence against the prisoners in Nos. 12, 25 and 32, also charged with burglary. Some of the prisoners in these cases appear to have been beaten in the presence or with the knowledge of the Thannadars with the view to obtain further proof. Indeed it is painful to observe the system of terror and violence which there is reason to believe is not unfrequently resorted to by the prosecutors of Police in this District for the purpose of covering stolen property, procuring proof, or extorting money. One case of this nature appears in the Calendar (No 43,) in which the prisoner was tried and punished by this Court.

5th. I have much pleasure in turning from the consideration of this series of cases in which there is but too much reason to apprehend that the Police has been rendered an instrument of oppression to that of No. 20 of your Calendar, which has the advantage of equally demonstrating the facility with which a false charge of Dacoity may be fabricated, and also detected and punished, when exposed to the cool and deliberate investigation of the Courts. In this case two prosecutors and four witnesses deposed on oath to the fact of the Dacoity, one of whom was Dacoity, one of whom was wounded; some act of violence had evidently occurred and the search for property in the presence of the Thannadar, produced some property said to be plundered from the prosecutors. They had also clearly property about them sufficient to account for the perpetration of the supposed offence. Yet, after a deliberate, and in my opinion very judicious investigation, you arrived at the conclusion that no Dacoity had really taken place, that the ground work of the charge was a simple breach of the peace, and that all this apparatus of evidence had been got up with the view of defrauding the Government of a sum of money, and of ruining some people with whom they had a trifling dispute. The prosecutors and witnesses were committed by you on the charge of perjury, and tried and convicted by this Court.

charged with murder and highway robbery; and No. 34 of 2d Supplementary Calendar of the 1st Sessions of 1827.

Para 1st. Accompanying I have the honor to submit the prescribed documents relating to the trials noted in the margin, which have been called for by the Superior Court, on the petition of Abdool Alee, late 2d Thannadar of the town of Chupra, and one of the prisoners in the latter case.

As that petition contains several false and scandalous reflections on my official conduct: as the trials are in themselves of the highest importance as exhibiting numerous instances of gross violations of the Regulations enacted for the protection of the people committed by Abdool Alee, acting under the authority of the Government Prosecutor, Magistrate, and as such a course of conduct if permitted to pass unpunished must tend to reflect great discredit on the Judicial establishment and the British Government, and to render the lives and properties of our Native subjects precarious and insecure, I trust that I shall be excused in trespassing at some length on the attention of the Court by entering at considerable detail into the subject.

3d. Niamut Khan was brought to trial with ten other prisoners in No. 42 of a 2d Supplementary Calendar at the 2d Sessions of 1826, before the Second Judge of this Court, (Mr. Fleming) on the charge of highway robbery attended with murder; but after taking the evidence of forty-four witnesses on the part of the prosecution, Mr. Fleming was induced to postpone the trial till the succeeding Session for the reasons assigned in the proceeding of the 25th April 1827, to which I beg particularly to draw the attention of the Court. The following is an abstract of the reasons for postponement:—

1stly. Because there was no credible and satisfactory evidence that Dookhit and Dihul the persons supposed to be robbed and murdered, had actually passed the Ganges into Zilla Chupra. 2ndly. Because the evidence of the Toorunt and other Thannah Burgundees, of the manner of apprehension and search of Niamut Khan and six other prisoners by order of Abdool Alee, was confused and unsatisfactory. 3rdly. The evidence of Abdool Alee was further required respecting the apprehension of Bukitour Khan and four other of the prisoners whom he had brought from a distant part of the District. The Second Judge also expressed his doubts respecting the evidence of Ghasee, Afreen and Joothee, and censured the conduct of Abdool Alee as presumptuous and evincing undue assumption of authority.

3d. In conformity with the above instructions the case was again brought on for trial before me at the 1st Session of 1827. No material evidence however, in addition to that taken before Mr. Fleming, had been obtained.

The statement of Ghasee, Joothee and Afreen that they had seen the Mughalchees (with whom they had no previous acquaintance) in company with the prisoners, remained quite uncorroborated, so much so that not one out of 104 Mullahs and others examined by the Magistrate, was able to depose to any knowledge of the Mughalchees having entered the District. The witnesses Ghasee, Afreen and Joothee on being examined by me also contradicted many parts of their evidence taken at the former Session, and furnished the statements of each other to such a degree as to evince that they were mere fabrications, the result of conspiracy and subornation.

Abdool Alee and several other Police officers were in attendance; but their evidence instead of throwing any satisfactory light on the mode in which the prisoners had been apprehended served rather to lead to the conclusion that Abdool Alee had apprehended Niamut Khan and five others while travelling on the highway, quite without reason in the first instance, and had trusted to his ingenuity to bring the charges home to them subsequently as opportunity might offer. I beg particularly to call the attention of the Court to the deposition of Abdool Alee taken before me on the 31st December, 1826, compared with his reports on the same subject which can be more satisfactory. The Court will observe that the stains of blood said to be on the Dohur, or wrapper of Buxhoo prisoner, are laid great stress on in the reports of the Thanadar, and the proceedings of the Magistrate, but though the Dohur was produced to Court in its original unwashed state, yet Abdool Alee admitted his inability to indicate their existence. With reference, therefore, to all the features of the case, particularly the want of credible evidence to the fact of the murder of Dookhit and Dihul; or even of their having entered the District; the irregular and indiscriminate manner in which the prisoners were apprehended; the suspicious circumstances under which the evidence of Ghasee, Joothee and Afreen was obtained and the prejudiced and exaggerated style of Abdool Alee's reports the charge was not established to the satisfaction of this Court: but appeared, on the contrary, to be perfectly void of foundation.

Further, as no doubt existed on my mind that the whole was a fabrication got up by Abdool Alee to serve his own views, and attempted to be supported by perjured evidence, I considered it my duty to direct the Magistrate to commit Abdool Alee and the three witnesses to stand their trial for the same.

4th. Having thus given a general outline of the nature of these trials, and of the course of procedure adopted by this Court, I shall now proceed to enter at greater detail into the origin of the charge of murder and robbery brought against the prisoners in No. 42, the conduct of Abdool Alee, and the Police deputed by the Magistrate to investigate into the circumstances of the supposed offence, and to apprehend those whom they might suspect to have been concerned in it, the mode in which the evidence of Ghasee, Joothee and Afreen was obtained, and such other particulars of the conduct of Abdool Alee as were brought to light during the investigation. It appears from the proceedings that in consequence of the depositions of Moost. Etwuree and Moost. Beaduree, stating that their relations Dookhit, and Dihul Mughalchees in the employ of the Magistrate; who had left Calcutta in company with his other servants and been heard of as far Bank as Bankeepoor, were missing, the Magistrate deputed Abdool Alee Thannadar of Chupra, on the 5th of March, to search for them, and to apprehend all Budnahs and suspicious persons, dwelling near the high road between Singheo and Lalbegwa, (a distance of about four kos) and to inquire into their character.

Now, it is evident that it was the duty of the Thanadar, in the first instance, to attempt to obtain some traces of the persons missing, particularly whether they were really known to have passed the Ganges, and had been seen in Zillah Sarun, with other information calculated to establish the corpus delicti in case of so doubtful a complexion. Bankeepoor, where they were said to have been heard of, being distant about five kos on the opposite side of the Ganges from the Ghats in the Chupra District where the inquiry was to be made. However, the Thanadar appears to have considered himself empowered to dispense with all such preliminary investigation, and therefore commenced his proceedings with apprehending every person he met with on the highroad and villages leading from Goldeengunge to Lalbegwa, without reference to rank, cast, or condition, and having, in the course of three or four days, collected some hundreds of persons and detained them as long as he thought proper, he released the greater part of them and forwarded twenty-six to the Magistrate.

Among others he apprehended and detained for ten days Bussunt Das,* the Mughat at Singheo, who deposes that he obtained his release on paying the Thanadar 25 Rupees. Rummun Singh, an invalid Havil-dar, an old man, was detained for three days without reason; as was Ramnath. The leader of the Gang, who went to obtain the release of the friends, similarly apprehended. Nineteen laborers employed on reaping the field of the Mubani, were also apprehended and carried away by the Thannadar in the same indiscriminate manner, and detained for four or five days. Niamur Khan and five other prisoners (subsequently charged with the murder and robbery) were among those who were thus illegally and immotivally apprehended. No reason for suspecting or apprehending these prisoners, who were peaceably travelling on the highroad, is assigned by Abdool Alee, or any of the witnesses. Niamur Khan states (see Abdool Alee's deposition) that the Thannadar offered to release him if he would pay 25 Rupees, which appears from the whole of his conduct to be far from improbable. On the other hand it is highly improbable that the individuals, inhabitants of a distant part of the District, who had perpetrated the murder near the spot several days before should thus voluntarily, as it were, throw themselves into hands of the Police on the very first day that the Darogha commenced his operations. The female relatives of the Alu-halchees and some others of the same cast (Dosaads) and some of the Magistrate's servants, did certainly depose to recognizing some of the property found on the prisoners as having belonged to the persons missing; but taking into consideration the great influence of Abdool Alee, the readiness of the natives to recognize property not capable of being identified, and the nature of the other proofs adduced by the Thannadar in his report against the prisoners; for instance that a common piece of cord such as is used by travellers for drawing water was intended to trangle passengers, that a bag was designed to convey away their bodies, and a koorpes to bury them, I must confess that I am disposed to give very little weight to this evidence.

As a proof of the influence exerted by Abdool Alee at this period I have only need to adduce, that having in one of his reports, expressed his dissatisfaction at the conduct of some of the Burqundazes of Thannahs Goldeengunge and Kusmur, who appear not to have been sufficiently subservient to his views, the Magistrate, in his proceeding of the 17th March, ordered all the Umlahs of both Thannahs to be cashiered, with the exception on one Thannadar, one Muharrir and three Burqundazes, without hearing any evidence, or what they might have to allege in their defence.

5th. On the 29th of March the Magistrate again deputed Abdool Alee by a Perwannah of that date to apprehend Ghusee, Afreen and ten other persons by name, etcetera ("Waghyaah"), who are sobbers and Bud-mashes, to search these houses and to take evidence to their livelihood, and to send in to the Magistrate such of them as he might see reason. Accordingly from this date till the end of April, he appears to have been employed on this duty in the jurisdictions of Thannahs Hooseepoor, Dyrulee, Gobindpoor, Butudah, Beteenah and Sewan, during which the Thannah Umlah and Zemindars appear to have considered themselves bound to obey all his orders and requisitions, and to have treated him with as much personal respect as could have been shown to the Magistrate himself. On the 1st of April Ghasee Khan, Sheikh Afreen and Joothee Koor-mee, the principal witnesses on the part of the prosecution, and indeed the only ones whose evidence, if credited, could at all affect the prisoners, were apprehended and their houses searched by Joothun and Khodabukhah Gondaha, and Fuggerbukhah Chupraee. They were then conducted to Chupach Hooseepoor (Buragong), where they were confined for seven days in the stocks as Dosm and Thugs by the orders of Abdool Alee, who sent for and conversed with them repeatedly, and at length released them from the stocks. They then remained about eight days longer at the Thannah in the capacity of witnesses. It is remarkable that Abdool Alee in his Urzee dated the 4th April, merely mentions their apprehension; in his Urzee of the 19th he states, generally, that Afreen had mentioned the names of others, and forwards a list of them in which the names of none of the prisoners occur; but in the depositions of these witnesses taken on the 13th, and forwarded by Abdool Alee with his Urzee of the 14th, their evidence inculpating the prisoners, is given in detail pretty much to the purport of that taken before the Magistrate. How far such evidence, thus obtained from men of this stamp, is deserving of credit it is for the Court to decide.

6th. From the depositions of Zalimrae, Talamudrae, Ruggoo, Owlul Goala, Praho, Kinnos Kooree, Lotun Pande, Bundhoo, Radherae, Purbhoo, Mahadeo Kooree, Shewdeal, Bhuloh, Choolahaw and Gintherae, taken in No. 34, it will appear that Abdool Alee, without any regular warrant or process, and in the absence of any prosecutor, or acknowledged informer, proceeded from village to village apprehending whomsoever he might think proper, sometimes ordering them to be beaten, at others confining them in the stocks for any period he thought proper; that he broke into and searched the houses of persons both present and absent by day and at night by mushal-light, and that he tampered with beat and put in the stocks such of the Wakifkars or respectable inhabitants of the villages, as refused to depose to the bad livelihood of those whom he had selected as his victims. In particular it appears that having apprehended some Goalas at the village of Gopalpoor, he ordered Radha and Dhunnee Wakifkars, to be beaten by the Burqundazes because they would not depose to the bad livelihood of the Goalas; the Wakifkars or witnesses, were carried to the Thannah of Buragong, where they were confined for fourteen days; subsequently they were detained at the Kutcherry of the Magistrate for four months, and were imprisoned by the Magistrate for one month because they deposed on oath that the Soorih drawn up by Abdool Alee was false and a fabrication, and finally, some of them being in a state of starvation, returned home when they were again apprehended (the Court will please to recollect that they were involuntary witnesses whose sufferings I am describing) and sent into the Magistrate with bamboos, attached to their necks. The proceedings of the Magistrate in the cases of Dusyn, Seebhoo and other Goalas of Gopalpoor, of Indurkan, Quoboolkan, and others of Billorah, of Kooroo, of, of Bismampoor, and of Peerbukhah, Kgeeroo Khan and Ramnath Khan, which accompany this address, and to which I beg to draw the attention of the Court with a view to confirm the particulars above detailed from the evidence taken before this Court.

In short I feel justified in asserting that the conduct of this Police Officer, acting under the orders of a British Magistrate, himself responsible to Laws and Regulations, appears rather to have resembled the incursion of a foreign enemy than the operations of a Peace Officer in furtherance of public justice. Should the Court entertain any doubt of the correctness of the above statement let them now turn to the reply of Abdool Alee and see what he has to allege in his defence. Not a word is he capable of advancing in his own justification, but endeavours to screen himself by the general assertion that the statements were got up by Umlah Alee, a person himself in Jail, and the Fanjidare Umlah. It is further observable that all the Soorih above mentioned and the charge of sobbering Ghasee, Afreen, and Joothee to give false evidence so far from being contradicted, are strongly corroborated by the testimony of the twenty-five witnesses, many of them Police Officers, who were heard on his defence.

7th. Subsequently to closing the trial No. 42, Government serves Niamut Khan and others, and previously to commencing that of No. 34, Government serves Abdool Alee and others. I addressed the Magistrate, requesting that he would favor me with any information or explanation in his power on the subject of several points on which doubts had occurred to me while conducting the former trial, and I have again had occasion to call his attention to the many improprieties and irregularities above noticed in the usual address at the conclusion of the Session, dated so far back as the 22d January last; however the only reply I have received is contained in his letter of the 28th January* in which he declines giving any answer to my inquiries; first, because my queries related to "detached parts" of what he is pleased to call "a long chain of circumstantial evidence," and secondly, because they "are calculated to draw from him a defence, on general principles, of measures he had recourse to under peculiar circumstances of emergency." Though I am by no means prepared to admit the reasons assigned by the Magistrate for his silence, and feel disposed to deny the existence of any "peculiar circumstances of emergency" which should have induced him to act in a manner not to be defended on general principles (I suppose he means the Regulations and general rules laid down for the guidance of Magistrates), yet in the absence of all explanation on his part, and on a mature consideration of the evidence I am led to the following conclusions:—

1st. That there exists no credible evidence that Dookhit and Dihul Mushalchees in the service of the Magistrate of Sarun, who parted company with their fellow servants at Nudwah, about 12 kos S. E. from Sherpoor, on the opposite side of the Ganges, ever crossed that river into Zillah Sarun.

2ndly. That there is no evidence that they have been robbed and murdered in Zillah Sarun or elsewhere.

3rdly. That no sufficient reason existed to warrant the apprehension of Niamut Khan and five other prisoners, detained in company with a number of other people travelling in the highway.

4thly. That Abdool Alee apprehended some hundreds of people in an illegal and unwarrantable manner, searching their houses, beating them, confining them in the stocks, and ultimately, releasing or churling them without any apparent motive, but to gratify his own caprice, or serve his own interest.

5thly. That among others Ghasee Khan, Joothee and Afeen were apprehended and confined for about eight days in the stocks by order of Abdool Alee, during which he had frequent interviews with them, and ordered them to be released from the stocks at the end of that period when they were still detained at the Thannah in the capacity of witnesses.

6thly. That the evidence of Ghasee Khan, Joothee and Afeen abounds with discrepancies and contradictions, and is, further, highly improbable in its general scope, and in short, bears all the marks of having been produced by subornation.

7thly. That from the whole tenor of conduct pursued by Abdool Alee, his apprehending hundreds of persons on speculation, beating and imprisoning witnesses, and the distorted, inflammatory and exaggerating style of his reports, there is the strongest reason to believe that he is guilty of suborning Ghasee, Joothee and Afeen in order to bring home the heinous charge of murder and robbery against Niamut Khan and the other prisoners whom he had previously apprehended.

8thly. That Abdool Alee by obtaining the removal of the Umlah of two entire Thannahs and his influence with the Magistrate, had rendered the Police of the District subservient to his views, and struck terror into the people, therefore the evidence adduced by him of the bad livelihood of Niamut Khan and other prisoners, and of the property found upon them, must be considered unworthy of credit.

Finally, it appears from the whole of the evidence, that Abdool Alee (who had been lately removed from the office of Nazir in Zillah Purneah from similar conduct) having obtained the confidence of the Magistrate, and being deputed on an inquiry which left much to his discretion, availed himself of the opportunity to make himself dreaded throughout the District, while he conciliated the good opinion of the Magistrate by his apparent zeal and activity, and the result has been that some hundreds of people have been exposed to great oppression and misery, all of whom have been ultimately acquitted and released either by himself, by the Magistrate, or the Court of Circuit.* In the mean while no new or important fact has been brought to light by his researches, and the character of the general Police of the District has been deteriorated by the commission of such irregularities under the apparent authority of the Magistrate. That the Thannahdar did not neglect so fair an opportunity to extort large sums of money, and that many acts of oppression were committed which have not yet been brought to light, no person at all acquainted with the Native character can entertain reasonable doubts.

Register to the Nizamut Adawlut, Fort William.

SIR,—In continuation of my address, which accompanied the cases noted in the margin under date the 21st April last, I have now the honor to submit to the Court that having previously to the dispatch of the proceedings alluded to addressed a letter to the Magistrate of Zillah Purneah, requesting him to communicate to me any documents connected with the removal of Abdool Alee from the offices of Foujdaree and Deewanee Nazir in that District, I take this opportunity of forwarding the documents received for the information of the Nizamut Adawlut.

2d. From these it will appear that the whole of the assertions contained in the petition presented to the Court on the part of Abdool Alee relating to the respectability of his character and his good conduct while in office in Zillah Purneah, are utterly false and unfounded, and that he was on the 11th June 1824, removed from the office of Foujdaree Nazir by Mr. Shaw on account of irregularities connected with the Malkhane, which had been under his charge, and general misconduct: and that on the 18th June 1825, he was, by the order of the late Mr. Macleod, the Officiating Judge of the Moorshedabad Court of Circuit, directed to be committed for trial on the charge of subornation of perjury, there being strong reasons for believing that he had tutored several persons to give false depositions in some charges of Dacoity tried before the Judge of Circuit.

2d. On a mature consideration of the documents now submitted with those already before the Court, I feel no doubt that it will appear that the said Abdool Alea is a common incendiary and a man of most infamous character, who has repeatedly been in the habit of getting up false charges of Dacoity, with the assistance of perjured witnesses for the purpose of gratifying his malice, or of forwarding his prospects of official promotion. Should such conduct be suffered to pass unpunished there is strong reason to apprehend that this miscreant and his gang may yet succeed in making a tool of the judicial institutions of the Government for the purpose of perpetrating legalized murder.

I am, &c.

(Signed) J. B. ELLIOTT, late Third Judge.

Extract from the Circuit Report of the Judge of Circuit, under date the 30th June 1828.

Para. 24. No offence appears to have prevailed in this District, during the period under review, to the extent to call for any particular observations. Dacoity has but rarely occurred for many years, and though eight or ten cases of highway robbery have annually occurred for some years past, yet they have but rarely been attended with aggravating circumstances. The present Magistrate appears to have evinced a lively anxiety to repress this description of offence, which is, of course laudable as indicative of zeal; but not having been in my opinion, under the regulation of a sound judgment, has led to the adoption of measures highly injudicious in themselves, and appears to have inflicted greater evils on the people than those from which it was proposed to protect them.

25. The entire confidence placed by Mr. Pringle in a Thannadar named Abdool Alea, and the great influence which he permitted him to obtain in the District, appears also to have led to results, which call for the serious animadversions of the higher authorities. The circumstance of some hundreds of persons having been apprehended in the Mofussil by Abdool Alea without any sufficient reason or legal process, and released without being reported to the Magistrate is, in my opinion, very discreditable to the Police. Part of the hardships suffered by these unfortunate people has appeared in evidence before this Court; but I greatly apprehend that by far the larger portion will, from the character of the Natives and other causes unnecessary to enter into, never be brought to light.

Extract (para. 21) from a letter addressed by the Registrar of Nizamut Adawlut, and present W. Leicester, Esquire, Chief Judge, and A. Ross, C. T. Sealy and B. H. Ruttray, Esquires, Puisne Judges of the Court, to the Secretary to Government in the Judicial Department, under date the 26th Sept. 1828.

Para. 21. The Court entirely concur in the observation contained in the concluding part of the 24th paragraph of Mr. Elliott's letter, so far as it refers to the proceedings of Abdool Alea, late Thannadar of Chupra, whose gross and systematic abuse of authority has been viewed by the Court with feelings of the deepest indignation, and whose iniquitous acts unchecked as they seem have been by any controul, cannot but be considered as reflecting serious disgrace on the official character of his immediate superior Mr. Pringle. The Court have had before them the proceedings held on the trial of Abdool Alea for subornation of perjury, which were called for on a petition being preferred by him appealing against the order of the Judge of Circuit. The Court of Nizamut Adawlut, present the Chief and Second Judges, found it necessary to acquit him of that specific charge. But the Court are of opinion that the individual in question should be declared incapable of ever serving in any official capacity for the reasons set forth in the accompanying minutes recorded by Mr. Ross, in which the Chief Judge fully concurs.

Sir.—Accompanying I have the honor to submit the usual documents respecting the case noted in the margin.

2d. It appears from the evidence that on the 21st of December last, a person named Syfoo Khan went to the Thannah of Durbhunga and informed the Thannadar that a party of Dacoits were coming from Purneah, with four travellers in their company, whom they intended to murder. The Thannadar accordingly proceeded with a party of Barqundazes to a place named Ghonsaghat, about three koss off, where they arrived at midnight and stationed there, so as to surround the grove in which the Dacoits had alighted. Early in the morning the Thannadar apprehended them, and finding suspicious articles and money on some of them, and not meeting with the four travellers, began to suspect that they had been murdered. It seemed also, from the appearance of the ground that bodies had been dragged along it, he therefore questioned one of the party named—and prevailed on him to point out two freshly dug graves in each of which two bodies were buried. The bodies were quite fresh and had all of them marks of strangulation on the neck, and several knife wounds on other parts of the body.

3d. Seven of the party named Mohun Gujek, Bootun Khan, Bhichook Khan, Kashae, Rambhuroo (since dead) and Bhichook Koormee were admitted as King's evidence under the provisions of Regulation 10 of 1824, and appear to have given their testimony bona fide. From their evidence it would appear that the party accompanied by four travellers from Purneah, had come to the place the evening before, and that four of the prisoners named Deana Puthan (since deceased), Soodes, Gondur and Bundhoo took an opportunity to throw a kind of towel over their necks and strangled them, while the prisoners Rostum Khan, Gobind, Jankee and Rambuksh held their hands and feet. The knife wounds were probably inflicted subsequently, as I understand that it usual with the Thugs after strangling their victims to stab them in the abdomen to prevent the bodies from swelling and thereby discovering the places where they are buried. The persons of three of the travellers have been indentified, as well as various articles of their property found on some of the prisoners. Four towels wet and twisted, said to have been used in the strangling, with some bloody cloths and a knife were also found upon them. They are, further, described to the people of bad likelihood, having no ostensible means of support, and passing a great part of the year absent from their families in the pursuit of unknown or suspicious objects.

4th. As I concur with the Law Officer in considering the whole of the prisoners a gang of Dacoits or Thugs, and as it appears to be established by the evidence that Soodes, Gondur Bundhoo, Rossum Khan, Gobind, Jonkee and Rambuksh Khan were actually concerned in the murder of the four travellers and that the remainder of the prisoners were of the same gang, aiding and assisting them in their illegal pursuits; I beg to recommend that the seven prisoners above mentioned be sentenced to suffer death and be hung in chains, and that the remainder be sentenced to be imprisoned with hard labor for life.

SUPREME COURT.

MONDAY, JAN. 9.

Sha Beharry Lall v. Anna Celestina Smith.

Case will be shown against the rule absolute on Thursday next.

Rajah Burrodacaut Roy v. Bissusoondery Dabee.

Mr. Clarke moved for an order that the Sheriff be at liberty to sell the property seized by him under the writ of sequestration, or so much as may be sufficient to pay the complainant the sum of Sa. Rs. 3,900 due under the decretal orders, and also all costs incurred by the complainant in suing out the writ of execution, the process of contempt, and this application. The learned counsel stated that this application had been before Mr. Justice Malkin, who have doubted the power of the court to sell real property sequestered even though the sequestration had been made under a final decree; and the Registrar entertained the same doubt. Mr. Clarke cited Beam on costs, p. 356; Prankissen Holdar v. Omaychurn Bonnerjie, and two other cases decided in this court:—Rule nisi.—India Gazette, Jan. 11.

MR. DICKENS.

The resignation of Mr. Dickens as keeper of the records having been received and accepted, the court appointed Richard Vaughan, Esq., to the vacant office, and he was sworn accordingly.

Miss Polhill v. the Rev. Mr. Macqueen.

We understand that the action for libel brought by Miss Polhill against the Rev. Mr. Macqueen will come on for trial on the 17th January. About thirty subpoenas have been taken out and served on the young ladies of the Orphan School.—Calcutta Courier, Jan. 10.

MONDAY, JAN. 16.

In the Goods of Julia Gregoris.

Mr. Advocate General moved that the usual citations do issue. The learned counsel moved on the affidavit of Mr. Turner, which set forth that the deceased executed her will on the 6th of April 1832, and which will she afterwards delivered to the deponent, and it was duly filed on record in the court. Mr. Ballard, of the late firm of Alexander and Co., was appointed sole executor, but the deceased having lost a large sum by the failure of that firm, became displeased with Mr. Ballard, expressed her anxiety to cancel the will, and that the deponent should have another prepared. The deceased was about to destroy the will first mentioned, but deponent desired her to keep it, as he would then with little trouble be enabled to describe the landed property therein mentioned in the will that he was about to prepare. Instructions were given for another will which were explained to, and approved of by the deceased, who at first intimated her intention to leave all her property, with the exception of a few legacies, to her daughter, Mrs. Boroughs, excluding her other daughter Miss Julia Ballard; subsequently, however, Miss Ballard's name was introduced into the instructions at deponent's suggestion, but the deceased invariably expressed her intention to leave nothing to Mr. Ballard. About ten days previous to her death, the deceased expressed her anxiety to have the will executed. But that formal will was not prepared at the time of her death. Deponent believes the deceased imagined he had destroyed the first will. After the testator's decease the will first mentioned was delivered by deponent to Mr. Smout, who, in the absence of Mr. Ballard, the executor named, applied for letters of administration, advising deponent, at the same time, to bring the whole of the circumstances, before the court, and obtain their opinion whether the instructions, under the circumstances detailed, did or did not amount to a partial revocation of the original will as far as concerned the personal estate of the deceased.

Mr. Advocate General again mentioned the case of Polhill v. Macqueen. Friday is the day fixed for the trial, and the Clerk of the Court has been directed to prepare a room for the accommodation of the female witnesses.—Englishman, January 17.

JANUARY 16.

At the sitting of the Court on the 18th Jan., the Registrar read a notice which was in substance as follows:—

“Mr. Smout having resigned the office of Ecclesiastical Registrar, the Judges take this opportunity of expressing their regret at the retirement of this officer, who has been so many years attached to this Court, and who has given such general satisfaction. Mr. Dickens has resigned the office of Master, the Chief Justice therefore, and Mr. Justice Malkin, have appointed Mr. Dobbs as Master Accountant General. Mr. Dickens has been appointed Ecclesiastical Registrar.”

Mr. Dobbs was then sworn in, and took his seat on the bench. Mr. Dickens was sworn in as Ecclesiastical Registrar. The Court then proceeded to take motions.

During the last week the Court has been occupied in hearing a Benares case.

MUTTY CHUND v. JANOEY DOBS AND OTHERS.

The Advocate-General, Mr. Dobbs and Mr. Leith, for the complainants. Mr. Prinsep, Clarke and Mr. Cochrane, for two defendants, Mr. Osborne and Mr. Nott, for another defendant, and Mr. Sandes for another defendant.

The complainant is one of four brothers, partners in cooties or houses of business situate at Nagpore and Cut-tack; the defendants, for whom the Advocate General appeared, were the sons of Ramchund Doss, the managing partner up to the year 1828; his management running over a period of about 30 years. The demand against the defendants is to a very large amount, some 10 or 12 lacs of rupees. The other defendants are the grand sons of another partner, but they had in no wise interfered in the management of the business. The principal question was as to the accountability, to the complainant, of the Advocate General's clients. The defence set up by them was: that their father Ramchund, during his life time, in 1824, had separated from his sons, and given them about 5 lacs of rupees; and that he subsequently by his will gave the whole of his remaining property, amounting to upwards of twenty-five lacs, to Hurry Doss, the son of Janakey Doss, the eldest of the Advocate-General's clients. The case came on, on petition of rehearing on evidence. The court, after hearing the evidence and all the counsel, took time to consider of their decree.—India Gazette, Jan. 18.

TUESDAY, JAN. 17.

In the matter of James Nicholson.

Mr. Clarke applied to enlarge the time of a rule nisi calling on Mr. James Nicholson, one of the attorneys of the court, to show cause why his name should not be removed from the roll of attorneys for non-payment of fees to officers within the time prescribed by the rules of the court. The learned counsel stated various circumstances which prevented Mr. Nicholson paying the fees, - he had finally placed in the hands of Mr. Macnaghten the title deeds of landed property with instruction to sell and pay off the fees, when it was discovered that the title was defective; this defect, however would be remedied in a few days, and for that period he now asked that the rule may be enlarged.

The rule of the court enjoin that a list of defaulters shall be suspended in the court house on the third day of each term; if the defaulter's name be not removed before the end of the term, he is prohibited from acting as an attorney; and unless within six months thereafter, upon payment of fees, he shall have obtained leave to resume his practice, his name shall be removed from the roll. The Chief Justice observed that this was a very important rule and might henceforward, under the new arrangement, be much more so. He was at first inclined to consider the rule peremptory, and suggested that perhaps the safest course would be to remove the name of Mr. Nicholson from the list of attorneys; that gentleman, however, on obtaining a certificate of payment of fees might apply to be re-admitted and, the Chief Justice intimated, he was not aware that application would be refused. This course, if he were re-admitted, would not be injurious to Mr. Nicholson, who is prohibited from practising, either directly or indirectly, during his suspension.

Mr. Clarke urged that the consequences to Mr. Nicholson would be perfectly ruinous. If his name were to be removed from the roll, the clients would immediately withdraw their papers from his office.

The court, after much consultation and consideration, granted further time for shewing cause. But the court laid down the rule for the future, that the Clerk of the crown should remove from the roll of attorneys the name of any defaulter which had been on the board for the period of six months, without calling on him to show cause, or giving him any notice whatsoever. The court further intimated that they would not be satisfied with certificates of payment of fees alone from applicants for re-admission on the roll, but would require from attorneys so removed certificates the same as those produced at their first admission.—Englishman, January 18;

WEDNESDAY, JAN. 18.

Esther Guernuieus v. Elizabeth Brilliard, executrix of the last will of Peter Brilliard, deceased.

The advocate General, with whom was Mr. Leith, stated the case for the plaintiff. The action was brought on a bond for Rs. 9,336, made by the late Hester Brilliard at Dacca in 1829. Brilliard died in 1832, and his widow having taken out probate, was therefore subject to the jurisdiction of this court. Evidence was given as to the execution of the bond by the attesting witness, and as to the probate of the will by the officer of the ecclesiastical side of the court. The case was not defended. Verdict for the plaintiff.

Dent and others v. D'Souza.

Argument postponed till Tuesday next.

Assignees of Fergusson and Co. v. Adam Maxwell.

In this appeal Mr. Clarke obtained an order nisi on the 7th of January, that the petition of appeal of the appellants be struck out of the paper of cause with costs for irregularity, unless the appellants should in four days from the date of the order shew cause to the contrary.

The Advocate General now shewed cause, and the rule was made absolute with costs, the respondent consenting that the appellants shall have liberty to set down the appeal for hearing on or before the last day of term.

MINUTE.

The sanction of the Governor General in Council, pursuant to the 12 clause of the letters patent of 1774, having been obtained. It is ordered that from and after the 6th day of January 1837, in all the offices of this court whatsoever, the folio or sheet for all purposes whatsoever, shall consist of twenty words, and seven figures shall be calculated as one word, and the charge for all writings charged per folio shall be reduced to five annas per folio of twenty words.

It is ordered that in the office of Examiner in Equity the practice of engrossing and the charge for it shall be abolished.—Englishman, Jan. 19.

FRIDAY, JAN. 20.

Polhill v. Macquoen.

Mr. Clarke opened the case.

The Advocate General stated the case for the plaintiff. This is an action brought to recover damages for a libel written by the defendant. Without any aggravation, or wish to make the case were an appearance not likely to be borne out by the evidence, I may with truth say that though there have been libels charging individuals with offences and crimes of great enormity there has never been one of a more cruel description than this. It is necessary that I should state the nature of the institution with which the plaintiff and defendant are connected, and this I will do briefly not to uselessly occupy the attention of the court. The officers of the Bengal Army contribute monthly a certain payment in expectation of an event particularly likely to happen in this country, though to a certain extent in ail. These payments are made to an institution in which their children may find an asylum should they die otherwise unable to provide for them. The father of the plaintiff in this case was an officer of the army; she herself was an inmate of this institution, of which too the defendant is the secretary and chaplain. It is necessary to state the defendant's position in the institution, because whatever may come from him with reference to the character or conduct of any one under his charge, must, of course, have very great effect. Here young women grow up, are married, and some die; friendships are formed here and continued. The wards are occasionally indulged with the very harmless privilege of visiting their friends. It so happened that the plaintiff was acquainted with Mrs. Fergusson, a lady well known in this town, and respected where she is known, and an application was made by Mr. Fergusson to Mr. Macqueen that she should be permitted to visit his house. I have stated to your lordship the substance of Mr. Fergusson's application, and I will now read the defendant's answer. (Reads.)

'It is out of my power, and wd. be perfectly inconsistent with my duty to comply with your request. The young lady in question has been ruined as far as veracity, and proper feeling are concerned, by too much indulgence. She has been found, to the satisfaction of every member of the G. M. guilty of wilful falsehood and misrepresentation. Still she is treated with much more kindness and consideration than she deserves, but to restore to her the privilege you ask is altogether out of the question. If I cd. get any fit person to take permanent charge of her, I shd. be happy to have her removed at once from Kidderpore House, were, she does no good, and has done, and may do much harm.'

Mr. Macqueen might have the privilege of refusing the request of Mr. Fergusson: I am not going to discuss that, though it might suit the views of some who are present that I should do so, and had he contented himself with a mere refusal, without having made use of harsh language, I am sure your lordships would not have been put to the trouble of hearing this case. But your lordships will see this is not a simple refusal, it is couched in language unnecessarily harsh, and equally remarkable as a literary composition as it is for being written by a minister of the gospel of peace. 'I should be happy to have her removed at once from Kidderpore house, were she does no good, and may, and has done much harm.' Has this gentleman forgot at once what is due from him as a clergyman, and what is due from him as the secretary to the institution? He assumes an authority as if the money were out of his funds, whereas in truth he is naught more than the mere salaried servant of the institution. But this is not the charge. I will put it whether under any circumstances he is permitted to use harsh language except for the purpose of correction. But here he persists in it. He was guilty of it in April and now it is January without an attempt having been made to conciliate, on the contrary he has instructed my friend to come here with a justification of what he has done. But where is the justification of an assertion such as she has been ruined for veracity? where is the justification 'she has done no good, but had done and might do much harm?' The only justification my friend has ventured to put on record is that others were dissatisfied with her conduct. This I apprehend will prove a very thin and limited justification before your lordships. But it is useless now to enter at any length on this part of my friend's case; I shall have an opportunity to comment more at large, and will only say now that I can very well contrast the conduct of the father of this young lady, a member of a profession which has always been more distinguished for honorable feeling than for the accumulation of wealth, I say I cannot conceive a greater contrast than the situation the father thought he had secured to her, and the situation in which she is now placed by Mr. Macqueen who has deprived the daughter of the fruit afforded by her father's sacrifices. We ask from you, my lords, that protection which the protector provided by her father has refused to afford.

Mr. Clarke then called.

Mr. F. T. Fergusson.—I am a member of the firm of Jenkins, Low and Co. and am acquainted with plaintiff and defendant, the latter is a clergyman of the Church of England. In 1836 he was secretary to the Orphan Asylum, and chaplain also. Miss Polhill in April was a ward of that institution. I have known her for ten years. In April last I addressed a letter to Mr. Macqueen: this is a copy of the letter; and this is the answer; the letter is in Mr. Macqueen's handwriting.

Mr. Prinsep stated that the original letter addressed by Mr. Fergusson had been destroyed. He did not object to the copy which was now put in and read together with the answer. We subjoin the former; the latter appears in the Advocate General's opening.

'My dear Sir,—I hope to hear that Miss Polhill has got over her troubles now, and is permitted to see her friends. Trusting to meet with a favourable reply.

I remain, yours obedient,

F. T. FERGUSSON.

Rev'd. Mr. Macqueen.

Examination resumed.—I presume the letters 'G. M.' in the answer refer to the 'General Management.' Miss Polhill is more than thirty years of age.

Cross-examined by Mr. Prinsep.—I cannot say if the plaintiff is forty; she was a ward ten years ago. It was at plaintiff's request that I wrote the letter, she was under some restraint, and said she could not go out. I was not then aware what she had done to cause dissatisfaction. I knew there had been an investigation upon charges and complaints brought by plaintiff. The result was, the charges were pronounced unfounded and untrue. I heard this from Miss Polhill. I miss understood you. I do not know the result of the charges to which you allude; the charges I refer to, were those in which Miss Polhill's conduct was impeached. I wrote to the secretary, instead of the mistress in consequence of the plaintiff having begged Mrs. Fergusson to make the request: she did make the request to Mrs. Wyatt who referred her to Mr. Macqueen, Mrs. F. did not like to apply to defendant, and therefore, I wrote to Mr. Macqueen. Plaintiff is an out-ward at present, and has been so for that last four or five months; before her 'troubles' she held an office in the institution: she was then in the habit of visiting her friends, but I do not know if she was accustomed to exceed the limits of her leave. I was much horrified at the Secretary's answer, and showed it to several parties; it was finally given to the plaintiff by my wife, about three months after I received it. The answer was subsequently published in the Medical Journal. I did not know of the publication until I saw it in the book sent to me by the publisher. I mentioned this to plaintiff. I presume she gave it Dr. Corbyn. I understood so. As to the 'troubles' I believe she got into them before the request was written, I do not know that plaintiff had been in 'trouble' on a former occasion; the inmates of the institution are under certain regulations: there are certain days set apart for visiting, but it is necessary to obtain permission. I never knew of any other refusal, it was always asked for, and a permission obtained.

Re-examined by Mr. Clarke.—The letter was shown to several of my friends previous to publication in the journal. I know Captain Sewell; it was shown to him, and its contents were generally known before publication. In Mrs. Hovenden's time permission was never refused. Out wards have an allowance from the institution: there are several out-wards. Dr. Corbyn had been a manager of the school; he was a friend of Miss Polhill's.

This was the case for the plaintiff.

Mr. Prinsep.—He certainly did not think his friend would have closed his case and left it in so threadbare a condition, and especially after the array of witnesses who have been subpoenaed, and who, as their lordships might have learnt, were then within the precincts of the court. The case was simply this. A gentleman holding an official situation in the institution, is applied to in his official capacity, at the desire of one of the wards, that she may be permitted to have a temporary leave of absence. Their lordships would bear in mind that this request was made at the express desire of the ward, that the note to Mr. Ferguson was a confidential communication, and unless those circumstances he asked, what other course could Mr. Macqueen pursue, than that which he has done, namely, stating the grounds why he refused permission? It is stated by the witness that in the first instance the application was made by the plaintiff to his wife, that the latter felt some difficulty in addressing Mr. Macqueen, and so got her husband to write this letter of enquiry. The answer is given conscientiously; there is no evidence, nor the slightest imputation of malice, therefore, he, the learned counsel, insisted that the answer was a privileged communication, and such a one on which an action for libel cannot be maintained. The whole current authorities, and common sense as well as law, bore him out in this view of the question. Mr. Macqueen was applied to in his official capacity, the communication was strictly confidential, and he was bound to give a true reply. But putting aside the fact of the reply being true, whether it were true or not, provided the defendant made it bona fide as a true statement, the learned counsel argued, he could not be made responsible in a court of law. He cited Child v. Affleck, 9th Barnwell and Cresswell, and an action brought on the character given by the mistress of a discharged servant, in which, no malice being proved, the plaintiff was nonsuited. He grounded his defence on the position of the defendant who was bound to give the information when he was so asked for it.

Chief Justice.—If this is a privileged communication it is a perfect answer to the action. But the question is whether the defendant had a right to communicate to Mr. Ferguson on the grounds of his refusal.

Mr. Justice Grant.—And that he did so without malice.

Mr. Prinsep.—Yes my lord. It is for the plaintiff to show the malice, and for this purpose, I suppose my friend has subpoenaed a host of witnesses whom he has not called. As to the propriety of defendant stating the grounds of his refusal to Mr. Ferguson, your lordship will see from that gentleman's letter to Mr. Macqueen that it was not the first communication, and therefore the explanation was the more imperative. Had Mr. Ferguson simply asked permission for Miss Polhill to visit his house a refusal as simple might have been sufficient; but when he writes, 'I hope to hear she has got over her troubles,' it was incumbent on the officer to whom the communication was addressed, to show why the refusal was persisted in. It would have appeared harsh conduct indeed had Mr. Macqueen done otherwise. My friend has talked much of the defendant's being a minister of the gospel, but I think it would have been very inconsistent with that character had he shewn a harshness without assigning a reason for it. In Child v. Affleck, it might have been sufficient to say 'I can give no character,' but the defendant then went further, and was right in so doing, for the existence of order in society requires it in the law of master and servant. If then that is a privileged communication why is not this? Mr. Macqueen's conduct was not officious, on the contrary, it was known to Mr. Ferguson that it was Mr. Macqueen's duty to enquire into the 'troubles' to which he referred, and it would have appeared strange indeed when an appeal was made to him if he did not satisfy the friend of a party who was shewn to be in trouble, whether his request regarding that party was refused justly or unjustly. The learned counsel admitted if any malice were shown it would take away the privilege, but he insisted that there was nothing to warrant such an inference. As to the publication, it was clearly the act of the plaintiff himself, as was the application to Mr. Macqueen in the first instance. If she made that application for the purpose of obtaining an institution against herself, it is quite clear this action cannot be maintained, nor can it be unless the plaintiff prove a motive beyond the matter in Mr. Macqueen's communication. The institution was in its nature somewhat monastic, one sex being precluded from associating with the other, a circumstance, the learned counsel thought, not calculated to exclude broils and ebullitions of ill temper from its precincts. Mr. Ferguson had warranted Miss Polhill thirty, a period of life at which, under other circumstances, she might have been allowed to come in and go out when she pleased. But rules were necessary for the institution, and it was proper for the government of the junior wards that those rules should extend to the wards of a more mature age. Here the plaintiff had a desire to go out. She infringes certain rules and must abide by the consequences. The learned counsel then submitted that the communication being privileged, the plaintiff must be nonsuited, but if the court were of opinion that the communication was not privileged, he was perfectly ready to prove that the statement was a true one.

Chief Justice.—You wish to have the court's opinion whether this is, or is not a privileged communication. We will give our opinion, there the case must end. It is laid down in Child v. Affleck that the question of a privileged communication is for the jury. You must make your election,—either go for a non-suit, or go on with your case.

Mr. Prinsep.—In Child v. Affleck malice was charged, and therefore it was a case for a jury. But here malice is not charged or presented.

The court decided that Mr. Prinsep must make his election either to leave the case as it then stood, or go into his defence.

Mr. Prinsep elected to go on. He would shew a justification; he would prove Mr. Macqueen's communication true; he would shew that an investigation into Miss Polhill's conduct did take place; that two officers made their report, and that the General Management, one and all, declared her charges utterly unfounded. This he would prove by the evidence of a gentleman who was himself one of the management. As to the malice, it was quite evident there was none on the face of the letter, nor could any arise in consequence of the investigation, from the circumstance that Mr. Macqueen took no part in it that gentleman having broken his arm a little previous to the time the enquiry took place. The charges themselves arose out of the monastic nature of the institution, which, as he said before, was little adapted to improve a temper naturally querulous and dissatisfied. But the justification was not that the plaintiff had been guilty of falsehood and misrepresentation. It was that was so established by the general management.

Chief Justice.—But your justification only goes to a part of the alleged libel.

Mr. Prinsep.—Certainly, my lord, but the rest is not actionable. It goes no further than would the assertion of a schoolmaster that one of the pupils had been ruined by too much indulgence.

Capt. R. J. H. Birch, examined by Mr. Leith.—I have been a member of the Orphan school Management, since September 1832 in February last Major Young was deputy governor; he is now with the Commander-in-Chief. Several officers who were then members of the management are now absent from Calcutta. On the 30th January 1836 I heard of complaints having been made by Miss Fitzpatrick. The complaints were separately made. I reduced Miss Polhill's complaints into writing. The complaints led to an investigation, and Mrs. Wyatt was desired to explain them fully. She addressed a letter which I submitted to Major Young, who—

Advocate General.—How do you know that?

Witness.—It is within my personal knowledge. I saw a letter in Major Young's handwriting.

Advocate General.—That is not within your personal knowledge, and you cannot speak to it.

Examination continued.—These papers, (papers produced) were submitted to the management. Nothing was done by the management as a body: they had not the power. Letter number 13 was written in my office, and circulated to the general management, and signed by them all. I proposed that we should testify our opinion to Mrs. Wyatt, and this was method suggested by me. The charges brought by Miss Polhill were that Mrs. Wyatt had subjected the wards to privations of all sorts: she alluded particularly to the junior division; she stated that not only had Mrs. Wyatt stinted the children of food, but that she had taken from that insufficiency for her own table, leaving the children hungry. She does not say this on her own authority, but she referred us to Miss Paterson. She stated that the teachers were allowed fowls and ducks twice a week, but that Mrs. Wyatt had discontinued this indulgence, and afterwards that she had allowed little fowls which were not satisfactory; that sable fish were denied also; a deficiency of dull and rice in the junior division; sometimes when she was out and sometimes when she was present; that the durwan had examined her bundle by Mr. Wyatt's order, and that she had been refused leave to go out on a Friday which she attributed to her (Miss Polhill) having brought the deficiencies to Mrs. Wyatt's notice; that to her knowledge Mrs. Wyatt had not opened bundles previously;—that she had been desired to go into the cook-room in the heat of the day, because the servants took away the meat. She said the servants were honest, but Mrs. Wyatt took away the meat. She mentioned a number of other grievances, amongst the rest, that a certain duty had been imposed upon her. I did not think it proper to enquire what this 'certain duty' was. The witness stated several other grievances enumerated by the plaintiff. Captain Hawkins and I enquired into these charges. My opinion is, they were quite unfounded, and from the manner as well as matter I think it was malice that prompted them. On the close of the investigation, letter number 13 was written to Mrs. Wyatt. After these enquiries had been made I expressed my opinion in writing. This is it (No. 4) Major Young, Colonel Dunlop, Major Honeywood, Major Hutchinson, Major Irvine, Captain Stoddard, Captain Sewell, Colonel Beaton also expressed their opinion in writing. At this time Mr. Macqueen was superintendent. His duties are mentioned in Rule 89 of the institution, Rules 290 and 291 relate to application for leave of absence on part of wards. Rule 206 relates to the appointment of wards in the internal management of the institution. Miss Polhill, under this rule was the superintendent of diet in the junior division: she was removed from that situation on the 8th of February, the day following that on which the investigation took place. The power of removal rests with the deputy governor. No. 15 is the hand writing of Miss Polhill, Mr. Macqueen, and Major Young. The date is 1st of March. Plaintiff was then in the house. Mr. Macqueen was thrown from his horse and broke his arm the beginning of last year. He was not present during the investigation. It was true that Mrs. Wyatt had taken away the meat, but I believe the charge that she had left the children hungry was false. I wish to qualify that answer. The charge was that Mrs. Wyatt had taken away meat from the junior division. This I believe was not true, but Mrs. Wyatt had taken away meat from the senior's table.

Mr. Prinsep now proposed to put in the Minutes of the management. The advocate General objected. He had a writ to the opinion of the management from the witness box. Mr. Prinsep was heard and the Advocate General replied. The court overruled the objection. The minutes were evidence on the general issue, and they were then put in and read:—

IN CIRCULATION.

By order of the Deputy Governor the Secretary circulates the accompanying papers for the information of the general management.

A letter from Mrs. Wyatt soliciting an investigation into the truth of certain charges preferred against her by Miss L. Fitzpatrick.

The result of this investigation consisting of depositions made before Captain Birch and Hawkins by Misses Polhill, L. Fitzpatrick, Patterson, Levide, and two of the native servants of the Institution.

A letter with its enclosures from Mrs. Wyatt to Capt. Birch, noticing the accusations made by Misses Polhill and L. Fitzpatrick.

The above documents having been laid before the Deputy Governor, the Secretary, under instructions from Captain Young, deprived Miss Polhill of her situation as one of the superintendents of dieting and of leave to visit, the latter punishment being also extended to Miss L. Fitzpatrick.

The Secretary takes this opportunity of laying before the general management the daily dieting bills of the Female Department for May and June 1835, and Jan. 1836, because this will furnish a distinct and undeniable proof of the groundless-ness of the charge of deficiency of food, in as much as a comparison of the bills for the former period, the period of alleged deficiency, when the letters of 'Philanthropos' appeared in the Englishman, will show that the dieting expenses were greater than at the latter period, the period of admitted sufficiency. The inference is obvious.

JOHN McQUEEN.

Orphan Society's Office, 17th February, 1836.

If so much falsehood, malice, and insubordination were to go unpunished, there would be an end of all discipline. The restraint on visiting will of course be with drawn after a reasonable time, but it would be very desirable if the Misses Fitzpatrick and Miss Polhill could be well disposed of as outwards. To girls of a certain age the freedom of a private family must be more agreeable than the routine of Kidderpore house, and these three young ladies have been so much accustomed to living with their friends (part of every week and sometimes for weeks and months at a time,) and been so much encouraged and abetted in their undutiful, behaviour, that there is little hope of amendment. There is some reason, however to expect that Dr. Pearson will withdraw the Misses Fitzpatrick from the oppression of the G. M. It is even said that he intends to petition the Court of Directors to be exempted from subscription to the Orphan Fund! The strength of Miss Fitzpatrick's tea and the smartness of her shoes being of more importance in his eyes than the welfare of a hundred Orphans in England.

G. Y.

As one of the managers who investigated the charges advanced by Misses Polhill and Fitzpatrick against Mrs. Wyatt, I feel called upon fully to disclose my deliberate opinion.

Miss Louisa Fitzpatrick's complaints I think altogether frivolous and malicious; Miss Polhill's are also generally exaggerated, but her principle grievances being Mrs. Wyatt's harsh manner towards her, originating as she supposes from her having pointed out that she considered the diet of the junior division, of which she is the superintendent, insufficient; and Mrs. Wyatt having omitted to touch upon this point in her letter, I am uncertain whether the accusation itself or the cause to which it has been attributed be correct; being too of opinion that the diet of our younger wards is susceptible of improvement. I am very sorry to hear Miss Polhill has been deprived of her situation, as the punishment is not only, considering that I agree with her as to the insufficiency of diet, too severe towards her, but the example is likely to deter others from coming forward should there even be more substantial grounds of complaint.

In an institution like ours limiting food to the exact quantity likely to be consumed, is I think wholly unnecessary and injudicious.

On examining the remnants of junior division dinner table on the day of our investigation. I found a large dishful of dhal and but two or three small bones of chickens; shewing that if a few of the children had been more than ordinarily hungry they would have had dhal only to satisfy their appetite. The inference the secretary wishes to draw from a comparison of the diet rolls at various periods is far from conclusive. He ought first to prove that the system of examination and check were at both periods equally strict, and that all that was charged for was laid on the table. I have no doubt that until Mrs. Wyatt established the excellent system of making the superintendents of diet see the meat and vegetables weighed, and the fowls reckoned at the hour of commencing cookings, that the native servants made their own harvest.

I trust it will not be supposed, because I object to the punishment inflicted upon Miss Polhill that I blame Mrs. Wyatt. Very far from it, I cannot sufficiently admire her generally excellent management, the regularity and neatness she has established, the tone she has given to the whole institution, together with the affection and respect, the general civility of the wards appear to feel for her. I quite agree with the deputy governor that it would be desirable to dispose of Misses Polhill and Fitzpatrick as outwards.

F. S. HAWKINS.

I differ very much from Capt. Hawkins, not only as to the accusations of Miss L. Fitzpatrick unfounded but those of Miss Polhill are in my opinion not only generally exaggerated, but altogether false and malicious. It was a very painful thing to my feelings, and to those also I believe of Capt. Hawkins to have to request Mrs. Wyatt to answer such accusation; but we did make the request, and Mrs. Wyatt has, in my judgment, most successfully answered all the imputations. It was stated by Miss Polhill as her greatest grievance that Mrs. Wyatt's manner to her was habitually harsh, and she could only attribute it to her having repeatedly informed Mrs. Wyatt of the deficiency of food at the tables of the junior division. Capt. Hawkins has remarked that Mrs. Wyatt has not noticed this particular accusation in her letter. She has not especially noticed it in that letter, but how was such an accusation to be met? Would Mrs. Wyatt's simple denial have sufficed? She had no other means of contradicting it, but perhaps by referring to the testimony of the wards under her charge, a course which is so very obviously objectionable that it was not likely to suggest itself to a well regulated mind such as Mrs. Wyatt's. But there is ample answer to this malicious accusation to be gathered out of Mrs. Wyatt's letter and the document which accompanied it. The letter sets out with alluding to the malicious and vexatious nature of the charges and terminates with a distinct assertion that they are 'malicious, frivolous and vexatious.' It is stated in the second page of the letter that 'Miss Polhill never complained to Mrs. Wyatt of any want at the junior division table till after the document from the young ladies had been sent to Mrs. Wyatt', so that we find Mrs. Wyatt's habitual harshness of manner dwindles down to what has occurred in the brief period which has elapsed since the receipt of the address from the senior division, a period quite too brief to warrant the attribution of habit as a characteristic of what has originated within it. It is true, as Mrs. Wyatt mentions, that in June last Miss Polhill assured me there was no deficiency nor complaint in the junior division, and we have now Mrs. Wyatt's assertion that the charge of insufficiency of food has been refuted by the children themselves, by the teachers who have presided in weekly turns, and by Miss Levide, who has almost always acted for Miss Polhill, the latter having been absent for more than a third of the previous year. Besides in the letter Mrs. Wyatt wrote to Mr. McQueen on the 20th Oct. 1855 (and which was suppressed on Miss Polhill's expressing her regret for what she had done) Mrs. W. says that she had hoped a mild and kind manner would always soften any unmitigated feelings arising in the aggressor. In the present instance, this was not the case, the more forbearing she was the more angry was Miss Polhill. The perusal of the entire letter will shew how Mrs. W. treated Miss Polhill in one instance, (the fact that Mrs. W.'s conduct was in reality, as the letter describes it, being fully borne out by Miss Polhill having apologized, which she would hardly have done had she been right, and Mrs. W. to blame,) and if on a most provoking occasion she was so gently used, what is thereto make us believe she was otherwise treated, especially in the subject of the diet of other girls a matter not personally affecting Miss Polhill? We have nothing to go upon in so believing, but the assertion of Miss Polhill and Miss L. Fitzpatrick; and on the other side we have the known character of Mrs. Wyatt before she came to the institution, testified to by many who had long been personally acquainted with her:—We have the fact that she is generally, indeed with very few exceptions, universally, beloved by the wards, by the little ones especially whose food she is said to have stinted!; We have the spontaneous testimony of the senior division in their late address to her; and, speaking individually, I have the personal assurance of several of the eldest of the wards that Mrs. W. is incapable of harshness of manner, besides my own knowledge of her since she has been at Kiddlepore.—Am I to set aside all this because Mrs. Wyatt has not taken the trouble to answer Miss Polhill's assertion that she is habitually harsh? I am perfectly satisfied, and I trust the rest of any colleagues will be convinced that this particular accusation, like the other is groundless and malicious.—But we shall in vain expect that Mrs. W. or any other lady would remain at Kiddlepore, if notwithstanding that the accuser is proved to be false on every other instance (a fact which of itself is enough to upset her assertions) we allow ourselves to attach any credit to one remaining accusation, especially when that accusation is such that while it scarcely admits of any reply but a mere negative, it is yet fairly met and overthrown by the well known character of Mrs. Wyatt as daily exemplified at Kiddlepore. I know not that any lady has even been placed on so painful a situation as Mrs. Wyatt has at the head of our institution. I join with all my heart in Captain Hawkins's testimony to Mrs. Wyatt with which his minute closes, and I doubt not that all our colleagues will agree on this. But let it be recollected that it is our part to step⁰ between Mrs. Wyatt and her malicious calumniators, and our bounden duty to shield her from the unmanly attacks with which the newspapers have teemed, and at the same time to protect her from the insubordination and falsehood of any of the wards. So far from concurring with Captain Hawkins that Miss Polhill's punishment is to be regretted, I am of opinion that our thanks are due to the deputy governor, for the firmness and promptitude with which he has acted in depriving her of her office and in prohibiting the indulgence of visiting to her and Miss L. Fitzpatrick (of the subject of the quantity of food given to the junior division, on which Captain H. has remarked, and which I had nearly forgotten to notice. I agreed with Captain H. on the day of our inspection that the remnants of chicken we saw clearly showed that the appetites of the little girls had nearly overruled the quantity of that particular dish. But I do not judge of the diet from the disappearance of one day, and knowing how variable the tastes of children (and not of children only), are, I can easily conceive that a run upon any particular dish would speedily exhaust the supply, while on the other day that very species of food will leave the tables scarcely touched at all. There is but one remedy for such an occurrence to give but one unvarying dinner, and that I suppose no one would advocate. There is another possible measure, and that is to provide enough of every dish for the full appetites of all without touching the other; a measure too wasteful to be supported for a moment. The middle course is the proper one, and that I know is the one which Mrs. W. endeavours to pursue in her management of the dining.)

I beg pardon for having trespassed so long on the attention of my colleagues, I will conclude with one proposition which I have to make, and for which I solicit the concurrence of my colleagues. It is that we address a letter to Mrs. Wyatt signed by us all expressive of our satisfaction with her admirable management of the institution; of our assurance that we look upon the numerous insinuations and statements in the Delhi Gazette and Englishman newspapers to be calumnious falsehoods, and that she may rely on our support and countenance. If the subjoined draft be approved, let that be sent, if not perhaps some of my colleagues will do me the favour to amend it or substitute another. Our letter should not be in the Secretary's hand-writing at any rate, the compliment would be that the deputy governor should write it if he has no objection.

Dear Madam.—We gladly avail ourselves of the opportunity furnished by recent occurrences at Kidderpore to assure you that we are satisfied of the groundlessness of the accusations lately preferred against you by two of the elder wards. The minute enquiries we have thought it just to institute have only tended to confirm our previous impression from attentive personal observation, that your presence at Kidderpore is an invaluable advantage to the wards, and that under your management the institution is distinguished by a tone and character greatly superior to what it previously possessed.

It has been with considerable surprise and regret that we have observed the gross accusations which have appeared in some of the newspapers regarding you, and although we trust you will not think that we consider any notice or refutation of them to be necessary, yet we presume, it may not be unacceptable to receive our testimony that they are unwarranted and wholly unjust towards you.

We perused the late address of the senior division to you with very mixed feelings, for while we perceived that the proffer of such a document was inconvenient as precedent and undesirable in many points of view, yet we could not but congratulate you on the existence of the feelings which dictated it, and which were therein so warmly expressed.

We entreat you not to allow yourself to be moved by the unmanly attacks made upon you, and to repose with confidence on our sympathy and support in the continued discharge of those functions which it was our privilege to entrust to your hands, and which we are sure could not be confided to an abler or more conscientious person.

We remain with much esteem and regard your sincere friends.

R. J. H. B.

The charges appear to me frivolous, and undue importance attached to trifles from malicious motives. I think the institution owes much to Mrs. Wyatt's attention, and I concur with Captain Birch that the letter he proposes should be addressed to Mrs. Wyatt.

G. D. S.

The charges are indeed truly frivolous, I highly approve of the measures adopted by the deputy governor, which will, I feel convinced, be very beneficial at this time and enable Mrs. Wyatt who well deserves support, to uphold discipline. I concur in the letter proposed by Captain Birch, and shall have great pleasure in signing it.

G. H.

I approve of the letter for Mrs. Wyatt. Until we can get these two young ladies sent out of the establishment there will be no peace at Kidderpore. I happen to know from other sources of information that Misses F. and P. were actuated by vindictive feelings towards Mrs. Wyatt. Dr. Pearson ought to have these minutes read to him.

W. D.

There's treason in the Court of Denmark. The idea of hungry girls turning up thier noses at dhal bhat! why I frequently dine of it myself, and very good wholesome food it is. In medio-tutissimus,—my memory fails me, and the last word has flown, expresses my opinion, and accords with Captain Birch's middle course, his first and second courses being altogether objectionable. If the taste of the young ladies is so strange that they fix always on the same dish, I would propose to give one day all beef the next all pudding, and so on taking care that there be no choice. This will be an effectual method of promoting diversity of opinion as to the merits of the cuisine, when the introduction of varieties will be estimated and acknowledged. I shall sign the letter with pleasure, as it conveys sentiments which I participate I believe, with all my brethren.

T. SEWELL.

After an attentive perusal of all these papers, I concur on all that Capt. Birch has said, and in his proposed letter in which I have suggested some slight alterations.

W. S. BEATSON.

Here follows various correspondence read in court.

8th February, 1836.

Mrs. Polhill.

Privations of all sorts: privation of food, and of comforts of every kind. Children of junior division retrenched since Capt. B.'s visit in 1835, on some days not sufficiently fed;—beef insufficient 8 seers. Mrs. W. has taken occasionally from the cook room meat intended for the children, for her own table, when even, there is not enough: the khansama has come and taken from table a plateful of beef saying it was for the men, and the children were left hungry, formerly 16 and 20 seers. (Report that once the Muttons came down to dine suddenly with Mrs. W. and Mrs. W. took a leg of mutton from the children's table for their dinner: this not on the personal knowledge of Miss Polhill, but Miss Paterson can speak to it.)

The teachers used to have a roast duck once a week or roast fowls twice a week: this is now denied. Mrs. W. has allowed little fowl, but that was not thought worth while by the teachers. Sable fish is denied.

Deficiency of dhall and rice in the junior division when Miss P. is out; and sometimes when she is present.

Miss P. expected to go out on a Friday some months ago, and Mrs. W. allowed the durwan to examine the bundle and look at each article in it. This was by Mrs. W.'s order.

Told Mrs. W. on entering the room, that she had an invitation to go out, and that at the request of her friend she was sending her clothes. Mrs. P. attributes the opening of the bundle to displeasure on Mrs. W.'s part at Miss P.'s having brought to her notice the deficiencies in the diet. Mrs. P. told Mrs. W. that she was using her very ill, and she did not know why she should be treated with so much want of confidence. Mrs. W. told her she did not think there was any harm in it. Mrs. W. never to Miss P.'s knowledge opened any one's bundle before, but afterwards she did examine some of the young ladies' bundles. Mrs. W. threatened to complain of Miss P. to the general management telling her she had been rude which Mrs. P. disclaimed, saying she did not intend to be so, but that her agitation at seeing her bundle so examined by the durwan might have raised her voice louder than she intended. Miss P. was refused leave at first, but on Miss Sturrocks advice she apologized to Mrs. W. saying she had no intention to be rude, and hoped it might be passed over, and she was allowed to go out.

Miss P. has been desired to go into the cook room in the heat of the sun, instead of in the cool, of the morning as formerly, the reason assigned is that the servants may take the meat;—still, though Miss P. believes the servants to be honest, she distinctly affirms that Mrs. W. has to her certain knowledge taken meat, beef, and mutton from the cook room intended for the junior division.

A certain duty imposed upon Miss P. which no one was ever required to perform before: Miss Brietzkeke had also a similar task, and left the school in consequence.

Shoes diminished in quantity: one pair in 6 weeks or 2 months, formerly once a month.

Needles and thread, flannel, &c. Mrs. W. now desires shall be purchased out of the young ladies pocket money: formerly the school used to provide these things.

Cloth cut for clothes by Mr. W. instead of by the young ladies: as formerly and cut too small, as to be obliged to be patched, and unpicked and resewed. These last at the expense of some of the young ladies pocket money, some doing it with their own hands. This is the first occasion the annual supply.

Harsh manner of speaking to Miss P. the greatest grievance: and Miss P. attributes it to her representations to Mrs. W. regarding the food.

Deprived of going out several times apparently from the same motive.

Statement herein detailed made in the presence of

F. S. HAWKINS.

Dear Madam.—We gladly avail ourselves of the opportunity furnished by recent occurrences at Kidderpore, to assure you that we are satisfied of the groundlessness of the accusation lately preferred against you by two of the elder wards. The minute enquiries we have thought it just to institute have only tended to confirm our previous impression from attentive personal observation, that your presence at Kidderpore is an invaluable advantage to the wards, and that under your management the institution is distinguished by a tone and character greatly superior to what it possessed when you joined it.

It has been with considerable surprise and regret that we have observed the gross accusations which have of late appeared in some of the newspapers regarding you, and although we trust you will not think that we consider any notice or refutation of them to be necessary, yet we presume it may not be unacceptable to you to receive our testimony that they are unwarranted and wholly unjust towards you.

We perused the late address of the senior advisor to you with very mixed feelings for while we perceived that the proffer of such a document was inconvenient as a precedent and undesirable in many points of view, yet we could not but congratulate you on the existence of the feelings which dictated it, and which were therein so warmly expressed.

We entreat you not to allow yourself to be moved by the unmanly attacks made upon you, and to repose with confidence on our sympathy and support in the continued discharge of those functions which it was our privilege to entrust to your hands, and which we are sure could not be confided to an abler or more conscientious person.

We remain, &c.

To Mrs. WYATT, Kidderpore.

Captain Birch cross examined by the Advocate General. The enquiry into Miss Polhill's charges was made by Capt. Hawkins and myself, the others had not time; the management took it for granted that all we said was accurate. I have officiated for some time as deputy judge advocate general, but I never knew, while acting in that capacity, a court of enquiry sign a report satisfied with the evidence only heard by two of their body. I heard complaints and determined to make enquiries. I went to Kidderpore on the 30th of January; asked particulars from Miss Polhill, letting her know that I wished to know her grievances. I in part invited her answers. We found that Mrs. Wyatt had taken meat from the table, but that the children were not hungry in consequence. My note says 'the children' but in my evidence I have said the 'junior division.' I believed the children were not hungry in consequence. Such was my interpretation. I did not say 'interpolation.' I beg you will not accuse me of 'interpolation.' The managers allowed Mrs. Wyatt to board, but not to take the meat into a private room. This was not generally known. It was understood that Mrs. Wyatt was to board at the table. I do not believe that the taking of the meat from the table would have received the sanction of the army. I do not know that it would not. Mr. Macqueen is Mrs. Wyatt's son-in-law. The report was that Mrs. Wyatt took a leg of mutton from the children's table and put it on her own. I investigated that charge, and believe it false. Dr. Corbyn applied to the management for all documents connected with Miss Polhill, but he was refused, because as a subscriber he had a right to go and examine every thing on record connected with the matter. The demand was unreasonable..

No other witnesses were called.

Mr. Prinsep then intimated that he had closed his case.

Chief Justice.—We will hear you, Mr. Advocate upon the case; but we can save you some trouble. It is quite clear that a verdict must be for the plaintiff generally, because Mr. Macqueen has stated as fact, what he must have known was untrue. The evidence which Mr. Prinsep has put in, that of Capt. Birch and Major Young, only goes to establish fact of the want of food. Captain Hawkins is of a different opinion, and the other managers know nothing of the matter; the defendant has, therefore, misstated a fact in his own knowledge, and there is therefore evidence of a malicious motive. On the special plea of justification, there must be a plea for the plaintiff, because he has stated that the investigation took place by all the managers, when it was only investigated by two, we will therefore hear you on the question of damages.

The Advocate General for damages. Mr. Prinsep had said he had left his case in a threadbare condition. He acknowledged it was not so well dressed as his friend's, but it had less need of external ornament. He congratulated his friend on the very high opinion he had formed of the army, in comparing the orphan children of officers to servants seeking for places. But he would have little difficulty in convincing the court that the situation of these orphans and servant girls were not analogous; a man in the latter case might have a robber or a murderer introduced into his family, the safety of society therefore rendered a character necessary. Here however Mr. Macqueen was not bound to give an answer, but he was bound to give a true answer if he gave any at all. What sort of a case had his friend made out against this young lady? That the general management had no means of forming an opinion regarding her charges, and that they are disproved by the two who had. Capt. Hawkins, as to the point of food, admits that there was not food enough, or to use the elegant expression of another of the management, the young ladies' appetite outturn the dish? Now Mr. Macqueen knew that these charges had not been investigated by the general management, he had access to the minutes, and knew that of the two who did investigate them, one differed.

Mr. Prinsep.—They all concur.

Advocate General.—Admirable concurrence! Just the kind of one which is necessary to a case of my learned friend's!

The learned Advocate then noticed the quarrel with Mrs. Wyatt, and the relationship between Mr. Macqueen and that lady. He urged that Mr. Macqueen had volunteered an attack on the plaintiff, because she had quarrelled with Mrs. Wyatt; that the plaintiff had passed three-fourths of her life in the institution, and yet no previous charge had been preferred against her. The original cause of the quarrel was a charge preferred by Miss Polhill that Mrs. Wyatt had taken meat from the children's table, and this was admitted by Captain Birch to be true, but, he added, she did not leave the children hungry. How, in God's name, did he know that! But he would refer to the rules and see what construction the general management had put on them to allow Mrs. Wyatt to dine elsewhere than at the table with wards.

23d. Besides the observance of the fore-mentioned General Rules, it is the indispensable duty of the Head Mistress (as forming a part or object of her particular engagements) not only to be with the children at dining hours, but herself regularly to dine at the same table with the elder girls, and to be in conversation with all of them during the intervals of the day and evening, until they retire to rest; for the purpose of forming their ideas, of improving their minds, of rendering them agreeable in their manners, and easy and sociable in their habits and dispositions; which points cannot otherwise well be accomplished, and are materially essential to their proper education as the daughters of gentlemen; and it is considered the indispensable duty of the head mistress, as general superintendent of every department of the school, to see that this rule is strictly compelled with, as she will be held responsible for any departure from it.

He was sure neither their lordships nor himself would allow their daughters to go to a school where the mistress did not set and dine at the head of the table. This was no frivolous charge. It was the duty of Miss Polhill to see that there was a sufficient quantity of food,—a quantity which Captain Hawkins says there was not,—and because she has done this she is held forth to the world as a person whose character for veracity, is, in the elegant phraseology of Mr. Macqueen entirely ruined. But his friend had said that Mr. Macqueen was privileged to give a reply of this description. If so it must surely be given to one who is entitled to interrogate. Mr. Ferguson was not entitled to interrogate; it was a mere volunteering on his part. The applications for leave, are through the matron and superintendent, to be submitted to the deputy governor for his inspection and approval.

The learned counsel then read the following rule:—

294. All applications on the part of the relations or friends of the children to visit the schools, are transmitted by the head master or head mistress, through the secretary, to the deputy governor for his decision, or that of the General Management, if he conceives it necessary; and in all cases they reserve to themselves, without question, the right of granting or refusing the permission required, as to them may seem proper.

Now what becomes of the case made by my friend? In what possible way can Mr. Macqueen now justify his letter? He was not the Deputy Governor, but that official had himself no right to make statements affecting the character of the plaintiff; he might have refused and refused only. But what business has this secretary to send this letter stating, 'I will not allow her leave because she has lost her character for veracity? Why should he volunteer this remark? My friend has called him a minister of the Gospel—his character as a clergyman, is no warrant for his character as a libeller, for libeller the court has pronounced him. The learned counsel then, after a few forcible concluding observations, left the case with the court.—Englishman, January 24.

Having laid before our readers the case of Polhill versus Macqueen, and the communications relating thereto, which have reached us from our correspondents, we will not further delay those comments, which are suggested by the great importance of the interests affected by the transactions developed in the course of the trial.

This libel case, is in many respects most important; and in many respects calculated to give rise to feelings of regret. We lament to see the clerical character, marked by the verdict of a Court of Justice, by so very serious an act of deliberate misconduct, as the case displays. We do not wish to dwell on the errors or failings of any man, but being fully enabled to judge of the merits of the case, from the evidence before us, we feel called upon to notice the subject in this place : from the proceedings, however, and not from even the bare verdict of a Court of Justice, we must form our judgment ; and the evidence is conclusive in the present instance, bringing home a case of positive dereliction of duty, to use the very highest word that truth will furnish us with. But although we are fully impressed with the impropriety of conduct which has drawn down a verdict of damages in this case—impropriety which is greatly aggravated by the defence set up—which was, what is termed in law, a justification, that is to say, a persevering in Court, in maintaining the slander uttered out of Court, which the defendant failed to make out ; nay, in the attempt to maintain which he himself furnished evidence for his own conviction, of having stated the thing that was not,—strange over-sight and forgetfulness in his counsel,—notwithstanding these strong claims to our sympathy for the plaintiff, we yet might, in our public capacity, have deemed it more consistent with the duties of our station, to refrain from comment, but that the interests of the Orphan institution, and the well-being of the orphans, are intimately connected with the facts developed in the course of this trial. We do implore the army to awaken to the importance of this matter ; we do implore them to assert the right of the Orphan progeny of their deceased comrades, and to redeem them, from that worse than bondage, the contempt with which, in the eyes of vulgar importance, the child of charity is regarded. They are not, however, the daughters of charity ; they have, as we have stated on a former occasion, as just and good a right to maintenance and education, adapted to gentlemen's daughters, as the beneficial object of an insurance for life has a right to the sum insured, under the premium paid by the assured. The institution appears to be badly managed ; the children are humiliated, and taught to entertain a mean opinion of their condition by the very persons who are fed, clothed, and maintained out of the funds, contributed at great sacrifice during their lives, by the parents of the orphans. The Governors of this institution must plead guilty to great neglect ; and we do most earnestly call upon them to arouse from their lethargy ; they little reflect upon the mischief which their apathy is creating ; they have on instance now before their eyes ; let it, we implore of them, be a warning to stimulate them to exertion. Let them reflect that they are doing a wrong, nay that they are, to speak plainly, permitting a fraud upon their deceased comrades, if, by their supineness, they allow the offspring of their deceased comrades to be treated, by those very persons who are paid and remunerated by their comrades' money, as object of pity. We repeat, what we have before said, that every orphan of the school has as much a right to the care and attention, service and respect, of every salaried person on the establishment, not merely as an officer has to his pay, but as a master has to the services of his dependent. The retainers of that establishment should be taught to know, and manifest in their conduct towards the orphans, that they, such retainers, are the dependance, if there be any dependance in the matter, and not the orphan. The orphan has a vested, a legal right, to proper maintenance and education, suited to a gentleman's daughter ; and we are most astonished that Mr. Macqueen's counsel should have attempted to raise an analogy between a character given by a mistress of a maid servant, and a gratuitous, uncalled for, and unwarranted " character " given by a party who had no authority to speak to character, nor could do so with propriety at all. Looking to the prejudices of little minds, and the influence which even a name will have upon the vulgar, we have little doubt that the mere circumstance of the Orphan School, being denominated an " Asylum," has had its influence, in leading upstart impudence, to look down upon the offspring of the Soldier. An Asylum, it was no doubt intended to be ; an Asylum from the whips and scorn of the world ; but it is rather too bad, if it be no Asylum from the scorn and contempt of those who are fed and clothed out of its funds. We must speak plain in this matter. The Directors have in this, as in many other instances, forgotten their duty. The Institution—let the word Asylum be discarded, for it has influence with little minds—the Institution, is not properly seen to. When the Secretary of this Institution, in defence of an action for libel, can instruct his counsel to assimilate the Orphan, from whose property he is paid, with a maid servant, it is high time for those who feel for the interests and character of the orphan, to interfere. The counsel of Mr. Macqueen, who is paid out of the funds of the orphan, has the temerity to compare a character given by his client of the orphan, to a character given by a mistress of a paid chamber-maid. Had Miss Polhill given a bad character of Mr. Macqueen, there would have been a strict resemblance in the cases, and, as Mr. Macqueen's counsel clearly showed by his precedent, in that case Mr. Macqueen could not have sustained his action ; it would have been a privileged communication respecting a hired servant ; never was a case more injudicious cited. Mr. Macqueen was, in fact, the hired servant of Miss Polhill, not she of him, as his counsel endeavoured to persuade the court.

The Courier of last evening has some desultory remarks upon the case of Polhill v. Macqueen, and upon the above observation, to which we have something to say ; but as our contemporary postpones his further observations upon the subject, till to-day, we shall reserve what we have to say, till we are furnished with the additional comments of our contemporary.

We assure our correspondent OFFICIAL, that in the above remarks upon the late trial, it was far from our intention to " throw the first stone " at any individual whatsoever ; and we deeply regret that our duty compelled us to take notice of what appeared to be the first stone cast, and cast unjustly. We are among the lost to confound moral with legal guilt ; but we beg to put it to our correspondent, whether in the trial to which he alludes, it would not have been more charitable—whether it would not have been more just, decent and becoming ; and lastly, whether it would not have been more prudent, had the defendant, instead of attempting to justify an action which was calculated to render infamous the character of a friendless orphan, by calling witnesses to substantiate the charge, to have let judgment go by default, admitted the publication, at least at the eleventh hour, when the court intimated that it was libellous, and put the whole defence, upon the fact, that the letter was written in a moment of indiscretion, under a belief that it would not be published beyond the party to whom it was first communicated ? We fear that OFFICIAL will only make matters worse ; and that in every point of view. If a secretary benomally justified, in warranty of a charge of " ruined veracity," made against a female, and an orphan, to vouch a whole board of 11 or 12 managers as having had proved to their full satisfaction, so serious a charge, whilst only two of them have investigated it, the statements of the secretary involving infamy of character are mere matters of form ! Our correspondent asks us if the plaintiff in her charges against her superiors stated the whole truth, and nothing but the truth. We do not presume, to judge that question ; but not having the means to decide it before us, we will not assert to the position that it is either fit or becoming that any secretary, whether of state or of a public institution, can have a right to make gratuitous and disgraceful allegations against any female whatever. He it is who throw the first stone.

The Englishman of Jan. 24, exhibits in its editorial columns, some powerful and decorous observations, on the minute of one of the Managers of the Orphan School, which was read in the course of the late trial. He talks of the expose which has taken place, gross neglect and so forth. We have the misfortune to concur with this contemporary, as to the expose &c. &c.; but we think he has been unfortunate in his selection of the minute; and that the Gallant Captain to whom, in his worshipful zeal for the orphans, he has thought proper to allude, is not exactly the Manager the most deserving of the editorial notice of our conscientious and independent contemporary. Indeed, the allusion to the minute, is made the vehicle of something so like personality, that the zeal of the editor of the Englishman, in the cause of the orphans, and of the army, appears to have led him beyond the bounds of discretion, and he has brought himself within the compass of what in the schools is called, the argumentum baculinum. It is, moreover, unfair to start with a general censure of a body of Managers, and then to select, by way of illustration, the minute of one of the least offending of those Managers. Nothing but a fufibond zeal, or rather a faribond affectation of zeal, in the cause of the army, could have betrayed our judicious, upright and independent contemporary, into such an exercise of his editorial weapons, unless indeed personal motives should actuate him; and that it is impossible for a moment to suppose, as every one who has watched the career of our respected contemporary, will readily admit.

Since writing the above, we have heard that in consequence of the gross, offensive and insulting language made use of by Mr. Stocqueler, the Editor of the Englishman, in regard to Captain Sewell, that gentleman, accompanied by his friend Captain Hawkins, waited upon Mr. S. and demanded its immediate retraction or the usual alternative. Mr. Stocqueler declined to retract; and the parties therefore crossed the water. After receiving his adversary's fire, Mr. Stocqueler discharged his pistol in the air, which necessarily led to a termination of the affair, but why he made this quasi apology "after" instead of "before" the meeting, is not very intelligible.

Our contemporary has had the good fortune to escape on this occasion the penalty of his unwarranted personal abuse; and we trust we shall, in future, have less of it in the discussion of matters of a public character. Unwarranted, we repeat, for all who know Captain Sewell, are well aware that a kinder heart, or a more frank and honest spirit, are not to be found in Calcutta; and that the tone of his minute, congenial as it was to the prevailing cheerfulness of his humour, did not really contain one single word that the most malicious perverseness could construe into neglect of the duties he had to perform as a director of the orphan institution, unless that perverseness had been instigated by some petty personal feeling. We say this the more readily, as on the general question of the Orphan School management, we differ from Captain Sewell and his colleagues; but heaven forbid, that in the discussion of the subject, we should forget what is due to them as gentleman and officers, voluntarily and gratuitously undertaking an invidious and thankless office.—India Gazette, Jan. 25.

SEBUN ANDERSON VERSUS SARROOPCHUNDER DUTT.

The Advocate-General, with whom was Mr. Clarke, stated, that this was an action on a promissory note made by the defendant, in which he promised to pay the plaintiff Rs. 500 rs. without interest, and signed himself an inhabitant of Calcutta. The note was proved, and the hand writing of the defendant.

Mr. Prinsep, with whom was Mr. Leith, then called witnesses to prove that the defendant was only a Gomastha in a cootee or house of business in Calcutta, to which place he came daily to perform his duties, but that he resided over the water, in the 24 pergunnahs, and slept every night out of the jurisdiction; upon this evidence it was contended, that the defendant was not liable to the jurisdiction of the court.

The court held, that as it appeared by the evidence, that the defendant had represented himself in February last (the date of the note) subject to the jurisdiction, and as, so subject had contracted a liability, and obtained a credit, that he could not now be permitted to come and shew that he was not liable to the jurisdiction, in Oct. last, at the time of the action brought; he must be bound in this matter by the representation which he had given of himself to the plaintiff.

Mr. Justice Grant mentioned a case taken from the notes of Mr. Justice Hyde, in the early period of the exercise of the jurisdiction of this Court, in which a person had obtained credit by representing himself a servant of the Company, and the Court would not permit him to shew, that the representation was false, and so get rid of the liability incurred under such a false representation of himself.

Mr. Prinsep then set up as another ground of defence that there had been dealings between plaintiff and the defendant's son, and that in the course of such dealings the plaintiff took, by way of better security, the note or receipt in question, the subject of the action, from the defendant; and that in point of fact there was nothing owing from the defendant's son to the plaintiff, although he happened to retain the note in question still in his possession.

TUESDAY, JAN. 24.

Radamadub Bonnerjee v. Omachurn Bonnerjee.

The plaintiff and defendants in this case are both respectable Hindoo banians residing in Calcutta, and the action was brought for amount of a judgment recovered against the defendant on a former trial. The facts were not disputed, the only point being whether interest should be charged, defendant having suffered judgment to lie dormant on part of the amount recovered. The court were of opinion that plaintiff had not used proper diligence, and gave a verdict for the amount due, without interest, each party to pay their own costs, with leave to Mr. Prinsep to move to increase the verdict to the amount which would have been due with interest. The Advocate General and Mr. Barwell for defendant; Mr. Prinsep and Mr. Clarke for plaintiff.

Surroopchunder Dutt v. Muddoosudden Day.

Mr. Advocate General, with whom was Mr. Leith, stated the case for the plaintiff. The action was brought to recover the amount due on a promissory note for Rs. 2,000. The case was set down ex parte. Verdict for plaintiff.

Nunducoomar Day v. Bustoomchurn Day.

This was an action to recover Rs. 1,000 for goods sold to the plaintiff. The case was set down ex parte. Verdict for plaintiff.

There were several other ex parte cases disposed of, not one of which is of the least public interest.—Englishman, January 26.

FRIDAY, JANUARY 27.

Shibchunder Chatterjee v. James Ambrose.

This was an action brought to recover amount of goods supplied and money lent to defendant by plaintiff, his sircar, under a contract to supply whatever may be wanted in the ship building yard at bazar prices. The case was set down ex parte. Verdict for the plaintiff, amount of balance due Rs. 11,715, and interest at ten per cent. since 24th November last.—Englishman, Jan. 31.

MONDAY, JANUARY 30.

In the goods of Mohunt Debit Gree Gossain.

The deceased, a hindoo religious votary, in the charge of a temple at Goosoorree, in the twenty-four Pergunnahs, died in testate, 1836, leaving property in the Burra Bazar, Calcutta, and also personal estate and effects. In his life time he was bound to observe celibacy, and at his death did not leave him surviving father, mother nor brother, but had in his life time two cheelas or disciples, standing according to the laws and usages of Hindoos, in the relation of adopted sons. One cheela survives, the other died, having in his life time, in like manner, adopted two cheelas. The surviving cheela, adopted by the deceased, is aged and incapable of assuming the office of mohunt or of transacting any business, he is therefore taken care of by the cheelas of the cheela deceased, one of whom (the other is an infant) at his request applied for letters of a lministration of the estate and effects of Mohunt Debit Gree Gossain deceased. The application was made in Chambers before Mr. Justice Grant who doubted the jurisdiction and directed the application to be made in court. The opinion of the pundit of the court, was favourable to granting the application and Mr. Prinsep now applied for letters of administration.

But the court did not consider the cheela of a cheela as the next of kin, and as they did not on the ecclesiastical side try the rights to property, the application was refused.

In the matter of — Chads, Esq. and others.

Mr. Cochrane applied to the court, on the admiralty side of its jurisdiction, to fix a day for the examination of witnesses touching the capture of pirates by the commander, officers and crew of H. M. S. Andromache, in order that the examinations may go under the seal of this court, to the Commander-in-Chief or senior officer of his Majesty's ships and vessels in the East Indias. The learned counsel applied under the 6th Geo. IV. c. 49 which enacts that from and after the passing of that act there shall be paid by the treasurer of His Majesty's Navy upon bills to be made, &c. &c. unto the officers, seamen, marines, soldiers, and others, who shall have actually been on board any of H. M. ships, boats, &c. at the actual taking sinking, burning, &c. of any ship, boat, &c. manned by pirates, engaged in acts of piracy, the sum of twenty pounds for each piratical person, either taken or secured or killed, and the sum of five pounds for every other piratical man of the crew not taken or killed who shall have been on board such piratical vessel. Mr. Cochrane put in a petition the substance and matter of which were sworn by Captain Chads, and which set forth that there had been four actions in which a number of pirates had been engaged, and of whom many had been destroyed.

The Chief Justice observed that there were two Admiralty Courts here, and he was doubtful if this application should not be made to the vice admiralty court and not to the Supreme Court.

Mr. Cochrane.—Yes, my lord, and as this is a novel application, we have drawn up two motions, one for this court on the admiralty side of its jurisdiction, and one for the vice admiralty court. We will put in which your lordship please.

The Chief Justice, after consulting Mr. Justice Grant and Mr. Justice Malkin, was doubtful if the Supreme Court had jurisdiction, this being a civil application on the admiralty side of the court, and the occurrences to which the petition referred having taken place in the straits of Malacca. He would, however, if counsel thought proper to make the application, appoint Wednesday to hear the evidence. The jurisdiction of the vice admiralty court was wider, and it was a matter for counsel's consideration if the application had not better be made in that court.

Mr. Cochrane elected to apply in the Vice Admiralty Court, and the court was opened in the course of the day and the application was then formally made.

Newton v. Newton.

In this case defendant has been in contempt for costs but provisionally absolved by the court. Mr. Prinsep now moved to propound all matters preparatory to going to trial. But the court held that defendant must be stopped, as the absolution was not complete until they had evidence of his having complied with its provisions. Motion suspended.

In the goods of Ringsted Plantagenet Field.

Mr. Clarke moved that special citations may issue to William Masters and Mary Anne Burnside calling on them respectively to prove the alleged wills of the deceased in solemn form, and in default thereof of that letters of a lministration may be granted to the ecclesiastical registrar of the court, and that for such purpose the usual citations may issue, to his creditors and next of kin to the said deceased.

The learned counsel moved on two affidavits sworn by Captain Birch and Mr. McCann which set forth that the deceased was of unsound mind at the time he made his will, and that he had but known Mary Anne Burnside a few days previously to naming her executrix.

VICE ADMIRALTY COURT.

Mr. Justice Grant and Mr. Justice Malkin having left the bench, Sir Edward Ryan, sitting as sole judge, opened the Vice Admiralty Court. Mr. Dickens was appointed and sworn in Registrar, and Mr. Biri, Marshal of the Court, and Messrs. Cochrane, Osborne, Nott, Leith, Sandes, and Barwell were admitted to practise as Advocates therein. The Vice Admiralty Court was then adjourned to this day, when the evidence in the case of the Andromache will be taken.—Englishman, Jan. 31.

INSOLVENT COURT.

In the matter of James Cullen and Robert Browne.

The examination, adjourned on Saturday the 21st Jan., were resumed this day.

Russomoy Dutt.—I entered the service of Cruttenden and Co. in December 1825, at first as binion, then the cashier, afterwards I had charge of their books. I went into the accountant department in March 1829, and had charge of the books in March 1831. A committee was formed in 1833 to whom was referred a statement of the affairs of the house. Mr. Browne and I made out that statement from the books of the firm. We referred to all necessary books;—it was formed from the account current books. The first book is a cash book, or rather a day book from which one set of writers posted into the account current book, and another set into the journal and ledger. The statement was made at the direction of Mr. Browne. In consequence of the then recent failure there was a want of confidence, and this statement was drawn out to pacify the creditors. I became acquainted with the books in 1829, and after a certain time became acquainted generally with the state of various parties' accounts. This is an office copy of the schedule. There is an entry to the debit of W. A. Williams, amount Rs. 26,599. It is mentioned here 'dead,' I do not know if he were dead when I entered the house; I do not know when he died, but referring to the Reserved Fund, I find in May 1827, one lakh debited on Williams' account. The account current shews no sum at credit of W. A. Williams in 1827-8 except a transfer of a lakh of Rupees to the debit of 'Reserved Fund,' in order to reduce the account. The balance that then remained was Rs. 17,237. I think after the one lakh had been written off, that account did not bear interest. There is no credit to that account from May 1832 to Jan. 1834, in the former period it was 23,491, at the latter 26,599. I see interest has been charged at the rate of 8 per cent. in 1832 and 5 per cent. in 1833. The common rate was 10 per cent. It was considered a doubtful debt; if it had been a bad debt it would have been written off altogether, but from the circumstance of one lakh only having been written off, it strikes me there was a chance of recovering the whole or part of the remainder. I see no commission charged in this account. Capt. J. White is debited in the schedule Rs. 2,54,158. There was a considerable insurance on his life, twenty in the Lancers and ten in the Oriental. The firm paid the policies. It never was considered a bad debt. The account extends from 1830 to 1834, no money was received on it, and no interest charged. The value of the policies in 1830 was about 1,40,000. I do not know if Captain White be alive. There was a large sum, Rs. 1,43,200 written off 'Reserved Fund,' of Captain White's account, the balance of Rs. 2,54,158 remains to Capt. White's account after the Rs. 1,43,200 are written off. I see in 1825-6 Captain White's account was to his debit Rs. 2,26,821; there are no entries to his credit in that year. In 1825-7 balance to debit, Rs. 2,59,280, no credits, the debit are premium on policies and interest. In 1827-8 balance Rs. 2,91,481, no receipts during that year to his credit, amount of premium Rs. 10,910; that was the annual sum on two insurances and of six months on one, another six months would make Rs. 2,730. In 1828-9 balance Rs. 3,28,945 made up in same way. After this the sum was written off to the 'Reserved Fund,' and then the debt stood at two lakhs. In 1830 the interest stopped, but the premiums were still charged, and so they continued to be till the day of failure when the amount was as per schedule. There was a large sum at credit of 'Reserved Fund,' to which 6-16ths of the profits were added, and afterwards part of Mr. Bryce and Mr. Hutton's profits were added. Mr. Bryce's profits were carried to that fund by an understanding with Mr. Cullen his executor. It was a transfer of account, that part was never carried to Mr. Bryce's account, but carried at once to the 'Reserved Fund.' From Mr. Hutton's profits, sums were also carried to the 'Reserved Fund,' but not from the shares of other partners. I do not know why this was done, nor do I remember hearing the reason. Mr. Browne ordered it to be done, I made out a statement of profits and took it to Mr. Browne, he ordered the amount to be carried to the Reserved Fund, and that was my authority. When debts were written off it was generally when the books were made up to 30th April. I heard there was a committee sitting in 1836, of which Captain Vint was chairman. We did not write off any debt that there was a chance of recovery; speculation losses were written off at once to profit and loss. I do not remember if any individual account were so written off. Mr. Bryce's interest ceased in 1828. Turning to his account at 30th April, his credit, 2,62,667, his profit that year was 1,03,997, there are no losses to his debit that year. I see at the debit of his account in 1828, Rs. 1,82,948 his share of excess of loss. This entry was not made till January 1829; it bears date 30th April 1828, but the date of entry is shewn by the book. I should say the amount of loss was his share of excess of loss beyond which the Reserved Fund would cover. I did not keep the books at that time; the books will not show this loss; separate statements were made up. Mr. Wolff was book-keeper in 1829, Mr. Patton succeeded him. When I had charge and before I made up these statements, I copied one in a foolscap book but what became of it I do not know. It contained a statement made at the time of the retirement of George Mackillop. Sometimes that book remained with Mr. Browne and sometimes with me. In Hutton's case we analysed the accounts. There was a distinction in making up this statement, and the principle on which the Reserved Fund was calculated, for instance in the former we never valued Indigo accounts, but in the event of a partner retiring then a value was set upon the Indigo accounts. I must have seen that book about the time the committee sat in 1834; the statement which was submitted to the committee was made up not from that book but from the books of the house; they sat on Sundays. I only saw them on one occasion. I saw Mr. Turton there: he was the firm's retained counsel. I should have made a higher per cent. deduction than the creditors did. I was left to myself when I made up the statement at the time of Mr. Hutton's retirement. It would take much time to ascertain the state of the house by looking at the books. Mr. Browne kept the foolscap book, Mr. Cullen could have access to it, the book was kept in Mr. Browne's desk or in mine. I have not seen it since the date of the failure. I did not see any of the committee examine the books; they might have done and I not know of it. [Returns to Captain White's account.] In 1824-5 there are credits 845 Rs. the amount to debit Rs. 2,04,610, I think Mr. Hutton was advertised out; notice was given to the constituents in a letter dated January 1833, and to the Europe creditors in May 1833. I do not recollect the paper, but I have a strong recollection of having seen the advertisement. Mr. Wolff had property of his own in the house and trust property; a letter of instruction was left in 1829 by him, this must be in the records of the house. I cannot say if he left instructions to invest his property.

The Court then adjourned till Saturday next, Mr. Leith in the meantime to separate the cases which he wishes to examine on into classes.—Englishman, January 16:

SUDDER BOARD OF REVENUE.

In February 1836, the unconvenanted deputy collector of Bhaughulpore was authorized by the Board to expend a sum of Rupees 250 for an office tent, but he was previously to making the disbursement, removed to a similar situation in Tirhoot, and he now applied to the Board to sanction the expenditure of the same amount for the like purpose in that district. But, the Board, on further consideration, decided that unconvenanted deputy collectors are not entitled to tentage, and the application was refused.

Mr. Belli, the collector of Hoogly sent in a communication setting forth that the resumptions under Regulation IX, of 1833, are progressing and as local enquiries would be shortly called for, the employment of a deputy collector was necessary. He stated that Mr. R. W. Bets had been formerly recommended for this situation, but as that officer was now filling an appointment in the Burdwan districts, the collector now nominated Ranthone Shaw.

The Board, after some discussion regarding the resumptions in the Hoogly district, some of which are not under Mr. Belli's charge, but under the charge Mr. Taylor, the deputy collector for resumptions, ordered that the collector do specially state the duties on which he would employ, at present, the proposed deputy collector, and requested the Commissioner to consult with the Collector regarding the remuneration.

Mr. Nisbet, the late acting commissioner of Bhaughulpore, had, without reference to the Board, authorized the assistants to the Collector to hold sales. This coming to the Board's notice, the Commissioner was informed that he had no power so to authorize an assistant, and that all sales held under such authority would be void. The officiating commissioner questioned the correctness of this order, and the matter was yet under the consideration of the Board, when the acting commissioner was relieved by Mr. Harding, who referred the correspondence to government, with a request that, under the peculiar circumstances of the case, the acts of the assistant might be legalized by granting him authority to hold sales from the date of the acting commissioner's first order.

This was done by government, and the discussion at the Board was thus in a manner superceded. But the second member declared his intention to bring it forward on a future day.—Englishman, Jan. 3.

On the 10th January 1834 Mouzah Ruheempore Rowneah in Pergunnah Munier, Zilla Panna, was sold for the recovery of arrear of revenue due to government from 1237 to Poose 1241, amounting with interest, &c. to Sa. Rs. 1518.

The proprietors complained to the Commissioner that a sum greater than the balance was in deposit in the Collectors's treasury, due to them on account of the collections of Dearea Durveishpoor. The Collector was called upon for a report which he furnished, dated June 5, 1834.

From this document, it appears, the Dearea in question was brought under investigation, according to the provisions of Regulation 11, of 1819, on the 23rd February 1826. On the 30th December 1828 the Dearea was attached under the provision of clause I, Sec. XIII. of the above regulation, and from that period the collections were made on the part of government, and credited in the Collector's treasury accounts under the head of 'Profit and Loss.' It further appears that when the sale took place the suit instituted under Regulation 11, of 1819 was still pending. The Collector admitted that the proprietors had frequently applied to him for an adjustment of accounts, in order that the amount of collections from the Dearea might be carried to their credit in the payment of the revenue of their permanently settled estate, and that they openly stated they would not pay their revenue until their accounts adjusted.

Notwithstanding this the Collector sold the estate without any adjustment or even examination of accounts to satisfy himself whether there was a balance due to government or not. On the 7th February 1834 the case under Reg. 2, 1819 was decided, and the Dearea declared, liable to assessment. It became subject to the payment of revenue to government on the 7th August 1834.

On the 26th August 1834 Mr. Officiating Commissioner Cuthbert cancelled the sale, and directed the Collector to adjust the accounts, giving credit to the proprietors for the collections realized from the Dearea previous to the resumption.

On the 4th December 1834 the collector submitted the accounts in Persian, exhibiting a sum of Sa. Rs. 1997 due to the proprietors exclusive of interest much exceeding the amount for which their estate had been sold. On the 24th of February, Mr. Tucker, the Commissioner, instructed the collector to submit an account in English, which he did.

The first division exhibits the balance of revenue due to government from 1236 to the close 1241. The second division shows the amount of collections for the same period. Balance due to government Sa. Rupees 1,516. Some due to proprietors without interest and penalty 1,997. Mr. Commissioner Tucker recommended that the account be adjusted without giving or taking interest or penalty, and applied to the Board for their approval of the mode proposed.

The matter was referred to government by the Board with their opinions on it, and, at the instance of government, the Board called on Mr. Commissioner Tucker to institute enquiries regarding the particular circumstances under which the attachment was made, and also in what cases, and under what circumstances, and by what authority the amount of similar collections, pending attachment, had been refunded to parties. It appeared to his lordship, that it was the intention of the legislature in framing section XIII. of Regulation 2 of 1819, that the collections made from the lands during the period of attachment should belong absolutely to Government, and that, whether the Board's or thereafter the civil court's decision might be in favor of or against the claim of Government, to assessment.

The Commissioner replied on the 5th of November, as follows:—

'After the permission of the Board of Commissioners of Behar and Benares was obtained to put the question to the liability of these lands to assessment in train of enquiry and investigation under the provisions of regulation 11, 1819, the notice required by clause 11, section 5, was issued to the occupants on the 23d February, 1826, calling upon them to produce title deeds. But the parties neither attended nor offered to produce their summonses or other writings in virtue of which they possessed lands.

There follows a suspension of all proceedings for nearly three years which is not accounted for in any manner. On 28th October, 1828, the notice to produce account under the provisions of section X. was issued. Receipts for notices were granted, but no account produced, and on 30th December following the lands were attached under the provision, of clause 1. section XIII. There another lapse of upwards of 5 years occurred, and the decision of resumption passed on the 7th February, 1834. This last gap in the proceedings is stated to have arisen from the Collector not having had time to spare from his other avocations to go and visit the Deoras, and map and measure them. He was directed by Mr. Commissioner Smith to do this by an Ameen, on whose report and proceedings the final decisions are rounded.

Thus, it will appear, as surmised by Mr. Secretary Mangles, that these lands were attached in consequence of the contumacious conduct of the proprietors, though, I confess, until now, I never viewed the act of attachment under the provisions of section XIII. in the light represented by Mr. Mangles, and which I must also confess now appears to me to be the correct construction of the law.

The Commissioner then proceeded to state that the attachment had not been made in strict conformity to the Regulations, and in reply to the second paragraph of the Board's letter, he said he was not aware that in any similar instance the amount collections pending attachment had been refunded to parties.

The Board now forward the Commissioner's reply to Government, and submit that Regulation 11. of 1819, gives a more favorable view of the proprietor's claims than the Government have taken.

For the convenience of our readers who may not have the regulation at hand, we subjoin the clause in question :

First—If the holder of any land in regard to which the collector shall have been authorized by the Board of Revenue, or other authority exercising the powers of that Board, to institute the enquiry described by section 7 of this regulation, shall refuse on neglect to furnish the accounts relating to such lands, within the period specified in the collector's requisition, the Board of Revenue, or other authority exercising the powers of that Board, shall be competent to direct the lands to be immediately attached, and the rents collected on account of government, in the same manner as if the lands were the property of government. In such cases however it shall be the duty of the collector to make a full enquiry into the title of the holder of the lands, and to transmit his proceeding to the Board who will decide whether the lands shall be permanently liable to assessment.

The Board consider that this clause, if read in connection with the rest of the enactment, means merely that the collections should be made through the officers of Government pending the attachment; and does not warrant the appropriation of the collections by Government.

Or the country the collections should, in the Board's opinion, be always refunded to the proprietors at the termination of the suit.

In the particular case in question, in which the attachment was irregularly made, the Board recommended refund of the collections with interest.—Englishman, Jan. 4.

In the Sumachor Durpun of 8th October last, there appeared an article headed 'Employment of Dismissed Amlahs', which attracted the notice of Government, and caused enquiries to be instituted as to the accuracy of the statement. One Gholam Nudde is the person alluded to, and the situation to which reference was made in the Durpun, is that of the sheristadar in the Collector's office, zillah Sarun. The commencement of the paragraph is as follows :—

'The chief native officer of the Opium Department at Patna, after a long career of gross corruption, was, by the meritorious exertions of the third judge of the Patna Provincial Court, dismissed with disgrace.'

The inquiry of Government called forth a report from Mr. Commissioner Tucker, who had appointed Gholam, in which he stated that the Durpun's paragraph was a gross exaggeration, and enclosed, for the Board's information, Mr. Fleming's report to the Board of Customs, Salt and Opium, dated 4th February 1828, in which that gentleman set forth two grounds for the dismissal of the sheristadar, first, that the conduct of the latter had occasioned suspicion, and secondly, that he had lost the confidence of the agents. But no instance of 'gross corruption' was brought home to him. After his dismissal, Gholam went to Jessore, 'where' it is said in the Durpun.

'Owing to his delinquency being unknown, and his having powerful friends, he became sherishtadar to the collector, but renewing his old habits he was obliged to absent himself by obtaining leave of absence. The discovery of his corruption was made immediately after his flight, and the late Board of Revenue issued orders for his being brought to trial. Returns to these orders were repeatedly made, that he could not be found, and thus for a time he also escaped.'

But Mr. Commissioner Tucker states that Gholam did not go to Jessore after having been dismissed from office at Patna. He was sheristadar of the collectorate of Jessore from 1816 to 1820, when Sir Charles D'Oyly offered him the situation of dewan to the opium agent at Patna, and in consequence he resigned his former office. Mr. Tucker adds, that he (Mr. F.) was collector of Jessore till June 1820, and though circumstances may have transpired since his departure implicating the character of Gholam, he never heard of them, and that although the succeeding collector of Jessore reported that Gholam was 'not to be found' it was notorious that he had gone to an appointment at Patna.

The Durpun goes on to state :—

'Some years afterwards the late Board of Revenue discovered that this corrupt native had obtained the office of sherishtadar to the collector of Beerbhoon, and orders were immediately issued expelling him from that office. On this occasion great exertions were made to get him restored and the Government was petitioned by influential individuals, but, luckily, our late Governor General at once directed that the orders passed in regard to this individual should not be disturbed.'

That Gholam was expelled from the office of sherishtadar of Beerbhoon, Mr. Commissioner Tucker says, is perfectly true. But here again, Gholam was the victim of suspicion, never having heard the charges preferred against him, nor was he called upon to defend himself.

'Notwithstanding this decision [says the Durpun] the Commissioner of Dacca solicited the permission of Government to appoint him his sherishtadar,

But Mr. Commissioner Tucker states that he solicited permission of Government to appoint Gholam his sherishtadar in April 1829. Gholam has subsequently appointed to Beerbhoon, and removed from thence under the circumstances above stated in 1832.

'The application was ingeniously drawn up, and great intelligence was employed to palliate the conduct of the delinquent, and to induce commiseration and forgiveness. But no other notice was bestowed on the letter than a peremptory refusal of any such consideration.

Mr. Tucker says he plainly stated to government his wish that Gholam should have the appointment, and that the latter was the person who had been dismissed from the situation of Dewan to the opium agent at Patna, and he stated also his reasons for still reposing confidence in him. The reply was, that 'Government cannot sanction the employment in the responsible situation of sarishtadar of an individual who has been dismissed from the public service under the circumstances which characterize the removal from office at Patna of Gholam Nabbee.' Mr. Tucker remarks, here is no absolute prohibition against the employment of the native, but merely, that his employment in the responsible situation to which I was desirous of appointing him, could not be sanctioned. Indeed no man is held to be debarred from employment that has not been proclaimed as unfit to serve the government in a public capacity :—

'It is hardly to be believed, but it is nevertheless true, that this incorrigible native, so often discharged for abuse of office, is now and has been for some time sheristadhar of Chuprah. It is to be hoped that the Commissioner of Patna, who was the Commissioner of Dacca above referred to, has not allowed this appointment without reference to his superiors.'

Mr. Tucker states 'it is hardly to be believed, but it is nevertheless true, "that this incorrigible native" has never, in the course of a service of thirty years, been discharged for abuse of office, but on the contrary has earned for himself, with those who know him, a character for integrity and zeal in the discharge of his official duties.' The Commissioner then enters into a detail of the career of Gholam, and investigates the various charges which have been brought against him. The result of which, on the Commissioner's mind, is the favourable opinion above set forth.

The whole of the proceedings above alluded to have undergone investigation by the Board, and the result is that orders have gone forth, under a protest by the Second Member, for the dismissal of Gholam from his appointment. The Second Member states, 'To be consistent, the Board cannot interfere, to remove Gholam Nabbee, and to instruct their subordinates not to allow him to hold office under any of them, is a power with which the Board is not vested, and would be totally inconsistent with their orders in other cases' which he cites. 'The matter having been laid before government, it will be a more becoming course to await the final decision of higher authority, and not to issue orders opposed in principle to the Board's previous practice in all other cases.'—Englishman Jan. 11.

The revenue authorities at this Presidency have issued the subjoined circular :—

No party in possession of lands liable to summary assessment under the provisions of Sec. 12, Regulation 111, of 1828* and the laws therein cited, as far as the same relate to Bengal, Behar, and Orissa, shall be dispossessed, nor, if he be entitled to enter into engagements with government for the revenue, shall the said lands be subjected to assessment until the expiration of six months from the date of the Collector's or Deputy Collector's order for resumption unless the Commissioner of the division shall consider immediate measures for the assessment of the Muhl essential to the preservation of its integrity or to the maintenance of its full assets in the event of its being deemed indispensable, on the above or similar grounds, to oust the party in possession, or to proceed to an instant assessment, a sum equal to the net Mofussil rental of the Muhl for six months, shall be paid to the party dispossessed from the treasury of the Zillah collectorate.—Englishman, Jan. 13.

Considerable interest has been recently excited amongst the upper classes of the Mahomedan community regarding the appointment of the Mootawalle of the Hooghly Emambarrah, a situation of much importance and respectability. The state of the emambarrah and its disbursements having attracted the attention of the revenue authorities, Mr. Belli, Mr. Samuel, and Dr. Wise, the local agents, were directed to enquire into the expenditure and general management of the funds, and to afford such information as their means permitted respecting the then condition and prospects of that valuable institution. The local agents endeavoured by a strict scrutiny of the papers which were presented to them, and by taking the evidence of the different officers of the establishment to satisfy their minds as to the correctness or otherwise of the accounts. This, however, they soon found to be a hopeless task. The papers with which they were furnished were prepared by the officers in the Emambarrah, under the direct superintendence of those who were most interested in concealing any malversation which might have taken place, and the amlah positively refused to assert their correctness either by 'half' or 'half namah.' After lapse of months and years, it was of course impossible to ascertain, with any degree of precision, whether the various sums had been expended in the manner stated or not. There was no one interested in exposing the delinquencies of the officers of the Emambarrah supposing any to exist, while there were hundreds who had a powerful interest in concealing them. Sufficient, however, came to the knowledge of the local agents to induce them to recommend a total revision of the rules for the government of the endowment, and there being a large deficiency not satisfactorily accounted for, the Mootawallah was dismissed.

A difference of opinion arose amongst the revenue authorities regarding the selection of a suitable person to fill the appointment. There were fifteen applicants, some of whom being of the Soonee cast were disqualified. Of those to whom this objection did not lie, Mr. Pattle, the senior member of the Board of Revenue, was of opinion that Mirza Mohummud Mendec Ispahanee, a merchant of great respectability and considerable wealth, was the most eligible, provided he devoted sufficient time to the performance of the duties, and which he promised he would do. In his nomination, however, Mr. C. W. Smith, the junior member, objected on the ground, that the Mirza unless he should relinquish his mercantile pursuits, would not have time to devote to the faithful discharge of the responsible duties that would devolve on him, and the performance of which is totally incompatible with his residing elsewhere, than at Hooghly. In addition to which the Junior Member was aware of no claim on the score of previous service, which could be advanced by him as entitling him to succeed to so valuable and honorable an office. Mr. Smith expressed himself more in favour of the nomination of Moluee Zynnoodeen of whose abilities and judgment the local agents, had spoken highly. But Mr. Smith was by no means satisfied with that nomination, 'being desirous,' so he said, 'that the appointment should be given to some person whose previous well earned character would be a pledge to the government for his faithful discharge of the duties of Mootawalle.'

The subject was referred to Government, and all the original applications of the candidates submitted for the Governor's inspection. His Lordship concurred with the Junior Member in thinking it desirable that the appointment should be bestowed as above quoted, and the Board were desired to use their best endeavours to find an individual thus qualified for the trust, and requested to ascertain whether there was any Shree of consideration employed in the revenue or any other department, whose services had exhibited fidelity and integrity, and had given satisfaction with respect to ability. After the experience of the past," said Mr. Secretary Mangles, "his lordship would be very unwilling to entrust the management of that institution to any person, however ostensible respectable, not of tried high character."

It occurred to the Junior Member that Kermut Uly, a native gentleman, who accompanied Lieutenant A. Conolly through Persia to this country, and who had been the means of saving the life of that officer, would be willing to take the appointment if it were offered to him. On the 6th of November last a reference was made to Lieutenant Colonel Alves, Political Agent at Jeypore on the subject of Kermut Uly's qualifications. The reply of Colonel Alves satisfied the Board that they could not make a better nomination. Both Colonel Alves and Captain Trevelyan gave him a high character for integrity, information, and intelligence, and the latter officer added, he is eminently calculated to fill such a post as the one in question."

Government have approved and sanctioned the nomination of Kermut Uly, and on the 9th Jan. the necessary communication was made to him in Ajmeer, requesting that he will join his appointment as soon as practicable.—Englishman, Jan. 19.

DISPUTED POSSESSION OF LANDS.

R. D. MANGLES, ESQ.

SECRETARY TO THE GOVERNMENT OF BENGAL.

SIR,—May I request you will do me the honor to submit, for the consideration of the Right Hon'ble the Governor of Bengal this my very respectful application on behalf of Baboo Dwarkanauth Tagore, praying that, under the circumstances herein stated, his Lordship will be graciously pleased to exercise the powers vested in him by clause 2, section 28, regulation 11 of 1822 and to appoint a Local Commission for the purpose of giving possession to my client of Dehee Shazadpore, Zillah Rajshahy, purchased by him at a Government sale for arrears of revenue.

2. This zemindary, paying an annual jumna of Sa. Rs. 10,293-14-16 formerly belonged to Seebchunder Bhuttacharjee and others, and was sold for arrears of Government revenue by the Deputy Collector of Pubna on the 17th March 1240 B. S. (29th January 1834.) The sale was of course by Public Auction, and Juggutchunder Chatterjee, the Mookhtar of Baboo Dwarkanauth Tagore, being the highest bidder, the state was knocked down to him for Sa. Rs. 53,000. At the time of the purchase, the Mookhtar was called upon to produce his authority from Baboo Dwarkanauth, when it appeared that the powers in his possession were either of a general nature, or for particular purposes unconnected with the transaction in question, and contained no special authority to make the purchase. In consequence of this defect, the Deputy Collector recorded the sale as having been made to Juggutchunder Chatterjee on his own account, but this person distinctly stated in reply to the questions put to him, that the purchase was really made on behalf of Dwarkanauth Tagore, and with his money.

3. The usual deposit was made at the time of purchase, and the sale having been confirmed by the Commissioner of the 13th division, the balance was paid into the office of the Pubna Collectorate on the 5th Bysakh, 1241, B. S. (16th April 1834.) Subsequently to this, the Deputy Collector, in conformity with the provisions of clause 1, section 28, regulation 11 of 1822, addressed a Rubikaree to the judge of the district, requesting him to give possession of the estate to the auction purchaser, and an Ameen was accordingly appointed by the judge for that purpose.

4. On the 19th September 1834. Juggutchunder Chatterjee having executed a Kubala, or deed of transfer, making over the estate to Baboo Dwarkanauth, the name of the Mookhtar was cancelled in the records of the Collectorate, and that of Dwarkanauth Tagore substituted, as proprietor of the zemindary.

5. After the Ameen had proceeded to Dehee Shazadpore, and, in conformity with the order of the Civil Court, had given possession of a part of the estate to the auction purchaser, Seebchunder Bhuttacharjee, the late zamindar, and Tarramoonsee and Kistomoonsee Deeban, (his mother and step-mother) presented petitions to the judge, alleging that many of the villages so made over to the purchaser (being the most valuable ones in the estate) had been respectively granted to them in Puinee, by the father of Seebchunder and the husband of the other two petitioners, under which they still claimed to hold possession, notwithstanding the sale by Government, and grants protesting against the legality of the Ameen's proceedings. On the 22d May 1835, Mr. R. Barlow, the judge of Rajshahy, decided that Baboo Dwarkanauth could not oust the Putneedars, by a summary suit, though he might obtain possession of the zemindary by taking Kuboolents from those parties on the same terms as had been agreed to by the former zemindars. The Ameen was accordingly directed to effect the cancellation of the agreement which had already been executed by the ryots and others in favor of the Auction purchaser, and to obtain Kuboolents from the Putneedars, binding them to pay Baboo Dwarkanauth the same rent as the former zemindar had received—a sum so low as to be little more than nominal.

6. As these under-tenures were created by the Zemindar subsequent to the decennial settlement, and with an obvious intent to defraud the Government revenue, my client conceived the above decision to be directly opposed to the provisions of Sec. 30 of Reg. 11 of 1822, which declares the Auction purchaser to be competent to avoid and annul all such tenures; he therefore presented a summary petition of appeal to the Sudder Dewannee Adawlut, which was heard by Mr. D. C. Smyth, on the 11th September 1835. That gentleman then passed an order which, after reciting the circumstances of the cases, observed that the Rubikaree of the collector requested the judge to give possession to Juggutchunder Chatterjee, not to Dwarkanauth Tagore; and although it appeared that a Kubala had subsequently been executed in favor of my client by Juggutchunder, yet there was nothing in the papers before the Court to shew that Baboo Dwarkanauth was the Auction purchaser, nor had the Collector applied to the judge to put him in possession as such—and that as section 28 regulation 11 of 1822, referred only to the case of an Auction purchaser, and merely directed the judge to give possession to such party when called upon to do so by the Collector, there was no ground on which the petitioner's appeal could be supported, and it was dismissed accordingly.

7. Dwarkanauth Tagore now applied to the Revenue authorities to assist him in getting possession of the estate. His first petition to this effect was refused by the Deputy Collector of Pubna on the 27th February 1836; and upon an appeal to Mr. Steel, the Commissioner of Bauleah, that officer passed an order on the 17th February, stating that although it was proved to his satisfaction that Baboo Dwarkanauth was really the Auction purchaser, yet he (the Commissioner) had no power to give possession of the under-tenures. My client then had recourse to the Sudder Board of Revenue, who, on the 4th March 1836, decided that as Dwarkanauth Ta-gore was clearly the bona fide auction purchaser, the Collector was bound to give him possession according to the provisions of Sec. 28 Reg. XI of 1822; and they accordingly directed that authority to immediately address a Rubikaree to the Zillah Judge, stating the circumstances of the case, and requesting possession of Dehee Shazadpoor to be given to my client as the auction purchaser. In conformity with these orders, an application to the above effect was forwarded by the Deputy Collector of Pubna to the Judge of Rajshahy on the 24th March.

8. On the 8th April, Mr. Barlow passed his orders upon this application of the Deputy Collector, to the effect that, notwithstanding what had been stated by the Revenue authorities, he was of opinion that Dwarkanauth Tagore was a mere private purchaser and that as Reg. XI of 1822 related only to auction purchasers at Government sales for arrears of revenue, he must decline complying with the requisition of the Collector.

9. Against this decision, my client again applied to the Sudder Dewannee Adawlut, and on the 21st July, Mr. D. C. Smyth expressed his opinion that Dwarkanauth Tagore having now been recognized by the Revenue authorities as the auction purchaser, and there being no doubt that virtually he was so, possession of the estate ought to be given to him in that character. At the same time Mr. Smyth wished the opinion of another Judge to be taken as to whether, under the terms of Sec. 28 Reg. XI—1822 the Court could consider any one as an auction purchaser, besides the party whose name was entered as such in the Collector's books at the time of sale. The papers of the case were accordingly sent to Mr. Rattray, who, on the 27th July, recorded his opinion that, as the Mookhtar had distinctly stated at the time of sale that the purchase was made with Baboo Dwarkanauth's money and on his account, and had subsequently executed a Khabala in favor of that gentleman, there could be no suspicion of any thing collusive or unfair in the transaction—the entry of Jurguchunder's name arose simply from a defect in the powers of attorney given to him, and the revenue authorities having now recognized Dwarkanauth Tagore as the auction purchaser, there was no doubt in his (Mr. Rattray's) mind that the Court ought to consider him as such to all intents and purposes, and give him possession under the provisions of Reg. XI—1822. The case having been sent back with this opinion to Mr. Smyth, that gentleman, on the 1st September, passed orders directing the Zillah Judge to consider my client as the auction purchaser of Dehee Shazadpoor, and to give him possession as such; but added, that if any person should oppose possession being given of any particular lands, the Judge would be at liberty to investigate such claim, and in case either party should be dissatisfied with his decision, an appeal to the Sudder Dewannee would be open. Although the above orders were passed on the 1st September, no proceedings have yet been taken by the Judge of Rajshahy to give possession to Dwarkanauth Tagore.

10. But the above mentioned claims of the Putneedars do not constitute the only difficulties against which my client has had to contend in endeavouring to obtain possession of his Zemindary. Nilmoney Bonnerjee, the Zemindar of a neighbouring estate, and Gopenauth Sagdal, a mouroosedar of Dehee Shazadpoor, have, at the instigation of Shreebhunder Bhuttacharjee, raised disputes as to boundaries in almost every village given over by the Ameen to the auction purchaser, and as these persons support their pretensions by violence, Dwarkanauth Tagore's people have been forcibly dispossessed of nearly the whole of that portion of the estate which is not included in the Putnee grants alleged to have been made by the father of the late Zemindar to his own son and wives. These parties have proceeded to such extremities that a case is now pending before the Joint Magistrate of Pubna, in which Dwarkanauth Tagore's men were accused of having killed certain retainers of Nilmoney Bonnerjee, but the Magistrate having proceeded in person to the place where the affray occurred, and fully investigated the circumstances, discovered that the murdered men were Baboo Dwarkanauth's own servants, and that the complainant were themselves the real criminals: had the inquiry been left to the Darogha, a partisan of the Zemindar, the result would probably have been very different. This circumstance will shew what is the state of affairs in Shazadpoor and how little prospect there is of my client's obtaining and holding peaceable possession of his property, if no further assistance be granted him than what a native Ameen can afford.

11. Such are the circumstances under which the present application is made. Nearly three years have elapsed since Baboo Dwarkanauth purchased this estate at a Government sale, and up to this moment he has been unable to obtain effectual possession of any portion of it. The collections have not been sufficient to cover the expenses of the establishment, and he has been compelled to defray the whole of the Government revenue out of his private funds. If he is now to be told that he must have recourse to a regular suit for the determination of every disputed claim, it is no exaggeration to say that ten years more will pass away before his rights can be established—and during this period (not to speak of the vexation and expense of such tedious and complicated litigation) it will be utterly impossible for him to default of which payment the property will be sold for arrears.

12. It is unnecessary for me to dwell upon the importance of the present case with reference to the interests of Government. It is clear, both from the Regulations and the common sense of the matter, that a Zemindar can by no possibility grant to a third party any right which he does not himself possess, and his right to his estate is entirely contingent upon his punctual discharge of the Government revenue. In the instance now under consideration, a Zemindar makes over the most valuable portion of his estate in perpetuity to his own nearest relatives, on the condition that they shall pay him a nominal, or at best, a grossly inadequate rent—the Government revenue is then suffered to fall into arrear, and these under-tenants (one of them being in fact the defaulter himself, the father having died in the mean time) claim to hold the lands at the same fixed rent against the purchaser from Government. A more palpable case of fraud it is not easy to conceive, and yet Dwarkanauth Tagore has already been told by the Civil Court that he is not at liberty to dispossess these parties in a summary suit; in other words, that he is without remedy, unless he chooses to engage in a series of law suits, the termination of which no man can foresee. If such a principle is to be upheld, I fear there will be but few persons willing to encounter the risk of purchasing at a Collector's sale. In the present case, the lands unclaimed by the pretended Putneedars, even if possession could be obtained of them, will not yield sufficient to defray the annual assessment.

13. I need not detain his Lordship by entering into any argument to shew that the provisions of clause 2, Sec. 28, Reg. XI. of 1822, are strictly applicable to this case, for it presents a combination of circumstances, any one of which would be sufficient to bring it within the scope of that enactment. The clause provides that it shall be competent to the Government to appoint a covenanted civil servant as a local Commissioner, whenever obstacles may be experienced in giving possession of an estate sold for arrears, "whether in consequence of the opposition of the former proprietors, and the difficulty of settling their claims to reserved interests in any part of the lands sold, or from the opposition of persons asserting themselves to be in possession of Talooks and other interests not affected by the process of sale for arrears, or because of boundary disputes with neighbouring Zemindars or the like;" or in consequence of the general circumstances of the estate. Now here there is an opposition on the part of the former proprietor, Sheebchunder Bhattacharjee, who claims a reserved interest in part of the lands sold; there is an opposition by his mother and step-mother, who assert themselves to be in possession of interests not affected by the process of sale for arrears; there are boundary disputes with Neilmoney Bonnerjee, a neighbouring Zemindar, and with Gopenauth Sandal, —and the general circumstances of the estate are such that a native Ameen would not have the power to give possession, even if directed to do so by the judicial authorities. If then, in the present instance, which comprises in so remarkable a manner every one of the contingencies contemplated by the legislature, the Government should decline to exercise the special powers with which it is vested, I surely do not go too far in saying that for the future the above clause must be regarded as a dead letter.

14th. I will only add, in conclusion, that should the Right Hon'ble the Governor be graciously pleased to accede to the prayer of this application, my client authorizes me to state that he will most gladly defray any expense that may be incurred by Government, in consequence of the appointment of a local Commissioner.

I have the honor to be, Sir, your most obedient servant,
Calcutta, 6th December, 1836. M. A. BIGNELL.

Constituted attorney of Baboo Dwarkanauth Tagore.

No. 47.—To M. A. BIGNELL, ESQ.,

CONSTITUTED ATTORNEY OF BABOO DWARKANAUTHTAGORE.

Revenue.

Sir,—In reply to your Letter of the 6th Dec., I am directed by the Right Hon'ble the Governor of Bengal to inform you, that instructions have this day been issued to the Sadler Board of Revenue to depute Mr. Yule, immediately on his return to Purnea, for the purpose of placing the Auction purchaser of Dhee Shabzadpore in possession of his purchase under the Provisions of Clause 2, section 28, Regulation XI of 1822.

I am, Sir, your most obedt. Servant,

ROSS D. MANGLES,

Secy. to the Govt. of Bengal.

Fort William, The 3d January, 1837.—India Gazette, January 30.

RESUMPTION OF RENT FREE TENURES AT CHITTAGONG.

The resumption of the Revenue of lands, held free of assessment under illegal, or invalid tenures, in the district of Chittagong, and the recent publication of several articles on that subject, by a contemporary journal, having attracted attention, we lay before our readers some facts which are now before his lordship in Council, and which display the extraordinary distress, to which a native family of that district, known by the name of Mirttoonjoy, has been reduced, owing to the enforcement of the Provisions of Regulation II. of 1819, and Regulation III. of 1828.

The Mirttoonjoys were, up to a very recent date, considered the most wealthy and influential family in that district; they are the hereditary Canavagoes of it, and are now in a situation, in which they are hardly able to provide themselves with common necessaries. We, nevertheless, hope that the liberal and enlightened policy of our present ruler will be the means of restoring the family to their rights.

A sunnud for chur, or alluvial lands, caused by accretion from the sea in the frontier of the district of Chittagong, was granted to Captain Sutherland in the year 1763, by the then Governor-General, and the Captain, while reclaiming a portion of the lands by destroying the jungles by which it was overgrown, died: his son, Mr. Charles Sutherland, not able to follow up his late father's operations in more difficult parts, on account of the dread caused to labourers by the depredations of wild beasts, sold his right to the ancestors of the Mirttoonjoy family under a sunnud, the negotiations and boundaries of which were recognized and determined by the authorities of that date, and the possession of the lands in question was taken, at an outlay of one hundred thousand sicca rupees, by the family of the Mirttoonjoys. A portion of the proceeds of the lands was applied to certain religious purposes, and a portion of the lands was transferred by gifts, with the view to encourage settlement and cultivation. The lands were generally known by name of Dhoorony Monzah.

In 1822, Mr. W. Walters, the then Collector of Chittagong, declared the Monzah in question liable to resumption under the provisions of Regulation II. of 1819, caused the attachment of them, and submitted his proceedings for the confirmation of the Board of Revenue: the Board confirmed his decision on the 26th of September of the following year. His successor, Mr. Phillips, was about to dispossess the family, who were dissatisfied with the decision of Mr. Walters, and tendered the security required under Section 22, of the Regulation above cited, and proceeded to seek redress in the Dacca Provincial Court, pending which appeal Regulation III. of 1828 was promulgated, and the case was transferred to the special Commissioner of Chittagong under that regulation.

In 1829, while the case was pending decision, the Collector dispossessed the family, without any regard to the grants made by the ancestors of the family for encouragement of settlement and cultivation as stated before, and took the whole of the lands under Khas management.

A decision was given on the 26th August 1830, by the special Commissioner in favor of resumption, and on the 6th January 1832, the special Commissioner sent his final orders to the Judge of the district relative to the wasilaut demandable from the family for the period between the Board of Revenue's confirmation of the Collector's proceedings, and the date of the dispossession. The wasilaut with 12 per cent. interest per annum was directed to be collected according to such rate of assessment at which the lands could probably be permanently settled.

Contrary to orders, Mr. Walters caused all the properties, real and personal, including those which were given in security by the family (while complaining against the Collector's decision) to be summarily attached, to which the family did not object, as they were certain that if the collections from the mehals were duly made under any circumstances, would exhibit a credit in favor of the family on the wasilaut account, and prevent any sacrifice of property. The family relied just as much on the fairness of the collections while under attachment, as while under their own management. But the period of attachment was of too short duration to admit of a full collection, and the consequence was, that out of an asset of about 200,000 sicca rupees only 88,000 was realized, leaving a balance of about 120,000 sicca rupees, add to which the arrears of 1825 (of which nothing could have been realized) which makes the balance due to the family 140,000 sicca rupees, without taking to account the assistance rendered, and the supplies made to Government troops by the family of the Mittoonjoys during the late Burmese War.

At this stage, Mr. officiating Commissioner Harvey, in further deviation of the special Commissioner's orders, proceeded to the sale of the mehals, fixing the demand of wasilaut for the period herein before stated at sicca rupees 1,14,000, averaging annually to 11,355 12, exclusive of interest, and founded on a ryotwarree assessment made by the deputy Collector, Mr. Plowden, which unjustly included even the lands in possession of others under grants from the ancestors of Mittoonjoy. The rate was fixed at 16 rupees per droon, whilst the highest rent ever realized by the family under a talookwarree assessment, never exceeded 10 rupees per droon. The word "wasilaut" in its literal acceptation signifies nothing more nor less, than the actual collections made from a mahal. The Zemindaries whoever were all ultimately sold, and a property yielding a Sudler Jumma of sicca rupees 40,301, and at any rate worth 400,000 sicca rupees, was finally, in February and August 1835, bought in at the peril of Government and others for sicca rupees 65,028, independent of other moveable properties which were sacrificed at the same time.

The consequence now is, that the very inadequate amount of the sale, being insufficient to cover the high demand of wasilaut, that two members of the family, Hurchunder, and Mittoonjoy Rai are in prison for the balance, and another member, Issurchunder Rai, has escaped incarceration by being in Calcutta. The balance is understood to be about 30,000 rupees.

After due consideration of the foregoing circumstances, it becomes manifest that the proceedings of the local authorities were not only precipitate but inequitable. As the mehals were under attachment by and in the hands of Government, the officiating Commissioner would have been at no hazard, to have allowed the wasilaut to stand over, until a settlement of the lands were made, a measure which, while it would have accorded with the orders of the superior authorities, would also have been the means of considerably increasing the collections. But setting that consideration aside, the regulation of the rate of wasilaut was made without any regard whatever to the actual rates of collection from the resumed lands during the last six years of Khas management, Mr. Harvey would have been at liberty to have prosecuted his enquiries much further, viz. into the resources of the mehals, and the rates of rent paid for similar lands in the adjoining villages, either by deputation, of ameen, or by any means that may have appeared proper to Mr. H.

An undue weight ought not to have been allowed to the ryotwarree assessment, which, it has already been shown, was by no means reasonable or just, and the defectiveness of it becomes clear on reference to the terms on which Dhoorooty Monzah has now been permanently settled. It was rated by Mr. Harvey at sicca rupees 11,355-12 annas per annum, and the present settlement is only 9,044 rupees, showing a considerable balance.

The only means now left to redress the wrongs of the Mittoonjoys is to cancel the sales forthwith, and realize the wasilaut as now sanctioned by Government by holding the mehals under Khas management, until the whole demand is liquidated. We shall conclude by stating that the facts above given are now before Government. — India Gazette, January 31.

SUDDER NIZAMUT ADDAWLUT.

FOURDARRY.—THURS. 27TH DEC.—BEFORE E. R. BARWELL, ESQ., SESSIONS JUDGE AND MOULVIE HAZUL UL RUBY, FUJWA.

(Murder of Byramdee Sirdar.)

Jakeer Khan, Dhoob Khan, Namdar Khan, Culan-dar Khan, and Cazin Mundul, were charged with the wilful murder of Byramdee Sirdar, by Badool his son, who deposed.—That his father returned home sick from Calcutta, and that on the night of the 5th of Bhadoor, corresponding with the 19th of August last, he went to sleep at a relation's named Mahommed, in company with his youngest son. That they did not return that night, and early on the following morning a friend called and enquired where Byramdee was, and informed complainant that his father had been arrested by the prisoners for having stolen a lota and thullia belonging to one Kooloosa Beera. Complainant informed his mother of it, and she was told by one Cabilmundul that complainant's father had been flogged and apprehended by the prisoners. Poorsoodlee chowkedar also informed his mother of Byramdee's arrest for theft, and on being desired by her to take Byramdee to the thana, the chowkedar struck her with a club on her breast. On the following morning Byramdee was brought home by the chowkedar and Namdar Khan, in a languid state, and thrown into his house. Complainant said to them you have brought a man here in this state, if he dies who will be answerable? The chowkedar made no answer but went away and did not return, and on that evening complainant's mother went to look for him, when she was informed that he had gone to the bazar. Byramdee died that night, and in the morning his wife went and brought the chowkedar, and told him to inform the thana of it. The deceased was bruised in several parts of his body, and his right eye appeared to have been forced out of its socket. The prisoners then took the body of the deceased and buried it. Complainant attempted to go to the thana but was not allowed to do so, but on the fourth day he got by stealth to the darogah and informed him of all the particulars. The darogah came to the spot, and after the necessary enquiries, disinterred the body, and discovered the bruises, the eye and two dow wounds on the legs. The body was not in an inflamed state or decomposed.

Kooloosa Beera, deposed.—That Cazin and Namdar Khan are her brothers, and that the other prisoners are merely acquaintances. Knows complainant as son of Byramdee deceased. That an August last, her child and mother were asleep in their house. At a late hour of night she was called by her mother and asked if she had kicked the thullia, to which she replied in the negative, after which they heard a noise at the door, and immediately screamed out for help, and Cuzim and Namdar came at hearing the noise and apprehended a thief. The house of the two prisoners is at the distance of fifty yards from her house. After apprehending the thief, (the deceased) they were taken to the house of the prisoners and what was done, with him witness does not know. The night was dark and it was raining hard. She recognized deceased by his voice. Deceased got into the house by introducing his hand inside and by opening the hook.

Arjee Bawa, mother, of the last witness, deposed.—That in August last a thief was caught near her house, and corroborated the testimony of her daughter. The witness appeared to be about 80 years of age.

Babee Joe, wife of the deceased, deposed:—That on the night of the 19th of August last, her husband and second son went to sleep at the house of a relation, and did not return that night. Early on the following morning she was informed by Poorsoodee, chowkedar, that her husband had been arrested with two brass utensils belonging to Koolasa Bawa. Witness desired he should be taken to the thana and went to Kholoosa's house and saw Byramdee bound hand and foot. Her husband complained of having been harshly treated by the prisoners. Namdar Khan struck her with a club. Witness then went home, and a little after her return, Poorsoodee and some of the defendants brought Byramdee home. She desired the chowkedar to remain as her husband seemed very languid and unlikely to survive, but the chowkedar went his way. On the following morning Byramdee died and was buried by the prisoners and other villagers. No intelligence was sent to the thana in consequence of the indisposition of her son, beside which, none of them were allowed to go to the thana by the prisoners. On the fourth day, however, her son went and informed the darogah of the facts of the case, and then an enquiry was set on foot, and the body having been disinterred, discovered several bruises, two dow wounds on the legs, and that the right eye had been severely hurt. That Cablinnudul offered her 200 Rs. to drop the case, and that her husband had not been and was not sick either before or after the beating.

Fourteen other witnesses were examined, but of minor importance, and Kholoosa and Arjee on cross-examination prevaricated, and their present testimony was generally contradictory of what they had stated before the Magistrate of Barraset.

JUDGMENT.—It appeared to the Court that the evidence of Kholoosa and Aajee were quite prevaricatory of their having witnessed the beating or wounding, and their present statement was different as to circumstances, when compared with their depositions before the local authorities at Barraset, nor is there other evidence, either direct or constructive, to attach the beating and wounding to the prisoners. From the time of the death of the deceased to the time of his disinterment, no evidence beyond that of Beebe Joe has been adduced as to the appearance of violence and wounds on the body of the deceased, add to which, the time that elapsed (nearly eight days) between the burial and disinterment, and it is natural to suppose that the body must have been in a state of decomposition. The Court therefore would not place any reliance on the character or sufficiency of the evidence, and pronounced the prisoners not guilty. They were forthwith released.

The above case occupied the Court from Saturday last to 2 p. m. to-day, after which the case of Fizamdee and others for dacoity at Barraset was called on. We left the Court sitting after 5 p. m. —India Gazette, January. 4.

THE BALLYGUNGE TANK CASE.

The last public notice of the Ballygunge Tank case mentioned that the Nizamut Adawlut had, at the desire of the Government of Bengal, called for all the proceedings, for the purpose of revising them and reporting its opinion to Government. It was subsequently discovered that the effect of this requisition was to prevent Mr. Pattle being heard upon his appeal, the practice of the Nizamut Adawlut not allowing Mr. Bignell, the appellant's pleader, to address the Court on a case not judicially before it, but merely referred by the Government with a view to ascertain the state of the law, and the Commissioner being unable to proceed with the case, after it had been called for by the superior tribunal. Under these circumstances, an application was made to the Government, setting forth the injury that might accrue to the appellant from the course that had been pursued, and the Nizamut Adawlut was in consequence, informed, that it was far from the Governor's wish to interfere with the regular trial of the case, and was directed to time its requisition to the Commissioner so as not to cause any delay in the decision of the appeal by that authority. The record of the case had however been already received by the Nizamut, who, in consequence of the last mentioned letter from Government sent it back without any comment to the Commissioner, but that gentleman had most unfortunately just started for his circuit and there is therefore no prospect of the case being decided for some time to come.

It will be remembered that, in November last, the Commissioner directed the Magistrate to make certain enquiries as to the formation and proprietorship of the tank. Several witnesses were accordingly examined, and Mr. Patton, in a proceeding of the 13th December, stated that the evidence went to shew that the tank was the property of Government, but admitted that the testimony was not satisfactory, and called upon the Collector for a report on the subject. That authority passed a rotikary on the 20th instant, stating that after reference to the papers in his office, and a local investigation, it would appear that the Government had no claim to the disputed property, but that it belonged to Govindpersa Bose, the person who appeared before Mr. Patton in the first instance, and acknowledged he had directed the tank to be shut up, for which he was fined 200 rupees. It may just be observed, that these investigations as to the proprietary right would seem to be quite irregular, inasmuch as that is a question for the Civil Courts to decide—the criminal authorities ought to look only to the fact of possession.—Harkeru.

MISCELLANEOUS NEWS.

CALCUTTA.

CRICKET MATCHES.—On the 24th Dec., the Calcutta Club played a cricket match against eleven officers and privates of His Majesty's 44th regiment. The club won the match by two hundred and sixty three runs.

A match between the Calcutta and Dum-Dum Clubs came off on the 31st Dec., the Calcutta Club winning it in one innings by sixty-seven runs.

The concluding cricket match between the Calcutta and Dum-Dum Clubs, came off on the Calcutta ground on the 21st Jan., and was won by the Dum-Dum party.

SUICIDE.—Mr. J. D'Santos, Interpreter of the Court of Requests, hung himself on the night of the 24th Dec in an empty house adjoining his own dwelling. Depression of spirits, in consequence of the death of his wife, is the alleged cause of this rash and fatal act.

ROBBERIES.—Two dacoites were recently perpetrated in the Twenty-four Pergunnahs' one in Kidderpore and the other in Tollygunge. The magistrate has succeeded in apprehending the robbers, who have been committed for trial.

A servant in the employ of Conductor Canfield, who resides in a tent at Cooly Bazar, was on the night of the 9th January taken to the Chandney Native Hospital in a state of insensibility, with his head horribly battered. The poor man was found in that state by his master, on his return to his tent; who also discovered that a box which contained two hundred and fifty rupees and some precious stones, had been stolen. The box, denuded of its contents, was found at a short distance from the tent, on the morning of the 11th, as well as three foraging caps, a stock belonging to some soldier of H. M. 44th regiment—one of the caps having the letter M. on the peak—and a tent-peg, slightly stained with blood, which is supposed to be the instrument made use of in committing the dreadful assault. Captain Birch found the box on the plain. The wounded man's life is considered to be in danger.

Ten men were tried before the Sessions judge of the Twenty-four Pergunnahs, for having committed a gang robbery, on the 12th of July last, at Keotsha Bazar, Zillah Burdett. Nine of the accused were convicted and sentenced to labor in irons for seven years; the other was acquitted.

The house of Doctor Mellis at Dum-Dum, was attacked some nights ago, during his absence, by dacoits, and the almirah containing all his silver plate broke open, and rifled of its contents, not even leaving a silver spoon for the worthy doctor to use at breakfast.

CIVIL SERVICE.—It is said, that letters have been received from London, dated late in August, which mention, that orders either have been despatched or were on the point of being despatched, restoring to all civil employes the two per cent. of which they were mulcted by Sir Charles Metcalfe's measures for introducing the new coinage.

ATTEMPTED LAUNCH.—Two attempts were made, on the 24th and 26th, to launch the new clipper Rob-Roy from Messrs. Ambrose and Co's. building yard; but in consequence of some malicious person heaving driven a nail into the cradle, she was checked in her progress on the ways, and brought up close to the water's edge, where she remained till the next springs.

CHANGE IN THE CLEARANCE OF VESSELS.—A very important change has taken place in the forms hitherto observable in the clearance of vessels bound to the United Kingdom. Instead of the large and bulky manifests in duplicate or triplicate, and the troublesome true list, a simple application, detailing the cargo on board, the number of packages expressed in figures, not words, is all that is now required to clear a homeward bound vessel from this Custom House.

SHIPS BURNED.—The Gregson, Capt. Hamilton, was totally lost by fire on the night of the 18th Jan., forty miles south of the light vessel. The crew and passengers were all saved in the boats. The Princess Victoria, with a very valuable cargo, was also burned about forty miles from Bourbon, and her crew and passengers were saved by the French ship Thermidor and landed at St. Leu, in the island of Bourbon. The Republie was likewise nearly burned, while laying at Saugor, owing to some hemp having caught fire; but the flames were fortunately subdued.

MASONIC PROCESSION.—On the 27th of December, being the anniversary of the natal day of St. John, the Patron Saint of the Free Masons, a company of about two hundred and fifty members of that fraternal body, assembled in the Town Hall, from whence they issued at about ten o'clock, and marched to St. John's Cathedral, two abreast, the van of the procession being led by the Governor-General's band, playing the usual masonic tune of "Come let us prepare, we brothers that are," and the rear being brought up by the masters of Lodges. After divine service, the brethren returned to the Town Hall in the same order in which they went to the church, the band playing Burnes's farewell, and they dispersed, apparently very joyous, at about noon.

A very excellent and appropriate sermon was preached on the occasion by the Venerable Archdeacon, who taking for his text the first chapter of the second Epistle of Peter, verses five to eight, endeavoured to inculcate on the minds of his hearers the necessity of practising all the cardinal virtues.

Brother Hamerton, very kindly assisted by his daughter and Mrs. Atkinson, sang in an exquisite manner, an anthem composed by brother H. for the occasion.

The appearance of the procession altogether was very imposing, and attracted a numerous concourse of spectators who lined the streets from the Town Hall to the Church.

Major R. C. McDonald, one of the fraternity, conspicuous for his zeal for the institution, took an opportunity that morning, of presenting Lodge Humility with Fortitude, No. 279, with a very handsome allegorical masonic engraving, in token of his good feeling towards that Lodge.

SPORTING.—The Auckland vase, was won by Mr. Grey's grey country bred horse Hoornayoon; but the gallant grey dropped dead immediately after winning the race. The Calcutta Welter was won by Mr. Cockerell's bay Arab horse Pirate. The Tagore cup was won by Absentee, on the 16th instant. The knowing ones were completely taken in respecting this horse.

BENGAL ARCHERS.—The competition for the handsome medal given by the Earl of Dalhousie to the company of Bengal Archers, commenced on Saturday, the 7th Jan., and was continued the two following Saturdays. The medal is called the Dalhousie Prize. J. C. Wilson, Esq., having scored the most points, was declared to be entitled to the custody of the medal for the year. This is the first time this prize has been shot for.

ICE.—The last of the ice was delivered from the ice house on the 27th instant, and another supply just arrived in the Brighton. has been landed. It is found to be in good order, and turns out a hundred maunds,—a large proportion of the original quantity with reference to the length of the voyage.

DR. HELFER.—The service of Dr. Helfer have been engaged by Government, as a naturalist to be employed in the Tennesseem Provinces.

KIDDERPORE DOCKS.—On the 30th of Dec, the Kidderpore Docks &c., the property of the late Mr. James Kyd, were knocked down at the Exchange, to a company of merchants, formed by Rustomjee Cowasjee, Esq., for three hundred and fifty-one thousand sicca rupees. The Government had given orders to purchase the concern for three hundred thousand rupees, for the purpose of obtaining a portion for a Steam boat depot.

RUSTOMJEE COWASJEE'S BALL.—Rustomjee Cowasjee gave a splendid ball and supper to about five hundred friends, on the night of the 30th of December. Amongst the guests were the Hon'ble Misses Eden, Lady Ryan, Sir John and Lady Grant, Sir Benjamin and Lady Melkin, &c. The party broke up at three o'clock in the morning. The supper, consisting of most deliciously prepared and tastefully ornamented viands, was almost entirely supplied by Messrs. Mortimer and Co., who, aided by their six European assistants, succeeded in executing in the ornamental way, any thing yet supplied by their baking and boiling contemporaries.

MURDER.—On the 29th Dec., Jakeer Khan, Dhorah Khan, Namdar Khan, Culunder Khan, and Cazin Munder, were charged with, and tried for, the murder of Byrandee Sirdar; but were acquitted for want of sufficient evidence to establish the charge.

Four individuals were most cruelly murdered recently by a salt Darogah, near Chittagong. A party of men who were carrying salt without a pass, which salt they declared was purchased at a Government sale, were seized and confined by the Darogah on a suspicion of their being smugglers. Being unable to make them acknowledge that the salt was counterband, the Darogah proceeded to torture them by tying their arms behind and hauling them up to the roof of the thana, by ropes. One of the party escaped by bribing the villain; but of the others, after a continuance of the torture, four were actually starved to death; and the Darogah reported that they had died of cholera; but on the bodies being examined by the Surgeon of the district, the truth of the case was discovered. The affair is now under the investigation of the district Court.

Dabee Sing, a durwan in the employ of Maudhub Dutt, of Colootollah, committed a murder on his master's premises about three o'clock, on the morning of the 9th of Jan. There had previously been a dispute about a female, between Dabee Sing and the other durwans of the Baboo, three or four in number, of whom Jewan Sing, the deceased, was one. On the morning of the 8th Jan., the prisoner obtained leave from the Baboo, under the pretence of going to Cally Ghaut, and returned late in the evening; his real object, however, seems to have been to obtain a sword, with a view to put his fellow durwan to death. About three o'clock on the morning of the 9th instant, when all the durwans were asleep, he took advantage of the opportunity, and unsheathing the weapon, dealt a blow to Jewan Sing, which very nearly severed the poor fellow's head from the body. He then proceeded to Ramdial's bed, and struck him twice with the sword, first on the head and then on the shoulder; but the blows being broken by the shed he was sleeping under, they did not prove fatal. On receiving the first blow, Ramdial was roused from sleep and cried out "murder! murder!" which awakened Sutee, a syce, who, on hearing the alarm, came to Ramdial's assistance, and, after a great deal of struggling, succeeded in disarming the murderer. Sutee's hand was wounded in seizing the sword.

The police, soon after coming in, took the man into custody, and sent Ramdial to the Native Hospital. A Coroner's inquest being held on the body of the murdered man, a verdict of wilful murder was returned against Dabee Sing, who is to be tried at the next sessions for the crime.

On the 14th instant, one Buddoonauth, was tried before D. C. Smyth, Esq., Judge of the Nizamut Adawlut, for murdering a woman named Jawroo, with a Malay krese. The case has been postponed, in consequence of some informality in the proceedings.

A man of the Seikh tribe, named Ojagur, who lived at Machua bazar, disappeared on the evening of the 21st Jan., under the following circumstances. Between the hours of eight and nine on the evening in question, some person came to Ojagur's house, and called out for him; he came down stairs, and went out into the street and has not since been seen or heard of. Soon after day break the following morning, it was discovered, that the whole of Ojagur's moveables had been taken out of the house and scattered about on the floor of the room. Besides what was thus found, about 2,000 or 3,000 rupees' worth of property, is supposed to have been removed from the premises. It is suspected by some that Ojagur has deramped with the property which belonged to individuals that mortgaged it with him, and by others that he has been murdered.

PAYMENTS OF GOVERNMENT SALARIES.—Letters received recently, corroborate the statement week, that the Government determination in the payment of salary in the new currency has not been considered just, and that orders have come out directing that no individual shall suffer loss, but shall have the value of his siccas paid in Company's rupees.

ESSENCE OF MORCHA COFFEE.—Mr. Thomas Payne, the respectable provisioner of Cossatollah, has succeeded in making most excellent Essence of Mocha Coffee.

LAW COMMISSION.—It is said that in consequence of Mr. Cameron's proceeding on sick leave to the Cape, Mr. F. Millett has been appointed to officiate as a Member, and Mr. J. P. Grant as Secretary of the Law Commission.

THE PSEUDO RAJAH OF BU DWAN.—It is said that General Allard has twice recently visited the individual now confined at Hooghly, who represents himself to be Maha Rajah Purtabchund of Budwan. The General paid his second visit on the 4th of Jan., to the soi disant Rajah, and on both occasions he professed to recognize this individual as the person he met many years ago, on pilgrimage as a fakier, in the dominions of Runjeet Singh. In fact, the very first moment the General saw him, he addressed him as an old acquaintance, and remarked on the contrast in the situations in which he had met the pseudo Rajah then as a fakier—now in a rich dress which a number of burra sahibs attendant on him. At both visits the General held a long private conference with this person, and made minutes of what passed.

The period of this man's imprisonment will cease on the 30 proximo, and Mr. W. H. Tydd and Baboo Ramruthen Ghose, appeared on the 23d Jan., at the Collector's Kutchery in Allipore, to file the Nazir's kaifeet on security tendered. Rajkissen Rai Chowdry, and Gopee Kissen Roi Choudry, have tendered their shares of the extensive talook of Gowrdapore, situated in the 24 Pergunnahs, as security for the release of Pretaub Chund. It is expected the Ex-Raja will be at the Collector's office on the 5th proximo.

GENERAL ALLARD.—General Allard quitted Calcutta on the 7th Jan., en route to the head quarters of Runjeet Sing.

PILL.—A large shed, erected under the wall of the Custom-house, for the purpose of breaking stones for the roads, caught fire on the 6th Jan.: it made a tremendous blaze, but fortunately, by the timely aid of the fire engine, was got under without doing any damage.

ACCIDENTS.—A boy was accidentally burned to death in a house at Baug Bazar on the night of the 5th instant.

About two o'clock, on the afternoon of the 9th Jan., an old upper-roomed house suddenly fell in, killed an old woman, and wounded an old man.

A melancholy circumstance occurred on the river on the 14th instant, opposite the Chaudpaul Ghaut, which led to the loss of two lives by drowning, one a young lad, named John Brown, and the other a native doolaul. The crew of the Robert Small had obtained three days' leave for a spree, and hired two bhauleahs to take them on shore, to be towed by the ship's cutter, accompanied with a band of music. They left the ship with three cheers, the whole of them congregating on the poop of the bhauleah. The boats had not left the ship more than twenty yards, when one of them gave a roll, being rather crank. A second roll, and she filled, turning completely over, and precipitating all hands, who immediately clung to the side of the other boat, bringing that over also. A scene of confusion ensued, some got on the bottom of the boats, others were picked up by the cutter and a few by the surgeon of the Greenville, who was then passing in a dingy while the natives, who were near the place in dingies, looked on with their usual apathy. It was fortunate that the cutter was down, or a greater loss of lives would have taken place. After rescuing those about them, they followed the bhauleahs, which had drifted down as far as the fort, and succeeded in saving the remaining portion.

A man was recently carried away by a tiger, from among a boat's crew which had landed between Kedgerie and Mud Point. This is the eighth person destroyed by these savage brutes within a month.

THE STEAM MAIL FOR THE HUGH LINDSAY.—The 5th January being the last day for despatching the Steam Mail for the Hugh Lindsay, the press of letters was so great that the Bombay dawk did not leave the Post Office till half past ten at night. The number of letters received for the steamer that day was 793 and on the preceding day 130. This mail, it is believed, will be the largest ever sent from India by steam, being probably between 1,000 and 1,100 from Calcutta alone, and perhaps almost as many more from out-stations in Bengal and the Western Provinces, sent direct to Bombay.

THE INTERPRETERSHIP OF THE COURT OF REQUESTS.—The applicants for the Interpretership of the Court of Requests, vacated by the demise of Mr. J. Santos, were so numerous, that the Commissioner, Mr. Gordon, was several days occupied in examining the candidates. It is supposed that several hundred applications must have been made for the situation.

NAWAB OF MOORSHEEABAD.—Letters of a late date in August, have been received from Mr. Henry Chinquary, who left this port in March last in charge of presents from His Highness the Nawab of Moorshehabad, to His Majesty the King of England, stating that His Majesty had been graciously pleased to accept the presents, and signify his intention of conferring on His Highness the most noble order of the Guelph.

GOOMSOOR.—Letters from Goomsoor, up to the 4th of Jan., mention, that not the slightest trace could be found of Dora Bischoy's movements. A naique and cooly, who had strayed from the main road, had been killed, but no other deaths of any sort had occurred; several officers were however sick, and the hospitals beginning to fill.

UNCOVENANTED APPOINTMENT.—Mr. W. G. Smith, read assistant in the Revenue and Judicial Accountant's Department, has been temporarily appointed head Accountant in the Accountant-General's Department, vice Oxborough resigned.

ECCLIESIASTICAL REGISTRAR, &c.—Mr. Smoult, in consequence of severe indisposition, has tendered in his resignation of the office of Ecclesiastical Registrar, which appointment, according to the new Court regulations, has been amalgamated with that of Equity Registrar, now held by Mr. Theodore Dickens, who, in accepting it and the Admiralty Registrars, has vacated the offices of Master and Recordkeeper, which Messrs. Richard Vaughan and Archibald Dobbs succeed to—the latter to the Mastership.

THE NEW CRIMINAL CODE.—It is said that the Criminal Code is at length complete, and will shortly be presented to Government, after which it will require to be submitted for their sanction to the home authorities, and at the same time to be translated into the languages of the country, that the judgment of the most enlightened natives may be obtained in regard to laws which are to bind them and their posterity. It will hardly, therefore, be brought into actual operation much before the beginning of 1839.

HUMAN SACRIFICE AT BURDWAN.—The Sumbad Probakur states, on the authority of a correspondent, that about two months since, a human sacrifice was perpetrated in Burdwan, and that it is expected the horrible crime was committed by some ignorant, superstitious Rajah, in order to induce the sanguinary goddess Dabee, to grant him some object he desired.

BORING EXPERIMENTS.—The operations of the Boring Committee in the Fort have been suspended many days by an obstruction which has baffled all the efforts of the workmen to withdraw the rods. The depth of 320 feet, however, has already been attained, but with less prospect now of near approach to rock than when the former experiment was interrupted at little more than half the depth, and almost without any hope whatever of finding an artesian spring.

NATIVE SCHOOL.—Baboo Moteelaul Roy, has lately established an English School, at the residence of Baboo Ramchunder Chatterjee, of Bajepara, at which a great number of children are receiving the benefit of a good education.

SAUGOR RAILROAD.—The Englishman states, that Mr. Horneman has declared the Saugor Railroad, with a little deviation from the track laid down in the original plan, perfectly feasible; and that he will shortly return from England to commence laying down the rails.

DROMEDARY DAWK.—The Supreme Government has sanctioned the proposition from Bombay for the establishment, for the present, of a dromedary dawk between Mohammara and Benioot.

SEPARATION OF THE OFFICES OF COLLECTOR AND MAGISTRATE.—The propriety of separating the Magisterial and Revenue duties, especially in the large districts of Bengal, is now fully recognized, and a commencement of the desired reform is about to be made in the immediate separation of the offices of Collector and Magistrate in the Moorshehabad district, where the disadvantage of the union has been most strongly exhibited.

DALL TO THE MISSIS EDEN.—The ball given to the Misses Eden on the 17th of Jan., went off with great spirit, and was numerously attended, although a paucity of visitors was at first expected, from the circumstance of many of the elite of society, who have been accustomed to be consulted respecting the decorations, &c., having taken umbrage at being totally neglected in this matter. The decorations were far from being showy, but were extremely tasteful; and the only circumstance that tended to cast a shade over the conviviality of the evening, was the indisposition of Miss F. Eden, who was thereby prevented from honoring the party by her presence.

BONDED WARE-HOUSES.—It has been intimated to the Committee for the Bonded Ware-houses, that Government, after reconsidering their promise, find they cannot give the Export Ware-house grounds for the building of the necessary godowns, but offer in lieu, the Naval Store-keeper's premises and an adjoining pile of brick work, &c., which cost the Government, some ten years ago, about a lakh of rupees building. It is said, that the probability is, that the Committee will again propose the Import Ware-house ground, finding they cannot obtain the Export Ware-house premises.

MILITARY ITEMS.—It is said that Major General Watson, C. B., commanding the Presidency Division, has taken his passage in the Scotia, in anticipation of the assent of the Commander-in-Chief to his application for leave to England.

A letter from the Upper Provinces says:—It would appear that there is every probability of the abolition of Gurrawarra as a military post; but when the abolition is to take place it is impossible to say. The officers who accompanied the Head-Quarters of the 46th regiment to Jubbulpore, have not yet had their building ground allotted to them, although they arrived at Gurrawarra on the 19th of December.

DEATH OF DR. BRAMLEY.—Principal Bramley, of the New Medical College, died at midnight on the 17th of Jan. His remains were entered in the 19th instant, attended by a numerous assemblage of friends.

NEW DISPENSARY AND HOSPITAL.—A hospital and dispensary have recently been established, mainly through the exertions of Mr. Brett, where the poor gratuitously receive food, medicine, and medical attendance. It well deserves the support of the charitable community of Calcutta, without whose aid, it seems, this useful, though small institution, will soon be extinct. Surely, the laudable exertions of the founders, will not to be frustrated, by disappointment!

MEDICAL APPOINTMENTS.—Dr. A. R. Jackson has, it is said, resigned the superintendence of the Gurranihutta Dispensary, and it is supposed that Dr. D. Stewart will succeed him. The lamented demise of Principal Bramley, vacates the Park-street Dispensary, to which Mr. Brett is likely to succeed.

REPORT ON NATIVE JUDICIAL OFFICERS.—It is said, that Government have issued a circular to the Covenanted officers of the Judicial Department, calling upon them to make a report of the names of the Aumeens and Moonsiffs,—the names of their immediate ancestors, their places of abode,—their ages,—their religion,—the number of years they have served the Company,—the number of original suits they have decided since Lord William Bentinck's Regulation 5 of 1831,—the number of those which have been confirmed,—the number not confirmed,—and on the general character of the Aumeen or Moonsiff so reported on. The objects of this circular are to ascertain precisely the effects of that just policy, which has admitted the natives to the officers in question, and which has been the subject of so much discussion; and to mark the meritorious for promotion.

ASSAM TEA.—Further specimens of tea have been sent down from Assam, which are tolerably good, and fully equal to much of the tea imported from China. These were prepared out of season, merely to give the Chinese an opportunity of teaching some of the people of Assam, how to render us independent of the Celestial Empire.

A DUEL.—In consequence of the strictures of Mr. Stoequeler, the Editor of the Englishman, on the minute of Captain T. Sewell, respecting Miss H. Poihill, a meeting took place on the 24th of Jan., between the parties, which terminated without any bodily injury to either of them.

ECCLIESIASTICAL APPOINTMENTS IN INDIA.—It is said that the Court of Directors have determined to increase the strength of the ecclesiastical establishment in India, and that hereafter chaplains on their first appointment will receive only 600 rupees a month for a certain period, instead of nearly 800 rupees, the present salary. Two nominations have taken place in England upon this footing.

ADVENTUROUS EXPEDITIONS.—Two rather adventurous expeditions have been undertaken from Moulmein by two gentlemen in the Company's Service. One of them, Dr. Richardson, has set out with the intention of penetrating to the capital of Ava, by a new and unexplored route; the other, Capt. McLeod, is gone upon a more distant journey towards the frontiers of China, hoping to improve the favorable disposition manifested by the Shann tribes, and to establish friendly relations with the Chinese, who come down to that country in caravans for the purposes of trade.

BENGAL MARINERS' AND GENERAL WIDOWS' FUND.—The Bengal Mariners' and General Widows' Fund annual meeting took place on the 25th of Jan. The Fund has increased about 1,000 rupees, the balance being now Rs. 3,08,561 against Rs. 3,07,544 at the end of 1835. There are at present fourteen old members of the second class and two of the third class, whose joint contributions amount to 1,990 rupees.

PRESENTATION TO CAPTAIN CHADS.—The articles the merchants of Calcutta presented on the 28th to Capt. Chads, at a dinner at the town hall, consist of a silver breakfast set and a large silver salver, each of the articles bear the following inscription:—"PRESENTED TO CAPTAIN CHADS, C. B., BY THE MERCHANTS OF CALCUTTA," and the following words are added to the same inscription upon the salver.

IN COMMEMORATION OF HIS DISTINGUISHED SERVICES,

WHILE IN COMMAND OF H. M. S. ANDROMACHA,

EMPLOYED IN THE STRAITS AGAINST THE MALAYAN

PIRATES; AND IN ADMIRATION

OF THOSE PROMPT, BOLD, AND SUCCESSFUL MEASURES,

WHICH HAVE RENDERED ESSENTIAL BENEFIT TO COMMERCE, AND TO SUFFERING HUMANITY.

JANUARY A. D. 1837.

PRESENTATION TO CAPTAIN BALCH.—The humane exertions of Captain Balch, of the American ship George, in aiding the crew and passengers of the Heroine, when that vessel was dismantled, have induced the passengers to present him with a silver breakfast service.

ESCAPE OF CONVICTS.—Three of the European convicts on board the Pestonjee Bomanjee, which arrived off town on the 22d of Jan., from Bombay, contrived to make their escape a little after gunfire, on the night of the 24th. Their names are John Berry, Francis Todd and Thomas Seaward. Todd has since been captured by the Police officers, but no trace has as yet been discovered of the other two.

COUNTERFEIT RUPEES.—A large number of counterfeit rupees, composed of pewter and copper, is now in circulation; and they are so admirably constructed that few persons, besides the money changers, could detect the fraud.

MOFUSSIL.

DELHI.—There was a slight shock of earthquake felt at Delhi on the 17th of Dec., at 4 P. M.

It is said that there is good reason to believe that Mr. John Munro, nephew of Sir Thomas Munro, was shot at Kittoe by the friends of the Thugs he had been so recently engaged in arresting.

The Nuwab Akbar Ood Dowla, has just added another attraction to the Imperial City in the shape of a splendid mausoleum to his grandfather, which was completed last month.

AGRA. The Ekeekant Raja Ruttun Singh, arrived at Agra on the 13th of Dec., under a salute from the fort. His Highness's camp is pitched on a sand bank between the Taj and the fort, and is accompanied by a very large mob of about 5,000 people, whose food is supplied by the Company, at an expense which they will as considerably find an excuse of reclaiming from him some day. The troops of the station were reviewed before the Rajah on the morning of the 15th of Dec., and his audience with the Government took place on the 13th Dec. and his departure for Gya on the 16th. An escort commanded by Captain Hawkins accompanies His Highness.

Mr. Beckett left the station on his return to Europe on the 15th of Dec. The Office of Secretary to the Bank has been temporarily assigned to Mr. Abbott, the Assistant Secretary.

The Commander-in-Chief and Staff arrived at Agra on the 28th of Dec. His Excellency held a levy on the afternoon of the succeeding day.

The following are the names of the candidates for the Secretaryship of the Agra Bank:—

Mr. Grant, Calcutta; Mr. Gordon, Calcutta; Mr. Johnson Bombay; Captain Gray, 21st Nat. Infantry; Mr. French, Agra; Mr. Worsley, Neemuch; Mr. Bridgman, Gorakhpore; Mr. Cooke, Bank of Bengal, Calcutta; Mr. Metcklejohn, Attorney, Calcutta; Captain Cox, Invalid, Simlah; Mr. Lloyd, Allahabad; Mr. Paterson, Ghazepore; and Mr. Abbott; making a total of thirteen applicants.

The troops of the Station, under command of Brigadier Cartwright, were on the 31st of Dec., paraded for review in brigade, before His Excellency.

It is understood that the Civil Auditor and Accountant of the North Western Provinces, have been directed to remove from Allahabad to Agra.

The Commander-in-Chief left the station on the morning of the 5th Feb., in progress to Bhurtpore, Deeg and Muttra. The Lieutenant-Governor gave a brilliant evening party to His Excellency on the 2d instant, who dined on the 3d with the station at a large party, amongst whom were Sir Charles and his Staff, and on the 4th he reviewed the Artillery and entertained a party in Camp.

The Races commenced on Thursday and attracted a number of visitors, among whom appeared Sir Charles Metcalfe, General Stevenson, Brigadier Churchill, Col. Arnold and several of the Commander-in-Chief's Staff. The horses were few but the running good, particularly for Sir Charles's Purse, in the race for which the favorite at odds was completely beaten by the favorite sportsman of Agra.

FUTTEGHURH.—The general character of the khureef crop on the banks of the Ganges has been a complete failure, more especially among the pulses. Wheat is selling at 16 seers per rupee.

ALLAHABAD.—The present Editor of the Central Press has abandoned a seat which he could no longer retain with comfort; and with his secession comes the downfall of the paper.

On the 27th of December, the New Lodge Rooms were thrown open to the public, and Divine Service was performed by the Rev. Mr. Pratt. There was a goodly assemblage, and the reverend gentleman was enthusiastically masonic in his discourse. The building is quite an ornament to the station.

It is said, that Government have been applied to, to sanction a handsome stone ghaut near the mouth of the Jumna, for the convenience of passengers by the steamers, and for the safe landing of packages.

BEHAR.—A Sutte took place in this Zillah in the early part of this month. The deluded victim of this superstition was intrusted by her relations—whose feelings, in common with those of a great portion of the community, appear to have taken a natural channel since the illegalization of the rite—to forego the dreadful ceremony but in vain. When the preparations were completed the police of the neighbouring Thana, appeared to enforce the law, but were opposed by the very people who had attempted to dissuade their relation from the act. The ceremony accordingly went on. Subsequently all who were identified as offering opposition to the police, were apprehended and committed for trial.

GYAN.—A woman was recently murdered by her paramour, who strangled her in the night, with a sheet. The act excited a considerable sensation, and, after a strict search under the immediate orders of the Magistrate of the district, two persons of the Kuhar caste were apprehended and committed for trial.

The Raja has just completed the betrothment of his grandson amid the usual extravagance and waste of these ceremonies.

MOORSHEDABAD.—An anonymous petition having been received by Mr. Forbes, the Magistrate of Moorshedabad, on the subject of receipt of bribes by his amlah, he instituted an inquiry regarding the truth of the statement, and caused many mooktears, &c., who have constantly causes pending before the magistrate, to depose before him whether they had ever paid any thing to his amlah in the shape of bribes. The mooktears exculpated the amlah from any charge of the kind against them. It happened, however, while this was going on, that a person of the name of Hydaet Hosee, a mooktear of the Nawab of Azimabad, made his appearance in the cutcharry, and was interrogated by the Magistrate as the other mooktears had been. Hydaet Hosee, on this, stated that he was not a little surprised at the question, as he had been called upon but two days before, in the name of the Magistrate himself, by his Nazir and Naib, for no less a sum than five thousand rupees, which sum he did carry to those officers' house for delivery, but took back again, only because they said that they were not then prepared to take him before the eshab, to whom he wished personally to deliver the money; but of which ten rupees were taken by them on the occasion. The Magistrate upon this, threw the two worthies into jail, but the Naib has been since released.

MHOW.—The society of this station have experienced a considerable sensation in the following recent event. Mrs. Palsgrave, who was restored by her forgiving husband to her usual place in his affections after the action Palsgrave v. Worrell in the Supreme Court; and whose frailty was being forgiven by some of the charitable fair of the station, partly from religion, and partly from the feeling of the sex; being tired of acting the part of Calista or finding a little of the old leaven remaining which required removal, subjects herself to the penance of a new lover. An error in the delivery of a note roused the demon suspicion in the husband's heart, and search into the lady's escutcheon revealed the full extent of his honours. He forthwith walked out of one door—the lady by the opposite, and next morning the injured husband had a meeting with the destroyer of his peace, Lieutenant B——. The parties fired two shots but without effect.

KURNAUL.—On Tuesday the 27th Jan., being St. John's Day, the brethren of the ancient and honorable fraternity of Free and Accepted Masons, meeting at Kurnaul under the designation of lodge "Light of the North," accompanied by the greater number of the brethren of the station not members of the lodge, walked in procession to hear divine service. The appearance of the Mystic Craft was most imposing and grand. They were arrayed in jewels, sashes, and aprons, and marched from a tent erected near the Racket Court to the Church Bungalow.

The married men, gave a grand ball and supper to the ladies and bachelors of the station on the 6th.

LOODESEANAH.—Mr. Clarke, the Umbala Resident, arrived at Loodeeah on the 6th of Dec., a circumstance which has given strength to a report of Captain Warle's departure for Lahore, on some important Mission. Mr. Clarke returned to Umbala on the 9th of Dec.

The native town is all alive with the marriage pomp of one of the sons of Suju-ul-moolk, which is now in progress.

The 1st company, 2nd battalion of Artillery, arrived on the 14th Dec., from Neemuch.

The Vakeel of Thibet died at Loodeeah lately after a long illness, and was burnt according to the custom of his countrymen.

NATIVE STATES.

LAHORE.—Maharaja Runjeet Singh is, at present, located at Summun Booraj.

A splendid khilut was bestowed upon Monsieur Avietavel, upon the occasion of his being invested with the Government of Vuzzeerahad.

An urzie was received from Koonwur Kurruck Sing, intimating, that the Scinde Vakeels had waited upon him, with proffers of submission and fidelity from their masters; he, at the same time, urged, that if the Maharaja had not foregone his intention of conquering Shikarpore, a sufficient force should immediately be sent to enable him to effect this object. A reply was despatched, that the subject would be considered and the necessary steps taken; but that, pending this, the Scindians should be required to give 50,000 rupees in cash, two horses, to guns inlaid with gold, and two swords, as nuzzerana, to the Sikhs; also 21,000 rupees and two horses to the Koonwur himself; and that the Fort of Roojean must be made over, immediately, to the Shikhs.

Two urzies were received from Shah Newaz Khan, the Ex-Chief of Dera Ismail Khan, requesting permission to accompany Koonwur Nownehal Sing to Lahore to pay his respects to the Maharaja. Permission was granted, providing the Koonwur consented to the arrangement.

Khojja Mahomed, the son of Sultaun Mahomed, was asked what news he had of his uncle, Dost Mahomed; he replied—nothing farther, that he was still at Cabool. The Prince was told to write to his father, and tell him to place himself under the command of Sirdar Hurree Sing.

A most impudent imposture was recently practised in Lahore. The only child of a very rich bunneah was, at an early age, kidnapped from his parents' house, and although the strictest search was instituted, no clue, whatever, could be obtained towards its recovery. Twenty years subsequent to the abduction, a Hindoo faqueer, came one day to the bunneah's door, and proclaimed, in a loud voice, that he was the lost son, which assertion he bore out by a circumstantial detail of the events which preceded and accompanied the disappearance of the child; and, so much did the plausibility of his story deceive the bunneah and his wife, that they, at once, acknowledged him to be their son. They had, however, soon reason to repent of their credulity; for, after a short period, the faqueer decamped with a large quantity of money and jewels, and every effort to detect him has proved unavailing.

The appointment of Sirdar Hurree Sing to the command of the troops at Peshawur, has already produced official results, in as much as the Uzun Zies Pathans, could never, heretofore, be induced to pay their tribute, have now readily come forward to do so.

An urzie was received from Sirdar Hurree Sing, stating that he was out with his troops against the Uzun Zies Pathans, who still persisted in withholding their tribute from the Sircar: an answer was sent that no portion of the usual amount of revenue should be allowed to be withheld; and that, if any resistance were made, condign punishment should be resorted to.

Ellahce Buksh, Kamdar to Koonwur Kurruck Sing, represented that nothing definitive had as yet been settled regarding the contested question of nuzzerana, and that the Vakeels of Scinde were still disputing it. An order was given to the Kamdar to write to his master and tell him not to forego any portion of the original claim of 50,000 rupees and a certain number of horses, with the exception of the fort of Roojean, which would be given up again.

OWALIOR.—The Committee of officers attached to Scindia's reformed contingent, have recommended Sippre as the best situation for the cantonment about to be established.

BELOCHISTAN.—The tribe, headed by Oomur Khan, of the predatory hordes which infest this country, lately plundered a richly laden kafilah of shawls and other valuable goods; but, the merchants having submitted their case to the Chief of the country, he paid a large sum of money to the robbers and induced them to restore the stolen property, as he foresaw, that the immense revenue he derived from the trade passing through his country, would be materially injured were he not to afford protection to the merchants.

There having been no rain since the hot season, the country has been dried up and a consequent scarcity of grain prevails. The inhabitants have resorted to foraging across the border. A large body of them attacked several villages of Kanduhar, overpowered the inhabitants and carried off all they could lay their hands on.

BOKHARA.—The Chief of Bokhara and the King of Persia, Shah Mahomed, having come to issue upon the subject of the delivering up of one of the Persian Princes who, having escaped from prison took refuge with the Chief of Bokhara, a force of 30,000 Persians was despatched to Bokhara with injunctions to spoliage and depopulate the whole country; and, at all hazards, to bring back the Prince. The Chief of Bokhara hearing of this, solicited the aid of Ibrahim Pasha of Egypt (Mizr); which was readily granted; but which cannot now be afforded, as Ibrahim Pasha has quite enough to do in his own country, in subduing the Bedouin Arabs; so that Bokhara must fall a prey to the Persians, as the Chief cannot, with his small army, oppose so large a force as 30,000 men.

INDIGAN.—The thoroughly disordered state of this province, and the predatory habits of its short-sighted population, have effected a total interruption of the trade carried on through it between China and Cashmere. The Chinese Governor of Kashgul, irritated at this destruction of his traffic, adopted wise expedients to cancel it, and sent a large party to increase the natural poverty of his enemies by destroying their property, and carrying off as many for slavery as they could. The latter object was tolerably well effected in the capture of a large number of the Indigans. Those who escaped retaliated by an irruption into the Chinese Territories, conducted with all the humanity of man in his natural state.

HEERAT.—Shah Kaimran has just frustrated an attempt to dethrone him by his son, who had been instigated to it by some of the Heerat nobles, whose affections were alienated by the alienation of a portion of their property. The son, with a considerable number of followers, has fallen back to some distance from Heerat, from whence he menages a new effort to put himself in his father's place.

CABOOL.—The winter has commenced with such severity, that almost all the passes between Cabool and Kanduhar have, at this wary part of the season, been blocked up, and all intercourse suspended. Dost-Moohumud's attention is now directed principally to the regulation of his capital.

JEYPORE.—As a party of Major Forster's regiment of Shekhawatee Horse (about forty in number) were proceeding to Jeypore, on the 25th Dec., for the purpose of escorting treasure, when near Chowmoora, they received intimation that between seventy and eighty Kuzzaks, belonging to the disaffected Chief of Mundah, who had been recently plundering in the neighbourhood of Jeypore, had made their appearance and were not above three miles distant. The native officer, with the utmost promptitude, gave chase, and had the good fortune to come up with them just as they were about to retreat, after plundering some villages. The little party were immediately formed up, whilst the Kuzzaks gave them a volley of matchlocks; however, ere they could reload, the horsemen charged in and broke them, when several were cut down, and the rest fled and escaped, being favoured by the approach of night. The little band returned in triumph to Jeypore, bringing with them the head of the Chief of the Kuzzaks, together with other spoils. The Rawul was highly gratified by the zeal and activity of the detachment, and gave a handsome Zaisit, by way of manifesting his approbation.

A letter from Jeypoor of the 16th Jan., mentions that the state criminals Joha Ram and Fuih Lal, were to be marched off the next morning for Chunar, escorted by three companies of the 52d regiment N. I., and a party of suwars of the 3d Local Horse.

Major Alves has sent to the Rawul Buere Sal, a box of precious stones found amongst the property of Joota Ram. The Rawul sent the box to the Rannee, who assembled a committee of jewellers, to value the contents, which were estimated to be worth about seven lakhs of rupees. Rao Jewan Sing has taken the field with two regiments of foot and three hundred suwars against the banditti, which infest the country and commit outrages on all hands. One body, to the amount of several hundreds, at the head of which are two zamendars, are particularly obnoxious.

LUCKNOW.—Mr. Robertson, the aeronaut, made a successful ascent on the morning of the 27th of December, which excited great curiosity and admiration among the natives. After this was over, His Majesty performed the ceremony of presenting colours to his newly raised regiment of Foot Guards. The colours were presented by the King with the usual ceremonies and a complimentary speech to the commandant, Colonel Roberts, who made suitable reply. The novelty of the ceremony created considerable interest among the native spectators.

MADRAS.

CAPTURE OF A FEMALE THUG.—The celebrated female thug Jugdumali, has been seized with eighteen followers at a village twenty or thirty miles from Bangalore, through the exertions of Lieut. Dobbs, Assistant Commissioner in Mysore.

Another large body of thugs has been apprehended in Mysore, and evidence is accumulating against the party formerly captured, so as to leave no doubt of their guilt.

SIR T. MUNROE'S STATUE.—The site of Sir T. Munroe's Statue has been determined by the Governor-General. The spot is exactly in the centre of the Mount Road, equidistant from the Government House and Wallajah Bridges. The head of the figure, when set up, will be forty-three feet above the level of the ground.

DEATH OF MRS. CORRIE.—Mrs. Corrie, the lady of the Right Revd. Lord Bishop of Madras, died on the afternoon of the 21st Dec.

ROBBERIES.—Captain Wynch, who left Madras recently on leave to Bangalore, was attacked near Arcot, by a band of robbers, who deprived him of all he had in his palankeen, and having given him a cut upon the head, ran off.

A robbery to the amount of two lakhs of rupees has been committed in the neighbourhood of Nellore. Part of the property stolen consists of one diamond of immense value - 1,25,000 rupees. The greatest exertions are being made to trace the property and discover the perpetrators of this offence.

MEDICAL SCHOOL.—The foundations are being laid for a building, near the wells immediately in front of the General Hospital, which is to be a medical school house.

THE WEATHER.—The most unfavourable accounts of the weather have been received from the Coimbatore district. A drought almost unparalleled has this year been experienced; ploughed lands have in many instances not been sown, and sown lands have brought no fruit; the supply of water is so limited that even the garden crops have failed, and from lack of pasturage a heavy mortality amongst the cattle seems inevitable. By the register of a pluviometer kept at Coimbatore, the whole depth of rain, which has fallen from the commencement of last year to the 15th of December, is only 7.14 inches. Grain is already rising materially in price.

From Tanjore unfavourable accounts have also been received. Near the coast a trifling fall of rain had kept alive so much of the crops as was still standing; but the sickly appearance of the rest is apparent on the advance inland. The ryots were growing very apprehensive, and the price of rice was advancing materially.

GOOMSOOR.—Intelligence received from Goomsoor, mentions, that Bulear Sing is taken, and Dora Bissove is so hard pressed, that Mr. Russell has no doubt he will be captured in three or four days. He has but eight or ten men with him; the rest have fallen into Mr. Russell's hands. Accounts subsequently received state, that matters are progressing but slowly. Mr. Russell, was at Sinda, completely at fault, having lost all trace of, or clue to, Dora Bissove's movements, although a sort of belief existed that the rebel chief must have moved into some of the southern districts. Some sickness is experienced in camp, and officers have been lost to the service since the present campaign opened. The first victim to the fever was Lieut. Hayman, of the sixth, who died about a fortnight since. The second is Lieut. Colonel Hodgson, who died at the end of last month.

RUMOURS OF WAR.—The zemindary of Golcondah, half way betwixt Rajahmundry and Vizagapatam, has occupied the attention of the regiment stationed at Samulcouth to very little purpose for some months past. During the rainy season at Goomsoor, the Commissioner proceeded to that quarter to see what diplomacy could effect. The results of the said diplomacy have not yet transpired, but it is expected that a brigade of two and a half corps will shortly be marched into that district, in order to bring matters to a satisfactory issue. The zemindaries of Nyaghar and Dvypulla, bordering on Goomsoor, also afford grounds for uneasiness. The former is understood to be quite ripe for a row, and nothing but very adroit management on the part of Mr. Ricketts, the Cuttack Commissioner, will prevent a flame from bursting forth along the whole valley of the Mahanuddy, which would probably extend throughout the excited districts between that river and the Godavary.

RED HILL'S RAILROAD.—Captain Cotton's experimental line of rail-road from the Red Hills, will be completed in a few days.

DANGEROUS POWER.—The following circular order has recently been issued from the Madras Fouzdar Adalat:—

No. 81.—In pursuance of instructions received from the Right Honourable the Governor in Council, the Court of Fouzdar Adalat desire that the several magistrates in the provinces be instructed, that in cases where it may happen that conviction is not procurable from a deficiency in the evidence, and it may be desirable for reasons of State Policy to retain the accused in confinement, on that object not being attainable in the ordinary course of legal proceedings, it is their duty to bring the case to the special notice of the Government, in order that, if requisite, the provisions of Regulations 11. of 1819, may be put in operation.

BANK PREMIER.—The Wellington has brought to Madras, several lascars belonging to the late bark Premier, which was burnt near Ascension Island, by spontaneous combustion of her wet cotton.

SHIPWRECK.—An Arab vessel, the Fathul Bury, of 150 tons, was lost off Mangalore on the 19th of December. She was laden with salt and bound from Bombay to Cochim. The cargo was all lost, but about 4,000 rupees of treasury, which with the crew, were saved and landed at Mangalore.

NEW LODGE.—A new free-mason's lodge has been established at Madras by the members of the Armenian community, and named the Armenian lodge.

CEYLON.

FREE TRANSIT OF NEWSPAPERS.—An address has been presented to the Government of Ceylon, signed by almost every individual of respectability in Colombo, to request them to exempt newspapers from postage. The measure might be carried into effect by the Government incurring the trifling expense of £ 112 14s. 2d. per annum, which they can hardly refuse to do.

SALE OF CINNAMON.—At the Government sale on the 2nd Jan., the following were the prices of cinnamon.

"	1832 from 3s. 11½	to 4s. 3½ "
"	1836 from 4s. 5	to 4s. 6½ "
2d "	1831 from 3s. 2	to 3s. 4½ "
"	1833 at 3s. 3½	" "
3d "	1831 from 2s. 3	to 2s. 6½ "
"	1836 from 2s. 7	to 2s. 9½ "
Broken cinnamon of 1831 from 2s. 2	to 2s. 2½ "

JUDICIAL APPOINTMENTS.—On the 31st Dec., the Hon'ble J. Jeremie, Esq., was sworn in Senior Puisne Justice of the Supreme Court of Ceylon. By this appointment the Hon'ble Mr. Carr immediately returns to his former place as King's Advocate; and the other gentlemen lately promoted pro tempore to their original positions at the conclusion of the Northern Circuit, where they are about to be engaged.

BOMBAY.

PRESENT TO CAPTAIN CHADS.—The sum subscribed for the piece of plate to be presented to Captain Chads, for killing the Malay Pirates, amounts to four thousand seven hundred rupees.

GANG ROBBERIES.—About 12 o'clock of the night of the 10th Dec., a gang of robbers, consisting of five or six men, broke into the shop of a marwarree and pawnbroker situated at Girgaum, near the pleasure garden of Jugonoth Sunkernett, and possessed themselves of Jewellery and other property of the value of about Rs. 6,000. Resistance was offered by the inmates when the robbers, who were armed, wounded in several places the marwarree, and hung his wife, who was then near her confinement, out of a window which stood about fifteen feet from the ground. The poor woman was picked up after the robbers had retreated, in a senseless state.

About 12 o'clock of the morning of the 11th of Dec., another robbery was committed in the house of an oilman in the Paydownee Road, close to the Bhendy Bazar road, and there also they made use of their arms, having wounded the oilman's wife in the leg in their attempt to take off her anklets; she received two cuts, apparently with a large knife or sword.

COL. CHESNEY.—The Bombay Chamber of Commerce have voted Colonel Chesney, the gallant leader of the Euphrates expedition, their thanks, and presented him with a sword, in token of their acknowledgment of his exertions in conducting the Expedition.

MONUMENT TO THE OFFICERS OF THE EUPHRATES EXPEDITION.—Government have determined to erect a monument to the memory of the officers and men of the Euphrates expedition, who perished at Anna, and a subscription for the relief of the widows and children of the sufferers has been opened at the office of Ritchie, Stuart and Co., and at the rooms of the Literary Society.

STEAM COMMUNICATION.—The Bombay Government has declined the offer made by the Bombay Steam Committee of a sum of 1,000 rupees per month to the purpose of promoting the overland route from Bussorah to Beirut.

NEW BANK.—A meeting of merchants took place at the office of Messrs. Skinner and Co. on the 26th of December last, for the purpose of establishing a bank. A prospectus for the institution upon the principles of the Bank of Bengal, was agreed too, and all the shares for the thirty lakhs, were eagerly taken before twelve o'clock the next day.

Mr. George Ashburner, the Secretary to the Bank, which it is proposed to establish, was to proceed to England by the Hugh Lindsay, on the 8th Jan., for the purpose of endeavouring to obtain a charter for the Bank. Mr. Ashburner is to be succeeded in the Editorship of the Bombay Courier by Mr. Phillips, the Barrister.

AWARD IN THE CASE OF THE BARK CLAIRMONT.—A great many persons who applied for and engaged their passage on the bark Clairmont, to proceed to the Red Sea, on the day of the starting of the vessel on her voyage, and while she was about the mouth of the harbour on her way onward, saw reason to find fault with the trim of the ship, as well as other points about her, on which their comfort, as they considered, depended, and they thereupon determined on cutting their voyage short and finding their way back to Bombay. They were accordingly landed, and then arose the question which led to the arbitration in which the award we allude to has been made; that question was, whether the individuals who had so thrown up their passage were or not entitled to have their passage money which they had paid, returned to them; the arbitrators have decided that the money must be returned.

ATROCIOUS MURDER.—A most atrocious murder was committed on the body of a girl aged about 11 years, at the village of Sinaure, about 20 miles from Nassick, on the 10th of October last, in open day. The perpetrators have been seized, and are now in custody at Ahmednuggur. The only cause assigned, is the jewels which the unfortunate victim had on her at the time, valued at 1,000 Rs. The murderers decoyed the girl into their house, where they gagged her, fractured her head with stones, and buried the corpse within the compound. The parties implicated are three Brahmins, with the mother of two and wife of the third prisoner—a caste hitherto held in the highest veneration by every sect of the Hindoos!

MURDER.—On the 6th of Jan., the son of Narayan Sponléjree, the head clerk of the Naval Storekeeper's office, was murdered by some villains on account of the jewels he had on his person. The affair is under investigation.

THE KHASORE TAX TRANSIT DUTY IN CONCAN.—Another tax, called Khassore, which was imposed upon all merchandises brought in Poona and consisted of a portion in kind, has been lately abolished. The sum which it yielded, amounted to upwards of sixty thousand rupees.

The transit duty in the Conkan, the exaction of which was for sometime suspended, pending, a reference to Bengal, has been established again.

MIGRATORY ARABS.—Some hundreds of Arabs, who were discovered at Poona en route to Hyderabad, were prevented by the magistrate from going thither. Some more Arabs, who had just arrived at the Presidency with a view of going to the Nizam's Capital were also arrested in their progress. It is said that this course is adopted by our Government at the request of Chundoo Lall, who, finding these migratory Arabs so very troublesome, has at last appealed to the British to put an effectual stop to the nuisance.

AGRI-HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY.—The annual exhibition of vegetables took place at the Town Hall on the 19th Jan., under the direction of the Committee of the Agri-Horticultural Society: there was a very splendid show of every description of vegetable esculent. About eighty members of the Society and their guests dined together at the Town Hall the same night. The dinner was good, the vegetables excellent, and the whole most sociably complete.

There was a little scrambling for seats, which seems to have caused some members to retire dissatisfied from the party.

THE PRIME MINISTER OF THE RAJAH OF SATTARA. The Dewan or Prime Minister of H. H. the Raja of Sattara, was marched into Poona a short time since, under a strong military escort, and lodged in prison, in consequence, it is supposed, of some treasonable acts against the British Government, brought home to him in the affair of last Dewalee.

NEW PILOT VESSEL.—Another vessel for the Calcutta Pilot Service, was launched on the 4th Jan., from the dock yard. She was named the Kishnah; and, like the others which have been built at Bombay for the same service, was constructed with an elliptical stern.

MR. WEDDERBURN.—There was a meeting on the 10th Jan., at Mr Bruce's office, of some of the European and native friends of Mr. Wedderburn, for the purpose of considering how they could best testify their respect and regard for him on his approaching departure for Europe, and a resolution was passed for purchasing a piece of plate with a suitable inscription to be presented to him in England.

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE.—It is said that Government has, in reply to a letter from the Chamber of Commerce, intimated its intention to adopt all means for bringing Act XXV, of 1836, into effect here, and declaring Bombay a free port, as practicable, consistent with its due adoption to the local circumstances of the Presidency.

PENANG.

THE ACHEENES.—Penang papers received during the week, intimate that the Heir-apparent, or Raja Muda, of Acheen, had seized the Nacoda and Secretary of the bark Hamoody, of Tellicherry, sailing under British colours, while that vessel was at Teluksamoy, had extorted 200 dollars from the pilgrims on board, taken away several articles from the ship, and declared his intention of treating every vessel bearing the British Flag in the same manner, if he can, until the prohibition to admit Acheenese craft into Penang harbour, be removed.

SUMATRA.

A letter from Padang, of the 13th of December, intimates, that the war between the Dutch and the Boonjal Padres, was still carried on with great obstinacy on the part of the latter. Mynheer had prevailed against the Priests, and had taken and sacked the town of Boonjal, burning a Mohammedan temple of great sanctity in it. The Boonjalites had fled further into the country, and although they had been repeatedly defeated, were in no way subdued: they still harassed the Dutch, by attacking them whenever an opportunity was afforded, and cutting off their supplies, and their determination to carry on the contest to the death, remained unshaken. It was however expected, that they would shortly be starved into submission, as in their endeavours to oppress the Dutch, they were destroying their own sources for obtaining provisions, by devastating the country.

SINGAPORE.

SHIPWRECK.—The Pascoa, of Raffles Bay, has been wrecked in the Straits. She struck upon a rock shortly after leaving Singapore for China, and returned to that island with difficulty, and was run ashore upon the mud. She has been condemned.

CHINA.

The intelligence received from China, up to the 6th of December, has been of a very interesting nature. Bengal opium has made a slight nominal advance in price, but no transactions are reported, and Luckey and Malwa continue without demand. The purchasers of the drug are still under considerable apprehension from the proceedings of the authorities, and vigilant investigations are being instituted in all quarters, with a view to the total prevention of the importation of the article. The constant residence of the foreign merchants in Canton, has also attracted the attention of the Chinese authorities, and elicited an edict from the Viceroy for their expulsion; on the grounds that their long continuance in the city is contrary to the laws of the Celestial Empire, and that they are accessory to the surreptitious introduction of opium into the country. Pursuant to the edict, the hong merchants had addressed letters to the principal members of the foreign mercantile community, intimating the order of the Viceroy, that they should leave Canton within a fortnight, and return to their homes and threatening coercive measures, in the event of their hesitating to obey the mandate. The edict was treated lightly by most of the foreign merchants; but some of the well informed Chinese attached great importance to it. The foreigners are enjoined by the Hoppo, for the future, to leave Canton immediately after the departure of the vessel on which they bring their merchandise, — to entrust the disposal of their goods to the hong merchants, and to proceed to and reside at Macao, and there receive the proceeds of sales made by the hong merchants; but even at Macao they are prohibited from protracting their stay for any length of time.

While the Chinese were thus endeavouring, to their own detriment, to repel all association with the foreigners, the latter were simultaneously exerting themselves to ameliorate the condition of a country, from which they had been peremptorily ordered to depart within a fortnight, by the establishment of institutions highly calculated to benefit the trade of the place. A meeting of merchants was held on the 29th of November, at the residence of Messrs. Stanford and Marks, at which a General Chamber of Commerce was established. The entering fee for each firm on joining the association, is Sp. Mds. fifty, and an annual subscription of twenty-five dollars: for each individual Sp. Dhs. 50, and an annual subscription of fifteen dollars.

The formation of a Committee for the annual examination of apprentices, &c., of ships trading to China, has also been decided on, in commemoration of the late Captain Horsburgh.

The dispute between the hong and tea merchants, has been nearly settled, some slight differences only remaining unadjusted.

PERSIA.

The following has been received from Persia during the week—

A Letter from Tabriz dated 13th August, speaking of the departure of Mr. Ellis, H. M.'s. Ambassador to the Court of Persia, says:

"He came here last year charged with a complimentary Embassy and expecting only to be detained a few weeks; he has, however, been kept here in suspense for nearly a year, expecting daily to be relieved. His health has suffered much from worry and the climate; and he leaves this to-morrow in hopes of meeting Sir J. Macneil, the new Envoy, on the frontier, about the end of the month.

"What think you of a Shah who attends to public business from morning till evening, who has only three wives, living only with two of them, rarely inconstant to them, who accents, as a peishensch, with joy, 30 tomanas, where old Futeh would have required 5,000, and who gets up in the middle of the night to say his prayers; who despises jewels and would exchange all he has for military stores? Bamkyullal! say you, but, alas! the Shah does not understand business, and fancies his infantry is complete when the men stand in line. In short, Persia was never weaker than just now. The Shah and his Ministry have, however, a good time of it, playing the two European powers one against the other, but giving the turn to Russia. We are too polite to hold up our stick, while our rival puts a little money into one hand and has always his club in the other.

"Until the Persians fear us they will never put us on an equality with the Russians. Some think that a few officers and small supplies of military stores, are sufficient to excite the gratitude of the Shah, and make him a mere card in our hands—time will shew."

REVIEW OF THE CALCUTTA MARKET.

(From the Bengal Hurkaru Price Current, Jan. 31.)

INDIGO.—Nothing by private contract has been done since our last, holders evincing no disposition to sell but at previous prices.

At the public sale at the Mart on Thursday about 288 chests, were put up, and the quantity sold consisted of only 78 chests, the rest were withdrawn for higher prices than buyers were disposed to give.

RAW SILK.—Very little doing in the market just now in consequence of the high prices at which this article is held. Provision is extensive by advances at the Aurungs.

SILK PIECE GOODS.—The demand particularly for Corals for the English market continues active, and the prices are quoted at a slight advance on last week's rates.

COTTON.—Without report of transaction and the prices remain as last quoted.

SALTPETRE.—Has been in fair enquiry during the week for the American market. We have heard of no transaction for Europe, and the prices remain as last quoted.

SUGAR.—Some purchases are reported for shipment to England and Bombay, at our last quotations.

LAC.—A few transactions, in Shell and Dye are reported for the English and American markets at our quotations.

SAFFLOWER.—Without report of transaction.—The Article is quoted at an advance on previous prices.

DRY GINGER.—Also without transaction.—We have no change in price to notice.

TURMERIC.—Has been enquired for, for the French market, and the prices have somewhat improved.

GRAIN.—Operations during the week consist of Rice and wheat, and the prices of the latter are quoted at an advance.

Amongst the occurrences of the week, we observe a purchase of 1,200 mds. Dooda Wheat by the Hon'ble Company.

OPIMUM.—Very little doing in the market, a purchase of 10 chests Benares is the only transaction for Shipment reported since our last.

TIN.—A few sales have been reported during the week, and our last quotations have been firmly maintained.

PEPPER.—Has slightly given way in price, owing to recent importations.

MACE AND NUTMEG.—A sale of the latter is reported at our quotation.

BEEFLENUT.—Is in good enquiry, and is quoted a shade higher.

MULE*TWIST.—The position of the market in respect to demand, and the prices of the assortments, may be reported as in our last.

TURKEY RED YARN AND ORANGE YARN.—May also be reported as last week.

CHINTZES.—Sales of some Pines have been effected at a shade of decline in price. The market remains inactive.

WHITE COTTONS.—Long Cloths, Lappets and other figured Scotch Manufactures continue to be enquired for.

The Market remains slack for other descriptions.

THEATRICALS.

LE MAÇON.

This opera, which is full of pleasant and interesting incidents, and the music of which is light and sufficiently attractive, was represented on Wednesday evening. The house was pretty well attended, and the performance went off with much spirit, and was hailed during the process of representation, and at its conclusion, with considerable applause. Madame de Ligny, and Mademoiselle Fleury, in the second and third acts, executed with great felicity two very comic duettes, the accompaniments of which were very pretty. The acting of both these ladies was admirable. Bonniol and Fleury, upon whom the brunt of the battle rested, enacted their parts, and sang the music of those parts, with much ability. Fleury having something to do in this opera, did it with his usual excellence. Welter had about six bars to sing, but his beautiful voice, chaste method, feeling, and expression, made those six bars the gem of the performance. It was a sort of invocation, calling down celestial protection for the innocent, and was so touchingly made, that we cannot but suppose as a consequence that the divinities invoked became favorable. Both Fradin and Malle. L'Hémery, the objects of the invocation, were well deserving, by their admirable performance of their respective parts, of the divine protection. The artists will, we understand, give as their next performance, Rossini's opera Le Barbier de Séville.

We venture to ensure them a full attendance. With Fleury as Don Bartolo, Welter as the Barber, L'Hémery for a Rosina, and Bonniol for a Count, the cast will prove very strong. This, be it observed, is our cast of the piece; it may be that Welter will do the Guardian, and Fleury the Barber; in either case, however, the representation cannot fail of offering great attractions. The minor parts of Basil, and the second lady, will find representatives in Madame Thonon, Madame Fleury, and Charles.—India Gazette, February 3.

FRA DIAVOLO.

The reputation of Fra Diavolo has added materially to the laurels already acquired by the French artists. L'Hémery, De Ligny, Almaviva, and Charles, were inimitable in their respective characters; and the industrious Fradin, still struggling with physical infirmity, interested all hearers in the petit amour of Lorenzo. Bonniol certainly does the Brigand better than anything else—and it is by no means a part easily sustained. Thonon, as usual, had his orchestra in capital trim.

The vaudeville of Angeline, ou la Champenoise brought out De Ligny and L'Hémery in new characters. The former far surpassed the efforts of our little friend Flore, as might have been expected from a person of her acknowledged talents, but we did not think L'Hémery quite so happy as Madame Isidor in her own personation of Rose. There was much genius, much humour, much clever conception, in L'Hémery's essay—all calculated to raise her very highly in public esteem as an actress—but there were not that finish and delicacy about the performance which constituted the charm of Isidor's efforts. Nevertheless the whole personation excited great amusement and was rapturously applauded. The Champenoise song and rustic pas elicited a vehement encore. Fradin and Charles were both at home in their respective parts.

The house was well attended, and many persons staid till the vaudeville had concluded.—Englishman Feb. 13.

ITALIENNE EN ALGER.

The opera L'Italiana in Algeri, done into French was remarkable rather as affording an opportunity for hearing Welter to advantage, than for any intrinsic merit of the piece. This was however, attractive enough to all who love to listen to a magnificent bass voice exercised by an accomplished and tasteful singer. We know not how we shall have the patience to see this excellent performer thrust back into the "deep obscure" which, in most French operas, begets the bass after having had the satisfaction of hearing him sing in the true sense of the word. With all the disadvantage even of French instead of Italian words, we hardly remember to have listened to more successful execution of the bass in the well known Pappalaci trio than Welter's. The opera was, however, not Rossini's either in music, or in story. The French school, which has no music for the contralto voice, and which does not cultivate voices of that description, could not of course admit the adaptation of the Italian Opera as it was written, since the part of Isabella was composed by Rossini for a celebrated contralto singer, whose voice was remarkable for extreme beauty, great depth of tone, and very small compass. Hence the French school, in undertaking the engraving on itself of such a work, was compelled to omit most of the real music written for Isabella and transpose the rest where transposition was possible. This induced a remodelling of the whole piece, and in time, consequently the Italian two acts were spun into four French ones, in the two last of which there were positively only four introductions of the original music attempted, of which one piece only was sung in its complete state, the rest being mere bits and snatches of popular pieces of the Italian Opera. Add to this the adoption of the opening choruses from the Seni ramide, as accompaniments to the most comic incidents of the piece, and the thing may really, as far as Italian music was concerned, be termed a regular travesty. The humour of the original story was also filtered out of its broad burlesque into something not humorous and hardly even droll. It is impossible for the clever company of comedians who gave the piece, to do any thing, let it be ever so dull, without redeeming it somewhat by their acting; but still, this Gallic adaptation of Neapolitan extravagance, put us in mind of Antonio's imitation of himself in the masquerade: it is himself and not himself; yet he is known "by the wagging of his head, for he doth it so ill-well," but by nothing beyond this one item in an unfaithful self-copy, which is somewhat stupid withal. The finale of the first act was well sung; but the general effect of the opera was, (as we heard once observed of a dull farce well acted) 'unfunny.' How could it be otherwise when Tuddeo was made Kaimaran to the tune of 'Ergi omai' from the most severe of Rossini's tragic operas, and when Mustafa is invested with the dignity of Pappalaci behind the scenes, and enters as such in all the spruce propriety of a remarkably well dressed Marquis, instead of the loutish awkwardness of an unaffaired Algerine.

The Calcutta public will not now, perhaps, call so anxiously as they have done for Italian opera-Gallicised. The Barbier is, we believe, almost the only one of the so adapted operas, which is left nearly as the composer wrote it. Generally speaking the musical impress of the piece adapted from one country into another must suffer serious change from the difference of the schools of music prevalent in those different nations. Before the Italian company arrived here, a Calcutta paper (the India Gazette we believe) congratulated the public upon the intelligence of their approaching advent, for, observed the acute critic in music, "we shall now see Der Freyschutz done to advantage." The clamourers for Gallico-Italic operas are much upon a par with this ingenious gentleman. They might just as well ask for the English Barber of Seville, as Rossini's, in which, after the singing of an air of Paisiello's, introduced by words translated from Beaumarchais, Don Bartolo comes forward, and roars out to a feagular old whack-fol-de-rol-too-roo-loo-roo air.

Learned men
Now and then

Yield to very odd vagaries.

It's all very funny, but is no more Rossini's opera than the 'Italienne en Alger.'

We look forward to seeing the talented artistes who compose the French company once more in their own element in Masaniello, or some other opera of the school written in, and for the school in which they studied and were taught.—Englishman, Feb. 27.

THE MADRAS HINDOO LITERARY SOCIETY.

A deputation of the Madras Hindu Literary Society waited upon Mr. Norron on Saturday for the purpose of presenting him with a piece of plate in token of their grateful sense of his exertions for the intellectual improvement of the Native Community, in the delivery of a course of lectures some months ago in the College.

The deputation consisted of the following Native Gentlemen.

C. Lutchmiah Braminy,	Ramasawmy Chity,
W. Ragava Chariar,	Armoogun Moodley,
C. Ragavah Chityar,	G. Sashiah Braminy,
C. Vencatachellum yar,	Siddooloo Chity,
Chocapah Chity,	Rungah Chariar,
Strenevasa Pilly,	Gojay Jugga Row.

The deputation being seated, Jugga Row rose and spoke to the following effect—

SIR,—You have in numerous instances manifested a desire for our welfare—You have expressed it by words and you have evinced it by deeds; so that we cannot entertain the shadow of a doubt that in you we possess a warm friend, not only willing, but able to advocate our interests and to protect our privileges as natives of India and subjects of Britain. In the series of lectures which you have delivered for our instruction in a most valuable species of knowledge, you have laboured to impress on us that the elevation of our political and intellectual consideration is inseparable; and justly connecting them together, you have succeeded in convincing us of their mutual dependence upon one another. But our design on the present occasion is neither to expatiate on the exertions which you have employed for our improvement, nor on the sentiments with which the valuable nature of your services to our society inspires every enlightened member of it: we have already expressed the importance which we attach to your exertions: not indeed so fully as we might desire, but sufficiently to convince you of our gratitude, which we assure you increases in proportion as we advance in knowledge; for every day adds to your stock of intelligence, and by widening the sphere of our vision discloses to us in all its value the nature of your services to our society. It is therefore not for this purpose that we wait on you to-day, we have done so not to wound your delicacy by a repetition of sentiments which we have more largely expressed in an address presented to you by us on a former occasion, but we now wait on you with an offering of gratitude as a proof of its sincerity. We are sure that the less substantial evidence of our simple assurances would be more agreeable to you, but we could not be satisfied with the mere expression of our sentiments, and you will excuse us if we have gone a step further towards furnishing you with a more unequivocal token of our lasting esteem for yourself. This piece of plate has been purchased by our society, including the inhabitants of Bombay, as a lasting memorial of the feelings with which they regard your exertions in their favor, and we thus earnestly beg your kind acceptance of it as an additional obligation conferred on our society, who in now taking leave of you, do so by tendering you their most grateful acknowledgments and their most fervent wishes for your health, happiness and prosperity.

MR. NORRIS said, that, in replying to the kind and feeling address he had just heard, he would have the liberty to resort to that familiar course to which his friends before him and others had been so often accustomed on former occasions. By dispensing with formality he should perhaps more easily and more agreeably give utterance to the sentiments he had at heart. His uppermost feelings were those of grateful pride in acknowledging their sense of his efforts to be of use to them, and in receiving amidst his few more intimate friends the beautiful token of it on the Table. It was indeed a most elegant Specimen of the arts, and valuable as it was in itself, it was a gratification to him that it was not of that exaggerated quality as to raise invidious notice. He begged them to convey as publicly as they could his warm thanks to the members of the Hindoo Literary Society and others, and also to his partial friends at Bombay, who had joined in this tribute of respect and regard, and assured them he should not only himself ever look upon it with the happiest and most grateful sensations, but those who came after him, and to whom his memory would be dear, would preserve it, and cherish the honor they now paid him, with the same feelings.

He was desirous of taking this opportunity of their so happily meeting again, of calling their minds to some topics of peculiar interest to them, and to which he had had occasion to allude more or less on those evenings which they so well remembered. Since that period the Charter Act, to the anticipated qualities of which he had then so warmly directed their attention, had passed into law—and had truly and plainly opened to their view prospects of unlimited progress towards all the objects of political and social ambition. It required only that they themselves should become equal to the position they were called to occupy. It was unreasonable to suppose that so vast and interesting a change could be produced in practical effect at a moment—indeed, in his opinion, no greater mischief could be devised to their legitimate hopes and claims, than the over-sudden advancement, either in society or in the business of life, of unqualified persons to duties or stations which it was impossible they could without due preparation worthily fill. But the characteristic of the new constitutional law of this Indian Empire was, that the various stations and dignities in the state, and in social life, were open to all parties equally—and that the attainment of them would now mainly rest with themselves, as indeed for the most part it did with their fellow-subjects of the European community. It was a source of unfeigned happiness to him, as those friends before him would from their knowledge of his feelings on these subjects believe, that he was able to allude to actual instances of proof of these effects of the new charter in his own Presidency as well as in both the others. In the other Presidencies, owing to that advancement in European knowledge and literature, as well as in commercial wealth and more intimate communion with European society, (which he should deceive them if he should not plainly say was certainly greater than at present characterised the Native community of this place) many native gentlemen already occupied posts of importance, which they filled to great public benefit. There sat before him at that moment their friend RAGAVAN CHARIAR—a Magistrate—assigned to fulfil useful and dignified functions in the state under our own Presidency and holding a lawful rank in society equal to that of any European gentleman now before them. Another Native gentleman whom he did not personally know, held the responsible office of Assistant Collector, which they knew was one ordinarily filled by a member of the Civil Service. His allusion to these topics, which must be so gratifying to their feelings, as they truly were to his own, naturally led him to advert again to those impressions by which he had been actuated in his efforts to impart that desirable information which, at their suggestion, he had before engaged in, and which they were then requiting. His own persuasion was, that it was to such as were assembled in that room—to the superior classes of the Native community—that the public at large must look for any effective endeavours towards the political and social amelioration of the people of this country. It was their sense of the value of mental culture, of the astonishing powers attendant on the superior attainments, in the arts, the sciences, in general literature, and in knowledge of every quality, which distinguishes Europeans, which alone could give the true and successful impulse towards such grand and exciting results. They must themselves feel urged to the gaining for their own service and gratification—or at all events to the procuring for the rising members of their families—the means, through intellectual improvement, of cooping with others of the superior classes in the state, and of becoming more and more qualified, as well as inclined, to court a nearer intercourse in social life with the European community, as the surest course to that share of independence and wealth and political station which they had a right to seek. It was not to the lower order of natives, and to the progress they might be made to attain through charitable means in the inferior branches of education, that he was disposed to look for important results like these—though he would not be understood to disparage those exertions directed to the improvement of the lower orders, which might without doubt produce some benefit. But his object was to direct their minds to higher considerations, and to departments of knowledge, in which it was not to be expected that the lower orders could make any proficiency, and which were, of course, not at all adapted to their condition of life. It was vain to expect that instruction was to be imparted from the inferior classes throughout the higher, (composed of gentlemen such as there sat before him,) of the quality, for instance, which distinguished their friend JVOOA ROW who had just addressed him—whose literary labours, he would venture to assure him, were marked and anxiously watched by others, as well as those kind friends of his who were his habitual instructors. It was not to be expected that those labours in explaining the history and antiquities of India in which their friend CAVELLY LURAMIAH (whom he was happy to see on this occasion) had been so long and creditably engaged, and whose name was so well known and respected in England, could be appreciated, much less followed up by others than such as themselves. It must be obvious also that all advancement in the highest order of attainments—such as political knowledge and jurisprudence—could only be the aim and hope of the more cultivated and wealthier classes. At the same time, it must necessarily follow, that the mental progress of the superior members of the Native community, in those departments of knowledge which advanced them to higher stations in the state, and which introduced them to friendly and familiar intercourse with European society, would shed an influence far and wide, and to which it is impossible to fix any limits. Impressed with these ideas and views he had proffered them those slender services which they had so well received, and so amply repaid. It was under that impression that he was as desirous as ever to prove himself useful to those among their community who had become his friends, whenever the occasion may offer. A project with that view had been suggested through the medium of two or three of the gentlemen now sitting with them, which he had sincere gratification in recommending to their notice. It was, that some arrangement should be made for periodical meetings of a friendly and familiar kind at which they might freely converse with him on subjects connected with literature, or science, or political knowledge, in which they might take an interest, and which were worthy of their attention. He would not enter into any details on this topic on an occasion like the present, which was not quite suited to a practical consideration of them. He would be content to mention, in a general way, that it did appear to him likely that they might spend in company a few occasional hours in the enquiry into and discussion of subjects of this nature at least agreeably, if not usefully. That he was engaged in avocations that left him time to be but very partially acquainted with those departments of knowledge altogether unconnected with his profession and duties; but, as a friend among friends, rather than as a professor or teacher before his pupils, he should be happy to renew his intercourse with them with these objects in view and he would leave it with them to consult together, and afterwards with himself, upon arrangements of the nature proposed. Whether in this or in any other manner by which he could testify his anxious desire to aid their honorable efforts towards the attainment of useful knowledge, he hoped they would believe and act upon his sincere assurance of his cheerful co-operation. He had the greatest value for their esteem and good-will—he should retain the recollection of the present and their former expressions of it to the close of life, when—after all—the sweetest and dearest reflections must arise out of testimonies like these of having lived for the benefit of those around us.

A few of Mr. NOKRON's particular friends only, were present on the occasion.

The piece of plate, which is of exquisite workmanship, from the hands of GREEN and WARD, forms a centre piece for the dining table. It is composed of a circular elegantly shaped base, upon which rest the figures of two Hippodoms in thoughtful attitudes, and that of a youthful Muse in the act of writing from dictation. These figures are beautifully finished in frosted silver, and the expression of the Muse is conceived with remarkable effect. From this base rises a fluted column surmounted by palm leaves which support a richly modelled flower dish. On one side of the base the arms of the proprietor are emblazoned, and on the other appears the following inscription—

Given by the Madras Hindu Literary Society, on behalf of the Native Inhabitants of Madras and Bombay,
GROWER NOKRON, Esquire,
Advocate-General of Madras.

As a mark of their grateful acknowledgement of the obligation conferred by that learned Gentleman upon their community, by the delivery of a series of lectures on the System of Government and Administration of Justice in India, 1834.

The piece is certainly one of the most masterly specimens ever executed in this department of the arts.—

AGRICULTURAL AND HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY OF INDIA.

A general meeting was held in the Town Hall, this morning, at half past 9 o'clock.

PRESENT.

The Hon'ble Sir E. Ryan, in the chair,

The Hon'ble Col. Rehling,	F. P. Strong, Esq.,
W. Storm, Esq.,	N. Wallich, M. D.,
H. Walters, Esq.,	A. Dobbs, Esq.,
C. Hufnagle, M. D.,	Arch. Grant, Esq.,
John Allan, Esq.,	H. Wilson, Esq.,
M. S. Staunton, Esq.,	Col. Colvin,
Alexander Colvin, Esq.,	The Rev. T. Boaz,
H. Cowie, Esq.,	G. A. Prinsep, Esq.,
Colonel Caulfield,	and
David Hare, Esq.,	John Bell, Secretary.

VISITOR.

Monsieur DELFSEERT.

The proceedings of last meeting were read and confirmed.

The following gentlemen, proposed in January last, were duly elected by ballot, viz.

F. Colbyn, Esq.,	Alexander Beattie, Esq.,
W. B. O'Shaughnessy, M. D.,	G. T. F. Speed, Esq.,
H. H. Goodeve, M. D.,	D. W. H. Speed, Esq.,
John Hains, Esq.,	E. Latour, Esq., C. S.,
Alexander Colvin, Esq.,	M. Maclean, Esq.,
H. Cowie, Esq.,	J. R. Colvin, Esq., C. S.,
J. S. Stafford, Esq.,	G. A. Prinsep, Esq.,

The following gentlemen were proposed as Members, viz.

J. F. Cathcart, Esq., C. S., proposed by the Secretary, for D. McFarlan, Esq., seconded by John Bell, Esq.

James Hills, Esq., G. S. Hills, Esq., James Hills, Junior, Esq., and Frederick MacLagan, Esq., proposed by Charles Deverrigne, Esq., seconded by John Bell, Esq.

Nathaniel Alexander, Esq., proposed by C. K. Robinson, Esq., seconded by W. Storm, Esq.

Dr. W. Speirs, proposed by Dr. Wallich, seconded by John Bell, Esq.

Dr. G. N. Cheek, proposed by Dr. Wallich, seconded by Dr. Strong.

M. Bignell, proposed by Dr. Wallich, seconded by John Bell, Esq.

G. Cheap, Esq., C. S., proposed by H. Walters, Esq., seconded by John Bell, Esq.

Dr. O'Dwyer, proposed by H. Walters, Esq., seconded by John Bell, Esq.

Captain Lysaght, proposed by H. Walters, Esq., seconded by John Bell, Esq.

W. H. Macnaghten, Esq., proposed by A. Dobbs, Esq., seconded by Sir E. Ryan.

Lieut. Hannington, proposed by Col. Caulfield, seconded by Dr. Wallich.

Baboo Maudhub Dutt, proposed by Col. Colvin, seconded by A. Colvin Esq.

Col. Colvin presented to the Society a large bag containing upwards of a maund of upland Georgia cotton, being the reproduction of several successive crops, derived from seed, originally brought from America, and forwarded through Dr. Wallich. This large sample was highly thought of by the meeting, and a bag of seed which accompanied shewed that it had experienced no deterioration.

Col. Colvin stated that he had induced 100 villages along the line of canal to adopt the cultivation of this superior cotton, and had distributed to each village, seed sufficient to plant about one beegah—as a beginning. Col. C. further informed the meeting, that the natives were most anxious to obtain further supplies of seed, which will now be put within their reach, through the aid of R. Lowther Esq., of Allahabad, who has kindly relieved Capt. Watt of the balance of seed, in that gentleman's department, Capt. Watt being under orders to march to Saugor.

Proposed by D. Hare, Esq., seconded by Dr. Wallich, and Resolved unanimously,

That the special thanks of the Society be offered to Col. Colvin for his zealous exertions, in introducing this cotton into Upper India, and for the fine sample this day produced.

Resolved further on a motion from the President, that his cotton be submitted for the opinions of such gentlemen as are competent to form a judgment of its quality.

Resolved, that the surplus cotton be made into cloth.

Proposed by Col. Colvin and Resolved, that the Secretary, be requested to address Mr. Lowther, the special Commissioner, at Allahabad, on the subject of a verbal communication, made to Col. Colvin by Mr. Lowther in December last, proposing to establish at that station, a Brass Society, and experimental farm for the reception of such plants and seeds as might be forwarded by the Calcutta Society, for the purpose of supplying, the wants of members and others beyond Allahabad, and with reference to the peculiar advantage which that station possesses as a central department, that Mr. Lowther be solicited to ascertain how far by voluntary contribution and subscriptions, these desirable objects could be carried into effect.

Proposed by the Revd Mr. Boaz, seconded by H. Walters, Esq., that a premium of 1,000 rupees, be offered to any person who will compile in English an Indian Gardeners' Manual and that the Society do subscribe for 200 copies of the Translation in the native language.

Resolved, that the proposition of Mr. Boaz be referred to the Agricultural Committee for further consideration, and that it be brought forward for final determination at the next general meeting.

Proposed by the Secretary, and unanimously resolved, that the sum of one hundred rupees be allowed for the purpose of purchasing some seeds and bulbs, brought to this country by Monsr. Arnold, lately arrived in Calcutta, with a view to encourage him.

Proposed by the Secretary, seconded by W. Storm, Esq., and Resolved, that with reference to the prosperous state of the Society's funds, a small sum (as may be recommended by the Committee of papers) be left to the discretion of that Committee, to lay out from time to time in useful referential works relating to Agriculture and Horticulture.

Read extract of a letter to the address of H. Walters, Esq., from Capt. Lysaght, dated Bolaram, near Hyderabad, soliciting a supply of fresh garden seeds. Capt. L., states that in that quarter they have peas in August and September, and also in January.

Read extract of a note from H. Walters, Esq., to the Secretary, stating that the Collectors of Midnapore and Tipperah and the Judge of Mymensing have written to him to say that they are desirous of establishing Branch Societies at their stations.

Mr. Walters suggested to the Meeting the propriety of requesting the aid of Government to procure monthly returns of the prices of grain, from the magistrates and other officers, throughout the different districts, and that those functionaries be requested to forward their reports under cover post-free to the Secretary of this Society.

Dr. Wallich submitted a pamphlet by Mr. N. B. Ward, "on the growth of plants without open exposure of air."

The President stated, that the next paper which he would bring forward, was one of great interest, that it was rather too long to be read at a meeting which he would be obliged to withdraw from immediately, but the members would soon be gratified with a perusal of it in a printed form, he would only therefore at present give the substance in abstract.

The paper Sir Edward Ryan added, was presented to the Society, and had been specially prepared for that purpose by Dr. McClelland by desire of Lord Auckland, and is as follows. Report on the physical condition of the Assam Tea plant, with reference to Geological structure and soils, by Dr. John McClelland.

This report is divided into the following heads.

1. Signs of subterranean movements on the northern frontier of Bengal.
2. Proofs of the upheavement of the Kossia mountains evinced by the remains of a talus extending along their base and by a raised beach characterised by tertiary shells.
3. Geological structure of lower Assam and evidence of the local disturbance of rocks in this situation, and consequent obstruction of the Bramaputra.
4. Hydrographical extent of the rivers which enter Upper Assam, and a description of the alluvium they have there produced.
5. Tea plant connected with certain streams and confined to the alluvial basin.
6. How rice grounds are formed and sand banks converted into arable land.
7. How birds and wild animals contribute to these changes.
8. Tumuli and other remains of the former power of the Asamese, and how these affect the indigenous character of the Tea plant in Assam.
9. Migration of the plant.
10. From whence derived.

Proposed by the President, seconded by Dr. Wallich, that Dr. McClelland's report, be forthwith published in the Society's transactions.

From Ross D. Mangles, Esq., Secretary to Government, Revenue Department, dated 20th Dec. 1836, enclosing extract of a letter from the Court of Directors under date 27th July last, and with reference thereto, calling upon the Society to furnish a report of experiments made, from the American cotton seed, sent from England some years ago.

The Secretary had replied to the above call, by enclosing a copy of the Society's printed report, on the experiments in question.

From H. T. Prinsep, Esq., Secretary to Government, General Department, dated 28th Dec. 1836, forwarding copy of a letter from the acting Secretary to the Bombay Government, dated the 12th Nov., addressed to the Government of Bengal on the subject of procuring a supply of the Otaheite sugar-cane, and requesting the assistance of the Society on the occasion.

The Secretary had referred the question to Captain Sleeman, soliciting that gentleman's aid, in forwarding a supply to the Collector at Ahmednuggur, as the Society have been dis-appointed in supplies from all quarters for their own nursery.

From W. Blundell, Esq., Moulmein, dated 24th Dec. 1836, acknowledging the receipt of cotton and other seeds, sugar-cane and coffee plants, which had been forwarded by desire of the president and with the assistance of Dr. Wallich.

From Captain Watt, dated Allahabad, 14th January, in reply to the Secretary's letter of the 16th December, 1836, acknowledging the receipt of the nine bags of cotton seed therein alluded to.

From the same, to the same, dated 27th January, intimating his regret, that in consequence of being under orders to move from Allahabad to Naugor, he would no longer have it in his power to be useful to the Society,—and that he had made over to R. Lowther, Esq., the remainder of the seed (cotton), which had been forwarded to his care from time to time for distribution.

From Colonel Dunlop, to the Secretary, dated Camp Mahamedabad, 19th December, giving an account of the manner he has distributed the cotton seed from Allahabad up to Cawnpore, enclosing a letter from Lieutenant W. Stewart, stating the manner in which he intends disposing of his portion of the cotton seed, and offering his services to the Society.

From Mr. Grant Thorburn, of New York, to the address of Dr. Wallich, dated 20th July, enclosing invoice of the vegetable and cotton seeds alluded to in a former communication.

From F. Campbell, Esq., dated Midnapore, January 6th, stating that sugar-cane, cotton and tobacco, are extensively cultivated in that district and offering his services to the Society in distributing seeds and plants.

From M. P. Edgeworth, Esq., to the Secretary, dated Ambala, 4th December, advising despatch by the Steamer from Allahabad, of seven different specimens of soils, with a request that they may be analyzed and the results communicated to him.

From Major Gwatkin, dated Haupper, December 5th, acknowledging receipt of a parcel of seeds (part of the Collection brought out by Lord Auckland), also of the Egyptian cotton seed, mentions the total failure, with the exception of tobacco seed of the former,—and the loss of the latter, before the plants attained maturity. Desires to have a supply of seed oats and Otaheite sugar-cane.

From W. Liddell, Esq., Secretary to the Madras Society, acknowledging receipt of the plants and seeds forwarded per "John Adam", which had arrived in excellent order.

From J. Vaupell, Esq., Secretary to the Bombay Society, acknowledging receipt of a box of Peruvian cotton seed, and advising the despatch of 100 Mauritius sugarcane cuttings, per Ernaud,—and encloses a paper on Cebithual by a member of that body.

From Dr. Helfer, dated 8th January, acknowledging the receipt of the Secretary's letter, with some boxes and bags of seeds for distribution in Assam.

From James Prinsep, Esq., Secretary to the Asiatic Society, dated 2d February, forwarding for circulation among the members of the Agricultural Society, six copies of a circular received from the Royal Asiatic Society on the subject of the collection of information, regarding the natural and agricultural products of India.

From Dr. Huffleagle, dated 21st December, in reply to the Secretary's letter on the subject of procuring vegetable seeds from America, expresses his willingness to forward the wishes of the Society in this matter.

The Secretary, submitted the produce of the plant "maranta arundinacea," brought out to this country by Lord Auckland. This plant Mr. John Bell received from the Botanic Gardens in April, and had it planted in the scorching heat of that month—it was re-transplanted in August, but under these disadvantages has given abundant returns in bulb.

Mr. Bell also laid before the meeting the produce of a few slips of real West India Ginger, received from Mr. Hodgkinson on the 2d February, 1836, (vide proceedings 10th Feby. 1836.) The returns are abundant, and it is hoped that this root so superior to the best ginger cultivated in India, will now be extended.

These plants have been handed to Dr. Wallich, for the purpose of being planted in the Society's nursery.

The Secretary informed the meeting that, with the concurrence of the Committee, H. Walters, Esq., J. P. Grant, Esq., and Baboo Dwarkanath Tagore—he had forwarded to Government a series of Agricultural and Statistical Queries, with a solicitation that Government would be pleased to sanction and countenance their circulation—as proposed by Mr. Walters in his paper read at a former meeting, a copy of these queries has been forwarded this day to the several Editors, who, by giving them a place in their columns, will be doing a service to the Society at large.

The thanks of the meeting were ordered for the foregoing presentations and communications.

JOHN BELL, Secretary.

Calcutta, Town Hall, Wednesday, 8th February, 1837.

P. S.—Read a note from J. C. Marshman, Esq., laying before the Society, 2 copies of vol. 3, Society's transactions, complete, with a memo. of the cost of publication amounting to 736/12-6.

Resolved, that Mr. Marshman's bill be passed and that the thanks of the Society are given to Mr. Marshman for his indefatigable exertions in getting the vol out so soon.

AGRI-HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY QUERIES.

Queries about to circulated by the Agricultural and Horticultural Society, with the view of collecting information regarding the Agricultural resources of different districts of India.

1st.—The nature of the soil, and climate of the district?

2d.—The manner in which the land is possessed by great or small proprietors?

3d.—The manner in which the land is occupied, whether by great or small farms?

4th.—The manner in which the land is employed, whether in pasture, in husbandry, or both?

5th.—If in pasture, what grasses are cultivated? Has the Guinea-grass been tried, and if so, to what extent do you think it could be advantageously introduced? Has the clover been tried, and with what success?

6th.—What species of stock is kept? Whether the breeds can be improved, or whether new breeds ought to be tried? Is there any individual in your district, who would be disposed to pay attention to improving the breed of cattle?

7th.—Whether any of the land is watered, and whether any considerable extent of ground is capable of that improvement?

8th.—For what particular crops is land in your district irrigated, and what is the mode of irrigation?

9th.—If the land is employed in husbandry, what crops are cultivated?

10th.—What is the rotation of crops?

11th.—Is indigo cultivated, and to what extent? Is cotton cultivated, and to what extent? Is sugar-cane cultivated and to what extent?

12th.—What are the peculiarities of the soils, occupied by these articles?

13th.—Have the varieties of foreign cotton been tried, and with what success? Has the Otaheite cane been introduced, and to what extent and with what success?

14th.—Is fallowing practised, or is the same land applied to the same purpose from year to year?

15th.—Is manure used, and of what kind? Could the system of manuring be extended, and could the natives be induced to pen their cattle, instead of using the manure as fuel?

16th.—Are oxen or buffaloes commonly used? Would mules not be preferable for draft?

17th.—What are the usual sorts of roughs, carts, and other implements of husbandry? Could originals or models be procured for this society without much inconvenience?

18th.—What is the usual seed time and harvest for the different crops?

19th.—What is the extent of waste lands and the improvement of which they are most capable?

20th.—What is the rate of wages, and price of labor? and what are the hours at which labor commences, and ceases at the different seasons?

21st.—Is any attention paid to draining lands, and what sort of drains are used?

22d.—Is any attention paid to embankments?

23d.—Is the country well wooded, and what sort of timber is chiefly grown?

24th.—What is the state of the roads?

25th.—Is the district intersected by streams?

26th.—Is land or water carriage resorted to for the conveyance of produce?

27th.—To what extent have manufactures or commerce been carried on in the district, and have they had either good or bad effects on its agriculture?

28th.—If a manufacturing district, what proportion of the population has been thrown out of work by the cheaper imported European cottons, and have they taken to any other employment?

29th.—Are there any other societies instituted in the district for the improvement of agriculture?

30th.—Do the natives seem to have a turn for improvements, or how could such a spirit be best excited?

31st.—Are there any obstacles to improvements, and in what manner can they best be removed?

33d.—Is there any individual, who could favor the Society with a rough map of your district, subdividing the lands by colors, in reference to the portion cultivated by particular crops, say blue for indigo, brown for sugar, yellow for rice, green for pasture, white for waste lands, and so on?

33rd.—What are the names and addresses of those who are the most active, or the most skilful improvers in your district, and who are the most likely to be useful correspondents of the Agricultural and Horticultural Society of India?

34.—Could any number of influential native landlords or farmers be induced to join a branch society in your district, and to promote its objects by personal exertions?

N. B. These queries are inserted in the daily papers with a view to their more general circulation, and the Society will feel obliged to any gentlemen who will take the trouble to reply to any, or all of them.—India Gazette, February 10.

MEERUT AGRI-HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY.

Colonel Dunlop, Quarter-Master-General of the Army, an active and distinguished Member and Vice-President of the Agri-Horticultural Society of India, and several other gentlemen of Head-Quarters, have during the past week, visited the garden of the Meerut Society, and expressed themselves much pleased at the progress made by the Society for the short period which has elapsed since its foundation.

We cannot but deem this a favorable opportunity for noticing the general indifference, which seems to pervade almost all classes, as to the active progress of the Society in question. Identified as we presume to say, we are with the institution since its very first foundation, it may be said we are interested in promoting the views of a Society, with which we are so closely connected; to this charge we shall be most happy, should it be brought against us, to plead guilty; we are interested, and, as far as our means will admit, will take every step which may appear to us in any ways likely to lead to creating an interest for the Horticultural Society in others. We conceive that, independent of all other incitements to the promotion of its objects, one alone in a philanthropic point of view, ought to be powerful enough in every right thinking mind, which is, that by means of this and similar Institutions, we may in some degree be enabled to pay the inhabitants of these Realms, the price of the salt we are eating, hard as it may seem to own it, at their expense.

It is the duty of every one, but more especially of those deriving in a direct manner, especially the Civil and Military Servants of the Company, largesums for the administration and Government of the country, to do every thing that may in any way, directly or indirectly, tend to the improvement of the moral and physical state of the people they are called upon to dwell amongst, and coeval with the extension of trade, and providing the means of carrying it on more advantageously, is the improving the material for that trade, and the discovery of new sources of speculation and profit.

The pursuits of Agriculture and Horticulture are, moreover, so interesting and amusing in themselves, so little likely to lead their cultivators into the difficulties and dangers which cross the paths of the votaries of more sensual, and less innocent amusements; that on this score alone, they deserve the especial attention of the Indian community, especially the military portion. The observation of the circumstances under which our natural production will thrive, where another will perish, the noticing of the soils, the temperature, the necessary attention required by each plant, are all so many points which would engender a vast stock of information, that would be useful in every situation.

It is objected by the indifferent on the subject, that no sooner have they begun to take an active interest in any thing of the kind, and contributed their quota to the funds of the Society, they are in the course of a relief compelled to abandon all they aided in carrying on, and deprived of the fruits of what labour, or money they may have expended. But the progressive Institution of Horticultural Societies in the principal Stations of India, will entirely remove this objection, as we imagine it might easily be arranged that for example, the Member of the Horticultural Society of Meerut, might, should he proceed to Lucknow, be permitted to become a Member of the Society there without being called upon to pay any entrance Fee, and vice versa. We have heard several gentlemen say that the monthly subscription (2 Rupees!) is too much, and that the entrance fee of 16 rupees is altogether unnecessary; it is true that 2 rupees here and 2 rupees there, soon cause a serious deficit in the monthly income of a Subaltern, but where it is considered how many 2 rupees are at times squandered in idle nothings, in many cases much to the detriment of those who act in this manner, we cannot but express our astonishment that this should form an item in the scale of objections.

We hope that the objects of the Society will soon become more attractive in the eyes of the public generally, and lead the Members of the Meerut community to join one and all in supporting one of the most useful, amusing and agreeable pursuits, which can attract the attention of those who have not leisure, inclination or perhaps capability of diving into the more abstruse mysteries of sciences, which require severe attention, and constant study to secure any degree of proficiency.

We apprehend an erroneous impression has got abroad, that the garden is open only to the members of the Society, which is far from being the case, as it is one of the objects of the Committee to render the Garden available as a place of public resort as much with the view of amusing, as of interesting those who may visit it, and induce them to contribute their mite by becoming members, to support the establishment.

We have much pleasure in adding that His Excellency Sir Henry Fane, who is well known to take an interest in the progress of agriculture in India, has since the above was written, presented a considerable pecuniary Donation to the Society, as a testimony of his wishes to serve the institution in the most efficient manner it can be supported. Colonel Dunlop has also contributed to the funds.

These examples ought not to be thrown away.—Delhi Gazette February 8.

PROCEEDINGS OF THE ASIATIC SOCIETY.

Wednesday Evening, the 1st February, 1837.

The Rev. Dr. Mill, Vice-President, in the chair.

Mr. J. Curmin, Captain F. Jenkins, Mr. George Hill, and Mr. Richard Walker, Captain Edward Sanders, Baboos Ram-mo-th Tagore and Prasannakumar Tagore, proposed at the last meeting, were ballotted for, and duly elected Members of the Asiatic Society.

Mr. J. Mill, and Mr. W. Cracroft, were proposed by Mr. J. Prinsep, seconded by Dr. Mill.

Mr. P. A. Lair, proposed at the last meeting, was, upon the favorable report of the Committee of Papers, elected an Honorary Member of the Society.

The following letter from Sir Alexander Johnston, Chairman of the Committee of Correspondence, Royal Asiatic Society, was read.

*Royal Asiatic Society, Grafton Street, Bond Street,

My Lords and Gentlemen—The vast extent, fertility, and populousness of our Indian possessions, are known, in a general way, to all the world. A glance, indeed, at the map will shew that their extremes of latitude may, without exaggeration, be indicated by the distance from Gibraltar to the farthest point of Scotland; and that the measure of their extent, from west to east, will be nearly found in a line drawn from the Bay of Biscay to the Black Sea. Lying between the 6th and 31st degree of north latitude, with almost every conceivable variety of position and exposure, they present a range of soil and climate greatly exceeding that which is to be found within the bounds of Europe. They embrace, in truth, the utmost limits of vegetable life, from the burning heat of the desert to the point of perpetual congelation; presenting, in one quarter, the loftiest mountains in the world; and, in another, vast alluvial plains, intersected by the natural channels of many noble rivers, with a corresponding variety of productions belonging both to tropical and northern regions. Not less than eighty millions of people are subject to the dominion of England; already they produce (though with imperfect skill) most of the articles which form the great staples of the import trade of this country, as materials of its manufacture, or as the objects of comfort and luxury to the great body of its inhabitants, of which cotton, silk, indigo, sugar, coffee, and tobacco, may be mentioned as pre-eminent; and they offer an assured prospect of an almost boundless market for the produce of English manufacturing skill, if the capabilities of their country be drawn forth, and their industry be duly instructed, directed, and fostered.

But though these general truths be readily acknowledged, their practical application is very imperfectly understood. Few men in England really know what India does or can produce, with sufficient precision, at least to justify commercial speculation. Few in India know what England requires; and none of the lights of modern science having been applied to the agriculture of the former country, its productive powers have, as yet, been very imperfectly developed.

Believing that the interests of both countries may be very importantly promoted by an interchange of knowledge, and especially by communicating to India the information and stimulus which are alone wanting to the full development of its vast resources, it has been resolved by the Royal Asiatic Society, to constitute a distinct Section, for the following and other similar purposes: provided the necessary funds can be raised for giving adequate effect to the design.

1st. The examination of the natural and agricultural products of India, available for the purposes of commerce and art.

2ndly. Inquiry into the causes of the general inferiority of the staple articles of Indian commerce.

3rdly. The introduction of new articles and processes from analogous climates in other parts of the world.

The Committee of Correspondence of the Royal Asiatic Society beg leave to bring the circumstance to your notice; trusting, confidently, on your zealous support of a measure, calculated to promote objects alike interesting to the patriot and the philanthropist.

Of the means of support, the most acceptable, would, of course, be such an accession of new members, European or Asiatic, as would at once provide the necessary funds, and as would afford the requisite contributions of knowledge and experience in the various branches of inquiry to which the labors of the Section are to be directed. But the Society will be most happy to receive the tender of the aid (whether in knowledge or funds) of affiliated Societies, pursuing the same beneficial objects, or any other co-operation or assistance which you may have the goodness to offer.

For the fuller explanation of the scheme in question, the Committee direct me to transmit to you the accompanying printed papers; and I shall be happy to afford you any further information in my power, in regard to it, that you may require.

I have the honor to be,
My Lords and Gentlemen,
Your most obedient humble Servant,

ALEXANDER JOHNSTON,

*Chairman of the Committee of Correspondence, R. A. S.
To the President, Vice-Presidents and Members of the Asiatic Society of Bengal.*

Resolved, that a portion of the papers be made over to the Agricultural Society, and that general circulation be given to the Royal Asiatic Society's prospectus.

A letter from Mr. Alexander Vattemore, addressed to the Governor-General of India, was read, proposing to negotiate a general system of exchanges of duplicates between the various libraries and museums of the world.

Resolved, that copies of the library catalogue now printing be furnished to Mr. Vattemore, in furtherance of his laudable design.

The following protest from members of the Society residing in the interior was communicated by Colonel J. Colvin.

Dissentient.

It appears to us that in a society constituted as the Asiatic Society of Bengal is, the existence of a fund vested in Government Securities is, absolutely necessary for the permanence of the foundation.

We consider that such funds are intended to be reserved for cases of extreme emergency, and that the interest only of such funds should be carried to the current expenses of the Society.

We also consider that any infringement of a law upon which the Society's existence may be said to depend, is injurious not only to the Society itself as a body, but to the interests of the members individually; and may be drawn in as a precedent for further encroachments, leading to the ultimate dissolution of the Society.

For these reasons, we dissent from the resolution passed at the meeting of the Society of the 4th May 1836, continuing the services of a Curator at two hundred rupees per mensem; the account current shewing a deficiency of rupees 671-0-1, and the payment of the Curator's salary being proposed to be made out of the vested funds of Mr. Bruce. Further, in adverting to the Secretary's remark, "that M. Bouchez, the assistant and working Curator, would be competent to set up all new specimens and preserve the present collection," we see no necessity, under the present difficulties of the Society, of retaining higher appointments.

W. M. BURAND, Lieut. Engrs.
W. E. BAKER, Lieut. Engrs.
and Calcutta, } ALEXANDER COLVIN.
26th Jan. 1837. } JOHN COLVIN, Lt.-Col. Engrs.

After discussion it was agreed, that the protest could not affect the resolution passed by the Society in May, 1836, but that it would very properly become matter of consideration at the expiration of the annual term for which the museum grant was then confirmed.

The Secretary read correspondence with Mr. Laue, respecting the publication of his Anglo-Burmese Dictionary under the Society's auspices. He had written to Colonel Burney for the manuscript, which would immediately be put in hand.

A statistical paper having been communicated by Mr. H. Walters, that gentleman was requested to join the Committee lately appointed for that object, to which he assented.

And much exceeding in size, as was remarked by Colonel Colvin, any that had been found in the Sewalik range, many vertebræ and unidentified bones and horns, tortoise fragments, and a peculiarly perfect saurian head. The special thanks of the Society were voted to Lieutenant Fulljames for his magnificent donation.

Lieutenant Fulljames mentions that he is now employed in sinking a bore at Gogo, about five miles from Perim. It has been already carried to 250 feet:—the last 150 through an immense bed of blue clay, containing pyrites and shells, resembling the muscle:—the deepest bed of sandstone was thirty feet, but it differed essentially from the bone stratum of Perim.

A skeleton of the common hog (sus scrofa), was presented by Dr. A. R. Jackson, mounted in the museum.

Mr. William Cracroft presented to the Society a large variety of objects of Natural History, collected by himself during his residence in new South Wales and Van Di-man's Land; accompanied with an illustrative notice.

This collection contained three volumes of a hortus siccus of the chief indigenous plants of these colonies—a rich series of ornithology and conchology—and specimens of the fossil shells, fossil wood, and minerals of which the islands present so many fertile deposits; ores of lead, copper, and iron, have been discovered, but are not yet worked, and coal is plentiful.

Dr. G. Evans exhibited to the meeting a very large skull of an animal generally considered to be the Bison of Indian forests, which he recognized as the Gaur (Bos gaurus), and distinguished from the skull so named in the museum.

It was moved by Sir Benjamin Malkin, seconded by Colonel Colvin, and carried unanimously,

That, with reference to the rapid increase of the museum, particularly in the department of fossil geology and to the limited funds at the Society's disposal, the subscription of individual members shall be invited for the preparation of cabinets and other improvements connected with this highly important branch of the Society's researches, and that the Secretary do circulate a notice to this effect to members of the Society.

The following notice, dated Sihor, 17th January, was recorded in hopes of eliciting further observations of the same phenomenon.

At Bersia, Lat. 23° 38', Long. 77° 30', on January 11th, at 6th '00m, a meteor appeared near β Andromedæ, and not far from the Zenith; it went down to the westward, occupying 2 or 3 seconds in its flight, and inclining a little to the left; at about 30° of altitude it burst into a globe of light little inferior to the sun in size and brightness; and then disappeared leaving behind a long train of smoke which continued visible for many minutes, like a thin cloud enlightened by the sun's rays; at about 6h 5m a faint rumbling sound was heard like the distant discharge of artillery. The appearance was nearly the same at Sihor, though distant 36 miles S. S. W.

Should this meteor have been noticed at Mhow or Ajmir the place over which it burst may be determined, and probably a meteoric stone discovered.—W. S. J.—Journal of the Asiatic Society for January.

MEETING OF THE MEDICAL AND PHYSICAL SOCIETY.

At a meeting of the Medical and Physical Society of Calcutta, held at the Asiatic Society's apartments, on the 4th February, 1837.

J. Forbes, Esq., of the Madras establishment, proposed at the last meeting, was elected a member of the society.

Letters from the following gentlemen were then read.

From J. B. Dickson, Esq., 64th Regt. N. I., and from C. Renny, Esq., 5th Light Cavalry, requesting that their names might be withdrawn from the list of members.

From Dr. Griffiths, of Assam, stating that he had forwarded some specimens of Assam poison of mishmee teets and geetheoon. Dr. Griffiths says that the Assam poison, as far as he can learn from the native accounts, resembles closely the Nipal plant, but he hopes ere long to give a correct account of it. He believes it to be a very powerful drug and attributes the failure of the experiments made with Dr. Wallich's specimens (brought down last year) to the age of the roots which speedily become inert by keeping. The writer states that the apparatus employed for destroying animals with this poison, consists of a short arrow, the head of which is plentifully smeared with the powdered root, made into a paste by help of the ollenga juice as described by Dr. Wallich. This arrow is inserted into the barrel of a musket, the head projecting externally and the gun is discharged in the ordinary way. It is said by the mishmees that an elephant wounded in the shoulder by this empoisoned weapon, dies in a few minutes; but when struck in the hinder parts of the body it lives till the next day. Dr. Griffiths objects to Dr. Wallich's name of teets for the other mishmee plant. The word teets signifies bitter, hence mishmee teets means only "mishmee bitter." The geetheoon is a plant much esteemed by the Assamees on account of its smell, but it does not appear to have any specific or medicinal virtues.

Dr. Corbyn presented the society with a copy of his monthly journal for the year 1836, and received the thanks of the meeting.

Dr. McCosh, Officiating Assistant-Surgeon, General Hospital, and Dr. Bell, Surgeon H. M. 26th Regt., were proposed as members of the society by Dr. D. Stewart, seconded by Dr. Goodeve.

In conformity with a resolution of the January meeting, Mr. Brett, seconded by Dr. Corbyn, submitted to the society a proposition to the effect, that all future elections of officers should be made by the subscribers at large. This proposition was negatived.

A letter having been read from Dr. Ranken declining the honor of serving as a member of the committee of management, the meeting proceeded to elect another in his stead, and a second in the room of the late Mr. Bramley.

The box having been examined, Dr. Martin and Mr. Chapman were found duly elected.

The following communications were then laid before the meeting, read and discussed.

1st.—Two very interesting papers by Dr. D. Stewart, one of them an account of a case of liver abscess bursting spontaneously into the colon and afterwards into the chest and terminating successfully for the patient. The other containing the details of a case of chronic hydrocephalus, produced apparently by a piece of bone which had formed at the base of the brain at its anterior part, adhering to the Dura Mater. The bone itself was laid upon the table. It is about the size of a shilling and $\frac{1}{2}$ of an inch thick in the centre gradually thinning towards the circumference.

2.—A paper by Mr. Brett upon the comparative advantages of lithotomy and cystotomy, in which the author, as far as his own experience goes, gives a decided preference to the latter as being more easily performed and much less painful to the patient.

Mr. Brett also brought for the inspection of the society a tumor which he had that morning removed from a native patient. It was about the size of a closed fist composed of cells containing a quantity of soft pulpy matter of a bloody color. Mr. Brett stated that the patient was an interesting young Hindoo female, 21 years of age, of good general health. The tumor had appeared first about 4 years since and was situated immediately behind the angle of the jaw in the seat of the parotid gland of which organ Mr. B. believed it was composed. The carotid artery was first laid bare and a ligature passed under it but not tied. The tumor was then dissected out from its connections which were exceedingly deep, in doing this several small arteries were wounded, but at the end of the operation in detaching the tumor from the lower part of its adhesions, a tremendous gush of blood took place. The ligature around the carotid was immediately tightened and the hemorrhage ceased. The incisions were then completed, the wound was closed, and the patient appeared to be doing remarkably well.

MEDICAL RETIRING FUND.

A meeting of the committee of management of the Bengal Medical Retiring Fund was held this day, when letters, in reply to the offer of the annuities were opened; and it was found that Messrs. Venour and Maxwell were the only subscribers who had accepted the annuities for 1833. The unaccepted annuities will now be offered to all who have served seventeen years.—Journal of Medical Science.

THE BONDING WARE-HOUSES.

A Meeting of Subscribers to the Bonding Warehouse Association was held this morning in the Exchange Rooms, Mr. Arbuthnot in the chair.

Mr. Cockerell read the report of the Provisional Committee of which he was Chairman, and a letter from Government of the 25th ultimo, accepting their offer of 1,80,000 Rs. for the said Import Warehouse premises, payable in portions as the ground should be occupied, but not conceding the right of Wharfage to the extent asked for. We conclude this letter will be published with the report, as it describes the extent of the privileges to be given to the association, and states the reasons for declining to go further, than to give a general assurance that Government will not render itself a competitor or excite competition injurious to the association, while the arrangements of the latter shall be conducted on a footing satisfactory to the public. The Bonding licences now granted to private warehouses (we are told that only one instance has occurred) are limited to six months, but the Government will not pledge itself that the term will not be extended and that no other licences will, under any circumstances, be granted; nor is it disposed to take away the privilege which the merchants now have of leaving imported goods in the Custom-house for three months without paying duty. The association is offered a charter for twenty years, with an understanding that it may be renewed; and Government adopts the suggestion of the Committee that a maximum shall be fixed for the profits, on the principle that when important and exclusive privileges are granted to incorporated bodies in England, it is now usual to limit their profits to ten per cent. The limit in this instance is not yet named, but with reference to the instability of every thing here, and the difference between the two countries in the relative rates of profit, if ten per cent. be a proper limit in England, the maximum here should not be fixed at less than twenty-five per cent. In the event of the concern being broken up, it is stipulated that Government shall have the right of pre-emption.

Thanks were voted to the provisional Committee for their services and especially for the manner in which they had conducted the negotiation with Government, and it was resolved to confirm the bargain for the land on the conditions offered for a charter. The several propositions embodied in the Report, as heads for preparing the Deed, were then successively put to the Meeting as distinctive propositions, and most of them were adopted unanimously, the only question on which there was any considerable difference of opinion, being on the qualification for voting, as we shall presently shew.

We are unable at present to give more than the substance of the resolutions. They fix the capital at 10 Lakhs of Company's rupees, divided into 2,000 shares of 500 rupees each, payable by instalments to be determined at General Meetings. No person to hold more than 50 shares. Proprietors entitled to vote personally, or by proxy according to the following scale—a shareholder of capital stock to the extent of votes.

1,000 and under 1,500 rupees.....	1
1,500 and under 3,000 ".....	2
3,000 and under 5,000 ".....	3

10,000 and under 15,000 ".....	6
20,000 and upwards, ".....	8

The Committee's proposition gave 1 vote from 1,000 to 4,000 Rs., 2 from 4,000 to 8,000 Rs., 4 from 8,000 to 16,000 Rs., 6 from 16,000 to 20,000 Rs., and 10 from 20,000 upwards; but after some discussion, it was withdrawn in favor of the above amendment. No person is to vote after the 1st of May next, who shall not have been registered as a proprietor for three months. No transfer to be recognized unless duly registered General Meetings to be held half-yearly—and accounts published half-yearly. Special meetings may be called by not fewer than ten members holding shares to the extent of 50,000 rupees, after fifteen days notice,—or by the Directors when they think fit. The management to be vested in a Chairman and five Directors to be elected by a majority of votes at General Meetings; three to be a quorum, with a casting vote to the Chairman. Two Directors to go out every year by lot until it can be settled by seniority, and not re-eligible till after one year—15 shares the qualification of a Director. The Directors to appoint a Secretary, subject to confirmation of the proprietary, with the requisite establishment. The Union Bank to be Treasurers of the Association. All questions submitted to General Meetings to be determined by a majority of the votes given upon the occasion.

Mr. Collier, seconded by Mr. Dobbs, proposed that Messrs. F. Macnaghten, Cockerell, Willis, Colvin, Stewart and Captain Ouseley should be the first Directors. A ballot being taken, Mr. Limond as scrutineer declared the gentlemen above-named to be duly elected, and it was resolved that they should continue their services as Directors till the 1st of May 1838. The directors then nominated Mr. Limond as their Secretary, which nomination was confirmed by the Meeting, upon an understanding that it should rest with the discretion of the Directors to fix the pecuniary compensation for his services.

A plan of the ground was laid upon the table, and it was explained that it would afford convenient space for three distinct longitudinal stocks of warehouses, each range being capable of receiving 30,000 tons of goods distributed upon the ground floor and three stories. The centre building alone is to be erected at present, leaving Government the use of the ranges of old godowns now existing on either side.

The following summary will shew how the shares are at present distributed—

Proceedings of a General Meeting of the Bonded Warehouse Joint Stock Association, 3d February, 1837.

G. C. ARBUTHNOT CALLED TO THE CHAIR.

The Chairman having read the Proceeding of a General Meeting of 7th November last, as also the advertisement of 30th ultimo, calling this Meeting of the Shareholders, Mr. Cockerell, Chairman of the Provisional Committee, read to the assembly a Report by the Committee as follows.

"As there is much important business demanding your consideration, the Provisional Committee will not occupy your time with any unnecessary detail; but proceed as succinctly as possible, to state what has been transacted by it, and to describe the present position of your affairs.

The Export Warehouse Compound having for obvious reasons been considered as far preferable to any other for the intended Warehouses, it became the duty of the Committee to endeavour to obtain it. A protracted negotiation ensued, and a confident expectation of succeeding was entertained by the Committee up to its termination almost; but in the sequel, the opposition on public grounds, to the assignment of that site grew so strong, that it became expedient to look elsewhere for a provision. Government promptly and frankly facilitated the arrangements, by offering to the Society the choice of one of the three next most eligible places, viz. the old Mint, the Naval Store Yard with the contiguous premises, and the old Import Warehouse Ground. The last had formerly been the spot on which it was designed to erect these Warehouses. Its situation was not inferior to that of the two others; and being clearer of valuable buildings, it was likely to be had on cheaper terms. Urged by these considerations, the Committee made a proposition for it which Government has been pleased to accept, and which you are now convened to ratify.

The Committee has also been in communication with Government as to the privileges to be imparted to the Association. Although, on this head, all which was sought has not exactly been conferred, still the Committee feels impelled to say, that probably as much has been conceded as could, the peculiar position of the Government being considered, have reasonably been expected; and, on the whole, it cannot in justice withhold its approbation of the terms and privileges which have been accorded.

The official communication from the Government, which will be read, will explain the terms for the purchase of the ground, and the privileges to be bestowed; and with these the Committee anticipates that you will not hesitate to express your unreserved satisfaction.

The materials for the Act of Incorporation will be immediately put into a state of preparation. The aforesaid letter from Government sufficiently indicates its chief provisions.

Ere quitting this division of the subject, the Committee would but imperfectly discharge its duty, if it did not embrace the occasion to state to you the high sense it entertains of the enlightened policy which the Governor General has uniformly evinced, throughout his consideration of the measure, and of the exceeding urbanity and attention with which his Lordship listened to the reiterated representations which it became necessary for the Committee to submit.

You have on the table a sketch of the plan of the Import Warehouse Ground—and a rough estimate of the cost of completing Warehouse, capable of accommodating about 90,000 tons of merchandize, with outline of such erections. In conformity with the original appeal to the public and, as a matter of undiminished expediency, it is proposed to build only a portion, say one of the ranges of Godowns, in the first instance; and you will have to authorize the realization of the funds necessary for the completion of that portion of the undertaking, from time to time, as the Directors may find to be demanded. These ranges, it is computed, will hold about 30,000 tons. If found to thrive, as is anticipated, the remaining parts can be finished progressively, until the completion of the whole shall announce the full success of the projected scheme.

The Committee submits a few leading Rules, which will serve as a guide in framing the Act of Incorporation. By-laws can be framed as experience shall demonstrate their necessity.

1. The Capital of the Association shall amount to 10 Lakhs of Company's rupees, divided into 2,000 Shares of 500 rupees each, with power to be enlarged hereafter to such amount as may be needed for completing the whole scheme,

2. The subscription shall be paid by instalment, the number and amount and period of which to be determined by General Meetings.

3. No individual shall hold more than 50 Shares.

4. At General Meetings of the Proprietors every Proprietor holding 1,000 Rs of the Capital Stock and less than 4,000 Rs. shall be entitled..... to 1 vote, holding 4,000 Rs. and less than 8,000 Rs. to 2 votes, ditto 8,000 Rs. and less than 16,000 Rs. to 4 votes, ditto 16,000 Rs. and less than 20,000 Rs. to 6 votes, ditto 20,000 Rs. and upwards..... to 8 votes, and no Proprietor holding less than 1,000 Rs. shall be entitled to any vote at any Meeting of the Proprietors.

5. Proprietors shall be entitled to vote by general proxy.

6. No one to be permitted to vote at any General Meeting after the 1st of May next unless he shall have been a registered Proprietor for 3 months.

7. No transfer to be recognised by the Society unless daily registered in its books by the Secretary.

8. A General Meeting shall be held half yearly for examining the accounts, ordering dividends, and transacting any other general business.

9. A statement of Accounts shall be published half yearly.

10. Special General Meetings may be called, after fifteen days' notice, on the written requisition of not fewer than ten members, holding Capital Stock to the amount of 50,000 Rs., and the Directors may summon Special Meetings as they may see occasion.

11. The affairs of the Society shall be conducted by a Chairman and five Directors, to be elected by the majority of votes at General Meetings specially convoked; three Directors with the Chairman being a quorum; and the Chairman having a casting vote in cases of equality of votes.

12. Two Directors to go out every year by lot till it can be settled by seniority; such Directors being eligible for re-election after the lapse of one year.

13. The possession of not fewer than 15 Shares shall be necessary to qualify a Proprietor to be elected Director.

14. There shall be a Secretary appointed by the Directors, subject to the confirmation of the Proprietors, with an establishment authorized by the Directors sufficient for the management of details—all under the Directing Committee.

15. One of the Banks shall be Treasurers for the Company.

16. All questions submitted to General Meetings shall be determined by a majority of the votes on the occasion.

R. H. COCKERELL, Chairman."

Mr. Cockerell also read to the Meeting a letter from Mr. Secretary Prisep, dated 25th ultimo, addressed to the Provisional Committee—thus:

To R. H. COCKERELL, Esq.

And other Gentlemen forming the Committee of the Bonded Warehouse proposed Joint Stock Association.

Gent. } GENTLEMEN.—I am directed by the Right
Dept. } Hon'ble the Governor of Bengal to state that the propositions contained in the Extract from your Proceedings under date 20th ultimo, and which were personally submitted by you to His Lordship with a full explanation of your views and wishes and your further proceedings under date the 23d instant, have received from His Lordship an attentive consideration, together with the reports and estimates of the Officers of Government upon the Premises selected by you in both instances for the site of the proposed Warehouses.

2. It was in the first instance your desire to obtain the entire Export Warehouse Premises, together with a slip of the ground occupied by the Custom House. For these, with the buildings upon them, you offered the sum of two lakhs and a half of Company's rupees. The buildings now on the ground were to remain in the occupation of Government for two years, and you offered payment of the value above stated at the end of that period or whenever the buildings you promise to erect might be in a condition to receive Merchandize. The valuation fixed upon the ground and buildings of the Export Warehouse by the Government Officers was Rs. 2,67,000, but the ground alone was separately stated to be worth about 1,000 rupees per cotta.

3. To this proposition the following objections were made:

First. That the Export Warehouse Godowns were the best and most substantial buildings of the kind in the possession of Government—the only ones possessing the advantage of an upper tier over arches, and therefore particularly well suited for the reception of Silk and similar articles of value when shipped by Government or tendered in security for advances.

Secondly. That the existing Premises of the Custom House were insufficient both in space and in Warehouse accommodation for the business transacted in them, and although the Warehouse Scheme would afford some relief in regard to Imports the main pressure was on account of Export Goods. The ground of the Export Warehouse Premises was the only spot within the same square as the Custom House that could be annexed for extension of its Premises without crossing a public road therefore with the prospect of further increase to the trade of the Port it would not be judicious to part with that ground.

Thirdly. It was at present in contemplation to move the Government Opium Store into the Export Warehouse buildings, and as the supply of this article was increasing annually and it could only be stored in some place convenient for shipment like the Export Warehouse, the transfer of those Premises was on this account also inexpedient.

4. The wants of the Public Service, therefore, precluding apparently the transfer of the entire ground and buildings of the Export Warehouse Premises, His Lordship was induced in a verbal conference to offer a square space of that ground to the extent of about two Baggahs without entering into pledge as to the remainder, but your Committee having taken this offer into consideration give the preference to the larger space forming the Premises of the Import Warehouse as more fit for your entire Scheme. For this ground with its buildings it is the purpose of your proceedings of the 23d instant, also laid personally before the Governor of Bengal, to offer the sum of Company's rupees 1,80,000, payable at the end of two years, or when the Warehouse proposed to be built is fit for the reception of goods, or if a lease be preferred by Government you tender an annual rent of 1,000 rupees on a lease for 99 years.

5. The Right Hon'ble the Governor of Bengal being very desirous to encourage a project which he deems calculated to be of essential benefit to the trade of the Port, and having ascertained that other accommodation can be provided for the Stores and other purposes to which the buildings of the old Import Warehouse are at present applied, has resolved to close with the offer made by the Committee to purchase these Premises, and is prepared to make over immediately so much of them as may be required for the foundations of the buildings to be first raised, retaining the other godowns and ground in possession until required for the purposes of the Association. With respect to payment of the purchase money, His Lordship thinks it will be preferable, instead of requiring from the Association payment of the entire value after a period of two years, that the price agreed upon shall be rateably distributed over the ground, and that payment shall be made of the proportion of value for such parts of the ground as may from time to time be required,—immediately or within a reasonable period after their being taken by the Association. His Lordship does not apprehend that your Committee will have any objection to settling for the ground in this manner, and on the part of Government it is agreed that ground for the site of your first buildings shall immediately be delivered over and upon three months' notice and payment of its value as above provided for, any further ground or buildings that many be demanded.

6. The only further point in respect to which His Lordship deems it necessary to come to specific explanation with your Committee, is as to the right of warfage claimed. The Governor of Bengal has no power to convey property in any of the land on the river face of the road, nor can he pledge himself to permit erections of any specific description to be made thereon. This matter must be under the regulation of the magistracy of Calcutta in their capacity of Conservators of the river and roads of the City, but His Lordship can engage that they shall receive your plan with every disposition to encourage the measure and to give facilities to the landing of goods with every due convenience and security, keeping in view, however, the ornamental appearance of what may be designed, and the great objections that exist to closed buildings of any kind on the river side of the road, and to the projection of piers into the water way.

7. If your Committee and the Subscribers to the Association will receive the ground of the Import Warehouse Premises on these terms, they may proceed at once to carry their plan into execution. In regard to their other points touched upon in your Proceedings of the 20th December, His Lordship doubts not that he shall be able to give you complete satisfaction. It may, however, be proper to notice the most essential.

8. Your Committee have requested that if in order to carry the provisions of the late Warehousing Act fully into effect, it be found indispensable to license private Warehouses, pending the erection of those of the Association, the period of such licenses shall be limited to six months, but the hope is expressed that the Government will not find it necessary to license any such having the accommodation of the Export Warehouse godowns in addition to those of the Custom House at disposal.

9. Upon this point I am directed to observe that His Lordship fully subscribes to the expediency of granting licenses to Private Warehouses, only for short periods, and was prepared, independently of the desire to comply with your reasonable wishes in this respect, to indicate to the Board the period of six months as a proper limit for licenses when granted to private individuals or firms, in case it should be found necessary, in order to carry the Bonding system at once into effect, to establish such places of store. His Lordship is fully aware of the benefit that will result from the concentration into one building of all the goods admitted to Bond, and subject the same species of supervision and check, and on this account His Lordship has felt disposed to give every practicable encouragement to the Scheme you have under preparation which has this object specifically in view.

10. I am, indeed, directed to add that His Lordship would consider the establishment of various Private Warehouses in different parts of the Town for the reception of Bonded Goods to be a source of much embarrassment and expense, and therefore a very objectionable result to be produced by the recent Act passed by the Legislative Council. Nevertheless, it is not possible that His Lordship should give to any existing Institution an absolute pledge that it shall exclusively be entitled to the benefit of a measure devised for the general convenience and advantage of the trade of the Port. It is impossible to provide in advance for all possible circumstances under which applications may be made to Government for a participation in the advantages of the system. Your Association, however, will probably not require more than an assurance that the Government itself will not seek to compete with you, or to raise up or encourage competition in others to the injury of your property and to the reduction of the profits of the concern, so long as they are not unreasonable. Subject therefore to this general declaration of a wish and intention to confine as far as possible the grant of private licenses, and of a desire to encourage and favor your scheme as calculated to give every considerate facility to the trade of the Port, combined with the best security attainable for the revenue, the Government must reserve to itself a discretion of acting in all cases as may be deemed most just and expedient.

11. Consistently with this principle, the Governor of Bengal will not withdraw the privilege now given to the Importers and Consignees of Goods of lodging them in the Custom House, with the demand of duty suspended for three months on deposit of Government Securities. This and any other facilities that may be given, he is confident that there is no wish on your part to cite as interfering with your Bonding privilege, or as establishing a kind of competition therewith calculated to withdraw or keep Goods out of your Warehouses.

12. Your Committee appears to have fallen into some error in supposing that any rates of Warehouse hire have been fixed in the Tariff Act as passed by the Legislative Council. Rates were stated in the Draft of Act originally published and communicated to the Chamber of Commerce which may have tended to the misconception, but in the Act itself it was determined to be preferable to leave these to be fixed by the Board of Customs according to circumstances. The rates of the Draft also were always intended as maximum rates and not as those intended to be invariably established for the Public Warehouses of Government.

13. Upon the question raised in the proposition numbered 4 of your Proceedings of the 20th December, the Right Hon'ble the Governor of Bengal desires me to state, that he can foresee no objection likely to arise in the Legislative Council to limiting the responsibility of Shareholders to their respective interests in the concern; but if you obtain a Charter of Incorporation giving special privileges of this description, it will in his opinion be necessary to insert other usual conditions of such instruments, as—

First. That the period for which it is granted shall be limited, say for twenty years, so as to allow the conditions to be brought under review at each period of renewal.

Secondly. In all Charters granting privileges in England, it is, moreover, usual to set a limit on the rate of profit to be divided, because of the advantages of position conferred which may possibly give a kind of monopoly relatively to others who might otherwise enter into the same field. Ten per cent. is the usual limit in England, but in this country His Lordship would be disposed to name a higher rate as fairly due to the more precarious investment of Capital in India, and the Charter should also, as is usual in such cases, include a provision for the appropriation of any larger profit that may be realized.

Thirdly. The publication of accounts must of course be a condition of any Charter or Act of Incorporation that may be submitted to the sanction of the Supreme Government of India, and these must likewise be, as will doubtless be desired by the Proprietors, efficient but simple rules for controlling the management.

14. With respect to head No. 5, of your Proceedings of 20th December, the Governor of Bengal does not consider that it can be necessary to insert in the Charter a specific provision giving power to borrow money. With complete publicity in respect to the accounts, this matter may fairly be left by the Proprietors to be settled without further restriction, than that if the concern is giving up the right of pre-emption at a price to be fixed by arbitration is to be in the Government.

15. Having thus stated the opinion of the Right Hon'ble the Governor of Bengal on all the points submitted by you, which have seemed to him to require notice, I am directed to ask whether you accept the tender of the Import Warehouse Premises on the terms stated. On learning your final decision on this point, the Right Hon'ble the Governor of Bengal will issue the necessary instructions to put you in possession and to prepare the requisite deeds.

I have the honor to be, Gentlemen,
Your most obedient Servant,
H. T. PRINSEP, Secy to Govt.
Fort William, the 25th January, 1837.

Plans of the Ground and of the Warehouses, with a rough estimate of the probable cost, and a sketch of the Central Range, which it is proposed to complete in the first instance, were placed before the Meeting.

The following Resolutions were then adopted.

1. On the proposition of Mr. Bruce, seconded by Mr. Willis, it was resolved unanimously, that the offer for the old Import Warehouse Premises made by the Provisional Committee, as agreed to by the Government, be confirmed, and the terms be accepted.

2. It was proposed that the Rules recommended in the Report of the Provisional Committee be adopted, and, having been by the Chairman put serially to the vote, all were carried without opposition, except Nos. 4 and 15, which it was determined shall stand modified as follows, the former on the motion of Mr. G. A. Prinsep, seconded by Mr. A. Colvin, and the latter on the motion of Mr. Cockerell, seconded by Mr. Collier:

No. 4. —At a General Meetings of the Proprietors, every Proprietor holding shares to the extent of Rs. 1,000 of the Captain Stock, and less than 2,000 shall be entitled to.....1 vote,
Holding 2,000 Rs. and less than 3,000 Rs. to 2 ditto,
Ditto 3 000 „ ditto 5,000 „ to 3 ditto,
Ditto 5,000 „ ditto 7,000 „ to 4 ditto,
Ditto 7,000 „ ditto 10,000 „ to 5 ditto,
Ditto 10,000 „ ditto 15,000 „ to 6 ditto,
Ditto 15,000 „ ditto 20,000 „ to 7 ditto,
Ditto 20,000 „ and upwards to 8 ditto, and no Proprietor holding less than 1,000 Rs. shall be entitled to any vote, at any meeting of the Proprietors.

No. 15.—The Union Bank shall be Treasurers for the Company.

3. Resolved, that the Directors be authorised to decide on a Plan for the Warehouses, advertising for contracts for building—and to call from time to time for the contributions, and to make the disbursements required for completing the portion of the buildings intended to be erected first, and for the purchase of the ground, as also for other necessary purposes.

4. The ballot having been resorted to, and the Scrutineer having reported the greatest number of votes to have fallen on the after mentioned Gentlemen, Resolved that R. H. Cockerell, A. Colvin, F. Macnaghten, J. W. J. Ouseley, J. Stewart and J. Willis, are duly elected the first Directors, to continue to act as such from the present day till 1st May 1838, when two have to retire as provided by Rule No. 12.

5. The Directors having nominated him to the office, Resolved that William Limond be Secretary to the Association.

6. Resolved, that the thanks of the Meeting are due to the Provisional Committee for their able performance of the task committed to them.

7. Resolved, that the thanks of the Meeting be expressed to the Chairman for the efficient manner in which he has presided over this assembly,

GEORGE C. ARBUTHNOT, Chairman.

THE BANK OF INDIA.

TO THE KING'S MOST EXCELLENT MAJESTY IN COUNCIL.

The humble Petition of James Alexander, of the city of London, merchant, Thomas Baring, of the city of London, merchant, H. H. Birley, of Manchester, in the county of Lancaster, merchant, William Boyd, of the city of London, merchant, John Sindholme

Brownrigge, of the city of London, merchant, John Deans Campbell, of the city of London, merchant, William Foidler, of Blackburn, in the county of Lancaster, merchant, Kirkman Finlay, of Glasgow, in North Britain, merchant, Robert Garnet of Manchester, in the country of Lancaster, merchant, George Grant of Liverpool, in the county of Lancaster, merchant, Samuel Gregson, of the city of London, merchant, Joseph Hogan, of Liverpool, in the county of Lancaster, merchant, John Irving, of the city of London, merchant, Joseph Hornby, of Liverpool, in the county of Lancaster, merchant, John Jackson, of Lancaster, in the county of Lancaster, merchant, John Kennard, of the city of London, merchant, George Gerard de Hochepeid Larpent, of the city of London, merchant, William Little, of the city of London, merchant, John Melville, of the city of London, merchant, Ceneas Mackintosh, of the city of London, merchant, James Oswald, of Glasgow, in North Britain, merchant, Mark Phillips, of Manchester, in the county of Lancaster, merchant, John Pickersgill, of the city of London, merchant, and John Abel Smith, of the city of London, merchant.

Sheweth.—That your petitioners and other merchants resident in London, Liverpool, Manchester, Glasgow and other parts of Great Britain, connected with the trade to India and China, are of opinion that a bank of issue and deposit in India, founded on sound principles, will be attended with advantage to the British territories, in India, and to parties engaged in commerce between this country and India, as well as to the parties who shall become interested in the bank.

That your petitioners and other merchants engaged in the trade of India, are desirous to establish a bank in London as the first essential, preliminary to the establishment under Charter from the East India Company of a bank in Calcutta, with branches in other parts of India and within the limits of the charter granted to the Company by the act of Parliament.

That your petitioners beg leave to annex to this petition a letter which has been received from the Court of Directors of the East India Company containing the views of the Court of Directors on this subject, and your petitioners, have no reason to doubt that, should your Majesty be pleased to comply with the prayer of this petition, your petitioners will be enabled to effect such arrangements with the Bank of Bengal, as will be satisfactory to all parties.

That this plan cannot be effected on any definite arrangements made with the Company unless your petitioners can obtain from your Majesty a charter of incorporation.

That your petitioners propose to establish a Bank in London, under the name of the Bank of India, and when the proper arrangements can be effected with the Company to conduct the establishment at Calcutta also under the same name.

That a capital of £5,000,000, is proposed to be raised by subscription by parties desirous to take an interest in the bank in the nature of a joint stock company.

The capital will be raised by 50,000 shares of £100 each, and that the Company should have liberty to raise a further sum if the Directors should hereafter find it to be of advantage that further sums should be raised.

That the object of the parties, is that the bank should confine itself to the business of banking, properly so called; that is to say, to the receiving of deposits, keeping cash accounts, granting cash credits for a limited time, discounting bills; the issue of notes payable on demand in gold or coin, the advance of money on public and other securities, the purchase and sale of Bills of Exchange, granting drafts and credits by the establishment in London on the establishments abroad, and by the establishments abroad on the establishment in London, and the conducting such other matters as belong to the business of a banker.

That the sum of £10 upon every share of £100 is proposed to be paid on the appropriation of the shares to the proprietors and a further sum of £15 per share on a charter being granted by your Majesty, if your Majesty see fit to grant such Charter, and that the remainder of the capital be paid as soon as the directors find it can be beneficially employed, and that 15,000 of the shares be reserved for appropriation to parties in India.

Your petitioners beg leave to annex to this their petition a short statement of the heads of the proposed plan for conducting the concerns of the Bank both in England and in India; which heads will have hereafter to be extended into proper and legal form, but your petitioners have taken the liberty to put them in this form for the more ready reference.

Your petitioners most humbly pray, that your Majesty will be pleased to grant a charter of incorporation under the name of the Bank of India, according to the regulations which are shortly set forth in the statement hereto annexed, or with such variations as to your Majesty shall seem meet.

And your petitioners shall ever pray, &c.

HEADS OF THE PROPOSED PLAN OF THE BANK OF INDIA.

1. That books be opened for taking subscriptions.
2. £2,500,000 be appropriated to subscribers resident in this country, and the remaining £1,500,000 to subscribers resident in India, provided the same are subscribed for within 24 months, from the 1st January 1837, and the directors to settle the mode and amount of appropriation after the expiration of 24 calendar months, any shares not subscribed for by persons resident in India, may be subscribed for by others.
3. The directors to regulate the mode and places at which the instalment upon shares subscribed for in India shall be paid, and the notices requiring payment, and in what manner such notices shall be sent or given.
4. That the bank shall not commence business until the sum of £2,625,000 shall be subscribed, and £656,250 actually paid up.
5. That every subscriber, his executor, &c. (no subscription being for less than £100 sterling) shall be entitled to a share in the capital in proportion to the sum he shall subscribe, and entitled to a proportionable share of the advantages and profits, and be admitted a proprietor in the same.
6. The names and designations, with the amount of their subscription, to be fairly and distinctly entered in a book by the officer appointed, and that the subscribers be required to pay the sum by them subscribed at such times and places, and to such persons, and in such manner as shall be appointed by the directors.
7. When two or more persons shall be jointly possessed of any share, the person whose name stands first in the books of the company, as proprietor, shall be taken to be sole owner of such share for all purposes of voting and attending public meetings.

8. It shall be lawful for the several proprietors to sell and transfer any share of the capital stock of the said Company, of which they shall respectively be possessed, (not being any fractional part of £100,) provided that no sale nor transfer be recognized or permitted to take place, until the two first payments of £10 and £15 per share respectively shall have been made.

9. Transfers to be in such form as shall be appointed by the directors.

10. Transfers to be under the hands of the proprietors, or of persons authorized for that purpose, underneath which transfer the transferee or some person duly authorized to sign his name, signifying the acceptance of such transfer, which transfer shall be entered in a book to be kept by the said company for that purpose, and for which entry a fee shall be fixed by the directors, (not exceeding the sum of 5 shillings for each transfer, and paid for the use of the said company in addition to any stamp duty which shall be payable for such transfer,) and that such transfer be deemed to convey the whole estate and interest therein of the person so transferring the same to the person so taking the same, and that until such transfer shall be made and entered in manner aforesaid, no person claiming an interest in any such stock by purchase or otherwise shall be deemed the proprietor thereof, and a copy of such transfer to be extracted and signed by the proper officer shall be sufficient evidence of such transfer and be received as such.

11. That after any call for money shall have been made and become due, no person shall sell or transfer any share until the monies called for shall be paid.

12. That in cases where the original proprietor shall marry, die, or become insolvent, or bankrupt, or go out of the kingdom, a difficulty may arise to ascertain who is the owner of such share, in order to give notice of calls made on such share, or to maintain any action against him for the recovery of the same, or for the purpose of safely paying the interest or dividends to which he might be entitled by virtue thereof, to meet this difficulty, it will be provided.

13. That before any person shall claim any stock in right of marriage, or shall be entitled thereto, a solemn declaration in writing, (in the form prescribed by Act of Parliament,) containing a copy of the register of such marriage may be required to be made, and such declaration shall be transmitted to the clerk of the said company, who shall file the same, and make an entry in the book for the entry of transfers of shares.

14. Before any person who claims by virtue of will or administration be entitled, the probate of the will or letters of administration shall be produced to the said clerk on such declaration, in writing as aforesaid, containing a copy of so much of the will as shall relate to the share, shall be made and subscribed by an executor of such will, or by the administration of the estate, (as the case may happen to be,) which declaration shall be delivered to the said clerk of the company. No bequest shall bind or affect the said company with notice of any trust or disposition of any share of the said stock, but the registry shall be in the names of the executors who prove, or of the administrations of such intestate, and in all cases (other than those herein before mentioned) where the right and property in any share of the said capital stock shall pass from the original or other proprietor thereof, to any person by a transfer or conveyance thereof, such solemn declaration in writing, as aforesaid, shall be made and subscribed to by two credible persons, being a master extraordinary in Chancery, or a judge of the court, and be entered on record, stating the manner in which such share hath passed to such other person, and such declaration shall be sent to the clerk of the said company that he may enter or register the name of such new proprietor in the register book of the said company.

15. General meetings to be assembled, and that the first general meeting of proprietors shall be held in London, on the 23d day of July 1838; and that one yearly general meeting of the said proprietors shall be held on the first Wednesday in the month of July in every year after the year 1838, but directors may alter days of meeting, and that notice of every general meeting be given by public advertisement in two daily morning newspapers, printed and circulated in London 21 days previously, or in such manner as the said company at their general meeting shall direct, provided that the failure or omission to hold such general meeting shall not affect the validity of the said charter.

16. The Court of Directors or any 15 of the proprietors of the said company, each holding not less than £2,000 capital stock of the said company, may require the directors to call a special general meeting of the proprietors, and in such notice shall be specified the reason of such special general meeting, and the subject to be submitted thereto, and the directors shall fix the time and place at which the same will be held.

17. That any general or special general meeting may be adjourned, as shall be thought expedient, and if the adjournment is for a longer period than 22 days, notice thereof shall be given by advertisement, not less than 8 or more than 15 days previously to the time of holding the same.

18. That no business be transacted at any special general meeting, or any adjourned thereof, unless 15 proprietors shall assemble within one hour after the time appointed, and that no business be transacted at any special general meeting, besides that for which it shall be called, and no other business to be transacted at any adjourned meeting than that left unfinished.

19. At general meetings of the proprietors, every proprietor holding £500 of the said capital stock, and less than £1,500, shall be entitled to one vote, and holding £1,500, and less than £4,000 to two votes, and less than £8,000 to three votes, and holding £8,000 or upwards to 4 votes, and no person holding less than £500 shall be entitled to any vote at any meeting of the proprietors of the company.

20. All proprietors may vote by proxy, such proxy being for specific objects, and not extending beyond one meeting, unless that meeting be adjourned.

21. That any body politic or corporate, holding any share, shall be entitled to the same vote, or votes (if any) in respect thereof as other proprietors, and to vote by proxy to be appointed by writing under their seal.

22. If the holder of any share shall be an infant, or lunatic, the guardian or committee shall be entitled to vote, and such vote may be given by proxy.

23. The form of appointment of proxy set out.

24. Every such appointment of proxy to be produced to the clerk or secretary of the company, at least 3 days before the meeting for which it is given, and be entered in a book kept for that purpose, before any vote shall be given under it, every proxy to be given to a proprietor of the company.

25. That after the first general meeting no proprietor entitled to vote at yearly or other meetings, unless his name shall have been entered as the proprietor for 6 months next preceding such meeting, and no proprietor entitled to vote in respect of stock held, except as herein provided, unless he be entitled thereto in his own right; nor unless all money called for and due before such meeting shall have been paid up. That at every meeting all questions shall be decided by a majority of votes present, (unless a ballot be demanded,) and upon every difference of opinion in regard to the votes of the parties attending, any proprietor may require the same to be taken by the assented number of votes of the proprietors present, but all such votes are to be given within two hours after such difference of opinion shall arise.

26. That at any meeting or adjourned meeting of proprietors, the majority of the directors present may require a ballot on any question, which shall go to a vote, and any 15 proprietors having the right to vote, may also require a ballot, but the demand thereof must be made in writing, and delivered to the chairman before the meeting shall break up.

27. The directors to appoint the time and place of ballot not being less than eight nor more than 15 days from the day of meeting, and they are to give notice of it in the usual way, 5 days before the ballot takes place.

28. That at every yearly or other meeting, the chairman or in his absence the deputy chairman of the Court of Directors, shall be the chairman of such meeting; and in the absence of both those officers, one or other of the directors, or in the absence of any directors, then any proprietor may be appointed chairman by the proprietors present, and the proceedings of every such meeting shall be entered in a book kept for that purpose and signed by the chairman.

29. That the said company have power at any special meeting convened for that purpose, to remove any member of the directors for misconduct, or any other reasonable cause, and the vacancy thereby occasioned, shall be filled up according to the provisions herein contained for electing or appointing directors, and the like rule shall be pursued in supplying the place of any other director, who shall go out of office by rotation, or who shall die or cease to be a proprietor in the company, or to have a sufficient qualification of stock therein.

30. At yearly meetings or some adjournment thereof an account shall be prepared of the debts and assets of the company, and of the profits made in the then preceding year, as near as the same can be ascertained, and with such other information as may to the directors seem necessary to be given, or as may be required by any by-laws, and that at such yearly meetings, or some adjournment of the same, dividends shall (if recommended by the directors) be made, and a special general meeting shall at any time have power to call for, and examine, and settle the accounts of the company, and to make dividends at other periods than the yearly meetings hereby provided to be held.

31. That there shall be a chairman and deputy chairman of the said corporation, who shall also be directors, and 22 other directors, which chairman, deputy chairman, and 22 other directors, or any 7 of them, shall constitute a Court of Directors for the ordering and directing the affairs of the said company. And that——shall be the first chairman, — the first deputy chairman, and the first 22 other directors of the said company, and that the chairman, deputy chairman, and 22 other directors shall continue in their respective offices until the yearly general meeting to be holden in the month of July 1842, and afterwards until others shall be duly elected, unless they die or become disqualified, and that if before the first yearly general meeting to be holden in the month of July 1842, there shall be any vacancy in the direction, then the directors shall from time to time fill up such vacancies so as to continue the number of directors at 24.

32. No proprietor to be qualified to act as director of the said company until the month of July 1842, unless he shall be holder of at least £4,000 stock, and any director elected by the proprietors in and subsequent to the month of July 1842, must hold at least £2,000 stock, and have held such stock for at least 6 calendar months previously to his election. And if any director cease to hold a sum of stock so required for a qualification, such person shall thereupon immediately cease to be a director.

33. That the remuneration to be received by the chairman, deputy chairman, and directors for their services, to be fixed at the general meeting to be held in the year 1838, or at some subsequent yearly meeting with power to vary the same.

34. That with the exception of the directors and of any directors to be appointed previously to the general meeting in July 1842, all directors be elected at a general or special general meeting called for that, and other purposes.

35. That at the meeting to be holden in the month of July 1842, and at every subsequent meeting to be held in the month of July, six directors shall go out of office and six directors shall be then elected or re-elected, and any director going out of office shall be considered eligible to supply the place of himself or any other director.

36. Any vacancy in the office of director, after the annual meeting in July 1842 from any cause whatever, shall be filled up either at the first general meeting or at a special general meeting to be called for that or for that and other purposes.

37. Any person who in consequence of a vacancy shall be appointed a director shall be a substitute only for the person whose place he may supply and continue in office only for the same period as the person whose place he may supply would have continued.

38. At every general meeting the directors going out of office on that day, shall be considered as continuing in their respective offices until such meeting break up or adjourn.

39. No person shall, after the yearly meeting to be holden in July 1842, be capable of being elected a director unless his name shall have been included in the list, which is to be posted up as hereinafter mentioned, and no person be capable of being proposed unless the proprietor proposing him, be a proprietor of not less than £2,000 of the stock of the said corporation, and that not more than one candidate shall be proposed by one proprietor.

40. Every proprietor intending to become a candidate in the place of a director going out by rotation at any general meeting, or to propose any other proprietor as a candidate, must, 15 days previous to the time of such meeting signify by writing so be left on or before such 15 days at the office of the corporation in London, either his own intention to become a candidate or the name and place of abode of the candidate intended to be proposed, and the directors ten days previous to the day of election are to cause the name of every candidate, and the name of such proprietor when given, to be fairly written or printed in one list to be posted up in some part of the office in London, and to be there kept until the election.

41. Upon any vacancy after July 1842 in the office of director, from any cause (except that of going out by rotation,) the directors at least 30 days before the meeting at which such vacancy is to be filled up, give notice of that vacancy by advertising the same in some daily morning newspaper printed in London, and state in such advertisement that every proprietor intending to become a candidate, or to propose some other proprietor as a candidate, must within 10 days from the time when such advertisement shall be inserted, signify by writing so be left within the same 10 days at the office of the said corporation in London, either his own intention to become a candidate, or the name and place of abode of the candidate intended to be proposed. And the directors 15 days before the day of election are to cause the name of every candidate and the name of such proprietors when given to be fairly written or printed in one list to be posted up in some part of the office in London, and to be there kept until the election. The directors may, if they think fit, cause the names of the candidate to be specified in the advertisement calling the meeting.

42. That the chairman and deputy chairman be elected by the Court of Directors.

43. The first Calcutta and other boards in India will be named by the Court of Directors in London, from amongst the proprietors in the respective places where banks shall be established. The Calcutta board will consist of 9 directors, besides the managers to be sent out by the Court of Directors in London.

44. The boards at other place where banks may be established in India, will consist of such a number of directors as shall be fixed by the London board, besides the managers to be sent out by the Court of Directors in London.

45. One-third of the directors of the Calcutta and other boards in India will go out of office on the first day of February next, after the expiration of three years from the time at which notice of the appointment of the first Board of Directors in Calcutta shall be received there. On the said first day of February next, after the expiration of two years from the time such notice shall reach Calcutta, meetings of the proprietors resident in India will be held in Calcutta and other places, where banks shall be established for the appointment of the like number of directors as shall into of office in the place of those who shall so go out of office. Two months previous notice shall be given of this meeting by advertisements in two newspapers published in Calcutta, and in such other newspapers in India as the directors in Calcutta may deem expedient.

46. At these meetings a number of directors equal to one-third of the entire number, shall be chosen from amongst the proprietors resident in or near Calcutta, and the respective places where banks shall be established in the place of those who shall go out by rotation.

47. After the lapse of the time appointed, for the appropriation of the shares reserved for India, the directors in Calcutta are to transmit to the Board of Directors in London a list of the proprietors in India, and a similar list shall be sent annually afterwards, made up to the end of each year, and one year before the one-third of the directors first appointed go out of office, the election of their successors will take place. The names of the new directors so elected, shall be sent forthwith to the London Board and be subject to the approbation and confirmation of the London Board, who may, if they see fit, annual such election and substitute some candidate, or other person from the list of qualified proprietors.

48. The London Board to make their report to the India Boards as early as practicable after the receipt from India of the necessary information.

49. That the London Board shall appoint managers for the banks at Calcutta, and other places in India where banks shall be established.

50. That one other third of the directors in Calcutta and other places in India, where banks shall be established, go out of office by rotation on every first day of February in every year subsequent to the expiration of the said three years, and that on every first day of February in every such subsequent year, a meeting be held in Calcutta and other places in India, where banks shall be established for the appointment of other directors in the place of those so going out by rotation, and two months previous notice of such meeting be given it like manner as upon the first meeting, for the appointment of directors in Calcutta. The elections in Calcutta and elsewhere in India always to take place one year previous to the directors coming into office, and the names will be forwarded to the London Board in the manner as before stated, and be subject to the like approbation, and to others being substituted as before stated.

51. That all proprietors resident any where in India may vote by proxy at all places where banks shall be established in India; such proxy to be appointed; and his appointment to be acted upon in like manner as herein laid down with regard to proxy's voting in London.

52. That the stock required to be held for a qualification of a director in India shall be £2,000.

53. That the like rules prevail in the election of the directors in Calcutta and other places in India, as are laid down for the London directors in regard to the right to be re-elected, the qualification of the electors, and to the proceedings in such meetings and elections, and in every other respect so far as the same are applicable, and not expressly directed otherwise.

54. That any vacancy which shall occur in the direction at Calcutta or other places in India, after the expiration of the said three years, by any other means than going out of office by rotation, shall be filled up by the proprietors in India, at the yearly meeting to be held as before stated, or at a special general meeting called for that purpose; at which meeting, for the election of a director, to supply such a vacancy, the like rules as laid down for the election of a director in London not going out by rotation shall be pursued.

55. That the managers appointed by the Board of Directors in London, for the conduct of banks in India, will have seats and votes at the Boards of Direction, where they shall be respectively managers.

56. That that general expression of Directors or Court of Directors throughout the charter shall always be understood as applying to the London directors, and the Court of Directors in London, unless otherwise expressed, and that every word importing the singular number only shall extend and be applied to several persons and things, and every word importing the masculine gender only, shall extend and be applied to a female as well as a male.

57. That any member of the directors may vacate his office by sending his resignation in writing, or if by transfer or otherwise he reduce the amount of stock held by him below the amount required for a qualification.

58. That the directors meet once in every month at the least, and at such other times as they may think proper, and any one of the directors may call a meeting of the Court by notice sent to the office, but no business to be transacted at any meeting unless seven members shall be present, and that all questions be decided by the votes of the majority present, and in case of an equal division of votes, the Chairman to have the casting vote besides his own vote. The proceeding of every court to be entered in a book kept for that purpose, and be signed by the member in the chair.

59. The directors to have full power to superintend, regulate, and controul all the affairs and concerns of the said company, and to appoint all agents, officers, and servants thereof, as well in England and abroad, and to fix their salaries, and from time to time to discharge any such servants and to appoint others in their stead; and to make such rules and orders for the government of the company and of their agents, &c. and generally for the management of the said company, as they see fit, and to alter the said rules and regulations or any of them in such manner as the said court shall from time to time think proper. All rules and orders in force shall be fairly entered and written in a book to be kept for that purpose in the office of the company in London, and open to the inspection of the directors and proprietors at all seasonable times.

60. All cases where the provisions and regulations contained in the presents shall not be applicable to the local situation of circumstances of such proprietor or subscriber, or other holder of any share in the capital of the said corporation, as are or shall be resident in India or elsewhere than in Great Britain, the directors may, when they shall think fit, make all rules or regulations relative to any such subscriber, proprietor, or holder as last aforesaid, and with regard to their respective shares and interests in the capital of the corporation, as the circumstances of the case to be provided for, shall in the judgment and the sole directors, appear to demand and to alter all or any such rules and regulations and to make others in their stead.

61. That the Court of Directors shall appoint the place and hour of holding every yearly and other meeting, and cause at least 21 days' notice of every yearly and other meeting, and not less than 8 or more than 15 days' notice of every adjourned meeting, which shall adjourn for a longer time than two days, to be given by advertisements in manner aforesaid.

62. That subject to the rules of the general meetings of the said company, the said directors shall have full power to direct and manage all affairs of the said company, and order and dispose of the custody of their common seal, and the use and application thereof, and execute all the powers thereby given to the said company.

63. That the said directors shall have power to call for payment of the amount subscribed by the several subscribers and proprietors, which amount shall be paid at such times and places, and in such sums as shall be appointed after the £10 per share, payable on the allotment of the shares, and the £15 per share on the charter being obtained, so that no call exceed the sum of £10 for every £100 subscribed and that 3 months' interval take place between each call, that 28 days' notice at least, be given of every such call by advertisement in two daily morning newspapers printed in London.

64. In case any person being a subscriber, &c. of a share, shall neglect or refuse to pay their part of the money called for at the time appointed or within 30 days next ensuing, they shall forfeit £5 for every £100 subscribed, or held in the capital of the corporation, and in case such person shall neglect to pay for the space of 2 months, the directors, if they think proper, may declare the respective shares to be forfeited, and thereupon the said share or shares and all the profits thereof shall be forfeited to, and become vested in the company.

65. That when any share shall have become forfeited, it shall be lawful for the directors to sell by public auction or private contract, and by writing under the common seal of the company, to assign and transfer such share unto any person willing to become the purchaser, his executors, administrators, or assigns, and such assignment and transfer shall be good and effectual against the owner and all persons claiming under him. In case the money produced by the sale of any such share be more than sufficient to pay any such arrears and interest, and the penalties by non-payment, and the expenses, the directors may pay the surplus to the person to whom such share belonged, but not to sell more stock of the defaulter than sufficient to pay the arrears, &c. unsold shares to revert to the person, body, &c. to whom such stock belonged in such manner as if such calls had been duly and regularly paid.

66. In case any person, body, &c. who shall have subscribed for any share, shall neglect to pay their rateable part of any sum of money called for, the company are empowered to sue for the same.

67. In all actions brought by the company against any person, body, &c. who shall subscribe, or against any proprietor of any share, to recover any sums of money payable to the said company for calls, it shall be sufficient for the said company to declare and allege that the defendant being a subscriber or proprietor of so much stock in the said company, is indebted to the said company in such sums of money as the calls in arrear shall amount to whereby an action hath accrued to the said company by virtue of the said charter, and on the trial of such action it shall only be necessary to prove that the defendant at the time of making such call was a subscriber or proprietor of some share of the capital stock of the company and that such call was in fact made &c. and the company, shall thereupon be entitled to recover what shall appear to be due.

68. That if any deceased subscriber or proprietor shall not have left assets sufficient, or in case the executors, administrators, &c. shall refuse to answer such calls for the space of 3 months after notice by advertisement as aforesaid shall have been given of such call, the said company are authorized to admit any other person to be proprietor of the stock of such deceased proprietor, on condition that he shall on or before such admission pay to the executors, &c. of such deceased proprietor or to the trustees, &c. of the infant or other person who may be entitled to his effects, the full sum of money which shall have been paid by such proprietor or such other sums of money as the same may be sold for, and in case no person shall be found, who is willing to be admitted upon such conditions, then such share shall be forfeited to and become vested in the said company.

69. The books in which the minutes of the proceedings of any general meeting, &c. shall be conclusive evidence unless the contrary be shewn, that the person whose name shall be subscribed to any minute entered, &c. was the chairman of such meeting, &c. and that he signed such minute, and that the proceedings of which any minute shall be respectively entered, took place at a general meeting or at Court of Directors, duly held, and that the persons acting as chairman and directors at any such general meeting, or at any such Court of Directors, were chairman and directors de jure of the corporation, &c., and that it shall not be necessary for such person, or for the corporation, to shew that such person had so acted in any other business than in that in question, and that all acts, deeds and things done by the persons to the time being, respectively, acting as chairman of any Court of Directors, or as directors and other officers of the corporation, shall to all intents and purposes be binding and conclusive on the corporation, and on all the proprietors thereof and all persons claiming under them, and also that the corporation shall continue a corporation, notwithstanding the person so acting as aforesaid shall not be the chairman of such Court of Directors and other offices of the corporation.

70. That at any time after the original capital or joint stock of £5,000,000 shall have been subscribed and the full sum of £100 shall have been paid up in respect of each of the said fifty thousand shares constituting the same, or of so many of them as shall not have been extinguished by not being again sold by the directors

... under the provision herein contained, it shall be thought advisable by the directors to increase the amount of capital, then it shall be lawful for a Court of Directors, specially called for the purpose, to enter into a resolution to increase the capital by the sale of new shares of £100 each, either at the sum of £100 for each share, or at any greater price for each share, at the sole discretion of the directors, but so that nevertheless the excess of such sum of £100 for any one share shall not in any case be greater than the amount of the market premium, at which shares are selling, but not at any less sum than £100 for each share, and to determine the manner of the payment of such new shares, either at one time or by instalments, at not less than one month from each other, and the times of paying same, (as the case may be) and the same rules, &c. to attach to all the new shares to be sold and created as aforesaid as are provided in regard to the originated fifty thousand shares, in case default shall be made in payment, and as to all instalments or new shares of the respective times for payment, notice shall not be given at the respective times of the creation and sale of such new shares, the directors shall cause similar notices thereof to be given by advertisement, as required with respect to instalments or shares in the original capital of £5,000,000 sterling, and that all the instalments upon each new share shall be made payable, and be paid within the space of two years from the time fixed for the payment of the first instalment thereon, and that when a Court of Directors shall come to a resolution to increase the capital, the new shares for the first three months after the same shall have been entered into by the directors, to be offered to the then existing proprietors of the corporation, without payment of any premium for the same, and if the number of new shares to be created shall not be sufficient to satisfy the demands of all the existing proprietors of the same, the said shares shall be distributed and divided by the directors amongst the existing proprietors. Candidates for the same in proportion to the number of shares held by them, but if the number of new shares shall be more than sufficient to satisfy the demands of the proprietors, then the Court of Directors may, at their discretion, at the expiration of 3 months, after such resolutions shall have been entered into as aforesaid, sell the excess of such new shares above such demand, to any persons who shall be willing to purchase the same. It shall be lawful for the directors to allot any new shares to any persons who may be resident in places where any branch bank may hereafter be established without requiring the payment of any premium for the same.

71. That it shall and may be lawful for the said company to carry on the business of bankers by receiving deposits, dealing in bullion, money, and bills of exchange, and lending money on deposits, and in such other lawful ways as are usually practised among bankers, but it shall not be lawful for the company to lend money on the security of lands, houses, or tenements, or upon ships, nor to deal in goods, wares, and merchandises; but the said company may take and accept lands, houses, and tenements, ships, or other property of whatever nature and condition, as collateral security for any sums of money which shall have been advanced by them, or shall be due or owing to them, and shall and may hold such lands, &c. until the same can be sold, and the company may sell any goods which shall be deposited with them, and all or any lands, &c. which they shall have acquired as security as aforesaid.

72. That it shall be lawful for the said company to establish one or more bank or banks in Calcutta and other places in India, within the limits of the East India Company's charter, with such branches as may be found convenient, and at and from such principal bank, &c. to make issue and circulate notes payable to bearer on demand, or otherwise, provided that no such note shall be issued for less than 10 rupees where the rupee is current, nor for any sum in the current coin of the country were issued, than at the then current rate of exchange, lesser would be of the value of one pound sterling, and provided that all such notes be made payable in specie to bearer on demand at the bank where issued, if more than one of such banks shall be established, and that it shall be lawful for the corporation, notwithstanding the statutes of Mortmain or other laws to the contrary thereof, to purchase, take, &c. as well in England as in India, such houses, offices, &c., as may from time to time be thought necessary for the purpose of managing, &c. the affairs of the said corporation, but not for any other purpose, and to sell and dispose of the same when not wanted for the purpose of their said business.

73. That there be a condition in the charter, that if the corporation should become insolvent, all the proprietors for the time being of any interest or share in the capital thereof, shall be liable to be called on to contribute to the payment of the debts of the said corporation to such part of the full amount of all stock held by them in the said Company as shall not have been therefore called for and paid up.

And further, that the said corporation shall be bound to make up and present to Parliament in every year, and not later than the first day of July in each year, provided Parliament be then sitting) an account shewing the amount of its debts and assets at the close of the past year, and shewing the average amount of notes payable on demand, which had been in circulation during the past year, together with the average amount of specie and assets available for the discharge of such notes, and that corporation shall at all times be liable to furnish, as far as may be practicable, to the Governor in Council, at each settlement in which a principal bank share be established, similar accounts wherein required. And further, that the said corporation shall not become purchasers of any of the capital stock of the company, and that on the determination of the charter, the business so to be carried on by the corporation shall cease, and the debts thereof shall be liquidated, and the assets thereof disposed of, and converted into money, and the surplus divided amongst the proprietors according to their interest in the capital.—Englishman, Feb. 1.

THE AGRA BANK.

The following is the half yearly report, ending Dec. 1836, of the Agra Bank. It speaks strongly for the prosperity and steady advance of the Institution.

Gentlemen.—In laying the accounts of the Bank before you for the past year, commencing with 1st July, and ending on the 31st of December, 1836,—the Directors have great gratification in reporting to you that the balance of Nett Profit on the operations of this period is a company's Rupee, 53,657-3-2,—that not a single loss has occurred during the past half year either in discount, loan, or miscellaneous business; and that the investment of the whole of the capital of the Bank, amounting to ten lakhs of rupees, has been completed during the last six months.

The Nett Profit on the past half year's business will provide a dividend on the 2,599 shares taken up previous to the commencement of the past half year and on the remaining shares as actually invested, during the currency of the same period at the rate of 12 per cent. per annum, with a surplus of 2,536-4-9. The balance, however, of unappropriated profits from the bank's operations commencing on 1st July 1833 up to the 30th June, 1836, having swelled to the large amount of Rs. 22,535-2-9½ there seems no reason why the rate of dividend should not rather be increased for the past half year, than that a further amount of profit should be carried to a fund, created during the infancy of the establishment to meet contingencies, which contingencies have never taken place. Since the commencement of the Bank the only transaction which can be regarded as a loss is the advance of Rs. 400 to an officer, who went to England, before the arrangements with his securities were finally completed, the amount, however, was long since written off to profit and loss. As observed before we have no overdue loan or discount standing in our accounts, and have indeed no reason to suppose that if it were desirable to wind up every existing transaction in order to test the stability of the institution, the loss of a single pie would occur to the Bank from bad debts: the existing surplus is therefore fairly divisible, but as a matter of caution the Directors would propose to reserve therefrom the sum of rupees 10,000, to meet future contingencies.

The following are the details of funds, profit and the rates of dividend in past and present half years as exhibited in former printed statements.

	DIVIDEND
2nd Half year of 1833.—	Rs. 8 per cent
1st ditto ditto of 1834.....	10 ditto.
2nd ditto ditto.....	10 ditto.
1st ditto ditto Assets. Nett profit, of 1835, Rs. 5,47,695 2 5—11,905 8 7 10	ditto.
2nd ditto ditto
of 1835, .. 8,52,933 5 0—30,034 8 0 12	ditto.
1st ditto ditto
of 1836, 12,72,075 7 3—30,019 0 9 12	ditto.
of 1836, 19,00,320 1 4—53,657 3 2 14	ditto.

Now, it will be seen at one glance, that the progress of the establishment has been steady and satisfactory, during the past two years especially, and that the total funds of the Bank, at the close of 1836, are much more than double the amount at the end of 1835; while those of the half-year just closed, exceed those of the preceding one by one-third. No exact comparison of the rates of profit can be drawn out, because 7½ lakhs of capital have been invested during the course of 1836 by parties at different periods, and with different funds, involving the Bank frequently in the necessity of providing for the immediate employment of large sums of cash, Company's paper, &c., as paid in, in purchase of shares. Moreover, during the past half year the very large sum of 2 lakhs has been held by the Bank in Company's Paper, being equal to an average of one-third of the fixed and floating deposits. The Directors, however, are well assured that the security and confidence obtained by the holding of a large portion of Company's Paper or other Securities negotiable in the bazar, is well purchased by the sacrifice of the difference between the market rate of interest and that of the public funds. Moreover, it is a great misconception for parties to compare the rate of profit between two particular half years' operation in a Bank, rising so rapidly from infancy to maturity. For instance the nett profit on honddaan for the second half year of 1835 being rupees 6,227-5-7, it gave on the capital of 2½ lakhs then invested an increase to the dividend at the rate of 5 per cent. per annum, while the nett profit on honddaan on the past half year though nearly double or rupees 12,134-1-4 auroos gives more than an increase of dividend at the rate of 2½ per cent. per annum, because the whole capital has since been filled up to the extent of 10 lakhs of Rs. The increase, however, of this branch of business is great and though the profit is not considerable, with reference to the trouble the risk is almost nothing, it is obvious that all future increase of this branch of business will now go to swell the dividend on a capital now wholly paid up.

Mr. Beckett having towards the close of last year retired from your Secretaryship on account of ill-health, the Directors cannot but recommend for your consideration the propriety of your making some pecuniary acknowledgement of his services.

To undertake the important office of Secretary to your Bank, on the filling up of which must depend the successful progress of your Bank, the Directors have nominated for your confirmation an individual, Mr. G. J. Gordon, whom they regard as in every respect equal to the Secretariat management of an Institution like the Agra Bank at the largest mercantile town in Upper India, and the seat of the Government of the N. W. Provinces.

The great increase of business has called for the appointment of an Assistant Secretary, Mr. H. W. Abbott on a salary of Rs. 300 a month; the appointment, having been made under Rule 15, the confirmation is solicited from this meeting.

The following resolutions were then carried.

1st.—Proposed by P. Innes, Esq., and seconded by P. Saunders, Esq., that the report now read be approved and that it be printed.

2nd.—Proposed by E. Tandy, Esq., and seconded by M. Woollaston, Esq., that the accounts now submitted be approved and passed by this meeting.

3rd.—Proposed by H. H. Bell, Esq., and seconded by W. Spencer, Esq., that of the available sum of present and past profits a half yearly dividend at the rate of 14 per cent. per annum, being Rs. 17-8 per share, be now declared, leaving a balance of Rs. 6,551-5-1½ to added to the reserved fund to meet contingencies, making a total of surplus assets in hand of Rs. 16,551-5-1½.

4th.—Proposed by P. Saunders, Esq., and seconded by P. Innes, Esq., that the following resolution of the Directors be confirmed as one of the fundamental rules of the Bank, viz. that from this date (3rd December, 1836,) as the Bank shares are filled up, no person becoming a Shareholder by purchase or transfers shall be entitled to vote until the expiration of six months from the date of such purchase or transfer; this Rule, however, not to preclude persons becoming Proprietor, by inheritance or marriage, from exercising the right of voting possessed by the original holder of the shares.

5th.—Proposed by C. G. Mansel, Esq., and seconded by the Hon'ble H. B. Dalzell, that the appointment of Mr. G. J. Gordon to the Secretaryship on a salary of Rs. 25,000 per annum be confirmed.

In closing this Report the Directors desire me, with reference to prospective measures for the increase of the establishment, to say that the past and present increase of Funds is such as daily to place the Bank in a condition equal to the gradual assumption of a large portion of ordinary banking business, as well as to continue its present service loan operations to the extent that they may not be entirely correct. From a glance at the past half year's accounts, it will be seen, that the increase of fixed deposits in that period was two lakhs, or at the rate of four lakhs per annum : while, I have to observe, that in the current month of January, the new fixed deposits amounted to 70,000 Rs. or to an increase at the rate of full 8 lakhs per annum. Even allowing that in the employment of this additional capital, in advance on goods and other banking business in the large city of Agra, a higher rate of interest could not on an average be realized than 8 per cent, the increase of profit (being the difference between 5 and 8 per cent. allowed and charged) would be at the rate of 24,000 Rs. per annum : and this calculation is made without reference to any commission on goods sent. Again, though on the six months of the last half year, the average amount of remittance to Calcutta was 1½ lakhs per annum from the Bank, the amount drawn upon the Presidency, up to the 30th of the present month alone, is 2,08,136-9-9 shewing how steadily improvable is this class of business and what a permanently increasing source of profit it may be when the ramifications of our remittance agency are extended beyond the office of the Bank at Agra. The next half yearly report, however, will obviously be the proper occasion for a detailed view of this and other measures contemplated for the advancement of the interests of the Bank, as an important national Institution in Upper India.

PROJECTED JOINT STOCK BANK OF BOMBAY.

On the conclusion of the business before the shareholders to the Chartered Bank, at the meeting on the 2nd instant, the parties then present, immediately formed themselves into another meeting, according to the notice published in the papers.

Mr. Skinner, being called upon to take the chair, proposed a resolution, passed after the meeting of the shareholders to the Chartered Bank on the 16th ultimo, to support a Joint Stock Bank, in the event of the Charter granted by this Government not being confirmed by the home authorities and to avail of Mr. Ashburner's residence in England, authorizing him to bring out the necessary establishment Subscriptions to the Joint Stock Bank to be first restricted to subscribers to the Chartered Bank in the proportion of their respective shares, and to parties who had applied for shares in it, but that no one party or firm be allowed to subscribe for more than 50 shares. Subscribers to the Joint Stock Bank to bind themselves for the expense of the establishment from England rateably, to the amount of the shares subscribed for. The following prospectus and resolutions were then read and adopted.

Foreseeing a probability of the opening Bombay affords for a Bank being availed of by others before the result is known of the application to the home authorities for the confirmation of the Chartered Bank, it is deemed necessary for the protection of the mercantile and general interests of Bombay, to prevent this, and to have a Bank established under the control and direction of parties resident at Bombay.

In pursuance of a resolution passed at the last meeting of the shareholders of the proposed Chartered Bank, the following Prospectus for the Joint Stock Bank then agreed upon, has been since drawn up, to be submitted to this meeting, with the view also of the Scheme being immediately acted upon, should the Bank of Bengal or any other Bank determine on sending a Branch or Agent here.

In this prospectus, it will be seen in what way it is proposed to restrict the liability of Subscribers, and that all may fully understand how this is to be effected, and public confidence to be secured, the clauses proposed to be inserted in the Deed of Settlement for this purpose, are affixed to the Prospectus.

It may be remarked that the directors, when elected, could be enabled at once to commence business, a sufficient supply of Bank Notes and Plates, engraved in England, being immediately procurable.

In the event of being obliged by the circumstances now stated, to commence business before learning the result of the application to the authorities in England for a Chartered Bank, it has been determined on, should the Charter applied for be obtained, the business of the Joint Stock Bank shall merge into, and be transferred to the Chartered Bank.—Bombay Courier, Feb. 4.

FREE SCHOOL MEETING.

Annexed is a Report of the Resolutions passed this morning at the Annual Meeting at the Free School. The Meeting was not very numerously attended, and nothing else occurred worth noticing.

At a General Meeting of the Subscribers to the Free School, on Saturday, the 28th January, 1837.

PRESENT.

A. Dobbs, Esq., in the Chair.

Reverend Dr. Parish, Mr. D. Clark, Chas. McKenzie, Captain Morse, Mr. Wale Byrne, Dr. Corbyn, Mr. R. Molloy, Mr. D. Macfarlan, Captain Birch, Reverend C. Wimberley, Mr. Sutherland, Mr. C. J. Sutherland, Mr. R. Parmer, Mr. Wm. Byrn, Mr. D. W. Madge.

Proposed by Captain Vint and seconded by Mr. D. Clark That the Report now read be printed, published and circulated. Carried.

Proposed by Captain Birch and seconded by the Reverend Mr. Wimberley. That the Resolution of the 30th January, 1836, "Proposed by Dr. Corbyn, and seconded Mr. Wale Byrne, that previous to the printing of the Annual Report it be submitted for approval and adoption at a General Meeting of the Subscribers, and that the day of the Annual General Meeting be changed to the first Saturday in June," be rescinded, and that the Annual Meeting be held in January as heretofore, and the Report be laid before it for approval. Carried unanimously.

Proposed by Captain Vint and seconded by Mr. C. J. Sutherland. That the Governors be requested to apply to the Supreme Government to relieve the Institution from the expenses connected with the Church attached to the School. Carried.

The Governors of last year were re-elected.

Read a letter from four persons, formerly boys of this School, named Sampson Peters, Peter Swaries, Thomas Swaries and Lewis Rodrigues, making a claim to a donation given by the Lottery Committee for drawing the Lotteries in the years 1829 and 1830.

Proposed by Mr. Clark and seconded by Mr. Madge. That it be referred for the consideration of the Governors. Carried.

Proposed by Dr. Parish and seconded by the Reverend Mr. Wimberley. That the thanks of the Meeting be accorded to Mr. Dobbs for his conduct in the Chair. Carried unanimously.

REPORT.

In submitting a Report of the Free School for the last twenty months to the Subscribers and Friends of the Institution, the Governors have but little as regards its general circumstances, to communicate in addition to what is already before the public; their statement therefore, on this occasion, will necessarily be very brief.

It is perhaps necessary to assign a reason in the first instance, for so long an interval as that of twenty months having elapsed since the publication of the last Report. The delay has been owing to a Resolution of the Subscribers at the last Annual Meeting in January 1836, deciding that thenceforward the Report, prior to publication, should be submitted to the Subscribers at their Annual Meetings; and that as it had hitherto been published in June, the Meeting should by way of accommodation take place in June likewise. A strict adherence to this Resolution, it will be seen, would involve an extension of the delay to June next; for the Annual Meeting of 1836, having already taken place in January last, and an extra one in February, it became necessary either to call a third Meeting, in June of the same year, for the purpose of discussing the Report,—which does not appear to have been at all contemplated,—or else suffer it to lie over till next June, as seems to have been intended. The Governors, however, upon more recent consideration, thinking it desirable that the accounts should always terminate with the year, and that any further delay in the publication of the Report might be prejudicial to the interests of the Institution, determined to call the present Meeting at this the usual season, and submit the Report for approval; and they not only hope that the course they have adapted will be deemed more satisfactory, but also that it may now be finally determined that the Annual Meetings may still be allowed to take place in January, as heretofore, when from the suitableness of the season, there is a greater likelihood of a full attendance, and that the Report of the preceding year be submitted for discussion in that month instead of June.

It will be seen by a reference to the last Report, that the Governors had in contemplation to add to the girl's refectory in consequence of an accession to their number. This intention has since been carried into effect, and a small room and verandah have likewise been added to the Head Mistress's quarters, which are over the refectory, and which (consisting of a single room, divided into two by means of a screen,) were previously insufficient merely for accommodation, far less for comfort.

This is the only change that has to be noticed under the head of buildings, with the exception of partial repairs, which are entered as a separate item in the table of charges; but while on the subject, it may be well to remark, that the buildings, especially of the male department, require an immediate thorough repair, which, at a rough calculation, will involve an expense, probably of not less than 400 rupees.

The strictest economy that can consist with the welfare and comfort of the children, is observed, in regard to the monthly expenditure, to effect which a Sub-Committee of three of the Governors has been formed to audit the accounts, while another composed of the same number and styled the Sub-committee of Repairs, examines into and reports upon all matters connected with the buildings, before any decision is made by the Management at large, authorizing an outlay for repairs.

Among the contemplated improvements by which the Governors hope to facilitate and simplify all details of business, both as regards their own functions and those of the several officers of the Institution, is a connected Code of Regulations, which is in the course of being framed, chiefly out of the mass of resolutions that are found scattered through the books of proceedings since the foundation of the Establishment, and which constitute at present the Standing Regulations of the School. These there have been the utmost pains taken to revise, embody, and classify, such additions being likewise made as were deemed necessary; and they are at present in circulation among the Governors, for whatever further alteration, enlargement, or modifications may be found requisite prior to their final adoption.

There has been a slight increase of the regular current expenditure, in consequence of the Head Master's salary having been raised in February 1836, from 250 to 300 rupees a month, and that of the Organist, in August of the preceding year, from 30 to 40 rupees a month; but, besides taking these into the account, in comparing the Disbursements now submitted with those of former years, it must be remembered that the present are entered in Company's rupees, a circumstance which swells the numerical amount considerably. Converting the sum total into Siccas, at which rate and currency the outlay has been chiefly made, (though a change in this respect has lately been effected), it will be found that notwithstanding the above increase, the average standing expenditure of twelve months out of the twenty, will be found even less than that of 1834-35.

It may here be intimated, that the change of currency will henceforward operate considerably in favor of the Institution, and indeed has been doing so for some time. It has of course entailed no reduction of interest from the vested funds, or of the amount which the Government have stipulated to pay permanently, as Old Court House rent; the full equivalent being obtained from these two sources in Co.'s rupees for what was formerly received in Siccas, as will be found in the table of Receipts. In the Government Donation only, which was formerly 843-5-4 Siccas, a small loss has been sustained, as the amount is now paid in the new currency at the Government rate of 104-8 per 100 Siccas. All private Subscriptions and Donations, however, with the exception of a few instances, in which the Subscribers give the full equivalent for their former contributions, together with all remaining sources of income are paid in the new coin without any regard to its depreciated value; but then, again, this portion of the receipts scarcely amounts altogether to a third of the School's resources, and there is far more than will counterbalance any diminution in a reduction of all salaries to the Company's rate, and in the further reduction of a few of these, as vacancies occurred, to the same number of Co.'s rupees as they before received of Siccas. But what is more, nearly all the other expenses, such as those of diet, clothing, and contingencies, constituting the main outlay, have already been reduced to the new rupee rate, so that two-thirds of the receipts being at the old rate, and about the same proportion of disbursements at the new, the change of currency, as has been observed, has operated considerably in favour of the Institution.

The Governors were in hopes some little time ago of an immediate addition to the funds in the shape of a bequest to the amount of 6,000 rupees or upwards, made to the Institution by the late Mr. Route of Agra; but legal difficulties opposing the immediate transfer of the money, the matter is still in abeyance. It is hoped, however, that the money will be obtained, and that the benevolent intention of the testator will thus ultimately be fulfilled.

The actual state of the School in all other respects is much the same as was detailed in the report of 1834-35. The same course of plain education has been pursued, as was therein stated, comprehending Geography, English Grammar, Writing and Arithmetic, the History of England, together with such books of a more simple kind, as are used for instruction in reading. Moreover, the nature and principles of the Christian religion are taught every day out of the Catechism and other books, but chiefly from the Bible direct, which is made to constitute a very considerable portion of their daily reading during the hours of instruction as well as at morning and evening prayers. Two out of the three examinations that have taken place since the Report for 1834-35 was published, viz. that in June 1835, and the last in December 1836, appeared to give satisfaction to those who witnessed and took part in them, when the children evinced quickness in all matters pertaining to what they had learnt. The intermediate examination in June 1836, was rather productive of disappointment; but this was chiefly attributable to the more advanced boys having left the School in quick succession, thereby leaving the boys of the junior classes to supply their places.

The circumstances of the girls' department preclude their being as far advanced as the boys. Their opportunities of instruction are not equal to what the latter enjoy, more than half of the day being necessarily devoted to needle work, lace and bonnet making, and such other occupations as may enable them to get a living by their industry, when they leave school. The rest of the day is employed in much the same course of study as is pursued by the boys; and as in their case, primary attention is paid to their religious education.

Of the health of the children, the Governors are enabled to report favourably. It has happened, indeed, at particular seasons, when for instance epidemics have prevailed in and about Calcutta, that considerable numbers have been in hospital at one time, but the ailments have generally been both mild in character and short in duration. At one period, owing to some cause which could not be assigned at the time, and the influence of which was not confined to this establishment, the children became affected with sore eyes, which spread rapidly through the school and upwards of thirty at a time were on the sick list in consequence; but every case was not only of the most simple nature, but admitted of a cure in a few days. Nor was there one among them that in the opinion of the medical officer of the Institution could be strictly designated ophthalmia.

Upon the whole, however, the children have enjoyed good health in every respect, and so exhibited the fairest argument that can be brought forward of the nature of the treatment which they have been in the habit of receiving. Only two deaths have occurred within the whole period of 20 months; one that of a boy, aged 7 years, of spleen, and the other of a girl, aged 8, of fever and dysentery.

The Governors cannot conclude this Report, without once more adverting to the state of the funds, and in doing so they beg to reiterate their intreaties for increased support. They rest the grounds of their appeal on the important benefits which result from the establishment; and they trust that the single fact,—that 400 children are rescued from destitution, ignorance and vice brought up in the fear and love of God, instructed in the Christian religion, and enabled by what they are taught in the School to earn a livelihood when they have left it,—is more than enough to recommend the Institution to a benevolent and discerning public.—Calcutta Courier, January 28.

LORD AUCKLAND'S SOIREES.

The Scientific Meeting at Government House last evening was the last of the series for which invitations had been circulated. We should hope, however, that the pleasing variety and instructive nature of the entertainment these parties have afforded, will induce the noble Patron of the Asiatic Society to resume them either in the same form, or with the modification that has been suggested in different quarters, of confining the invitations to such as take real interest in scientific researches, so as to remove the impediments which a promiscuous assembly of talkers must needs offer to the delivery of any regular explanation or lecture. The rooms were, however, not so full on this as on former occasions, nor was there on the whole so showy an exhibition, but some of the experiments were exceedingly interesting. Of natural history specimens, we remarked a very fine collection of insects from Simla. Some birds and fish, the latter remarkably well preserved, by M. Delessert, a French Naturalist, recently arrived in India. There was likewise a portfolio of most beautiful drawings of fish (with dissections) by Dr. Cantur who, it will be remembered, was attached to the Marine Survey Vessels, under Captain Lloyd, now employed in examining the mouths of the Soonderbun Creeks. A large collection of the birds of Van Dieman's Land presented by Mr. Cracroft to the Asiatic Society, was distributed on the side tables, some of the principal specimens being already mounted through the exertions of the Curators of that institution. Among the latter was a bird, the white hawk, which excited the particular admiration of the native guests; they said such a bird was spoken of by their poets, but it had never been seen, and many expressed suspicion whether the very beautiful bird before them was not a bunao, or fictitious. Another animal production of the southern world was viewed with no less astonishment—the Ornithorynchus, a very large specimen brought up by Mr. E. V. Irwin, of the Civil Service; we think it must have measured 18 inches in length. From the same quarter were numerous other contributions—the legs of the gigantic Emu—a series of the fossil shells of Wellington hill. Hobart Town, of Yas plains and Morumbij in New South Wales; and recent shells from Newcastle N. S. Wales, by Mr. Cracroft. From a new source, the hills of Cutch, were forwarded some very interesting Ammonites and other fossil shells by Captain Burnes, the traveller—but the principal acquisition from the west of India was undoubtedly the selection of fossil bones of Perim, in the Gulph of Cambay, lately received from Lieut. Fulljames, and presented to the Asiatic Society at its last meeting. The Mammoth's fore-leg was equally gigantic with that of the Nabudda, and well distinguished in this respect from all the bones of the same animal dug up in the Himalaya mountains; the teeth of deer, oxen, hippopotamus, horse, mastodon, and a large variety of the rhinoceros deserved attention. We would recommend in future that every specimen should be ticketed to enable the company to appreciate what they are inspecting, as it is impossible to have demonstrators always in attendance. Thus we doubt not many left the room without seeing the rare and unique fossil animal of the Himalaya, called the Sivatherium by its discoverers, Messrs. Cautley and Falconer. The occiput and lower jaw of this noble tenant of the antediluvian forests, now on its way to England with Colonel Colvin, have determined the accuracy of Dr. Falconer's conjecture that it would be found to possess four horns. Colonel Colvin has, we hear, kindly allowed a cast of his fossil to be made previous to its embarkation.

Of the fine arts, we had the carved models of the Corinthian capitals, &c. executed by Colonel Macleod for the nowab's palace at Moorshedabad. Specimens of a quantity of sandal woods were nearly lost sight of on a side table. A wax model of the human head divided longitudinally, was explained by Professor Goodeve, occupying the place hitherto filled by Principal Bramley, whose memory we doubt not was warily cherished by many of his auditors, and by none more than the illustrious host himself.

For the brunt of the evening's campaign Professor O'Shaughnessy had arrayed on a long central table a whole host of batteries and galvanic apparatus, which at the appointed time he proceeded to explain in the form of an extempore lecture. It would be impossible to follow him, or to mention half of the pleasing experiments. The magnetism of the galvanic wire was, as the newest, the favorite topic of illustration. A new and much improved model of the Professor's wheel was exhibited, which worked with a power of about 3-lbs. or nearly five times greater than the former model! Watkin's curious discovery that the sustaining power of the soft iron magnet was retained after the removal of the exciting battery, so long as the contact of the guard remained, was put to the test; we should like to know whether the coiled wire remains also electrical during the same status or not.

Mr. James Prinsep, at the close of the evening, exhibited Mr. Richard's ingenious Psalmoscope, by which the crystalline structure of transparent bodies can be analysed as to their reflecting on polarizing properties, in the simplest manner. Cal. Cour. Feb. 15.

THE PUBLIC LIBRARY MEETING.

Proceedings of the Annual Meeting of the Proprietors and Subscribers of the Calcutta Public Library, held on the 18th January, 1837, at the Library Rooms.

Honorable Sir J. P. Grant in the Chair.

The report of the Curators, being read, was unanimously approved.

Proposed by Mr. Leith, and seconded by Mr. M. Manuk, that the present Curators be retained for the next year, and the Curators assenting to this proposition, the resolution unanimously carried.

Mr. M. M. Manuk, anxious to serve the interests of the Library, proposes to place one thousand rupees at the disposal of the Curators to be laid out in such manner as they think best.

Proposed by Mr. W. P. Grant, and seconded by Mr. Leith, that Mr. Manuk's handsome offer be accepted, and that the thanks of the Meeting be given to him—unanimously carried.

Proposed by Mr. Walker, and seconded by Col. Beatson, that Mr. Manuk's liberal offer of 1000 Rs. be invested in Public Securities, and that it be recommended to the Proprietors, and those interested in the success of the Library to contribute to the augmentation of a Fund to be so secured, the interest only to be applied to the support of the Library; the principal sum not to be sold out or otherwise disposed of, without the approbation of a General Meeting of the Proprietors and Subscribers. Unanimously carried.

Proposed by Mr. Jackson, and seconded by Mr. Earle, that the Establishment be continued on its present scale. Unanimously carried.

Proposed by Col. Beatson, and seconded by Mr. J. H. Stocqueler, that persons wishing to become Proprietors be admitted up to the 15th May next, at the original rate of 300 Rs. under the terms of the Rule 9th. Unanimously carried.

Proposed by Col. Beatson, and seconded by Mr. R. Walker, that the 3d instalment be called for from the Proprietors. Unanimously carried.

Proposed by Mr. W. P. Grant and seconded by Mr. T. Dickens, that the thanks of the Meeting be given to Dr. Strong for his liberality and public spirit in continuing to the Library the gratuitous use of the apartments. Unanimously carried.

Proposed by Mr. T. Dickens, and seconded by Mr. A. Robertson, that there may be a Meeting of the Proprietors and Subscribers held on the first Saturday every Month at 4 p. m. at which the Curators be requested to attend and report the progress of the Institution, and receive such suggestions and propositions as may be made by any Proprietor or Subscriber, provided the same shall not be contrary to the rules of the Library. Unanimously carried.

Proposed by Mr. Manuk and seconded by Mr. Leith, that the report and resolutions be printed in the Hurkaru, Englishman and Courier newspapers. Unanimously carried.

Proposed by Mr. Allan, and seconded by Baboo Comanath Bose, that the thanks of the Meeting be given to the former Curators for the zealous manner in which they have performed their offices during the past year. Unanimously carried.

Proposed by Col. Beatson and seconded by Mr. Dickens, that the thanks of the Meeting be given to Sir J. P. Grant for the kind manner in which he has presided in the Chair and the general interest he has taken in the Library. Unanimously carried.

Since the opening of the Library there have been 54 Subscribers. Sixteen have withdrawn, of whom nine were temporary residents and one is dead. There are twenty-two first class Subscribers and sixteen second class Subscribers.

THE STEAM MEETINGS.

MADRAS STEAM MEETING.

A Meeting was held on Monday at the College Hall pursuant to notice for the purpose of taking into consideration the papers received from Messrs. Head and Barber and from the Chairman of the Bombay Steam Committee to Mr. Norton. The attendance was unusually thin owing to the necessary absence of a number of persons who were obliged to attend the Sessions. The Chair was taken by the Honorable the Chief Justice who stated that information had reached Madras of the safe arrival in London of the Petitions to Parliament, but his Lordship stated that he had not received any answer to the letters he had addressed as Chairman of the late meeting to Lord Glenelg and Sir J. Hobhouse. The Chairman then produced a letter which Mr. Sullivan had received from Captain Barber, which was accordingly read to the Meeting, after which Mr. A. D. Campbell proposed and Mr. Macdonnell seconded Resolution first.

1. Resolved, that the inhabitants of Madras regard with unabated anxiety the immense importance of a regular Steam Communication between Great Britain and India by the Red Sea, and are desirous that their sentiments on this subject should be specially made known to the Authorities in England.

Proposed by Mr. A. D. Campbell, Seconded by Mr. Macdonnell, —Carried unanimously.

2. Resolved, therefore, that the Chairman of the meeting be requested to wait on the Right Honorable the Governor with the foregoing Resolution, and to solicit that he will be good enough to deliver copies of the same to the Chairman of the Court of Directors and the President of the India Board respectively at the same time, exercising the influence with those authorities in furtherance of this great national object.

Proposed by Mr. Chamier, Seconded by Mr. Ashton, —Carried unanimously.

3. Resolved, that the thanks of this meeting be conveyed to Major Head and Captain Barber, for their zealous endeavours to promote the Establishment of Steam Communication between India and Europe by the Red Sea, the inhabitants of Madras not being in possession of the result of their applications to Parliament and the Indian Government in England, are not yet prepared to enter into any negotiation with the Provisional Committee of London, in regard to shares in the proposed Indian Steam Company. Should, however, their applications be either refused or neglected, this Meeting has no doubt that shares will readily be taken, provided the proposed Company be incorporated and the shareholders relieved from all responsibility beyond the amounts of their shares. But the number of shares to be taken here, will be probably much increased if the port of Madras is included in the benefit of the Steam Communication as well in regard to Passengers, as Letters.

Proposed by Mr. Cator, Seconded by Mr. Arbuthnot, —Carried unanimously.

4. Resolved, that the inhabitants of Madras have watched with great anxiety and satisfaction the progress and successful accomplishment of Colonel Chesney's arduous enterprise in carrying across the Syrian Desert the materials of two steam vessels, in constructing them on the banks of the Euphrates and re-opening to mankind that ancient River, by proving the practicability of navigating it from El Bir to the Indian Ocean; and that the cordial thanks of this meeting be accordingly conveyed to Colonel Chesney by the Chairman.

Proposed by Captain Dalrymple, Seconded by the Honorable Mr. Sullivan, —Carried unanimously.

In proposing the 4th Resolution, Captain Dalrymple took occasion to eulogize in strong terms the perseverance and zeal of Colonel Chesney. He stated that a misconception prevailed as to the origin of the Euphrates expedition, which had been prejudicial to Colonel Chesney and had cast undeserved blame on the Court of Directors. Captain D. explained that the Committee of the House of Commons of 1834, had resolved that the communication between Bombay and the Red Sea was not practicable during three months in the year. A resolution in which he, Captain D., by no means concurred, and which had not been submitted to the test of experiment. If the Committee had therefore recommended the establishment of a Steam communication without providing for the three months of the S. W. Monsoon, the establishment would necessarily have been incomplete and there can be no doubt that the Euphrates expedition was planned to meet this difficulty, more especially as it was stated to the Committee by Mr. Peacock and Col. Chesney, that the river Euphrates was highest at the very season when the S. W. Monsoon prevailed, the Committee therefore resolved first that the communication was not practicable for three months, and then resolved that an experiment should be made on the Euphrates to decide the practicability of continuing the transit of the mail monthly by adopting the Persian Gulf during the S. W. Monsoon. It is clear that except paying half the expense the Directors had no share in this expedition. The error from the first seems to have had its origin in choosing Bombay as the only Indian Steam Port and the difficulty of contending with the S. W. Monsoon would have been surmounted at once and without experiment by making Galle the General Steam Post Office of India. Captain D. then stated his belief that the plan of conveying the Mails on Dromedaries from Mohamurah to Beyrout, was quite feasible; that in various modern works he had seen it confidently stated that the manufactures and rich stuffs of India found their way across the Syrian desert to Damascus and to the different Sea Ports on the Coast of Syria, of which Beyrout was the most considerable. He also noticed a curious fact that some cotton goods shipped at Liverpool had come round the Cape thence to Bombay, up the Persian Gulf, and were finally sold in the Bazar of Beyrout. He stated that the Arabs favored the transit of merchandise through the desert, because it afforded employment to their camels, which were required in great numbers to form the Caravans between Bagdad, Aleppo and Damascus.

A desultory conversation then ensued, and much regret having been expressed that the Steam Fund had been returned to the Subscribers, Captain D. proposed the fifth Resolution.

5. Resolved, that a Subscription be entered into, for the purpose of enabling the standing Committee to defray incidental expenses in furtherance of Steam Communication with England by the Red Sea.

Proposed by Captain Dalrymple, Seconded by Mr. Cropley, —Carried unanimously.

6. Resolved, that a standing Committee be appointed consisting of A. D. Campbell, Esq., Chairman; P. Cator, Esq., F. W. Elliot, Esq., and Captain Dalrymple, with power to add to their number.

Proposed by Sir R. Comyn, Seconded by Mr. McDonald, —Carried unanimously.

Sir Robert Comyn, having vacated the chair it was taken by Mr. Sullivan, and a vote of thanks to the Chairman voted and carried unanimously. — Concluding, Jan. 24.

CALCUTTA STEAM MEETING.

The Hon'ble Sir Edward Ryan, in the Chair.
The attendance was remarkably limited; we do not suppose that there were more than fifty persons in the room. The debate was nevertheless very animated and occupied several hours.

The Chairman read the notice convening the meeting, and suggested, that that part of the Committee's Report should be read which related to the new Bengal Steam Fund, and Mr. Greenlaw at the request of the Hon'ble Chairman, read the part of the report alluded to, and Shaik Tyer Ally returned thanks in a few words.

It was then proposed by Captain Sewell and seconded by Captain Birch,—

"That so much of the Report of the Committee as relates to the Fund be adopted."

Passed unanimously by the subscribers to the Fund, and Mr. Greenlaw read as follows :

REPORT

Of the Committee of the New Bengal Steam Fund, to the Subscribers, at a meeting held at the Town Hall, Calcutta, Saturday, the 18th. February, 1837.

The Committee of the New Bengal Steam Fund, are happy on this occasion, of meeting their constituents and the Subscribers to the petition to the House of Commons, to be able to state that the cause of the Steam Communication between England and India is at length assuming that position at home, which must in a short time lead to its establishment. Prior, however, to reporting on this matter, they beg to notice the state of the Funds.

2. The balance as exhibited at the last half-yearly meeting, was Co.'s Rs. 60,367-9-10, with interest due on Company's paper to the amount of Co.'s Rs. 597--54, making then a total of Co.'s Rs. 60,964-15-2. The interest received in the intermediate time is Co.'s Rs. 1,248-11-5, which added to the balance of last year makes Co.'s Rs. 61,616 5-3.

3. Since the last meeting accounts of the agent who was despatched from Calcutta to Judda, Shaik Tauher Ally, have been closed, and the balance of the account due to him on account of salary and expences incurred is Co.'s Rs. 4,648-3-4, which together with a gratuity which the committee unanimously concurred in granting him of Co.'s Rs. 1,200, makes a total of Co.'s Rs. 5,848-3-4.

4. The expences in the Secretary's office on account of Clerk, stationery, printing, &c amounts to Co.'s Rs. 489-0-3, and the whole disbursements including Co.'s Rs. 109-15-2 discount on the sale of Company's Paper amounts to Co.'s Rs. 6,447-2-9, leaving a balance of Co.'s Rs. 55,169-2-6, subject to payment of Co.'s Rs. 4,000, with interest at 4 per cent. from the 16th December last, to Mr. Waghorn, in conformity with the resolution of the subscribers of that date.

5. The Committee were induced to make the gratuity above mentioned to the absent Shaik Tauher Ally, in consideration of his great, and indeed in his situation unqualified zeal, ability and economy in the conduct of his duties.

6. His engagement was that he should proceed direct to Juddah on the ship on which our coal was laden for that place. It was through his agency that the freight on this ship was obtained at 37 Rs. per ton, though we were obliged to pay 35 to Socotra. With a view to promote the object in view, he very readily agreed to give up the comfortable accommodation of that ship, and a direct passage to Juddah, to accompany Captain Ross on the Henry Meriton to Socotra, and without his assistance Captain Ross would scarcely have been able to have come to any satisfactory arrangement with the chiefs at Kissen. Add to this the ship's arrangements at Socotra, for putting the coal on board, were so complete that on the outward voyage of the Forbes, notwithstanding he had himself proceeded on to Juddah, 144 tons of coal, her water and provisions were put on board in the space of two days.

7. At Juddah he gave the most perfect satisfaction; he got the Forbes completed, going and coming, in a very short space of time, and his activity and intelligence obtained for him the notice and regard of the officer in charge of the Indian Naval vessels in the Red Sea.

8. With respect to the present posture of affairs at home, the subscribers will remember that in the last half-yearly report, it was stated that the original petition to the House of Commons had been despatched on the Coromandel.

9. It was also stated in the last Report, that the committee in their letter to the home Committee, composed of Sir Charles Cockerell, and Messrs. James McKillop and Fletcher, had requested that no time might be lost in endeavoring to create a general interest throughout the mother country in favor of the proposed communication, by publishing an appeal to the public, with copy of the Petition and Memorials, in all the newspapers of influence in Great Britain and Ireland, and distributing a copy thereof to every member of the House of Commons and proprietor of East India Stock.

10. By the Larkins the Committee have received two letters from Captain Grindlay, acknowledging the receipt of the Committee's letters up to the 26th April last, and reporting his proceedings.

11. In order that the subscribers may be put in possession in the fullest possible manner of the measures adopted by Captain Grindlay, as well for their more satisfactory information as to the progress of this most important matter as in justice to the zeal, activity and ability of that gentleman, the Committee annex copies of the correspondence, from which it will appear that on the receipt of the circular which has since appeared in the Calcutta papers, he caused its immediate insertion in the city article of the Times of the 29th September, and in other papers proposing to effect similar notices both directly and collaterally, whenever he may have an opportunity, and he adds "the question having been thus presented to the notice of the public in a pointed manner by influential publications, I shall proceed in concert with and under the advice of the three gentlemen you have named, as trustees to insert the various documents in the way of advertisements or otherwise in the provincial journals, and I shall prepare for universal circulation, in a clear but condensed form, the various materials with which you have already supplied me, or may from time to time transmit." The Committee are now quite satisfied that no doubt can exist as to the immediate establishment of a Steam communication between the two countries, and they are also satisfied that before any plan is finally determined upon by His Majesty's Government and the Hon'ble the Court of Directors, the "combined plan of the Bengal Steam Committee" will have full and deliberate consideration, in conformity with the recommendation of the committee of the House of Commons.

12. Captain Grindlay also acknowledges the receipt of the first despatch of declarations from 58 places in the Mofussil, of concurrence in the petition and memorials having 2,551 signatures of which 526 were those of natives. The object of sending these was to strengthen the hands of the member who might present the petition; and the whole amounting to 4,369 signatures will have arrived before the presentation, so that the Calcutta petition will be backed by signatures to the amount of 7,911.

13. It will also be seen that Lord William Bentinck was not in town when the petition and letter to his address arrived; the Committee have reason to know that he was proceeding to Glasgow, where they do not doubt he will use his influence to obtain a strong expression in favour of the communication. In due course a reply will be received from him to the letter addressed by the committee to him, when both will be communicated to the subscribers in the usual way through the press.

14. Since the last half-yearly report, two incidents have occurred having important relation to the future establishment of the desired communication.

First. As communicated to the public through the newspapers, the Committee have received a communication from Major Head, Chairman of a provisional committee in London, engaged in bringing forward a scheme for establishing a steam intercourse with India by way of the Red Sea, and secondly, Colonel Chesney's successful passage down the Euphrates; for notwithstanding the loss of the Tigris the passage has been successfully made.

15. With respect to the project of Major Head, the Committee have made known to the subscribers through the medium of the newspapers, their reply in which they felt bound candidly to declare, that they could not concur in the plan; and although the reasons on which they reluctantly came to that conclusion are set forth in that reply, yet the Committee, now that they meet their constituents to give an account of their proceedings, and to submit those proceedings for the consideration and approbation of those who appointed them, feel bound to explain fully the grounds on which they have proceeded.

First. It was impossible that the Committee could concur in Major Head's scheme, without at once abandoning the strong ground on which they took their stand, on the occasion of their moving the Indian public to unite in petitioning Parliament that ground was the Resolutions of the Select Committee of the House of Commons, the purport of which is too generally known to require to be detailed here. It is sufficient to say, that it amounted to a distinct recognition of the importance of immediately establishing a Steam Communication by way of the Red Sea, that it left to the united consideration of His Majesty's Government and the Court of Directors, whether in the first instance it should proceed "to Bombay, to Calcutta or on the combined plan of the Bengal Steam Committee," and it recommended that the net expense should be equally defrayed by the King's Government and the Court, in other words by England and India.

16. On this strong ground it is that all India has petitioned the House of Commons; that house is implored to follow up the resolution of its Committee; and your Committee have, as stated before, directed an appeal to be made throughout the country, based on the resolutions.

17. Nothing can be more obvious than that, with the House of Commons known to be disposed to go to any reasonable length in pecuniary support of this important measure, these resolutions afford the strongest possible ground on which to base proceedings; yet Major Head's scheme throws away this great advantage.

18. But as the proceedings of the Committee, and indeed of all India, are based on these resolutions, it would obviously have been impossible for the Committee to concur in Major Head's scheme without abandoning the strong ground they have taken and possibly placing themselves in opposition to the proceedings in progress at home by their own agents acting under their directions.

19. Again, Major Head's scheme was framed in entire ignorance that any movement was in progress here, and of course in ignorance that that movement was based on the Resolutions; and before its projectors could be aware of this, they had brought their scheme to the notice of the authorities at home.

20. When, however, they become aware of the great importance of this ground, especially if the country generally should respond to the appeal, nothing can be more probable than they will abandon their present scheme; and take their stand also on the Resolutions. If then this Committee consistently could have, and had, concurred in Major Head's plan, the reply to the expression of such concurrence might have been an announcement of the abandonment of the plan!

21. The Committee consider the object, the attainment of which is intruded to their endeavours, to be far too important to allow of their being swayed by every passing event. They consider that this important object can only be fully attained by pursuing one steady and consistent line of conduct. They have carefully and indeed anxiously watched every occurrence from which they might derive advantage. They may take to themselves the credit of having moved all India to petition on the basis of the Resolutions, and it would be absurd for them now to abandon that ground.

22. But the Committee consider Major Head's scheme to be impracticable in itself; that the required sum of £58,000* or 5,80,000 rupees per annum can never be obtained by the letters and passengers from Bombay alone, even if it could from all India; and at all events before the Committee could be expected to commit themselves to this plan, they should have been furnished with the details of calculation, and especially with the grounds for expecting so large a receipt as that mentioned above.

23. Again, the junction with the Malta Mail and the making, throughout the whole project, the Indian communication secondary and subservient to that of the Mediterranean, although the latter is proposed to be maintained at less cost to the King's Government than at present, and the former is to be saddled with a charge on India of £25,000 or 2,50,000 rupees per annum, were also objections in the opinion of the Committee.

24. Surely the intercommunication of two such countries as England and India, is of sufficiently vast importance to render it paramount, and to require rather that the Malta intercourse should be appended to it, than that the correspondence of the whole continent of India should be sacrificed to the comparatively reduced intercourse with the Mediterranean. But, independent of this, the real fact is that the question of a plan or scheme is not one for the determination of any projectors. That is a question solely for the joint consideration of His Majesty's Government and the Court of Directors. It will be their province to lay down the scheme which in their judgment is best, and it will then be for the Projectors to propose the details of the measure and the sum they will require to carry out,—not their own scheme, but that of the parties, who are to pay for it, the policy therefore which should be pursued here, is clearly to press on these authorities the establishment of the most perfect and comprehensive communication. Any other course cannot hasten the establishment of the communication to any one part of India, but it may prove injurious to its immediate extension.

25. The above objections are equally on a project, which confines the communication to Bombay as to one embracing every part of India; but the Committee have no hesitation in declaring their firm opinion to be, that no scheme which does not unite all points from which pecuniary returns will be forthcoming, can pay. They have fully expressed their sentiments on this point on several occasions; and they will not now repeat them, they would rather address themselves to the consideration of what appears to them a great misapprehension calculated to be injurious to the cause.

26. It is said that if once the communication be established to Bombay, it will of necessity be very soon extended to Madras and Calcutta, and occasion is then taken to recommend an abandonment of the application for the simultaneous establishment to all the ports of India, with a view to seek the communication with Bombay alone in the first instance.

27. In this assumption the Committee are by no means inclined to agree; on the contrary, they consider that the difficulties in the way of subsequently extending the communication to the other ports, would be greatly increased, so much so as to render it very doubtful whether it would ever be so extended. If established to Bombay, all arrangements would of course be made with reference to that limited intercourse; and it would be necessary to remodel the whole. New interests would arise consequent on the necessity for all parties intimately concerned in the more speedy communication with England making arrangements in connection with the limited intercourse to Bombay, which would necessarily render them opposed to the extension. Very many who now advocate the immediate extension would find their own individual wants nearly met, and would be lukewarm; but above all, it would be impracticable to re-produce the feeling, universal it is hoped it will now prove, at home, on which alone we must depend for success. But let it be granted for the sake of the argument, that such extension would follow the establishment to Bombay alone in the first instance. Now if the question at home were one of extent, if the authorities there were now considering the question in that point of view, and allowed the wishes and feelings of the different parties in India to have influence on their consideration, there might be some small shew of reason in the recommendation, but even then it ought to be clearly established that the continued advocacy of the comprehensive scheme, prevented the establishment of any communication at all, before its advocates should be required to cease pressing the claims not of any one separate local convenience but of ALL INDIA.

28. But such is not the case. The question at issue at home, has no relation to any detail at all; it is confined singly to the principle, and throughout the interview with the President of the Board of Control and the Chairman of the Court, this was studiously borne in mind; it follows, therefore, that the promulgation of any plan is premature; except in as far as it presses the general question on the consideration of the authorities and the obvious policy of all at the present moment, should be to increase that pressure; to induce these authorities to resolve on the communication, and in the words of the resolution of the Committee of the House of Commons, "to consider whether the communications should be in the first instance from Bombay or from Calcutta, or according to the combined plan suggested by the Bengal Steam Committee." No concurrence here, however unanimous, in the scheme of Major Head or of any one else, can hasten this consideration and determination. It can only be accelerated by the force of public opinion at home, where measures are in progress to induce such general expression of opinion, and the Committee confidently expect that one month of the present session of Parliament will not have passed without a determination of the principle and a declaration of the scheme by the public authorities. Until that is done, surely there can be no better way of conveying to these authorities the high importance attached to the communication by the Indian public, than pressing for its immediate extension to all their ports of India. No relaxation from this can at all hasten the communication to any one place, but such relaxation may be advanced as evidence of indifference to the general extension, without which extension it is obvious that the communication can convey little benefit to India generally, beyond the earlier receipt of correspondence.

29. These are the grounds on which the Committee have acted. They earnestly solicit that they may have fair consideration with the meeting and with the people of India, and seeing that early in April next intelligence will be received by the Hugh Lindsay from England to the 1st of Feb., they would as earnestly entreat the public of India to abstain from committing themselves to any specific plan, but await the result of the petitions to the House of Commons, assured that expressions of public opinion to have force, should not be lightly made but should be based on strong grounds, such as that above referred to, on which the petition to the House of Commons is founded, namely, the resolutions of the committee of that house.

30. Although the Committee do earnestly deprecate, under existing circumstances, any public pledge to support Major Head's scheme or that of any other person, they cannot be insensible to be very great advantage to the cause which has arisen from the proceedings of that gentleman and his colleagues. They have not only pressed, and it may be said forced, the question on the authorities at home, but they have prepared the public mind in England to receive the appeals of the people of India. They will now doubtless co-operate with the exertions of the parties who are acting for the Committee at home, and jointly they cannot fail to succeed.

31. Feeling how much India is indebted to Major Head and his colleagues and especially Capt. Barber, for their zealous exertions on this occasion, there is no expression of thanks—no mode of conveying their sense of the value of their exertions, short of concurring in their plan, in which the Committee will not cordially unite.

32. To Colonel Chesney too, the Committee consider that the thanks of the people of India are due for his able and persevering efforts to open the communication by way of the Euphrates; and although the consideration of that line of intercourse forms no part of the Committee's duties, they cannot refrain from thus recording their feelings of admiration of his zealous efforts.

By order of the Committee,

C. B. GREENLAW, Secretary.

Town Hall, Calcutta, Feb, 11, 1837.

The Hon'ble Chairman thought that previous to any resolution being passed, a letter he had received from Captain Barber, should be read for the information of the meeting, which was as follows:—

London, September 2nd, 1836.

Sir,—I do myself the honour to address you upon the question of communication with India, by means of steam, via the "Red Sea," seeing you were Chairman of a Meeting held at Calcutta when this measure came under discussion; when it appeared to the people then assembled, that the great barrier to the undertaking, would be found in the sum requisite to provide for, and to work the same; which I will endeavour to shew is not so great an obstacle as many suppose, and at the same time place before you the position of the question here.

For years past I have been impressed with the importance of this object, and always considered it to be an event that must take place. The present improvements in the application of steam power, though yet in their infancy, are sufficiently advanced to make the operation one of little difficulty, if rightly managed; and I consequently watched with deep interest and much attention the enquiry of 1834. Having waded through the mass of evidence then collected, and the resolutions of the Commons that were founded upon it, it was quite clear the matter required much explanation to H. M. Government as well as to the East India Company, to induce those bodies to comply with the resolution No. 6, that it might become a joint charge upon their revenues.

Time, from a change of Ministry and other uncontrollable delays, passed by the Euphrates expedition, that darling offspring of Mr. Peacock, and other obstructions emanating from the East India Company, at last rendered it clear, that it would not be undertaken as a public measure.

I did not think the objections urged of sufficient weight to dam up the stream of human intercourse between the two countries, that when led into a right channel will probably be productive, under Providence, of more social and commercial benefits than comes within the contemplation of very comprehensive minds, placing its political bearing aside.

It appeared to Major Head and myself in March last, that a private company might be formed to work out this very desirable and important project; but the result of our enquiry soon proved it would be impracticable without the aid and co-operation of His Majesty's Government and the East India Company. How was that to be obtained?

To a casual observer, the perusal of the evidence to the point of expense given by Mr. Peacock in 1834, would be astounding; and coming from such authority, believed; while its fallacy to a practical man is at once apparent and the several items upon which it is based too absurd to need comment. Fancy the costs of the Hugh Lindsay costing *£5,000 per voyage!!

It therefore became necessary, as a first step, to disabuse the public mind, which was thus inaccurately impressed, then to lead the mercantile men of influence to take it up, as a matter affecting their interest and consequently of commercial value to the country at large.

With this view our object was to search for truth. After much labour and pains, assisted in our calculations and estimate by able practicable men, we arrived at this result. It would require an outlay of £200,000 and an annual expenditure of £123,000 to keep it in full work, but my opinion and plan being decidedly for a boat to Madras and Calcutta, as well as to Bombay. From Socotra, it would require an outlay of £250,000 and an annual expense of £140,000, for a monthly communication; whereas Mr. Peacock estimates £100,000 per annum net charge for dispatches every two months on the Indian side of Egypt alone. Of the practicability of effecting the passage I never had a doubt, and from my recent enquiries, that opinion is strengthened and confirmed.

We estimate our proceeds at £80,000 but which would, I am sure, rapidly increase on the plan being perfected, and the charges for passengers and letters reduced; but this shews a deficiency of £60,000.

The Mediterranean packets cost H. M. Government £60,000 annually. To do this work would not in the least obstruct our plan of operation; and we ask for a contract for the performance of this service at £40,000. As it would save the country £20,000, there could be no reasonable objection; particularly as many of the foreign mails are carried by Steam packets under contract.

From the Company we seek £25,000 annually, no mighty boon for the conveyance of a messenger, and official monthly dispatches. Could we obtain this reasonable co-operation, and support, the project would be easily and profitably worked, yielding, when matured.

* I have no doubt they did, but what does that prove?—gross mismanagement. Our estimate for the whole line annually, under contract, will be £50,000.

a productive return; and on this I would stake my reputation. Let it be borne in mind, that in the annual expense is calculated at present charge of interest, and 30 per cent. on the capital for a perpetuity fund.

The foregoing was a point of calculation within our control, to work out the end is a matter not so easily effected. First; Merchants here, have so much and continued occupation, that under any circumstances, it would be difficult to obtain their time and attention to any measure, that had been so long before the public, unheeded and unsupported; but under the disunited opinions that exist as to the best route of communication, we found our object still harder of attainment.

Many very powerful and influential men, say it ought to be a national concern, and will assist no other, while they will not give their attention to the obtaining of that; others, led by Mr. Larpent, are for the Cape route,—a visionary, unprofitable and inefficient scheme. We have, however, by dint of perseverance and industry, gained support; but had these been unanimously of opinion (instead of feeding the company's objections, if not, opposition to this plan, who are decidedly adverse to any facility of transit for letters) or passengers, the measure would have been set work. I feel quite sure, however, these obstructions cannot endure, and that another Session of Parliament will not pass without our succeeding in the accomplishment of Steam Communication with India via the "Red Sea."

We are gaining strength daily, and are not slow to seek it in the manufacturing districts of Scotland, Ireland and England; we look forward also with great hope for support from India. Of this be certain, let the present time pass, or suffer the opposition to be strengthened, by a want of unanimity on our parts, and it will be a long time before the measure will be brought to public notice with the strength it has now obtained.

You will learn from the documents now forwarded to the Committee, most I have here stated. I have been induced thus to obtrude myself upon your notice, feeling the subject would not fail to be interesting to one who took so leading a part; and begging my attention may be attributed to an anxious desire to see this very important channel opened, through which I am sure vast blessings will continue to flow, conducive to the well-being of both countries—in which I hope I may not be proved a false prophet.

I have the honour to be, Sir, your very obdt. servt.

JAMES BARBER.

THE HONORABLE SIR EDWARD RYAN, Calcutta.

The Hon'ble Sir J. P. Grant then addressed the meeting to the following effect:—That it was his duty on this occasion to introduce a resolution, previous to doing which, he would make a few brief observations, and would not take up much time, as the subject was familiar to all present. Navigation by Steam between England and India, was a subject of vast importance and connected with the interest of the inhabitants of both countries,—that therefore the enterprise should be met with warm encouragement, and that the Hon'ble Speaker was not deficient in zeal to any person. That he had the honor long ago, of having presided at a Steam Meeting at Bombay, and that he felt much satisfaction in lending his aid with great willingness to the establishment of Steam Communication now; but he would advise the community to give their support, with out entering into any thing like an opinion as to the best place to start from. That the Hon'ble Speaker was not sufficiently, in fact not at all, qualified to give any opinion upon that point, and that as the Home Government had taken up the subject, it would be best to leave it to them to make their choice with regard to the place suggested by Major Head—the subscribers ought to leave it entirely in the hands of Parliament to adopt it if disposed to do so. That the meeting he was were much obliged to Major Head and to all other persons for their exertions towards the establishment of the Communication, but that the meeting should not enter into details, but give their best aid and support towards it. That the meeting must feel very grateful to the Committee for their unremitting exertions, and particularly to the Secretary, to whom their gratitude was due for the extraordinary zeal he had all along evinced in the advancement of Steam Navigation. He proposed :

" That the remainder of the report be adopted, and that this meeting is highly sensible of the important service rendered to the cause in which they are engaged by the active and successful efforts of Major Head ; Captain Barber and their colleagues to direct the attention of the authorities at home to the consideration of the important question of a Steam Communication between England and India, and that the thanks of the meeting be forwarded to Major Head with copy of this resolution : and that this meeting confining itself to the object of obtaining the speedy establishment of such communication upon such plan as shall upon good consideration appear to the said authorities, the most certain and beneficial in conformity with the petitions and memorial addressed to the House of Commons, the Board of Control and Court of Directors, feel bound to abstain from giving any opinion upon the comparative merits of any schemes which may be suggested for that purpose, but will be at all times ready to afford all the aid in their power to the scheme that shall receive the approbation and concurrence of H. M. Government and the Court of Directors."

Mr. H. M. Parker seconded the resolution and argued that the establishment of the plan should be left in the hands of the Governments at home.

Mr. W. H. Macnaghten said, before this resolution was put to the vote, he trusted he would be at liberty to address a few words to the meeting. It appeared to him that the resolution of the Hon'ble and Learned Gentleman will have the effect, unintended no doubt, of impressing the public with the belief that the Committee has not confidence of its constituents. It casts a slur, and an unnecessary slur, upon its proceedings, (hear, hear, from the Honorable Sir J. P. Grant), and the Committee at the present time require all the support that can fairly be extended to them, (hear, hear, from the Honorable Sir J. P. Grant). Every one here must be aware of the attacks which have been made upon the Committee by their brethren of Bombay. When he entered the room, it was not his intention to say a word of any sort ; but he could not help now affirming that they (the Committee) have been misrepresented, and that they have been most harshly and unjustly dealt with. He wished to avoid all re- crimination ; but he would be permitted to say that the Bombay Committee would rob this Committee " of that which not enriches them but makes us poor indeed." They would reserve the communication to themselves, while it has from the first been this Committee's avowed and continued object to give to all India the benefits of the communication, leaving to Bombay the full benefits which she desires. What then could be reprehensible in this proceeding, he could not conceive ! The duty of the Committee is irksome and exceedingly laborious, and they ought not to be subjected (without deserving it) to the imputation of having forfeited the approbation of their constituents. The Committee do not want this meeting to concur in any reasonings, or to pledge themselves to the Committee's schemes, but it appeared to him that this declaration of a want of concurrence is unnecessary, and that it might be sufficient, if the report is deemed unobjectionable in its main view, to adopt it.—(much applause.) That if the plan embraced, Calcutta, Madras and Point de Galle, it could not be prejudicial to Bombay, (hear, hear, from Sir J. P. Grant.)

The Hon'ble Sir J. P. Grant wished to be allowed to say, that this object in putting the resolution, was that this meeting should abstain from entering into any details, and from all points that would come under the discussion of the Parliament at home. That it was very far from his wish to cast any slur, or the least insinuation on the Committee ; that he for one was fully satisfied that the Committee had exerted themselves greatly towards the cause, and that he did not intend to attribute that to them, of which they were in no way guilty.

The Hon'ble Chairman said, before he read the resolution, he hoped it would not be irregular in his making one or two observations. That he was not in the habit of reading the newspapers daily with that attention which was necessary to be aware of any, or what imputation, attack or slur had been made on the proceedings of the Committee. That the correspondence in the newspapers relative to Steam Communication had gone on to a great and voluminous length, and that he could not but help saying, that he had not sufficient time to devote many moments to its perusal. That he was therefore unable to judge what were the particular merits of the correspondence, but that there were one or two parts of the report which he did not concur in ; (the speaker here read a line or two which we are sorry we could not catch,) but though he would not recommend the meeting to enter into the reasons of the report, he thought Sir J. P. Grant's resolution free of all intention to impeach the Committee, and would therefore proceed to read it.

After the reading, Sir John Peter Grant proposed to alter a word, or rather to make a reservation in his resolution ; and, in reply, Mr. Macnaghten explained—

That he deemed the reservation unnecessary, as it implied a want of confidence in the Committee, and, therefore, in some degree, a censure. That the Committee had felt it to be their duty to acquaint their constituents with the reasons which had prevented them from concurring in the scheme of Major Head ; but, that they did not expect each individual of the meeting to adopt their particular arguments. That if the reservation were so worded as to preserve the meeting from adopting all the reasoning used, the object of the resolution might, perhaps, be gained without any slur being cast upon the Committee. That he, Mr. Macnaghten, being Chairman of the Committee, felt bound to express his conviction, (not adopted hastily,) that the comprehensive scheme was the best, and, he trusted, that the meeting would be found to concur in his opinion.

Captain Birch proposed an amendment, which was seconded by Mr. Alexander Colvin, but ultimately set aside.

Mr. Dobbs thought if the resolution, as proposed, were carried and published in the papers here, copied into the journals at home, an unmerited slur would be cast on the Committee, of which he was not a member. That he was at first opposed to several parts of the report, but having since met and conversed upon the general merits of it, with several gentlemen, he was now convinced, that the comprehensive scheme was decidedly the best, (hear, hear, Sir J. P. Grant), and would therefore strongly recommend the adoption of the report.

Colonel DeHeseta followed on the same side.

Sir John Peter Grant then withdrew his original resolution, and having re-modelled it, (wording it so that the meeting were to decline expressing an opinion as to the merits of any particular scheme,) and the Honorable Chairman having put the resolution so amended in an eloquent speech in favor of it from the Chair—

Mr. Macnaghten trusted that he might be allowed to say a few words, and that the motion might not be put so immediately after the eloquent speech, which the Honorable Chairman had delivered. He begged the meeting to pause before they committed themselves by adopting the suggestion which had been offered. If it was meant by the words merits of a scheme that this meeting were to acquiesce in the statement that they saw no advantage in the comprehensive scheme, Mr. Macnaghten trusted that they would not stultify themselves, and contradict their former resolutions, by such a declaration. It was clear, that the most comprehensive was the most advantageous, and the people of Calcutta were in a manner bound to declare that this is the case, leaving it to the authorities in England to adopt such scheme, as they may deem most advisable with reference to economy, and all other considerations. With regard to what had fallen from the Honorable Chairman, that he could not concur in all the reasons of the Committee, Mr. Macnaghten observed, that the Committee were never so unreasonable as to expect that a hundred men should all concur in the propriety of each of so many reasons; but, with regard to the particular reason, picked out by the Hon'ble and learned Chairman, Mr. Macnaghten considered it an unfortunate selection, as that appeared to him to be almost the strongest part of the Committee's position. The speaker was persuaded, that if the Communication were established with Bombay alone in the first instance, its extension to other parts of India would be almost hopeless. The meeting were aware, that enterprises of this nature were attended with discouraging results at the commencement. If it failed at Bombay to produce remunerating returns within the period anticipated; the whole scheme would, probably, be abandoned—it certainly would not be extended; whereas, if the experiment on the comprehensive scale should partially fail, there would always be the limited scheme to fall back upon.

After this an uncommon deal of conversation transpired, an unusually long debate on the words receive and adapt, then as to the particular merits of each respective word—suddenly a war wage!, but of words only; then, a general confusion, (all which, we trust, the indefatigable exertions of other reporters will put the public in possession of,) in the midst of which, Mr. H. M. Parker reminded the meeting, that from the confusion they had allowed Major Head, Captain Barber, and the report all to drop out of their heads; that as the Hon'ble Sir J. P. Grant had withdrawn his resolution, a resolution in two parts should be put to the vote, on which it was proposed by A. Dobbs, Esq., and seconded by T. Bracken, Esq., “That the remainder of this report be adopted.”—Carried unanimously.

Mr. H. M. Parker, with a very neat preface, gave the following resolution, seconded by Captain Sewell:—

“That this meeting is firmly persuaded that the most comprehensive scheme of Steam Communication is that, which will be most beneficial to Great Britain and India, but confines itself to the objects of obtaining the speedy establishment of a communication, upon such plan as shall, upon good consideration, appear to the authorities in England, the most certain and beneficial in conformity with the petition and memorials addressed to the House of Commons, the Board of Control, and Court of Directors.”

Colonel Colvin proposed—

“That the thanks of this meeting be tendered to Colonel Chesney for his able, zealous and deserving efforts to open a Steam Communication between England and India by the Euphrates.”

Mr. Greenlaw, in seconding the above resolution, felt the greatest pleasure, particularly as it afforded him an opportunity of proving as far as circumstances would permit, what he had always asserted, namely, that in all his endeavours he had been influenced alone by a desire to obtain that communication which should confer the most general benefit. He had always felt with Mr. Grant, the present Lord Glenelg, that it was equally the duty and interest of England to watch all modes of access to India, with a view to the political and commercial prosperity, and the mutual advantage of the two countries. Feeling this he would rejoice at the successful establishment of a Steam Communication round the Cape, and feeling this he rejoiced at the successful attempt made by Colonel Chesney, although if fully successful, and finally established as the sole line of communication, it would be of little benefit to India generally beyond the mere conveyance of correspondence; but, he certainly would rejoice more heartily, on the establishment of the communication by the Red Sea to all parts of India. He did not, however, despair, of yet seeing the communication established by all these routes, and he therefore rejoiced heartily when success attended either and would second a vote of thanks to Colonel Chesney most cordially, (much applause.)

Proposed by A. Dobbs, Esq., and seconded by Captain Forbes.

“That this meeting is highly sensible of the important service rendered to the cause in which they are engaged by the active efforts of Major Head, Captain Barber, and their colleagues, to direct the attention of the authorities at home, to the consideration of the important question of a Steam Communication between England and India, that the thanks of the meeting be conveyed by the Chairman to Major Head and his colleagues, with a copy of this resolution.”—

Carried unanimously.

Proposed by C. B. Greenlaw, Esq., and seconded by B. Harding, Esq.

“That Mr. Dobbs, Captain Birch, and Mr. Allan be Members of the Committee.”

The Hon'ble Chairman, in a very elegant and complimentary speech, proposed the following resolution, which was seconded by the Hon'ble Sir J. P. Grant.

“That the warm thanks of this meeting be given to the Steam Committee, and their Secretary Mr. Greenlaw, for their zealous and able exertions in the cause of Steam Navigation.”

Mr. Greenlaw, in returning thanks to the meeting for the approbation passed on his proceedings as Secretary to the Committee, hoped to be allowed to take the opportunity of bearing testimony to the zeal, activity and energy which had been displayed by Captain Grindlay on receipt of the Committee's instructions. The correspondence which had passed between the Committee and Captain Grindlay had not been read to the meeting, but it would be published in the appendix, and the Subscribers would be enabled to judge from that of his zealous conduct; but he, Mr. Greenlaw, had the further opportunity which his private communications with Captain Grindlay afforded, of judging of the temper and disposition with which Captain Grindlay engaged in the cause, and he was enabled to say that throughout those communications there was an evident zeal from the heart, wholly abstracted from mercenary considerations as a paid agent.

He would not, at this early period of Captain Grindlay's proceedings, propose any vote of thanks to him; but, he hoped, the time would shortly arrive when they would be called upon to offer him something beyond mere thanks. In the meantime, he, Mr. Greenlaw, could not refrain from bearing testimony to the zeal and ardour with which he had undertaken the important duties assigned to him.

After which, the assembly dispersed, it being later than 6 P. M.

APPENDIX.

To CAPTAIN GRINDLAY, East India Agent,
16, Cornhill, London.

Sir,—I am instructed by the Committee of the New Bengal Steam fund, to acquaint you that a case containing the Petition of the inhabitants of Calcutta and its neighbourhood to the House of Commons, praying for the immediate establishment of a Steam Communication by way of the Red Sea between the principal ports of India and England, has been shipped on the Ceromandel to your address.

Accompanying this, is a duplicate of a letter to the address of the Right Hon'ble Lord William Cavendish Bentinck, for delivery by you to His Lordship, the original having been dispatched direct. Copy of this letter and of the petition, as also of memorials addressed to the Board of Control and the Court of Directors, also accompany. These latter have been forwarded to the Supreme Government by Sir Edward Ryan the Chief Justice of Calcutta, and chairman of the public meeting at which they were adopted, but they will not be dispatched by the same ship, time not admitting.

By the letter to Lord William Bentinck you will perceive, that His Lordship has been requested to present the petition to the House of Commons in the event of his having a seat in that house, and if not, to nominate such member of the House as he may judge to be most fit to be intrusted with so important a duty.

It is the wish of the Committee, that in this matter you should follow up any suggestions that his Lordship may condescend to offer. The Committee rely confidently on receiving from Lord William Bentinck every possible support which his situation will admit of; but, of course, there may be much active exertion required to give the fullest possible effect to the petition wherein His Lordship may require your aid, and this aid and generally your best exertions in support of the object in view, the Committee seek at your hands.

They cannot, until after the 9th proximo, make any positive communication to you on the subject of the necessary funds, to enable you to give the most effectual aid in this matter.

A meeting of the subscribers to the fund has been called for that day to obtain the general concurrence of the subscribers to a resolution, authorizing the Committee to disburse such portion of the remaining funds amounting to about Sicca Rupees 74,000, in furtherance of the petition and memorials, as they may consider expedient.

There is, no doubt, that such concurrence will take place, and in that case it is the intention of the Committee to place in the House of Sir Charles Cockerell, Bart., the sum of £1,000 in the names of the three following gentlemen, viz., Sir Charles Cockerell, Bart., James Mackillop, Esquire., Edward Fletcher, Esquire, for the purpose of their paying you such expenses as you may be put to in furtherance of the object in question, on your having previously obtained the concurrence of any one or more of them to the measures, out of which such expense arises. It will also be left to them to arrange for the remuneration for your agency.

At this distance the Committee are unable to offer much in the way of suggestion as to the means to be pursued at home with a view to give the fullest possible effect to the petition and memorials; they would, however, wish to have a copy of these documents, placed in the hands of every individual member of the House of Commons and proprietor of East India Stock, preceded by a circular copy of that which the Committee consider would be proper, will be sent hereafter.

They think, also, that this circular with the petition and memorials, ought to be inserted for a given number of times in every new-paper and periodical in great Britain and Ireland, of any influence.

They will, however, leave this to be determined by the Judgment of Lord William Bentinck and the Gentlemen above named, with the expression, however, of their own thorough conviction of the very great advantage of by this means rendering the question one of universal interest and discussion throughout the British dominions.

The Committee have thought it right not to wait the issue of the meeting of the 9th, but to pass on the petition to you, in order, that you may go into immediate communication with Lord William Bentinck and the Gentlemen above named, and by making preliminary enquiries and arrangements, be prepared to further the views of the Committee as above expressed, immediately on receiving notice from me of the actual transmission of the funds.

Of course, the proposed delivery of the copy of the petition to the members of the House of Commons and to Proprietors of each India Stock and publication in the periodicals, will not take place till after presentation to the House of Commons. Touching this presentation, the period must be left for determination at home, and I am directed to inform you, that under the idea that the expression of a general concurrence throughout India in the petition and memorials, cannot fail to give great weight to the prayers, the Committee have invited the expression of such general concurrence; which, however, cannot, of course, be received, for some weeks, as, however, the declarations of concurrence are received from the several stations, they will be forwarded to you, in order, if they should arrive prior to the presentation of the petition to their being placed in the hands of the member of Parliament, who may present it, that he may be enabled to bear testimony to such concurrence; and, in the event of the petition not being presented by Lord William Bentinck, it may be expedient, to place in the hands of whatever member does present it, copy of the Committee's letter to His Lordship's address, in order, that he may be enabled to state to the House of Commons, the manner in which the petition is supported by the highest public functionaries and others, to the number of above 3,108.

It must be left for determination at home, whether it will be most proper to present the petition during the present sessions, with reference to its late period, or to await the next sessions. It is understood, that a petition is about to be sent from Madras, and it may possibly be considered, to be expedient to present both at the same time.

If, for this purpose, or on any other account, the presentation should be delayed till next sessions, it occurs to the Committee, that, in the intermediate time, the most active and energetic measure should be adopted to create a strong public feeling, in favor of the communication being forthwith established in the most perfect form; and, perhaps, the advantage of having the public feeling in our favor, and that, strongly expressed in the periodical works of the day, may possibly be one inducement to postpone the presentation of the petition.

On the other hand, it may be, perhaps, deemed most advantageous, to present the petition immediately on its arrival, with an intimation on the part of the Member presenting it, that, owing to the lateness of the season, he will call the attention of the House to it at an early period after the commencement of the next sessions, and this advantage would appear to arise from this course, namely, that the petition having been presented, it might be published, and the question agitated strongly during the recess, and the Committee are inclined to this latter course.

In conclusion, I am desired to request, that you will shew this letter to the Gentlemen named above, to whom as well as to yourself, a communication will be made immediately after the 9th proximo.

I have, &c.

TO CAPTAIN GRINDLAY, *East India Agent,

SIR,—In continuation of my letter, dated 31st ultimo, (original per Coromandel, duplicate per Jupiter, via Liverpool.) I am directed by the Committee of the new Bengal Steam Fund, to forward for your information the accompanying copy of a letter under this date, to the joint address of Sir Charles Cockerell, Bart., James McKillop, Esq., and Edward Fletcher, Esq.

I forward also copy of the circular promised in my letter above referred to, and, I am desired to add, that the Committee have ascertained from a competent source, that there is no irregularity in publishing the petition prior to its presentation. They, therefore, request, that measures may be immediately adopted for giving effect to their wishes for the publication of the circular, with the petition and memorials, annexed as per accompanying copies, in all the newspapers of influence in Great Britain and Ireland; and, especially, at London, Liverpool, Bristol, Birmingham, Manchester, Leeds, Glasgow, Aberdeen, Greenock, Paisley, Dublin, and Belfast.

It will also be important to secure, if possible, the support of the Editors of the papers in which the circular, &c., appear, and to endeavour to create and maintain a discussion in favor of the object until it is obtained. This, as well as the number of times and the periods, when the circular, &c. should appear, must be left to you, with reference to the progress made towards attainment, as also to the petition being or not being presented during the present sessions. In the latter case, it will, of course, be necessary to have the matter prominently brought forward about the time that the presentation takes place, and, in either case, the Committee wish, that no time should be lost in making the first publication.

In like manner, the period, when the circular with petition and memorial shall be distributed to each Member of Parliament, and to each Proprietor of East India Stock, must be left to your determination in communication with the Home Committee, and such other persons as may be competent to determine the question. With respect to the members of the House of Commons, the Committee would suggest a reference being made to the most respectable Parliamentary Agent, and his services being secured towards obtaining the greatest possible support in the House.

Repeating the request of the Committee to be kept constantly apprized of your proceeding,

I have, &c.,

(Signed) C. B. GREENLAW,

Secretary to the Committee of the New Bengal Steam Fund, Town Hall, Calcutta, April 9, 1836.

TO SIR CHARLES COCKERELL, BART., JAMES MACKILLOP, ESQ., AND EDWARD FLETCHER, ESQ.

GENTLEMEN,—Not doubting that my letter under date 31st ultimo, to the address of Captain Grindlay, will have been communicated to you by that gentleman, I am now directed by the Committee of the New Bengal Steam Fund to forward for the purposes stated in that letter, the first of a set of Bills for the sum of £1000, on the house of Sir Charles Cockerell Bart. and Co. in your favor, an account of the "New Bengal Steam Fund."

The Committee will continue their correspondence with Captain Grindlay for the purpose of saving you as much trouble as possible, but they will, of course, be at all times happy to hear from you individually or collectively on the interesting subject of the present correspondence.

It does not appear to be necessary that they should offer any remarks in addition to those contained in the letter to Captain Grindlay, further than that, in forwarding £1000, which sum the Committee contemplate as being sufficient to ensure its purposes, they do not mean to limit the expenditure to that sum, should any further sum be required for the purpose of securing the attainment of that great object, for which the money was subscribed by the inhabitants of Bengal.

I have, &c.

TO CAPTAIN GRINDLAY, *East India Agent,

SIR,—Referring to that part of my letter of the 9th instant, which intimated the intention of the Committee of the New Bengal Steam Fund, to invite the expression of a general concurrence throughout India, in the petition and memorials of the inhabitants of Calcutta and its neighbourhood, I am now directed to forward to you the accompanying original signatures, (in number 2,551,) to 60 declarations, as per margin, from 58 places, according to the accompanying statement.

The object of sending these, is, that they may be put into the hands of the Member of Parliament, who presents the petition in order to his being enabled to declare the extent of that concurrence, as received, up to the date of the last advices.

The accompanying form a small portion only of what is expected.

In case the petition should have been presented prior to the arrival of these papers, they still cannot but be of great use in strengthening the hands of those, who may be engaged in advocating the cause of a thorough and comprehensive scheme of inter-communication between England and all parts of India, by Steam Vessels by way of the Red Sea.

I have, &c.

(Signed) C. B. GREENLAW.

Secretary to the Committee of the New Bengal Steam Fund
East India Army Agency, 16, Cornhill, and 8, St. Martin's Place, Charing Cross, 13th September, 1836.

C. B. GREENLAW, Esq., Secy. to the New Bengal Steam Fund, Cal.

SIR,—I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 31st of March, accompanying a petition from the individuals of Calcutta and its neighbourhood, to the House of Commons, praying for the immediate establishment of a steam communication by way of the Red Sea, between the principal ports of India and England. To this is added, duplicate of a letter to Lord William Bentinck, to be delivered by me to His Lordship, and a copy of the memorial on the above subject, to the Indian Board and the Court of Directors.

I beg you will assure the Committee, that I undertake with alacrity the office which they have done me the honor to call on me to perform of communicating with Lord William Bentinck on this subject, and of acting in general as their Agent in promoting the accomplishment of this great national object.

Lord William Bentinck is now absent from London, but I shall not fail to take the earliest opportunity of placing myself in communication with His Lordship as well as with Sir Charles Cockerell and Messrs. Fletcher and McKillop, who are also both absent.

I observe the intention to appropriate a sum of money amounting to £1,000 under the charge of the above named gentlemen, for the purpose of their paying the such expenses as I may be put to, in furtherance of the object in question, on previously obtaining the concurrence of any one or more of those gentlemen, to the measure out of which such expense arises, leaving it to them to arrange for the remuneration of my Agency. In the absence of these gentlemen from London, I have thought it expedient to obtain the insertion of a preliminary notice in the most influential of the public prints, as you will perceive by the accompanying copies of the Times of the 9th and 13th instant, in order to awaken the attention of the public to the importance of the subject, and to serve as the commencement of a series of appeals to be continued during the recess.

On the arrival of the funds, and in concert with Sir Charles Cockerell and the other Gentlemen, I propose to insert the petition and memorials accompanied by the circular which you allude to, as being in preparation in all the principal periodical publications, and to print the whole of the documents in a condensed but distinct form for distribution to all the members of both Houses of Parliament, and Proprietors of East India stock, commercial, bodies public and private to the out ports and manufacturing cities, to the clubs and Libraries, and, in short, in every direction, where they are likely to meet the eye of the very numerous body of our countrymen, who take an interest in the question, and may directly, or indirectly, assist, in giving a direction to the public opinion.

These measures, however, will be adopted with better effect, after the documents have successively appeared, as original articles, accompanied by editorial remarks, and illustrated by other incidents, having relation to the general question.

Although, in one part of your letter, you direct these measures to be delayed until the question is before Parliament, I avail myself of the discretionary power, with which you invest me in the latter part of your communication in the event of any delay arising, to go forward at once, and by keeping alive the public attention during the recess, to render the matter familiar in its principles and details, so that by the time it is brought before Parliament, it may not be looked upon with that coolness and indifference too often shewn towards Indian questions, in most cases to be attributable to a general want of information regarding them.

I trust, at an early period, to be enabled to report further progress in this most interesting affair, and I beg you will assure the Committee, as representing the inhabitants of Calcutta, that I shall labour incessantly to carry into effect their wishes.

I have, &c.

C. B. GREENLAW, Esq.

Secretary to the New Bengal Steam Fund, Calcutta.

SIR—In continuation of my letter of the 13th September, I have now the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 9th April, accompanied by copy of a letter to Sir Charles Cockerell, Bart., James McKillop, Esq., and Edward Fletcher, Esq., as also a circular, alluded to in your former communication, of the 31st of March.

In the continued absence from town, of the Gentlemen above alluded to, I have addressed a letter to Mr. Larpent, who re-presents Sir Charles Cockerell, and have the honor to transmit copy of my letter with that Gentleman's reply.

I had previously availed myself of the discretionary power with which, I conceive myself invested, to obtain the insertion of the circular in question, in the most prominent part of the Times of the 29th ultimo, of which I forward copy, as well as of the Atlas of the 11th ultimo, and of this day, and the Asiatic Journal, just published, and a new paper, called the Mining, Railway, and Steam Navigation Gazette, and I shall continue to effect similar notices, both directly and collaterally, whenever I have an opportunity.

The question having thus been presented to the notice of the public, in a pointed manner, by influential publications, I shall proceed in concert, and under the advice of the three gentlemen you have named, to insert the various documents in the way of Advertisements or otherwise, in the provincial journal, and I shall prepare for universal circulation, in a clear but condensed form, the various materials, with which you have already supplied me, or may from time to time transmit.

I have also to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 26th April, and the case containing the additional signatures to sixty declarations in support of the prayer of your petition.

Due use shall be made of this supplementary matter, and such as may hereafter arrive.

I have, &c.

To Sir CHAS. COCKERELL, Bart., JAMES MCKILLOP, Esq., EDWARD FLETCHER, Esq.

GENTLEMEN,—I am instructed by the Committee of the New Bengal Steam Fund, to place myself in communication with you on the subject of the petition to Parliament, transmitted to me for the purpose of being presented by Lord William Bentinck, at the opening of the next session.

I request the favor of an opportunity of concerting with you such measures as may be requisite to carry into the fullest effect the wish of the Committee.

In accordance with the instructions contained in the Secretary's letter to me of the 9th April, I have already obtained the insertion of the circular alluded to, in the city article of the Times newspaper, of this day's date, and shall continue similar measures to keep alive the public attention to this important subject.

I have, &c.

(Signed) R. M. GRINDLAY,

Austin Friars, 1st October, 1836.

MY DEAR SIR,—In the absence from town of my friend Sir Charles Cockerell, I have to acknowledge your letter of the 29th ultimo, addressed to him, Mr. J. McKillop, and Mr. Fletcher, by you, on the part of the New Bengal Steam Fund, respecting the petition to Parliament, entrusted to you for the purpose of being presented at the opening of the ensuing sessions, and I take this opportunity of assuring you by letter, as I did yesterday, when I had the pleasure of seeing you, that no person can feel a deeper interest in this matter than Sir Charles Cockerell, and that no exertions on his part will be spared in endeavouring to obtain the fullest discussion of the proposed plan. The papers have been transmitted to him in the country, and the remittance of £1,000, by bill on our house, has been accepted, and I shall be prepared to act with you and the other gentlemen, previously to the meeting of Parliament, in assisting to devise the best means of calling public attention to this important subject.

I shall also take an early opportunity of laying the papers before the East India and China Association, and I am sure they will enter into the feelings of the Indian Community; but, I do not disguise from you that much will require to be done first, in obtaining the sanction and support of the Court of Directors, of the East India Company, and of the Board of Control, and 2d, in meeting the objection, now so strongly urged, of the assumed expence of the projected plan. It must be our endeavor to shew, here, a quick communication between this country and India, can be arranged at a comparatively moderate charge by the aid of steam power, and, I trust, we shall succeed, for, on every account, both personally and as a member of a commercial house connected with India.

I am deeply impressed with the benefits all parties will derive from the establishment of any plan, that shall ensure a rapid intercourse between Great Britain and British India.

I remain, always, my dear Sir,

Yours, &c.

AMERICAN ICE.

To the Editor of the Bengal Hurkaru.

Sir,—The interest which the public have taken in the importation of American ice, must be my excuse for soliciting the favor of your publishing the accompanying letter. I received it yesterday, from Mr. Frederick Tudor of Boston, in reply to a letter which I had addressed to him by the directions of the American Ice Committee. Mr. Tudor states in his letter, "as far as I have dates from your city, say to the 8th of April 1836, every thing goes on well. You will know whether this be really the case before this reaches you;" to this I must add, that Mr. Bacon and Mr. Ludd, Mr. Tudor's superintendents, have expressed their entire satisfaction at the manner in which the house has preserved the ice; it has not only fulfilled all our expectations, but succeeded better than could have been reasonably anticipated from a first experiment.

Several members of the Committee have, for some time past, been desirous of enlarging the present house, and I not only concur with Mr. Tudor, that without this be done, there can be no certainty of a uniform supply of ice throughout the year, but it would likewise secure the advantage of preserving oranges and other fruits of the country, during the hottest season. Mr. Ludd is now making experiments for this object. It may also be in our power to adopt measures, which will encourage the shipowners to import cargoes of ice. There is now a prejudice against this description of freight, and I am fully aware of the obstacles which Mr. Tudor has to encounter.

Under these circumstances, I have requested Mr. Hedger, our Secretary, to convene a meeting at the Town Hall of those who are desirous of encouraging the speculation, and a more convenient time can hardly be selected, than ten o'clock on Saturday morning, that being the first day of the sessions.

I remain, Sir, your obedient servant,

LONGUEVILLE CLARKE.

Calcutta, 12th Feb., 1837.

Boston, U. S. A. 9th September, 1836.

Sir,—I received to-day, by the hands of Mr. M. D. Bacon, your letter, as chairman of the American Ice Committee of Calcutta, which I take the first moment of replying to; although I may not be able to despatch my letter for a month to come.

I wish then, in the first place, to ask you to convey to the Committee, and the subscribers to the erection of the building, and to Sir Charles Metcalfe, late Governor-General, the high sense I entertain of the open-hearted and open-handed liberality with which they have met my attempt, cherished, and sustained it, at a period of the greatest disaster.

The very flattering terms in which the Committee speak of the enterprise, cannot be otherwise than grateful to my feelings; I think, however, I may justly say, I do not deserve so much praise for the undertaking, as they are willing to give me. The plan is the result of calculation, and to the original plan I have added the experience of a long course of years. An observation of the facts, rendered it a matter of certainty, that the safe transportation of Ice to India, could be effected. In the onset it was known there were great difficulties to be encountered, and many losses to be met, and that no success could be arrived at, unless the most unflinching resolution, should be first determined upon. Those who engage upon new undertakings will soon learn that their success depends upon making even misfortune serve as encouragement, and defeat in one direction, a source of strength and new vigor in another. If they take leisure to stop for lamentation or for mishap, they waste powers wanted for a better purpose.

Having many years since satisfied myself that a ship could be so prepared, as to transport about two-thirds of a cargo, I commenced the undertaking knowing from experience in other directions, a great variety of obstacles were to occur which, nothing but experiment could ascertain and overcome; what I most feared was, the interference of the inexperienced. I feared, ships would be loaded with this article without being sufficiently well prepared, and that losses by such means would be charged against the enterprise generally; that the shipping of Ice in our India ships, would be so out of favor, the enterprise would be defeated by a refusal on the part of ship owners to receive the article on Freight. This has proved one of the greatest troubles, and one of the most difficult things to overcome. It is now a stumbling block, and is only to be met by money, and doubling the freight of Ice, over the rate which would be paid for any other article, although it is probably the best article a ship can take passing through so long a distance of heated water, and under a burning sun.

The cause of the loss of the second cargo, arose mainly from the impatience of Mr. Bacon to be off, on the recommencement of the undertaking; by which means, and an over proportion of the fruit, in a small, dull-sailing vessel, the undertaking sustained a loss of about ten thousand rupees, in a single shipment. I have since sent forward six cargoes, and did not a moment hesitate, when I heard of the failure of the vessel in which Mr. Bacon went out, to push forward the enterprise: the mishap by that vessel was mainly caused by an over proportion of fruit, the fermentation of which, caused the destruction of itself and cargo.

The Committee have spoken of the fruit as a disadvantage. It is not so, when shipped in so small quantity as to be kept under the power of the ice. It goes on board at a temperature as low as 40°, and even 32°, which it retains the whole passage. So far, therefore, from being an injury, it constitutes a part of the great body of cold, necessary to be preserved, in the hold of the ship. No fermentation can take place at the temperature at which it must be kept, in order to be preserved. Some further suggestions are made respecting fresh provisions, fish, &c. I am not prepared to say that these cannot be transported, if frozen; but I think a state of being frozen cannot be preserved, in a perfect state; the slightest want of perfection in such articles, would be fatal. At a future time I proposed to have some experiments instituted, by which doubt may be solved. At present there is not any evidence, that ice has sufficient power in itself to preserve fresh animal substances, for a great length of time; but I have known fresh beef and fish to be successfully preserved in ice for forty days, in voyages to the West Indies. I have the intention to attempt the preservation of the fine Spanish grape, which arrives here in November and December; it is frequently kept with us until June, in a temperature of about 55° in an ice cargo! The temperature would be 10° lower, and might keep back the progress of decay. Some kinds of pears might possibly be preserved and attempts to this effect will be made.

On the subject of the Ice House, Mr. Bacon has not produced sufficient evidence of its excellence, for me to make up an opinion, whether it will preserve the ice, which has gone in succession, so that there may be no interruption in the supplies, after the ship Concord, which was the first put in to the new house, then sailed.

Ship Warsaw, 27th December, Ship Ruthelia, 6th April,
Ship Brighton, 2nd August.

The coming month another large cargo with apples, will be despatched, to be followed by another in December, and about March or April another, being the tenth cargo shipped by me. But even with all these, regular supplies cannot be expected to be established, until the consumption encreases and the Ice House is extended to a very considerably greater size. This extension of size, cannot be attempted for a twelve month to come, and ought to be effected from my own resources; after the result of the ten cargoes is known.

In conclusion, I may (without filling the measure of good feeling which I have towards the gentlemen of Calcutta) say, I thank the Committee for the peculiar kindness extended towards my agent Mr. Bacon. I again give you the assurance that no effort shall be wanting on my part to secure success to this undertaking. I believe the success will date from the arrival of the Concord, but no certainty of uninterrupted supplies, can be arrived at, until there is an Ice House of very considerably encreased capacity.

As far as I have dates from your city, say to 8th April 1836, every thing goes on well; you will know whether this be really the case before this reaches you. If there should have been a hiatus in the supplies, I shall trust in the continued patience of the good friends of the undertaking, and that they will believe every thing is doing, and will be done here, to ensure the entire accomplishment of their wishes, which are my own.

I beg to assure the Committee, I remain, very respectfully,

FREDERIC TUDOR.

ICE MEETING.

TOWN HALL, TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 12, 1837.

The Hon'ble Sir John Peter Grant, in the Chair. The attendance was not so numerous as was anticipated by some gentlemen, but the subject, though a cold one, was warmly discussed; and instead of the large hall usually used for such assemblies, the meeting was held in the south-west room, where about ½ after eleven, we felt the want of non-conductors of heat exceedingly.

The Chairman having called order, Mr. C. Ladd laid an estimate on the table, having the following exhibit of sales and losses.

September 1836,	average sale per day	728	seers.
Ditto do.	do. loss do.	1060	ditto.
October do.	do. sale do.	704	ditto.
Ditto do.	do. loss do.	1036	ditto.
November do.	do. sale do.	558	ditto.
Ditto do.	do. loss do.	768½	ditto.
December do.	do. sale do.	275	ditto.
Ditto do.	do. loss do.	685½	ditto.
January 1837,	do. sale do.	104½	ditto.
Ditto do.	do. loss do.	809	ditto.

The average of the above statement shews a loss of 50 per cent. per diem, and consequently the defectiveness of the present mode of preserving ice.

Several suggestions were made by Messrs. W. P. Grant, Longueville Clarke, W. R. Young, H. M. Parker, Captains Forbes and Sewell, and Mr. G. A. Prinsep. It was at one time proposed to remedy the loss by improving the construction of the cisterns, and instead of having it as at present of wood, it should be constructed of iron, as one of wood, however strong, would constantly leak, and thereby wet the tan which was the present great cause of the extraordinary loss.

Mr. Prinsep suggested that a wood cistern should be constructed on a larger scale, and with a wooden wall all round, leaving a space for unremoved air of 2½ feet width, and that the cistern should be corked with Patent Felt and sheathed with tin. Mr. W. P. Grant thought a brick cistern would be very economical, and that air being the best of all non-conductors, that there should be a brick instead of a wooden wall round it.

The Hon'ble Chairman agreed with Mr. G. A. Prinsep and Captain Forbes, and added that the Russians protect themselves from cold by having double sashes of glass, leaving a space between, which contains unremoved air. After a little further conversation on heat, cold, conductors and cisterns, the following Resolutions were put from the chair.

Proposed by Longueville Clarke, Esq., and seconded by Henry Meredith Parker, Esq.,

"That the practicability of successfully importing American ice into Calcutta being now fully established, as well as the great advantages it confers on the community, it is expedient to adopt Mr. Tudor's suggestion of increasing the Ice House.

"That in consideration of the losses which Mr. Tudor has sustained in the commencement of the speculation, and the persevering enterprise which he has displayed, it is expedient to encourage the undertaking by opening a subscription to enlarge the present building; the expense of which building ought in the opinion of this meeting to be wholly defrayed by the public of Calcutta."—Carried unanimously.

Proposed by W. P. Grant, Esq., and seconded by W. R. Young, Esq.,

"That Mr. Tudor is entitled to the warmest thanks of the Calcutta Community for his strenuous and persevering efforts to keep Calcutta supplied with ice. Carried unanimously."

Proposed by Nathaniel Alexander, Esq., and seconded by Captain Sewell,

"That it be referred to the Committee to raise the subscriptions, and to employ the funds in enlarging and improving the present building, and that Mr. H. M. Parker be added to the Committee."

Mr. Clarke then proposed thanks to the Hon'ble Chairman.

After which Sir J. P. Grant requested to see the Book of Subscription, to which be added his name and 100 rupees: the example was followed by those present, and the subscription amounted to 776 rupees—Ind. Gaz. Feb. 22.

EAST INDIANS' ADDRESS.

Pursuant to a resolution passed at a General Meeting of East Indians held on the 23d Instant, the Deputation waited on the Right Honorable the Governor on Saturday last at Government House with their Address; to which, with His Excellency's reply, they have much satisfaction in giving publicity.

THE ADDRESS.

His Excellency Lieutenant General The Right Honorable
SIR FREDERICK ADAM, K. C. B.
Governor of Madras, &c. &c. &c.

RIGHT HONORABLE SIR,

The period having arrived for your Excellency to resigning the Government of this Presidency, and to return to your Native Country, we, the East Indians of Madras conceive it incumbent on us to embrace the opportunity afforded by this event, of publicly testifying our tribute of gratitude, for the enlightened and liberal policy which has uniformly characterized your administration towards us.

The peculiarity of our situation, and the generally admitted hardship of our condition, occasioned by the prescriptive enactments formerly exercised towards us, might perhaps have excited the sympathy of our former Rulers, but with only one recent and distinguished exception, your Excellency has been the first to deprive prejudice of its malignancy, and exclusiveness of its baneful effects.

Conceiving it dissonant with the nature of this address, to particularize individual manifestations of your Excellency's condescension and liberality, we therefore refrain recording them; but we beg earnestly and respectfully to state, that we have regarded with peculiar gratification and thankfulness, the adoption of those measures, by which your Excellency has endeavoured, consistent with the responsibility of the higher trusts reposed in you and existing circumstances, to meliorate our condition.

Although your Excellency's departure is to us a source of deep regret, nevertheless, this general sorrow is productive of this consolation, that although we are deprived of a Governor, who carries with him the sincere benedictions of a grateful community, yet we secure in him, another strenuous and powerful friend, to advocate the cause of a much injured people, in that land, where alone our interests can be promoted and our rights secured.

With your Excellency's name will be associated our most grateful recollections.—A deep sense of our obligations towards you will ever be cherished by us; and we ardently hope, you will remember this our last, but earnest solicitation, that you will always condescend to be the unflinching and unwearied Friend of our cause, and advocate the entire demolition of that proscription, to which alone is attributable, the concealment of our energies, and our consequent depression and dependence.

With these sentiments of profound respect and gratitude, we beg to take a farewell of your Excellency, fervently praying, that he who commands the winds and the waves, may protect you from every danger, and restore you to the bosom of your family, not only to enjoy the luxury which emanates from a reflection of having done good, but also the full realization of all your anticipations.

We have the honor to be, Right Honorable Sir,
Your most obedient humble Servants.

THE GOVERNOR'S REPLY.

GENTLEMEN OF THE DEPUTATION.

The address which you have just read to me has, I can assure you, given me sensations of the highest gratification.—To know that the administration of this Government since I have been at the head of it, has in any degree been considered as beneficial to the large community which you represent, gives me unfeigned satisfaction.

Fortunately the feelings and principles which I entertain have been analogous to the spirit and temper of public opinion in the Mother Country, and the Legislature in its most recent enactments, has given full efficacy to those principles; so that it only remained for the Local Government to set up to these as far as circumstances permitted. Such has been the rule of the Government over which I preside.

As you kindly express your opinion that I am friendly to the cause of your Community, I flatter myself you will receive what I am about to say in the true spirit which dictates it, sincere and friendly anxiety for your welfare. When I return Home I shall cease from having any influence beyond that of a very humble individual no way connected with public affairs, and therefore I can offer nothing beyond good wishes as to the object at which your Address points. But I would venture to observe, that as the Legislature has removed every restriction, so it has left the future prospects and advancement of your Community in a great degree in your own hands.

All Legal causes of "Depression and Dependence" are at an end, but the removal of prejudice is of slow operation and its growth can only be accelerated by your own efforts. I am quite aware that some of the most valuable agents of the Government belong to your Community. There are not a few amongst you who are by the Government highly esteemed and appreciated amongst its most efficient Servants, but it has always appeared to me that it was far too general an object of the members of your Community to look to employments under the Government as the means of advancing your prospects in life. To a certain extent this is no doubt a legitimate ambition, and from your peculiar position almost a necessity; but it ought no longer to be as exclusively an object of ambition as it was. It is true every obstacle has been removed by Law and a new field is now open to you, but the way to raise yourselves from the position in which you have hitherto been placed is to depend more upon your own exertions.—To raise your Community by the efforts of its individual Members, Commerce, Navigation, and Professional pursuits are all open to you, and it is to them you should look as the means in time, of giving your Community that position in the General association which it will be fully entitled to hold.

The East Indians' like every other Society, is composed of many classes differing in wealth, in knowledge, in talents, in habit, and in social consideration, and it is a mistake to suppose that each class can be brought forward to the same level.—It is by careful adoption, and adaptation to the several classes, of the best means of education that the powers of individuals will be developed, and the Community to which they belong elevated to its proper station in the general scale, and call forth those energies which the force of circumstances hitherto depressed and concealed.

I thank you, Gentlemen, for your kind wishes, and accept them with gratitude, and you may be assured, that though the Power of usefulness may not belong to me after my departure, the sincerity of my good wishes will remain fervent and unabated.

HOOGHLY COLLEGE.

A deputation from the Committee of Public Instruction visited the College of Hooghly on Saturday, to distribute prizes to the students reported most favourably of on the first Annual Report. The deputation consisted of Sir Edward Ryan, Sir Benjamin Malkin, Mr. Shakespeare, Mr. Trevelyan, and Mr. J. C. C. Sutherland, and they were accompanied by Mr. Hare, Baboo Prussona Comar Tagore and Rassomoy Dutt, and Captain Johnston, superintendent of Steamers. They left Calcutta about 8 in the morning in one of the iron steamers and reached Chinsurah about half an hour afterwards. After inspecting some of the classes, and all the various rooms of General Perron's house, now occupied as a College, the deputation distributed some of the prizes and then proceeded to Hooghly where they minutely inspected the Imambarah and the lands belonging to the estate to the southward, extending nearly to the jail. On part of this land, near the Imambarah, it is proposed to erect a splendid structure as a College; but we believe that point is not yet fully determined. It had been in contemplation to purchase General Perron's house, now rented at 140 rupees a month, but the owner, from a mistaken idea that the Committee cannot get any other, and will not build, has more than doubled the price which he would formerly have taken. The gentlemen of the deputation, after being occupied nearly two hours walking in the sun examining the premises of the Imambarrah, left Hooghly about 3 o'clock in the afternoon and reached Calcutta about half past 7 in the evening.

The Judge of Hooghly, Mr. Martin, and the officiating

Magistrate, Mr. Grote, attended the distribution of prizes at the College. Mr. Belli, the Collector, who has always taking a lively interest in the institution, was absent in the district, on duty. The examination took place in December and was private. The institution is not sufficiently advanced for a public examination.—Hurkaru.

SUPREME COURT.

[ADMIRALTY SIDE.]

In the matter of Bounty to the Officers, Seamen and Soldiers of H. M. S. Andromache.

Mr. Cochrane, in the absence of the Advocate-General, from indisposition, moved upon petition supported by affidavit, that a day be assigned for receiving proof of the claim of the crew of H. M. S. Andromache to Head-money, for three several attacks on pirates, in the Straits of Malacca, under the Act of the 6th Geo. IV. c. 49, for the encouragement of His Majesty's Forces, in the suppression of piracy and destruction of piratical vessels.

The Chief Justice.—The question is, whether the application ought to be made to the Supreme Court, sitting as a Court of Admiralty, or to the Vice Admiralty Court, which is distinct from the Admiralty Court, and which is constituted by Commission from the Lords of the Admiralty, and of which I am the Commissioner. The first Court derives its powers under the Charter: this latter Court, under special Commission.

Mr. Cochrane. I have a motion prepared for each Court, and will hand in whichever your Lordship pleases, (laughter.)

The Chief Justice.—This Court (Supreme Court,) will assign a day to hear the evidence; but we do not decide, whether we have the jurisdiction under the 28th section of the Charter. The criminal jurisdiction of the Admiralty Court has been extended by two subsequent Acts of Parliament, but they do not extend the civil jurisdiction. It is a question whether this is a civil or criminal proceeding, and it is a question for you to consider, whether the Vice Admiralty Court in which I sit alone by Commission, is not the Court to which you ought to make your application; but as the ship is about to sail, and your witnesses are, probably, on board of her, I have no objection to open the Vice Admiralty Court, and will receive your petition there. We adopt this course as a matter of convenience under the special circumstances of the case, otherwise, we would have heard the question of jurisdiction argued, and have decided that first.

The Chief Justice in the course of the day opened the Vice Admiralty Court, and Mr. Dickens was sworn in as Registrar; the witnesses will be examined the first thing to-morrow, when the Chief Justice, as sole Commissioner of the Vice Admiralty Court, will preside, and Mr. Bird was appointed Marshall.

The Chief Justice.—I don't think, Mr. Cochrane, you are an Advocate of this Court; you had better, therefore, be sworn in; and those Gentlemen, (Advocates,) who are present, had better be sworn in.

The Chief Justice intimated, that it was not at present a Court of much business, but in times of war its business is very great.

There have been no advocates sworn in to this Court, we understand, since 1823, when the then Bar was sworn in.

Mr. Marnell was the only advocate present in Court at this time, and Mr. Cochrane, at the suggestion of the Chief Justice, handed over his motion to Mr. Marnell. The roll not being ready, the Gentlemen of the Bar will, it is understood, be sworn in as advocates of this Vice Admiralty Court to-morrow. In answer to a question from Mr. Marnell, the Chief Justice stated, that the Vice Admiralty Court was not a Prize Court; that a Prize Court sits only in time of war, but that the Prize Court sits under the same special commission under which the Vice Admiralty Court derives its powers.

VICE ADMIRALTY COURT.

The roll being completed, Mr. Cochrane, Mr. Osborne, Mr. Leith, Mr. Barwell, Mr. Sandes and Mr. Nott were then sworn in as Advocates of the Vice Admiralty Court, these gentlemen being the only Advocates present, not sworn in as Advocates of that Court.

The Vice Admiralty Court was then adjourned till to-morrow.

[Ecclesiastical Side.]

NEWTON VERSUS NEWTON.

Mr. Prinsep was about to move in this case, which is a suit for divorce brought by the wife, that the impugnant should propound all proceedings in the case, which means, we believe, she should expedite the cause, and proceed to a hearing. It appeared, however, that the defendant was in contempt, or in the language of Ecclesiastical Court, contumacious, and therefore he could not be allowed to move. Motion postponed.

There were several other motions of no public interest, which occupied the rest of the day.

JANUARY 31, 1837.

[ADMIRALTY SIDE.]

Lieutenant Reed examined by Mr. Cochrane. Is 1st Lieutenant on board H. M. Ship Andromache, and was off the Arrows on the 31st of May 1836, in the Straights of Malacca in the pinnace. Was on board the pinnace about 8 p. m. of the 30th. The boat was manned and armed and with about 21 men, and left the Andromache in search of pirates. The 1st and 2d cutters, jolly-boat and gig, accompanied us. We went to one of the islands. When we rounded a small bay, we observed three boats about midnight. I had detached the other boats from me before this time. When I saw these three boats, I immediately pulled towards them. They were laying near the shore, and they immediately manned two of them and pulled towards us. I had Mr. Mitchell on board as an interpreter. The boats came near us. We hailed them and told them we were white men and not to be afraid. They began to sing, beat their gongs and flourish their spears. I ordered them to be hailed. I directed the interpreter to tell them not to be afraid, that we would not hurt them. An answer was made in a language which I did not understand, which was interpreted to me:—Some of Malays, &c. From the appearance of these boats they came towards us in a hostile manner. I saw them flourishing their spears. They were hailed by us at least 3 or 4 times through the interpreter, perhaps more times. The boats continued to pull towards us after we hailed them. These boats were larger and longer, and carrying more men than mine. They are full of men. I should not have thought it prudent to let those boats get along side of us.

After being hailed repeatedly and the nearest boat coming within 12 or 15 yards of us, I ordered the gun to be fired, which was returned by both boats firing their great guns, swivels and some small arms. I continued firing until the men in the large boat jumped overboard.

At this time the cutter came up. The smaller prahu was making off, and I sent the cutter in chase. There were still some men left in the large boat, and after firing 2 rounds more of the great gun, the first cutter came up, I ordered her to take possession of the prahu, and immediately went in chase of the other prahu. On coming up with the 2d prahu, I found it was engaged in a running fight with the 2d cutter. I fired a round of grape into her within 8 or 10 yards of her. The men jumped overboard. They were told by the interpreter to come on board, and that they would not be touched. They refused and struck at our men whilst in the water and were nearly all destroyed, some having escaped from the 1st large boat which was taken. We landed the seamen and Marines to scour the jungle of the island, and succeeded in making 9 prisoners. I returned on board about 4 in the afternoon.

I landed at day break, after destroying the other two prahus, and launched and burnt the 3d prahu. The island appeared uninhabited, it is about half a mile round. It is between 2, 3 and 4, N. and 100 East. I went on board the 2d and 3d prahu. The 1st was burnt before I got to her. The 2d had place for one large gun; the 3d was not quite finished, and had one large gun, a 5-pounder, besides 5 swivels, large enough to carry a pound or half a pound ball. The 1st boat had a long 9 pounder mounted, and 5 or 6 swivels of the same size, capable of carrying a pound or half a pound ball. Examined the 2d prahu. She had not the appearance of a Merchant vessel. There was one man lying dead on board. There is a difference between these vessels and fishing boats. The fore-mast rakes more forward, and fishing boats are not so well armed or manned. I looked at the bows of the vessel. There was a stockade about the bows. I never saw such stockades in any merchant vessel. The prisoners were taken on board the Andromache. I think at least 100 men were in these two boats. I cannot swear to the prisoners having been on board the boats. There were no huts on the island, it was uninhabited. They probably were on board the boats. Most of these 100 men were killed; about 8 or 9 might be left on the island. There were many places on the island in which they might have concealed themselves. When the men jumped overboard from the 1st boat it was about 30 yards off shore. In the 2d prahu nearly all must have been killed. There must have been about 40 in her, in the 1st about 50 to 60. Most of them must have been killed. We fired upwards of 30 rounds of grape into her. We were very near. We fired small arms also into her. There was a party of Marines with us, and they fired as fast as they could load. We had four Marines and a Marine Officer. The men in the prahu, were armed with spears and I think all of them fishermen's boats are armed with spears and spears. They have no great guns nor swivels. Some of the merchant vessels may carry swivels, but never great guns. The stockade is to protect the men against firing from a great gun. It is 9 or 10 inches in thickness. I don't think grape would penetrate

It is about 3 or 4 feet high. It is straight a thwart the boat, and projects about 1 foot or 1½ feet on each side.

These boats had the appearance of being boats of war. They are swift boats. The second was a little disabled by our fire. We easily came up with her. The prisoners were natives of the Malay Coast. I heard this from themselves through the interpreter. Of what place, I don't know.

Captain Chads.—The Rajah of Lingin publicly disavows all connection with the pirates, but I believe that he in secret derives emolument from piracy. The petty states are all anxious to acknowledge themselves tributary to Lingin. Piracy has of late become very lucrative. By proclamation the Sultan of Lingin prohibits piracy, under penalty of death. The proclamation bears date the 24th Jan. 1836. There are treaties between the Dutch and the Malays. We have commercial relations with the Sultan of Lingin, but no treaty. By the treaty with the Dutch on the cession of Malacca, we are prohibited from entering into any treaty with the tribes to the southward of the Straits.

Thomas Garstin Mitchell, examined by Mr. Grant.—Is superintendent of gun-boats in the Straits. On the 25th of May, was appointed to attend the Andromache. I thoroughly understand the Malay language, and was present at the attack of the piratical boats on the 31st of May. Witness detailed the facts deposed to by Lieut. Reed, and added, that he addressed the pirates in Malay; told them they were white men, and not to be afraid. The Malays said, "sons of Malays! there is but one boat, let us fight her." They were all mixed together, but I think the sound and voice came from the shore. There were some men on the boats and some on shore. The boats (Malay) were nearly on the beach. They after this got into their prahus, and approached us, shivering their spears, singing and beating their gongs. The witness then detailed the attack as spoken to by the first Lieutenant Mr. Reed.

In answer to a question from the Chief Justice, witness stated, they were singing their war songs before we fired, and they returned our fire immediately.

This witness also stated, that the Malay prisoners when on board the Andromache said they came from the Island of Lingin, and that they came to seek for plunder. The prisoners also stated, that there were about an hundred men in the two boats; but they did not know how many were killed; but not above 8 or 9 remained on the island. The prisoners stated that the rest of the Malays, must have been killed. The Andromache was not near us when this attack was made, she was at the back of the island.

Examined by the Chief Justice. The Sultan of Lingin has boats of this description. The boats destroyed were of the same class of prows employed by the Sultan when he makes war. The Malay prisoners stated that they were acting under the orders of the Sultan of Lingin at that time. They said the Sultan had sent them for plunder, and for the purpose of piracy. Has been at Lingin, and seen that class of prows there. Has not been at Lingin since May. They stated that there were other vessels out for plunder and piracy by the orders of the Sultan. They stated that two prows had gone to Siah for the purpose of plunder. They stated they principally attacked prahu. Is not aware whether the Sultan was at war at that time; but knows he was not at war with the English. Besides sometimes at Penang, sometimes at Singapore. I know from what I hear from the Malays, and other chiefs, the subjects of the Rajah of Lingin, that he is in the habit of employing ships for piratical purposes. I saw the Rajah of Lingin at Singapore once. I do not know for what purpose he went to Singapore. Cannot say whether the Sultan avows or disavows the employment of prahus for piratical purposes. Nearly all the states of the Eastern Coast of the Peninsula employ boats for piratical purposes, but I do not know under what authority. Andao, is a place under the rule of the Sultan of Lingin, where this system of piratical plunder is carried on. Teingang, is another place, but it is under its own Rajah. Rungalley, is another place, that is under the Sultan of Lingin. All the places on the Eastern Coast have a few pirate prahus, and the Governments are under Petty Rajahs. We have a treaty with the Dutch at Lingie, but I cannot say, whether there is or not with Sallangore. These armed crews attack the trading prahus, but not each other. They attack the trading vessels of the other small states. They attack any one whom they think may have anything worth taking. Does not know of any war subsisting between these states. They plunder their own nation as well as others. They will attack any trading vessel, provided it does not belong to the owners of the attacking boats. They attack every body. I have seen armed boats of Lingin, attack trading boats of Andao, which is subject to the Rajah of Lingin.

Mr. Cochrane intimated, he had closed his case on this point. There were no ship papers taken.

The clause in the act under which the bounty is sought, is the 1st and is in the following terms:—

"Whereas it is expedient to give encouragement to the commanders, officers and crews of His Majesty's ships of war and hired armed ships to attack and destroy any ships, vessels or boats, manned by pirates or persons engaged in acts of piracy," be it therefore enacted by the King's most Excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons, in this present Parliament assembled, and by the Authority of the same, that from and after the passing of this Act there shall be paid by the Treasurer of His Majesty's Navy, upon bills to be made forth by the Commissioners of the Navy, to be paid according to the Course thereof, without fee or reward, unto the officers, seamen, marines, soldiers and others who shall have been actually on board any of His Majesty's ships or vessels of war, or hired armed ships at the actual taking, sinking, burning, or otherwise destroying of any ship, vessel or boat, manned by pirates or persons engaged in acts of piracy, since the first day of January, one thousand eight hundred and twenty, the sum of twenty pounds for each and every such piratical person, either taken and secured or killed during the attack on such piratical vessel, and the sum of five pounds for each and every other man of the crew not taken or killed, who shall have been alive on board such pirate vessels at the beginning of the attack thereof; the numbers of such piratical men respectively to be proved by the ships papers taken on board such piratical ship, vessel or boat, verified by the oaths of two or more of the persons who shall have found and taken possession of such papers, or by such other evidence as under the circumstances of the case shall by the Judge of the High Court of Admiralty, or by the Judge of any other Court authorized to take cognizance of such matter, be deemed sufficient proof thereof.

Lieut. Reed, was called to prove another attack on other boats, off Ramania on the 13th June.

Lieut. Reed. There were no papers on board the prahu at Arroa.

I remember the 13th of June last. I left the Andromache in charge of 5 boats, the pinnace, 1st and 2d cutters, jolly boat and the gig. We saw 5 prahus off point Komania. They were then about 3 miles from us. They made for the shore, pulling and sailing, and our boats chasing. The large prahu took the crews of the 2 smaller prahus out. It was between 2 and 3 when the largest prahu opened her fire upon the pinnace, within their great shot distance. When within pistol shot distance I fired grape into the nearest and largest prahu, which was returned, and we kept uplifting with the great guns, swivel and small arms, until the men jumped out of the large boat, retreating quarter until they were nearly all killed. We saw the 3 other boats on shore. They then landed and run into the jungle. In one of the 2 boats were 5 Cochinchinese who had been taken by these pirates. The boats were burnt, and we brought the Chinese on board the Andromache. The prahu fired first on us. We were in chase, and they kept brandishing their spears and beating their gongs about 150 yards off. I examined these boats, they were similar to those which I have spoken to in my former examination. There were between 50 and 60 men killed. We heard afterwards 52. There were about 120 on board the prahus altogether. The 5 Cochinchinese were brought to Singapore. They were the persons found in the prahus as prisoners. None of the crews were taken alive; but many reached the shore. We landed but did not take any.

Captain Chads examined by Mr. Cochrane. Is Captain of the Andromache. Remembers the sending away of the ships boats on the 2 occasions spoken of. On both occasions we heard the firing, and were within signal distance. Remembers 5 Cochinchinese brought on board on the 2d occasion. They were landed at Singapore, and he was present at their examination before Mr. Montgomery, acting as a Justice of the Peace. (Paper exhibited.) This paper was signed by one of the Cochinchinese in my presence. There was an interpretation of it made to him in my presence.

Mr. Mitchell, examined by Mr. Grant with respect to the second attack, stated, that he was in the same boat with Mr. Reed, and deposed to the same facts. The Chief of Andao, told witness that he had heard from some of his own subjects, that we had on this occasion destroyed 54 men. The chief stated also, that he was very much afraid of the pirates himself.

Mr. Cochrane, then proceeded to prove the next case.

Lieut. Reed, examined by Mr. Grant:—Remembers the 26th of June in last year, and deposes to an attack on a village and boats. In the village he found a large store of Cochinchinese rice and provisions, and munitions of war. About 30 boats were destroyed, and between 40 and 50 of the small thieving prahus. This took place on the island of Gallang. We found two Cochinchinese prisoners who swore to their junk, a large junk about 300 tons. We chased on shore about 10 piratical boats. The witness proved the destruction by his Majesty's boats of a great number of boats having about 600 men on board. Altogether there were 80 or 90 boats. They were not all armed in the same manner: some had stockades, some large guns, some swivels, some spears and creeses; but they were all in company when we chased them. We destroyed 80 or 90 boats, and they were nearly all of piratical built. We destroyed many of the guns, and took some on board the ship. I did not ascertain their number.

The Chief Justice intimated, that this attack was clearly within the act. The witness deposed that almost all the 600 men escaped, and very few were killed. We scuttled the Chinese vessel, as we could not get her off. We took the Cochinchinese from Singapore; they had made their escape from Gallang.

We heard of an English brig which had been taken and destroyed at Gallang. We saw no vestige of her. There was no appearance of cultivation on the islands, nor was there apparently any fishery. Gallang is a nest of small islands, and they are all without cultivation. There were three villages; the largest would contain above a thousand; the whole of the villages would contain between three and four thousand men. We destroyed about 90 boats, and we saw upwards of 30 boats, while we were in chase. Two of the guns were long twelve, the others nine. The swivels would carry about pound balls. There was an immense quantity of ammunition in the houses: there were many hundred barrels of coarse powder. We destroyed the powder, and many of the houses blew up. The barrels might contain 100lbs. each. There was some English powder and some canister powder.

Mr. Mitchell was then called, and deposed to the same facts. There was another case proved, in which several boats were destroyed, and about 80 pirates killed,—and 89 escaped, and added, that two of the boats found at Gallang, carried an hundred men each, and were the boats, which had attacked the boats of his Majesty's ship Wolf; he knew them having been in the boats at the time of the attack.

Mr. Cochrane stated, at the close of the evidence, that the amount of head-money claimed under the act was £8,745 sterling.

The Chief Justice stated, that the case had been heard in the Admiralty Court, and in the Vice-Admiralty Court; the evidence is taken in each Court, and the learned judge intimated that the Court would consider in which Court the matter ought to be heard, and also the sort of certificate to which he was entitled upon the evidence.

FEBRUARY 1, 1837.

Bounty to the Officers and others of Andromache.

The Chief Justice intimated, that in the case of the head-money to the officers and seamen, and soldiers of the Andromache, he himself entertained some doubts as to the jurisdiction of the Admiralty Court, and that he thought the proper Court to entertain the matter, and grant the certificate, was the Vice Admiralty Court. However, under the circumstances it would be perhaps better for the Advocate-General to take out his certificate of the facts proved from both Courts, and the learned Judge intimated also that the certificates were ready.

Motichund v. Janoky Dass and others.

Vrignon, v. Colvin and others.

The Chief Justice intimated that in these two suits, the court would give their judgment to-morrow morning (Thursday).

Ousely, v. Harris was then called on.

This was an action to recover a large sum of money from the defendant. The plaintiff being one of the assignees of the late firm of Fergusson and Co. Mr. Clarke and Mr. Grant for plaintiffs the Advocate-General and Mr. Cochrane for the defendant.

The question, as we understood the case, was whether or not a certain custom prevalent in an indigo concern, of which Mr. Harris was a partner, was within the knowledge of Mr. Harris, recognized and admitted by him, and whether or not such custom was binding upon him.

The case made by the plaintiff, was that Fergusson and Co. were entitled to write back a sum of about Rs. 40,000 on the sale of certain indigos, the property of the indigo partnership. The case of the defendant was substantially that Fergusson and Co., in final settlement with Harris and Co. in 1833, just before the failure, had abandoned all claim upon the defendants for any matters arising out of, or connected with, this sale of indigos.

The case appeared likely, when our reporter left, to occupy the whole day, the proof depending upon a quantity of documentary evidence.

FEBRUARY 2, 1837.

In W. J. Ousely versus Harris, the Court gave a verdict for Defendant.

This day the Court took contested motions of no general interest at the Ecclesiastical side.

Towards the close of the day, a motion in Newton versus Newton, was brought on.

Mr. Clarke, with whom was Mr. Grant, shewed cause against the rule of Mr. Prinsep, obtained in this suit on a former day.

Mr. Clarke (as we understood him) contended, that the defendant Col. Newton, having been found contumacious, that is, having contemned the process of the Court, and having been in consequence arrested, and put in jail, it was not open to him to get rid of the contempt, by shewing irregularity, in the process of contumacy, and by such means setting it aside; but that he must shew that he in fact was ignorant of the issuing of the process of the Ecclesiastical Court, citations, &c., &c., and that he had not willingly or knowingly been contumacious. The learned Counsel cited several authorities. This was a preliminary objection, in which Mr. Grant, followed and supported Mr. Clarke.

Mr. Prinsep, contra, contended, that upon the face of the documents, citations vis et modis, et cetera portected in the matter, it appeared that they were informal, and therefore a nullity, and that he, Mr. Prinsep, was therefore not called upon to shew Colonel Newton, ignorant of the issuing of the process against him. According to the terms of Mr. Clarke's preliminary objection, the Court decided that the ex-communication against the defendant, Col. Newton, must be confirmed; that he might have had a right to shew that the certificate of the service of the monitions on him, the defendant, was false; but this he has not done—he only says the process served was informal, which he is not in a situation to do. The service of the process vis et modis was under the circumstances of the case, good service. Defendant still in contumacy.

The Court did not give their decree in Mutyehund versus Baboo Janokoy Dass, and others; nor in Vrignon versus Colvin and others; these decrees will, it is probable, be pronounced to-morrow.—Ind. Gaz. Feb. 3.

FEBRUARY 3, 1837.

Bissumber Seal versus Romdhone Bonnerjis.

The Advocate-General, with whom was Mr. Prinsep, shewed cause against a rule nisi obtained by Mr. Clarke on a former day; for the appointment of a receiver on the application of Bissumber Seal, a mortgagee of the estate of the defendant Mortgager in possession, on the grounds that his security was endangered by reason of the Government revenue being in arrear. The grounds on which the application was resisted were that no Government revenue was in arrear; and 2ndly, that the complainant was only second mortgagee, and that no interest was due on his debt.

Mr. Clarke, with whom was Mr. Leith, contended, that at the time of motion made, the Government revenue was in arrear, and that the rubecarry of the Collector of Hooghly, where the lands lay, by which it appeared that no arrears were at present due, was on the face of it unsatisfactory, and that the complainant, as second encumbrancer, had a right to come in, and have a receiver appointed to protect his interest in the mortgaged property, against the acts of the 1st mortgagee and the mortgager.

The Chief Justice decided, that on the last point as to the estate being in danger on account of arrears of Government revenue, that that point was clearly answered by the defendant, and that the estate was not in danger on that account.

As to the second point, that as second encumbrancer, the complainant had a right to a receiver, the Court would decide that point on Monday morning. If the Court was against the defendant on this point, Mr. Clarke's rule would be discharged with costs.

THURSDAY, FEB. 9.

Mootiechund v. Janoky Doss.

This was a petition for re-hearing, and came on for argument during last term. The court, after hearing counsel, delivered judgment this day, affirming the former decree of Mr. Justice Francis, and dismissing the petition with costs. — Englishman.

FEB. 16, 1837.

PLEA SIDE.

George Roots v. Cockerell and Co.

Mr. Clarke opened pleadings.

Mr. Prinsep stated, that the plaintiff appeared in forma pauperis, and that he was reduced to that state by the acts of the defendants.

A Mr. Rose died in —, leaving a widow, and in consequence of an arrangement with Cockerell and Co., Mr. Cockerell took out administration to his estate. Mr. Rose was an Indigo Planter, and after his death Messrs. Cockerell and Co. carried on the factories, making the advances, &c. In July and August 1834, a correspondence goes on between Cockerell and Co. and Mrs. Roots, late Mrs. Rose, expressive of Cockerell and Co.'s discontent at the account given by the lady of the application of the indigo advances and in August the 21st, they, Cockerell and Co., intimate their intention, unless Mr. Roots can come to an arrangement of the debt due on the factory, to put up the factory for sale.

Mr. Roots to this replies, and begs that he may work the factory for the ensuing season. Cockerell and Co. agree, on the following terms, that he should give them a bond and warrant for 20,000 rupees and a policy of insurance on his own life for 20,000 rupees. Mr. Roots sends down to Cockerell and Co. the bond and warrant for 20,000 rupees and a certificate of health in order to effect the insurance for 10,000 rupees. The arrangement takes place and Mr. Roots works the factory up to the month of February 1835, when the complacency of Cockerell and Co. became disturbed, and it became necessary, in their opinion, for some reason or other, that they should get possession of the factory. They accordingly send up a Mr. Lethingue, an agent of Cockerell and Co., to take possession: he arrives in March at the factory and demands to have possession of the factory. Roots refuses to give up possession until the end of the season, for which he had agreed with them to remain and work the factory. They then take out execution on the bond and warrant, send it up to a Mr. Clark as their special bailiff, and on the 30th of March they arrest Roots, at Berhampore, whither he had gone on business; keep him in custody till the 8th of May, never send him down to Calcutta. They then release him, and he is again put in possession of the factory by order of Mr. Evelyn Meadows Gordon, the Commissioner. Mr. Clarke remained in possession of the factory during the period of Mr. Roots's imprisonment.

Mr. Roots remains in possession again until August, when a Mr. Ripley appears on the stage, as another emissary of Messrs. Cockerell and Co., and comes armed with execution on another bond and warrant, entered against Clarke, who had acted as their special bailiff, with whom they never had any previous transaction, and against whom they had no claim, and he Clarke, points out the factory, and goods and seed as his property, and Mr. Ripley, under the last execution, turns Roots out of possession, and seizes the whole property, and it is for these two trespasses that the action is brought. Mr. Prinsep, designated this latter bond and warrant, and the transforming Clarke from a special bailiff, to the character of proprietor, as an expedient devised, which had never entered into the head of any mercantile firm; but that they must have been advised, and it was for the Court to say, whether such advice so given was right or wrong. The learned Counsel, after commenting on these facts, with great feelings and ability, stated that his client came there for damages not nominal, but for such damages as would compensate the plaintiff for the total ruin, which the conduct and acts of the defendant had entailed upon him. Mr. Clarke called Mr. Dove.

Mr. John Mathew Dove. — The jurisdiction, Partnership and administration taken out by Cockerell to the estate of Rose, was admitted. He, Dove, entered the house of Cockerell and Co. in Sept. 1833, and has continued there ever since. Is in the commercial department, and knows Mr. Lethingue, but does not know his Christian name. Is not aware that Mr. Lethingue, was employed by the house in 1834; believes he was employed by Messrs. J. and R. Watts, who are connected with the house. Knows Mr. Roots, but is not acquainted with him. Knows the factory Misathul. Knew Mr. George Rose in his life time, but is not aware that he had a share in the factory. Knows from correspondence with the house in the way of business, that Rose had a share in the factory, but not of his own knowledge. Don't know that Rose left a widow, but has seen a woman at the office, whose name was Mrs. Roots, and who he understood had been a Mrs. Rose formerly. Roots in 1834, had conjointly with Mrs. Roots, charge of the factory. Don't know from the partners, or of his own knowledge, that Lethingue went up to the factory in 1834. Believes he went up, but does not know it of his own knowledge. (In answer to a question from the Chief Justice.) Has seen Mr. Lethingue in Court to-day. (Letter shewn him.) Proves the signature to be that of Mr. Cockerell, date 29th July, 1834. Proves several other letters of Mr. Cockerell, 21st August, 1834. Proves another letter (C) 30th August, 1834, (D) another letter of 8th September, 1834, (E) another of the 10th September 1834, also proves following letters of Mr. Martin, of the 20th January, 1835, another 30th of January, 1835, also the following of Mr. Spiers, date 6th Feb., 12th Feb., another of 12th Feb., another 27th Feb. Believes there are three Messrs. Clarke at Misathul factory; they have all three been at the factory. I do not know their christian names; but I should know the father and one son if I saw them; they are all indigo planters, and I believe just now in co-partnership at Gogongola. The Misathul factory, I believe, is in the neighbourhood. I can't say if a Mr. Clarke has been employed by the house as a special bailiff—never heard of it from any of the partners. I have heard that Roots was arrested. I never had any conversation on the subject with Mr. Cockerell in the presence of Mr. Judge. I don't recollect that I had. The three Clarks are employed or supported by Cockerell and Co. I believe they have been supported by Cockerell and Co. for years. The father is Thomas Clarke. I know one of the sons, but don't know his name. I believe they were East Indians, born in Calcutta. The indigo account sales pass through our hands; the accounts current generally do not. The accounts of this factory have not passed through my hands. I can't give evidence on this point, as it is not my department. In 1834 the account of the factory was kept in the name of Rose. Mr. Ripley keeps the account current, and Mr. Smith is the book-keeper of the house.

(The Advocate-General refused to produce the account current of the factory.) In 1834-35, an account current was kept in the same manner; kept under the head of the Misathul cultivation.

Cross-examined by the Advocate-General.—Mr. Prinsep objected to a question of the Advocate-General put to this witness respecting the contents of Cockerell and Co.'s books; they had their own books to refer to, which they would not produce. Question abandoned.

In answer to a question of Mr. Prinsep to admit no ties to produce papers, the Advocate-General intimated he would admit nothing after the opening address of Mr. Prinsep; he would have met the case differently, had they opened it differently.

George Clarke, examined by Mr. Prinsep.—Was an assistant at Misathul factory before Roots got possession; during the time Mrs. Rose was in possession. Roots got possession on the 20th of Sept. 1834. Roots kept a letter book—that it is one of them. (M.) letter of the 14th July is the writing of a Mr. Gore, a relative of mine; he is at Agra.

(Here a long examination was gone into, to prove the letters of Roots to Cockerell and Co. on the subject of his being given possession of the factory, by Cockerell and Co.'s bond and warrant insurance, &c. opened by Mr. Prinsep. This course was thrown on the plaintiff in consequence of the refusal of the Advocate-General to produce the originals).

After an objection taken by the Advocate-General, to the production of the letter books of Roots, containing copies of the letters to Cockerell and Co., on the subject of Roots's being put into the factory as lessee of Cockerell and Co., the Court held, that the witness might give evidence of the contents of the letters, he having shewn himself in a position according to the rules of evidence so to do. Witness stated, that Mrs. Rose married Roots on the 17th of June, 1834; she had previously received advances from Cockerell and Co. The indigo season ends on the 30th of September.

The contents of the letter were forwarding an estimate to Cockerell and Co. of the advances necessary for the season 1834-35. The letter was drafted by me, signed by Roots, and sent to Cockerell and Co.

The letter of Cockerell and Co. was then read, consenting that Roots should carry on the factory for a year, on condition that he gave a bond and warrant to confess judgment for 20,000 Rs., and to effect a policy for 16,000 Rs. Witness then gave secondary evidence of the letter of Roots to Cockerell and Co., complaining of the conduct of Mr. Roots; in offering the bond warrant and life insurance, on condition that Cockerell and Co. should carry him on in the factory on the footing of Agents and Constituents. (The previous letter of Cockerell and Co. on the answer to this offer of Roots.)

Receipt by Cockerell and Co. of the bond and warrant and certificate of health and affidavit, was then proved.

Letter from Cockerell and Co. requesting Roots to send 150 maunds of indigo seed to a Mr. Dwedney, a constituent of the house. Other orders for seed were proved from Cockerell and Co. to Roots. (The object of this was, we believe, to shew that Cockerell and Co. treated the seed, as the seed of Roots; by these letters and subsequently seized and sold it as the seed of Clarke.) Witness then stated that he left the factory in 1834, and went down to Calcutta direct. Mr. Roots had commenced dealing in indigo seed before I left. Morgondola is a mart for indigo seed; cannot say what is the Commission on the sale of seed.

Cross-examined by the Advocate-General.—Cockerell and Co. ordered my discharge. They wrote up that Mrs. Roots wished my discharge; and in order to make peace between man and wife they ordered my discharge.

The words agent and constituent, were not in the letter. It was Mr. Roots's intention, but the exact words were not used. Mrs. Rose was in charge of the factories; I was her assistant. Cockerell and Co. intended to carry on the factory to pay the debts of Mr. Rose. Cockerell and Co. carried on the factory, and left her in charge. They carried on the factory as administrators and agents at the same time.

Roots's original letter on this matter was then put into witness's hand by Mr. Pearson; he was directed to look for the words Agents and Constituents in it. Witness stated that he could not find it. After marrying Mrs. Rose he continued to carry on the factory jointly with her—Cockerell and Co. carrying on the factory for the benefit of the estate of Rose. I can't say if Mr. and Mrs. Roots carried it on as servants or as constituents of Cockerell and Co. There was no particular difference that I could find in the management, after the execution of the bond, warrant and policy.

Re-examined by Mr. Prinsep. After the execution of these instruments Roots assumed the sole management.

Record of an action brought by Cockerell and Co. against Roots, was then put in.

Judgment signed 24th March 1835. Execution signed 25th March 1835. This was the judgment entered up on the warrant to confess judgment given by Roots to Cockerell and Co.

Mr. Bird was deputy sheriff in 1835. Mr. Clarke was the special bailiff of Cockerell and Co. to execute this process. The warrant is not returned; no indemnity bond was given. Mr. Hickey was high sheriff. It is sometimes the practice when a special bailiff is appointed to give an indemnity bond. When Ripley was appointed special bailiff to execute process against Clarke, an indemnity bond was given. The special bailiff is in general appointed at the instance of the client; it was so when Ripley was appointed. I have been under sheriff more than once. The sheriff takes security from the ordinary bailiffs. In the case of a special bailiff it is sometimes taken sometimes not. In the present instance the attorneys of Cockerell and Co. undertook to give the sheriff a bond of indemnity. The signature Mr. Hickey is in my hand writing. Roots was arrested by Clarke the special bailiff; the writ is returned satisfied; but Roots only paid 3,000 rupees. Cockerell and Co. forgave him the difference. (That (S) a paper) is the hand writing of the special bailiff Clarke. (T) and (V) is also Clarke's hand writing. Several letters were put in from Clarke the special bailiff to Roots, while in custody. It was in consequence of our request, to the firm of Collier and Co. as attorneys of Cockerell and Co., that Roots was released. I was at the same time under sheriff.

Cross-examined by Mr. Grant.—I know the reason from Cockerell and Co. why Roots was arrested. I know it professionally.

Mr. Mascarenhas.—This witness stated he had been brought down from Moorsshedabad and asked for his expenses.

Chief Justice.—As you are here, you must give your evidence. The plaintiff is in forma pauperis, and it is no use therefore giving you your expenses, you must give your evidence.

Witness.—Knows Mr. Lethingé. Proves the arrest of Roots by Clarke, and that he once or twice requested Clarke to bring him down to Calcutta, when Clarke said he could not without the order of Cockerell and Co. Mr. Roots was very ill-treated during this time. Mr. Clarke's servants were very insolent to him. While Roots was absent from the factory before the arrest, Clarke took possession of the factory. Roots had large quantities of seed at this time. He was a seed Agent, and had considerable dealings in seed. I got two hundred maunds from him and took back from him Mr. Sinclair's seed, who had entrusted it to him as Agent, when he was arrested. Mr. Roots had his personal household goods on the premises when he was arrested; it might have been worth less than a thousand rupees. Ripley on his way up came to my factory; he had a writ with him. Mr. Clarke gave him a letter to us. Mr. Roots was in possession of the factory when Ripley came up; he had been put in possession from July by the Commissioner.

There were about an hundred and fifty maunds of indigo made. The manufacture was commenced by Clarke, and finished by Roots, after he was put in possession by the Commissioner. When Ripley came to my house he made me send for the darogah. That functionary did not come, but sent his mohurrer, whom he told to seize Mr. Clarke's property. The mohurrer said where is it? Ripley said here is Mr. Clarke's servant, he will tell you. The servant named the Misathul factory. The mohurrer said that was Mr. Roots's property. Ripley said he knew nothing about that; but they must go and seize all the property which Clarke's servant should point out. They went away, seized the factory, and about a hundred and fifty maunds of indigo, which was shipped to Calcutta. Clarke and Ripley accompanied the indigo to Calcutta. They remained at the factory about two months. The indigo was sent down I think in October. Seed was removed by Clarke. I removed about two hundred and odd maunds. When he was first arrested, I sold my indigo at 130 Rs. Roots's indigo sold higher than mine.

The indigo was sold by order of the sheriff; the highest was 145, the average was, I think, 139-8 annas.

Cross-examined by the Advocate-General.—I believe no seed was seized on either of these occasions, nor any of the furniture of Roots. I did not know that the indigo was Cockerell's or that Roots was the servant of Cockerell and Co. It was generally considered that the indigo was Roots's and that the factory was his: he had elephants and horses—one black horse of some value.

Letter shewn witness. Admits them to be his hand writing. The Advocate-General reads them. One recommended Clarke for Cockerell and Co. to look after the indigo, about one hundred and fifty maunds, as it would not go down to Cockerell and Co. In a postscript the letter stated that Roots would make the most of the property, and would sell an elephant and horse. The witness admitted the letters, and said they were written in answer to a letter from Clarke. Putting questions about the property. Witness stated that he thought the property was the property of Roots, because he married Mrs. Rose. I am not on terms with Clarke at present. He would not salute me this morning; I therefore would not now visit him.

Re-examined by Mr. Prinsep.—The elephants and horses were not sold, but were afterwards sold by Mr. Clarke. Since December 1835 Clarke has been proprietor. Clarke came down with the indigo, sent down by Ripley, and then went back, and has since been proprietor of the factory.

George Sinclair knows Roots, in the way of business. Mr. Stewart consigned a thousand maunds of seed to Roots in 1834. The seed was then two rupees a maund; but Mr. Roots sold it at six rupees in consequence of the sowing season being past.

Bawor Sircar, is a mohurrer at the Misathul factory; has been employed in it since Rose's time, and is so now. Proves the management of Roots; says he was the bookkeeper of the factory. Ramsunker Roy had one-fourth, Rose the other three-fourths. He is a zamindar in the neighbourhood. Proves the arrest of Roots by Clarke, and the possession of the factory by Clarke during the detention of Roots.

Chief Justice.—Mr. Prinsep, you have proved an aggravated trespass as the case now stands, and it is of no use for you to go on with this; you have identified Cockerell and Co. with the sheriff. They may shew that you have no right to the possession, but unless they do that you have proved your case.

Mr. Prinsep finished his examination of this witness at the suggestion of the Court. The facts proved by him, were the same as already shewn by former witnesses.

Cross-examined by Mr. Grant.

Mr. Frazer, is a partner of Moore, Hickey and Co. Proves the sale of the indigo seized by Ripley under the orders of Cockerell and Co. The indigo was sold by private contract to Clarke. It was sold on the 19th of December 1835, to Thomas Clarke.

William Bristow, is an uncovenanted assistant to the Commissioner of Moorsshedabad. Mr. Evelyn Meadows Gordon was Commissioner in 1831. Produces a book given him by the Commissioner from the records of the Commissioner's Court.

Caumochurn Goopte, is in the Commissioner's office at Moorsshedabad; has been there for three years. Proves the delivery of (a. m. 14.) from the Commissioner's office. This (we believe) was the Commissioner's decree to re-instate Roots into the possession of the factory.

(A. 14) was a translation of the Rubicarry of the Commissioner of Moorsshedabad, having the seal of the Court, and the signature of the Commissioner's affixed to it.—The Advocate-General objects. The Chief Justice observed, if you object Mr. Advocate, we shall send down the original decree in Persian to our interpreter, and make him translate it; for we will have the proceeding before us. Two letters were then put in from Collier and Co. as attorneys of Cockerell and Co., which went to shew, that on Roots taking proceedings against Lethingé and Clarke, in order to be re-instated in the factory, they, Cockerell and Co., come forward in person and did not pretend that Clarke had property or right to the factory. The object, we believe, of this evidence, was to shew, that although Cockerell and Co. took out execution against Clarke, and under that execution turned Roots the second time out of possession, although they apparently recognized no claim in Clarke. The various letters then put in were read, to shew that Cockerell and Co. adopted the acts of Clarke and Lethingé.

This closed the plaintiff's case.

The following letters were read at the close of the case for the plaintiff:—

Calcutta, 29th July, 1834.

To Geo. Roots, Esq., Misathul Factory, Bhugwangleah.

Dear Sir,—We have to acknowledge the receipt of your letter, dated 22d instant, and are pleased with the promptitude evinced by you in replying so fully to our letter. The abstract of account, however, between Mrs. Roots and the factory, is far from being satisfactory, and we desire you will call on Mrs. Roots to shew how she has applied the funds advanced by us.

Under the circumstances stated, we beg to say, you may draw for sica rupees one thousand, (Sa. Rs. 1,000) and, we request, you will be good enough to say, what quantity of indigo you expect to send down to us this season.

We have received a letter from Mr. Clarke, of the 22d July, confirming your statement, for which we are obliged, and we beg you will say so to him. We have also received a letter dated 18th instant, from Mrs. Roots, of which please inform her, as also, that we shall hold no further correspondence with her till she explains her conduct satisfactorily to us.

We remain, dear Sir, your faithful servants,
(Sd.) Cockerell & Co.

Calcutta, 21st August, 1833.

To Geo. Roots, Esq., Misathul Factory, Bhugwangolah.

Dear Sir,—We are in receipt of your letter, dated 13th and 15th August, and beg to say, that the draft for Sa. Rs. 655-2-3, has been accepted with respect to the advance you require for next season. We request you will furnish us with an estimate for the outlay of season 1834-35. Mrs. Roots has written three or four times to us, but we have paid no attention to her letters. Should she come down to Calcutta, we shall settle all her matters.

We remain, dear Sir, your faithful servants,
(Sd.) Cockerell & Co.

No. 1372. Calcutta, 8th September, 1834.

To G. Roots, Esq., Misathul Factory, Bhugwangolah.

Dear Sir,—We are in receipt of your letter, dated 1st September, and on due consideration of what you have therein stated, we agree to the factory being worked the ensuing season by you; but lest the concern should be more deeply involved, we can only do so on the following terms, viz.

That you give us a bond for 20,000 rupees, and as a further security, the policy of insurance you have offered for 10,000 rupees, and we accordingly beg to enclose form of certificate of health, &c. together with a bond and warrant of attorney, which we would be obliged by your returning signed and filled up in due course, and if you will work the factory on the above terms.

We remain, dear Sir, your faithful servants,
(Sd.) Cockerell & Co.

Calcutta, 10th September, 1834.

To Geo. Roots, Esq., Misathul Factory, Bhugwangolah.

Dear Sir,—Your letters of 10th and 13th instant have duly come to hand, the latter giving cover to the affidavits, which are all in order, and we beg to say the needful shall be done with them.

We remain, dear Sir, yours faithfully,
(Sd.) Cockerell & Co.

To Wigram Money, Esq., Commissioner of Moorthadabad.

Sir,—We are instructed by Messrs. Cockerell and Co. of this place, Merchants and Agents, to address you on the subject of an application which is expected will be made to you on the subject of a Mr. George Roots, an Indigo Planter, with a view, it is believed, of possessing himself of an Indigo Factory called Misathul within your district, and the factory property belonging to the same.

This factory belonged to a Mr. George Rose of Bogwangollah, who mortgaged the same to Messrs. Cockerell and Co. as a security for the necessary advances to carry him on in the concern. Mr. Rose died in July 1832 intestate, leaving a widow (now Mrs. Roots) and in January 1833, Mr. R. H. Cockerell, as a judgment creditor of Mr. Rose, and by and by, and with the consent of his widow, took out letters of administration to the estate, and he had administered to the same ever since. (We have enclosed a certificate of the Ecclesiastical Registrar of the Supreme Court, certifying that Mr. Cockerell is such administrator.) The widow of Mr. Rose having no other means of subsistence, and it being considered to be for the benefit of the estate that the factory should be carried on, Messrs. Cockerell and Co. consented to carry on the widow and to make her the necessary advances, which they did. About two years ago Mrs. Rose intermarried with the before named Mr. George Roots, and Cockerell and Co., at his request, consented to carry him on in the management of the concern, but so long only as he conducted himself to their satisfaction and for the benefit of the estate. Mr. Roots, however, neglected the factory and grossly mismanaged the estate, and Messrs. Cockerell and Co. were under the necessity of sending another person to supersede him, and to take charge of the factory. Roots for a considerable time refused to relinquish the management of the concern, and insisted that the factory belonged to him, inasmuch as it had belonged to the first husband, of his then wife, forgetting altogether that the property had passed by the grant of the letters of administration to the administrator Mr. Cockerell. Mr. Roots at length left the factory, but not before he had caused considerable loss to the estate, by his neglect and mismanagement, and not until he had succeeded in taking away with him, a considerable quantity of the factory property. An application was made to Mr. Lawrell the Magistrate, who, we believe, from not having the facts of the case before him, was inclined to favor Mr. Roots's claim. It is stated, however, that Mr. Roots intends to institute proceedings in your Court, and it is on this account that we have taken the liberty of addressing you on the subject. We submit that it is quite clear that Mr. Roots, merely because he happens to have intermarried with Mr. Rose's widow, can not have any claim to his factory, and he has no other; the legal estate is in the administrator, and Mrs. Rose herself could have no claim, until all the debts of the estate are paid, and we are credibly informed that the assets in the administrator's hands, including this factory, are far short of paying the deceased Rose's debts. Under these circumstances we do hope, that you will dismiss Mr. Roots's complaint, as he clearly has no claim on the estate either in Law or Equity. We have to apologize for troubling you at this length and beg to subscribe ourselves,

Sir, your obedient servants,

COLLIER AND BIRD.

Solicitors for Messrs. Cockerell and Co.

To WIGRAM MONEY, Esq., Commissioner, &c., &c. Moorthadabad.

Sir,—We had the honor of addressing you on the 9th instant, on the subject of an application, which it was expected would be made to your Court, by a Mr. George Roots, to obtain possession of the Misathul Indigo Factory, detailing shortly the facts of the case. We have this day seen a letter to Messrs. Cockerell and Co. from the person in the management of that factory, stating to our very great surprise, that not only had the supposed application been made by Mr. Roots, but that your Court had issued an order to put him in possession of the factory. We can only account for such an order having passed, by the supposition that Mr. Roots must have garbled, and misstated his case to your Court, for we are quite convinced that no Court of Law and Equity could have come to a decision in favor of Mr. Roots, with all the facts and circumstances of the case before it. Mr. Roots was the manager, the mere servant of Mr. Cockerell, the administrator, and has no legal right whatever to possession of any part of the factory or the factory property, adverse to the administrator, in whom alone the legal estate now is. We do hope, therefore, that on a re-perusal of our letter before referred to, and a careful re-consideration of the facts of this case, that you will be pleased to reverse the order issued for putting Mr. Roots in possession of the factory, or of any part of the factory property, or at all events that you will stay its execution until you have made further investigation and inquiry into this case, as very great injury will result to the estate from a disturbance in possession at this the manufacturing season of the year. We are constrained to inform you, that should you persist in carrying the execution of your order into effect, our clients, Messrs. Cockerell and Co., will be under the disagreeable necessity of bringing the whole of the case before the Supreme Court, and we are bound to tell you, that you will be held responsible for any loss or injury which they or the estate of the late Mr. John Rose may sustain consequent thereon. We have (for fear of our former letter not reaching you) taken the liberty of annexing a copy of it hereto; we have also annexed a copy of an extract from a letter written by Mr. Roots to Messrs. Cockerell and Co., on the 1st of Sept. 1834, which clearly shews that he considered himself as the mere servant of, or manager for, Messrs. Cockerell and Co., and liable to be displaced from charge of the Factory, on his failing to manage it to their satisfaction. We are, Sir, Your obedient Servants,

COLLIER AND BIRD,

Solicitors to Messrs. Cockerell and Co.

Extract of a letter from G. Roots to Messrs. Cockerell and Co., dated Bogwangollah, Misathul Factory, 1st September, 1834, enclosed in the foregoing letter:—

I have therefore to entreat the favor of your allowing me to keep the factory for one season, and conduct the works upon a system I have been used to; and if I cannot afford you the satisfaction that I am confident I shall, I cannot expect your assistance hereafter. I shall be glad to receive the Policy of Insurance to sign and make over to you, otherwise you may kindly await my arrival in Calcutta. True Extract,

COLLIER AND BIRD.

FEBRUARY 17, 1837.

The Advocate-General always felt reluctance and pain in addressing the Court, in a case in which he was opposed to a person suing in formâ pauperis. There was always an opinion or bias of some sort even in the strongest minds used to the administration of justice—there was meekness and poverty on one side, oppression and tyranny on the other. He complained of the manner in which the case had been opened by Mr. Prinsep, and anticipated a repetition of the same language in the reply. He was prepared to meet the case openly and fairly, had the other side opened their case properly. The only question was whether the act of Cockerell and Co. amounted to a lease to Roots, or whether he acted as their servant, in the conduct of the factory. Mr. Roots, after all that had been said, all the vituperation gratuitously heaped on defendants, was in no worse condition than when he entered Cockerell and Co.'s service. The learned counsel then reviewed the evidence of the plaintiff, and the drift of his argument was, as we understood it, 1st, to shew that upon that evidence alone, it appeared that Roots was in possession only as the servant of Cockerell and Co.; that the factory belonged to the estate of Rose, and that Roots was employed to manage it for the defendants. The learned counsel then took the point, that the transaction between Roots and Cockerell and Co., did not amount to a lease; there was no rent reserved, and that the bond and insurance were taken for the following reason: that as Mrs. Roots had made away with five thousand rupees of advances, the defendants took the securities from Roots, in order to prevent their being again exposed to a similar mal-appropriation by Roots, and that the bond was subsequently put in force, in consequence of a mis-appropriation of the property of the Estate by Roots. (We believe the sale of some indigo seeds, is what was here alluded to.) The whole point turned upon this, whether Roots was tenant or servant of Cockerell and Co., and he, the Advocate-General, proposed to shew by the correspondence of Roots with Cockerell, that he throughout considered, and treats himself as the servant of Cockerell. Reads several letters between Roots and Cockerell, previous to his marriage, in which he complains of the mal-administration of the advances by Mrs. Rose, and in which Cockerell and Co. desire that Roots may take charge of the factory, and all accounts be rendered to him, Roots, and several other letters, for the purpose of shewing that Roots always treated himself, and was considered by the house of Cockerell and Co., as the servant of the house in the management of the factory. The learned Counsel commented upon these various letters as he read them, shewing as how they made out his case, and how they went to shew, and to raise the inference that Roots considered himself and was treated by Cockerell and Co. as a servant of the house. It was further contended by the Advocate-General, and letters were read in support of the position, that after the execution of the bond and warrant, and the policy, Cockerell and Co. interfered as much in the management of the factory as before, and that Roots continued to conduct himself in the factory and to demean himself towards Cockerell and Co. in precisely the same manner, as he had done previously to the execution of these instruments, which were called by his friends opposite a Lease Clarke—was turned away by the order of Cockerell, &c., &c. Would Roots have submitted to this interference, unless he knew and admitted that the house had still the management of the concern?

The Advocate-General then stated, that Cockerell and Co. had heard that Roots had been selling seed. They sent up Lethingui to enquire; discovered the fact, and arrested Roots on the bond, of which arrest Roots did not complain, and which arrest was justifiable, from the fact of a mal-appropriation of the property of the factory, by the sale of seed having taken place by Roots.

The Chief Justice here asked for what purpose the bond was given? The Advocate-General said, he had lost his time if the court did not at that time understand for what the bond was given. The learned counsel then stated in substance that the bond was required as a security against contingent mal-appropriations by Roots. Because Mrs. Rose had misappropriated 5,000 rupees, therefore the bond was taken for 20,000 Rs. from Roots, as a security against any future malversation which might take place by Roots.

The Chief Justice.—Considering Roots to be the servant, how was he to be remunerated?

The Advocate-General.—By what he could save out of his estimate at the end of the year?

Mr. Justice Grant, we understood to ask, if Roots was to have the profit on the cultivation as his remuneration, where was Cockerell's remuneration to be; and if Cockerell was to have the profit on the cultivation, from whence was Roots to be remunerated—what salary was he to get?

The answer appeared to us to be, that Roots and his wife were to get what they could and how they could; but the what and the how did not exactly appear. We understood the Advocate-General subsequently to state, that Roots and his wife, were to have their maintenance alone, out of the factory, until they had paid their debt to Cockerell and Co., after which event they might get something more. The address of the Advocate-General lasted upwards of two hours. Mr. Bird, of the firm of Collier and Bird, proved a mortgage. Mr. Prinsep offered to admit any letters of Mr. Roots, of which the Advocate-General felt inclined to avail himself.

A great many letters were then put in on the part of the defendants to the purport and effect, as opened by the Advocate-General.

Mr. Lethingue, is an Assistant to Messrs. Watson, and known the Misathul factory, and Mr. Roots. Inquired into the charge made against Roots of selling 300 maunds of new seed laid in for the factory, and substituting old seed for it. Roots admitted the fact. He said the seed had come by the orders of Cockerell & Co. I found the crops poor looking. Don't remember if he stated with what seed he had sowed. The seed they were sowing at the time. The plant had appeared in some parts; they were sowing mixed seed and apparently bad seed. This was about the 3rd or 4th of March. Don't know in what situation Roots was in the factory. I can speak as to what Roots drew for five months in 1835, from October to February; I can speak, because I examined the accounts; this can be removed but at the prejudice of the factory. I took a copy of the accounts. The manner in which the money was laid out in the factory, would only appear in Cockerell & Co.'s accounts at the end of the year; the accounts were kept, by the Mohurrer of the factory.

The Advocate-General submitted he was entitled to put in this copy objected to. He said he thought it extraordinary that Mr. Prinsep should object.

The Chief Justice, I see nothing at all extraordinary in that, Mr. Advocate, after your conduct in refusing to produce Cockerell and Co.'s books yesterday.

Cross-Examined by Mr. Prinsep.—He had sold the 300 maunds of seed to Ramsunker Baboo, who had a 4th share in the factory. Roots was seed agent for Arthur & Moore at the time. I seized the seed for Arthur and Moore which was coming into his possession. Roots was a seed agent. I don't know that he was an extensive seed agent. It appeared that Roots was a seed agent; that he sold the three hundred maunds of the factory seed, but plenty of his own was shortly expected, out of which he could replace the seed sold. Witness denied having constantly visited Mr. Roots during the imprisonment and absence of Roots. Admitted that he had written to Cockerell and Co. asking for a salary for Mrs. Roots; did not make any such application for Mr. Roots. I don't know that he was arrested because he would not give up the factory to Cockerell and Co. I wrote on the 14th, 15th, and 16th of March to Roots, demanding him to give up the factory. Roots was then arrested. I know nothing of the property of Clarke being taken; we arrested Roots at Berhampore. I left the factory in charge of Mr. Clarke, and 4 or 5 burkandauzes. When I went to Berhampore to arrest Roots, I left the factory in charge of the Gomastha, and the Burkandauzes. When Clarke arrested Roots, I went with him because he asked me.

Mr. Prinsep was about to reply.

Chief Justice. Mr. Prinsep, we shall certainly give you a verdict, and shall certainly give you more than nominal damages, you may therefore confine yourself to the question of damages.

Mr. Prinsep commented very feelingly and very seriously upon the second transaction in August, when Cockerell and Co. seized the goods of Roots, under the presence of their execution against Clarke. He stated that the writ in the words of Mr. Evelyn Meadows Gordon, the Commissioner, was a false writ, and unheard of before by him, Mr. Prinsep, in the whole course of his experience, as ever having been advised either by a counsel, or even by any respectable practitioner. The Advocate-General had entirely shirked this second transaction, and left it as it is designated in the judgment of Mr. Evelyn Meadows Gordon. Mr. Prinsep then shewed that the conduct of Roots had been upright and straightforward to Cockerell and Co., and that he was now absolutely ruined by the conduct of this house of agency towards him. He it was, who pointed out the improper conduct of his wife, in the application of the funds, but on a reconciliation made, he rejoices, but objects to permit her to join in drawing on Cockerell and Co.

As to dependency, the learned counsel stated, that Mr. Roots was entirely dependant on Cockerell and Co. for all present and future advances, and that he did all he could, to give to the house a correct statement of the affairs of the factory, and to bring his wife to give an account of her past management. The seed was but as an accommodation to Ramsunker Roy, his own partner. He, Roots, had received the seed necessary for the cultivation of the factory, he at the same time was a large seed factor. Where was the objection to his accommodating his neighbour and partner at the time that he knew he could replace it. But what was the result? Did he neglect to sow? Why the out turn of the year was one hundred and fifty maunds; whereas the preceding year the out turn was only 50 maunds. The learned counsel went on to shew that their had been no concealment on the part of Roots; that he expressed his pleasure in seeing Lethingue, showed all accounts and was open and straight forward in the extreme. As to mismanagement of Roots, the cultivation had been trebled, and the indigo sold for a higher price than that of the adjacent factories. The learned counsel then commented very severely on the cruelty of the conduct of Cockerell and Co. to plaintiff, and on the ruin it had entailed on him, both as a seed agent as well as an indigo factor; and again remarked on the extraordinary expedient adopted by Cockerell and Co. in selling the property of Roots, under a writ taken out against Clarke, their own special bailiff, and who owed them nothing. The learned counsel designated this proceeding as disgraceful to the court, if the court could be disgraced by the highly improper acts of its practitioners, and that no respectable practitioner had ever before thought of taking out such a writ.

Mr. Prinsep stated, that 15,000 Rs. were lost on the indigo by Roots, and all his commission as seed agent: that Roots had suffered personal restraint for about 6 weeks: had been interrupted in his trade and business, and had undergone great hardship and injury, in character, purse, and person, by the various outrages, for such he would designate them, inflicted on him by the defendants. The learned Counsel then concluded his able and feeling address; which ended at exactly twenty-one minutes and a half past 4 o'clock p. m.

We should have been happy to have published the letters read for the defence, but had no opportunity of procuring copies of them.

Chief Justice.—This case lays in a very narrow compass : the only question is whether the plaintiff had such a possession as entitled him to maintain this action. Mr. Pearson contends that the possession of Roots is the possession of Cockerell and Co. That firm are mortgagees of $\frac{1}{4}$ ths of the factory. Upon the liquidation of Rose's debt to Cockerell and Co. Mrs. Rose would have the $\frac{1}{4}$ ths of the factory. Roots then marries her. She having previously managed the factory, and then the bond and warrant and policy are given, the question then arises whether he having an interest in right of his wife, and having entered into these securities, he has a possession sufficient to entitle him to maintain his action. It is not a lease, not a contract. If the Advocate-General, is not satisfied with our view of the point of law, we reserve to him liberty to move on the point of law to set aside the verdict, and enter a nonsuit. We hold Roots to have an exclusive possession and the action well brought.

It now remains for us to consider the damages. The learned judge recapitulated the facts proved against defendants : we consider them trespasses, and we agree with the Commissioner's conclusion as to his right to the premises.

The learned Judge then commented on the extraordinary transaction, by which, under an execution against Clarke, they, the defendants, oust Roots of the possession which he held under the decree in the Mofussil Court. This was a trial which I cannot think a proper transaction ; the Court was entitled only under the state of the pleadings, to give damages for the trespasses in March and August, but their being no count for special damages, we cannot give damages for the loss on the indigo sale, and seed transactions, &c.

The conduct of the defendants has been throughout very harsh and the latter part tricky. Damages 2,000 rupees.—Ind. Gas, Feb. 22.

The address of the Chief Justice Sir E. Ryan, was in substance, that he was happy to inform the Jury that their labours during this Sessions will not be of a very heavy nature ; but he was sorry to add that there were some cases of a very serious nature— one of murder, and another of cutting and maiming, that deserve to be noticed by him. The first case that he had to bring to their notice, was that of Robert Harding. He is indicted for the murder of his wife. It appears by the evidence that he has before him, that a quarrel took place between the prisoner and his wife, on the 12th of December last : it took place about some money, owing to a man named Tibbets ; and in this quarrel the prisoner struck the deceased with the handle of chourie on the head, holding the shred end in his hands, and after this he went and lay down on a bed, and the wife sat on a chest. About five minutes afterwards the prisoner got up again and gave the deceased a kick on the head, on which she fell with her head on the chest, remained speechless, and died shortly after. Of course the gentlemen of the Jury were fully aware that drunkenness was no excuse for the perpetration of any crime, and they would have access to the evidence of the medical gentleman who examined the corpse of the deceased, and determine whether the death of the deceased was caused by this injury in the head ; and although a person in an intoxicated state may have their death accelerated from external injury, yet if it appeared to the Grand Jury that the injury the deceased sustained from the prisoner was of that nature, there can be no extenuation for the prisoner's conduct on the plea of drunkenness, more so as there appears that there was no provocation given by the deceased to the prisoner to cause this violent assault.

Here the Chief Justice described the nature of the post mortem examination of the deceased's head, as exhibited by the report of the medical gentleman who examined it on oath. It was for the Jury to determine whether this injury was occasioned by the fall on the chest or by the kick. They may, if they consider it necessary, have the aid of another medical gentleman, who can have access to the evidence already given in this case. On this indictment, he added, the Grand Jury could only give a true bill for murder, or throw it out; for if they were convinced from all the circumstances which may be brought before them, that the deceased met her death by the injuries she sustained from the prisoner, they could not legally find a bill for manslaughter.

The next case is that of Dabee Sing, a servant of Baboo Madub Sing. He went one morning to Kalighat, returned in the evening, and the next day he was charged by a man, whom it is stated that he had wounded, with murdering a fellow servant. The murdered man was pointed out by the person wounded. What is most strange in these proceedings, is, that there has not appeared any fact to make the Judge conjecture what could have been the possible motive to induce the prisoner to commit the crime laid to his charge.

The third case is that of Domingo De Monte. He is charged with cutting his mother with a knife in the face. This offence is made capital by the late criminal act, and it is requisite to ascertain by the evidence which will be produced before the Grand Jury, that if death had ensued from the wound, whether it would be murder in that case. If it appears that during the quarrel the prisoner having the knife near at hand, hastily snatched it up and struck the prosecutrix, it is not murder; but if he had it before him and inflicted the wound deliberately, it is murder.

The last case which the Chief Justice said that he would bring to the notice of the Grand Jury, was that of Edward Arnold Swaine. He never, since he had the honor of sitting on this bench, had a cause of this nature brought before him. The accusation against the prisoner is, that he was sentenced during the 3d Sessions of 1830 to 14 years' transportation to Prince of Wales' Island, and that he has returned to Calcutta before the term of his transportation has expired. This crime, by the 9th Act of George 4th, Clause 74, Section XXII., is made a capital felony. It will be for the gentlemen of the Grand Jury to determine before they find a true bill against him, whether the prisoner at the bar is the same Edward Arnold Swaine, who was sentenced for the crime of larceny during the 3d Sessions of 1830, to 14 years' transportation, to Prince of Wales' Island, and next whether his return was voluntary. The question as to whether he returned before the period of his transportation had expired, the records of this Court will show on reference to them.

This was all, the Chief Justice said, that he had to bring to the notice of the Grand Jury, and they were at liberty to retire and examine the several bills of indictments which would be brought before them for consideration.

Shortly after the Grand Jury had retired, the Chief Justice told the gentlemen of the Petit Jury, that he dispensed with their attendance at the Court to-day, as it was not his intention to proceed with the trial of any of the prisoners to-day; but that he required their presence in the Court again at 11 o'clock on Monday next, when he would commence on the trial of those persons against whom the Grand Jury may find true bills to-day.

The following are the persons who did not answer to their names when called on their summonses as jurymen on the Grand Jury.

Messrs. G. J. Gordon, Commissioner of the Court of Requests; Michael DeSouza, Merchant and Agent;

R. W. G. Frith, ditto; and R. W. Hughes, of the Civil Service.

The Grand Jury, about an hour after they had retired, found a true bill against Hunooman Sing, for stealing in the house of Khittronnath Mullick, various articles and money to the value of 1,000 Rs.; and against Harroo, the 2 bills, that are against him, viz., the first for stealing in the House of Mungloo, in Short's Bazar, several articles and clothes, and for stealing clothes from the house of Poorun, valued at 40 Rs.

After this, Fyze Ally and Nijam Ally, who were tried during the last Sessions on a charge of breaking into a shop; were brought up to receive the judgment of this Court. The Chief Justice informed them that their case had been submitted to His Majesty in England, and that they were, until his pleasure is known, allowed to quit jail on their giving bail in their own recognizances to the amount of 5,000 Rs. each, that they would appear to hear and abide by the judgment of this Court, when His Majesty's pleasure regarding them is conveyed to the Court.—*Ind. Honoman Sing, for burglariously stealing from the house of Baboo Kethernath Mullick, on the 19th December 1834, four strings valued at 100 rupees, and other pearls, valued at 40 rupees; 2 madulies, 64 rupees, and other jewels to a great value.

Prisoner pleaded Not Guilty.

Kethernath Mullick, sworn.—I live at Colootolla in Calcutta. I remember the night I lost my property. It was towards the morning of the 19th Dec. On the 18th I went to sleep at 10 o'clock, and hearing a noise at about 2 or 3 o'clock in the morning, I got up. My house is a 2 storied brick built house. It was dusk at the time I got up. I then observed Hunuman Sing, the prisoner, who was my durwan at the box, taking away my box from the top of a iron chest, where I had placed it the night previously. I had bolted the door of the room where I slept at night. My mother and 2 nephews and neices slept at night in the room. The box contained jewels, pearls, &c. as described in the indictment. I saw by the light burning in the room, the prisoner taking away the box. He had broken open the door by unfixing the hinges attached to it. He had no business whatever to go to that room. He seeing me, ran out, and I pursued him, but being unable to overtake him, I gave information at the thanna. I again saw the box at the thanna before gun-fire on that morning. Nothing was gone from the box when I examined it at the thanna. This is the box I lost, (seeing the box at this Court) and this is my seal to it. These are my articles. This is my list of the stolen articles. I made this list at the thanna. I value the jewels at the sum mentioned in the indictment. After valuing the jewels, witness said, that the prisoner had been in his service about 8 months. I named the prisoner at the thana. After this information I saw the articles at the thana but not the prisoner.

Prisoner declined questioning the prosecutor.

Warria, sworn.—I am naib of Loll Bazar thana. I saw prisoner on the occasion of arresting him on my going the rounds at night. I arrested him at Chinaparah. On being halted, he said he was a subject. He had a box on his breast: he had it tied with a piece of broad cloth. On being asked whose property it was, he said it was Kethoo Baboo's, who had quarrelled with his brother, and had desired him to proceed with the box and he would follow. On this I took him instantly to the thana. On the way he said take the box, divide the goods and let me go. On searching him at the thana, a key was found in his waist which fitted the box, and I had the box opened and took an inventory of the goods in it. After this I took the box and prisoner to Capt. Birch, Superintendent of the Police, who desired me to keep the box and find the proprietor of it. After this I went to the person who was security to Khitto Baboo for the prisoner, who pointed to me Khitto Baboo's house. He came with me to the thannah, took a list of the goods; after this I gave the box to Mr. McCann of the Police office. This is the box that is now produced at this Court.

Prisoner declined questioning the witness.

Prisoner's defence.—I received a letter from my family stating that my father was sick; I asked for my pay due for 6 months and my discharge. On this the Baboo said, on examining my accounts, that I would, although hired at 5 Rs. per month, get only 3-8 per month. This I declined taking, and the Baboo went out. After this the Baboo's sister told me, that if I would take this box to her father-in-law she would see the Baboo pay me. On the way I was stopped by the thanadar, to whom I related the above facts, and told them that if they doubted me, to keep the box and send 4 chokydars to verify my statements. They declined doing so, and took me to the thana. I have no witnesses.

Sir E. Ryan, here stated to the jury, that the prisoner was indicted for a capital offence, viz., for stealing jewels &c., to the value of 200 Rs. Here the judge recapitulated minutely the evidence taken before him in this case, and left it to them to give their verdict according to the degree of credibility they gave to the prosecutor and his evidence, or to the statement of the prisoner in his defence: if they believed the former, he is guilty; if the latter, he is not guilty.

The jury without retiring from the box, pronounced a verdict of guilty.

Sentence.—Hunoman Sing, you are found guilty of a capital offence, but it is not the intention of this court to carry the capital sentence into effect. Your offence is aggravated by your robbing your own master. The affairs of persons cannot be carried on if servants abuse the confidence of their masters. I cannot therefore pass a sentence less than transportation. You are sentenced to 7 years' transportation to the S. E. coast of Madagascari.

Karroo, for burglariously stealing from the house of Pooran, on the 13th January 1867, various goods to the value of 64 rupees.

Prisoner pleaded not guilty.

Pooran sworn.—I am a washer. I live at Mullick's bazar in Calcutta. Mine is a tiled house with mat walls. There is one door and a small hole in the tatties, so that a person may thrust his hand into it. It is occasioned by the bolt. There are no windows. It is of 3 roofs, one leading to the other. I remember the night I lost my goods. I put out the lights, fastened the door, and retired about 9 o'clock. It was the 13th January last. I have a wife, young daughters and a servant; they were all in the house that night, and they had all retired to bed before me. I awoke and observed a light in my room. On getting up, I observed that the door of the hut had been opened. I saw a man standing, and taking him to be my servant, called out to him, Fakeera, are you going to the tatties? He instead of replying, only said hee, and dropped a bundle. I then laid hold of him but he slipped off, and I observed that Fakeera was sleeping, and ran after the prisoner calling out "thief, thief!" On this another washer, a neighbour of mine, got up and we together caught prisoner, called out for a chokeydar, and on one coming up made him over to him who took him to the thana. The bundle was thrown at my door. It contained 67 pieces of clothes belonging to persons who employed me. The bundle was on a boiler used for steaming clothes. It was about 8 cubits from the door. It was about 11 o'clock at night when this occurred. It appears that the prisoner thrust his hand through the hole aforesaid, and removed the tatties. The prisoner is a stranger to me. The clothes I value at about 40 Rs. I never lost sight of him from the time I pursued him to his being caught near my door.

The prisoner declined questioning the prosecutor. To question from the jury. It was moonlight when I saw him, but it got dark by the time he was taken. On reference to the Almanack this proved true.

Gainda washerman, sworn.—I am a neighbour of the prosecutor. I was washing my hands and face after my meals at my door when I saw a person running after a person and calling out "thief," and I then joined him in the pursuit and caught the prisoner. (Identifies the person at the bar). It was a moonlight night. I can from my door see the prosecutor's door. The prisoner was running from the prosecutor's door. On arresting the prisoner we made him over to the thana.

The prisoner declined questioning this witness, saying that he was the prosecutor's uncle, but the witness denied all relationship.

Keamoody, chokeydar.—I was at my stand, and hearing the two last witnesses calling out "thief" and "chokeydar," I went to the direction of the noise; and on coming up to them, these two last witnesses made over the prisoner to me, saying that he had robbed them. On this I asked them, where is the property the prisoner is alleged to have stolen; they said that it was at the prosecutor's door. I went with them there, took the bundle of clothes I found there, and the parties to the thana, and made them all over to the thanadar Mirza Hossainee.

The prisoner declined questioning this witness.

Mirza Hossainee, thanadar of Collingah, sworn.—This bundle was brought by the last witness to my thana together with the prosecutor, and the prisoner.

The prisoner declined questioning this witness.

The prosecutor recalled, recognises the bundle to be the same as the one stolen from his house.

Prisoner.—I had gone to the bazar, to buy some tobacco, and on my way back, I asked Pooran how are you; and he charged me with the theft, and made me over to the chokeydar.

The Chief Justice, intimated to the Jury, that the prisoner at the bar is charged with burglariously entering the prosecutor's house which is a capital offence. You must first satisfy yourself that it was entered barglariously; and, that the prisoner was the person who did it; 3rdly, that he did at night! and 4thly, that he stole the goods herein produced. After this the Judge recapitulated the evidence taken in this case, after which he said, that even if a thief cannot effect the theft, but has been detected in taking an article or removing it, it is a theft, for the intention is the same. If you believe the prosecutor and his witnesses, said he, the prisoner is guilty; but if you have any doubt thereon, or believe the prisoner's defence, he is then not guilty.

The Jury, after a short consultation, without retiring from the bench, found the prisoner guilty.

This prisoner was then tried on the 2nd indictment on the 13th January, for breaking into the house of Mungloo and stealing goods to the value of 64 rupees.

Prisoner pleads not guilty.

Mungloo Kidputgar, sworn.—I live at Short's Bazar in Calcutta. My house is a straw-hut of one room and has two doors. There are no windows to it. I have a wife and a sister-in-law. I recollect the 13th of January; I was then in the service of Mr. Wilson of Cossitolla. I returned about 1 o'clock to my home, and there saw some goods (which he describes) lying out side my doors in the compound, and saw a part of my door cut, but the lock was on the door. The goods were in a bundle, they are now in the hands of the Police authorities.

Mootyolla Thanadar sworn.—I got his bundle from the hands of a woman named Pootee, who was accompanied by the prosecutor. Here the bundle was produced and the prosecutor recognised the goods as his.

Examination of prosecutor continued. I left these articles at my house when I went out.

Prisoner declined questioning the prosecutor.

Pootee Raur, sworn.—I know the prosecutor; he is my brother-in-law. I live at the same house. It was on that day that the 20th day of my mother's death occurred, and there was a funeral sacrifice. I was cooking. I was out of wood and I went to his house to get some wood from the hut where I was cooking, and I observed that the tattees of the prosecutor's house had been cut, and a person was with a light in his hand, searching the hut, who when he observed me seemed to avoid me. My sister and I after locking up both the doors, left the hut where the theft occurred, in the evening, to go to another hut to cook. It was about gunfire that I went to get the wood. On seeing the person hiding in the house, I said who are you. He returned no reply. On this, I called out "thieves;" he then ran out and throttled me, and I groaned. After this he twisted my fingers, and got loose from my hold, and began to run away. I laid hold of the bundle in his shoulder; he slipped his neck from under it, and ran away. I recognise the person to be the prisoner at the bar. I knew him before, he is not a stranger to me. I and my sister after then waited till about 1 o'clock when Mungloo returned, and we informed him of the theft. This is all I know.

The prisoner declined to question this witness, and denied all knowledge of the offence.

The judge after stating that this was an offence similar to the last, detailed the evidence adduced, and that the verdict of the Jury depended on the degree of credibility they gave to the prosecutor and his evidence. If they believed them, then the prisoner is guilty; but if not he is innocent of this charge.

The jury, after a short consultation, and without retiring from the bench, pronounced the prisoner Guilty.

Mr. A. St. L. McMahon, sworn. I know the prisoner at the bar. He has been, I think, three or four times before found guilty and sentenced to the House of Correction.

Mr. Macan swore the same.

The Judge thus addressed the prisoner: You have been found guilty of two capital felonies, both committed on the same night, and it is further evident from the evidence before me, that you are a notorious offender. It is not my intention to sentence you capitally, but I cannot pass a less sentence against you than that of transportation. In consequence of your bad character, I must however, make that banishment, longer than I would to another offender; you are, therefore, sentenced to the S. E. coast of Martaban for the term of 14 years.

After this prisoner had been sentenced, the Judge told the jury that as it would probably be some time before he would bring another case before them, they were at liberty to retire for a short time, and they did so.—India Gazette, February 22.

FEBRUARY 20, 1837.

Before Sir E. Ryan, Knt., Chief Judge.

Nilcomel Mittur, charged with larceny and theft, for stealing from a box of J. Treeby, No. 5, Loudon Buildings, the sum of Co.'s rupees 7.

James Treeby, sworn. I know the prisoner at the bar. I arrived in Calcutta last November I was never here before. The best knowledge I had of prisoner, was that he came on board of the ship Diana, on which I came down the river, to get the Captain's business. Capt. Hawkins refused. He had frequently applied to me to do my business; but I refused. On the 29th of January, I told him to get me a tailor next Monday, which he brought about 10 o'clock, on the 30th, while I was with Mr. Jameson. I told him to go to another room, and I would be with him immediately. I went to the room, and got out some cloth. There were 118 rs. in the box.

The Judge declined hearing the transactions of that day, not being connected with the charge.

On Thursday the 12th February, the man came by appointment again, accompanied by another native, whom I do not know. I told him to go to the bed-room again. I had Mr. Jameson, by appointment with me. After the prisoner went into the room, I went round to another door, and peeped through it. Both doors were shut. I looked through the hole, and I saw the prisoner go to the box, stoop and unlock it with the key, which was there. He opened it with his right hand, took out some money with the left, and was about to put his hand in again, when I rushed on him and caught him. When I caught him, there was money in one hand and the other thrust into the box to take out more. I then halloo'd to Mr. Jameson, "Jameson, Jameson, come here, I have caught the thief. There was, on Mr. Jameson counting the money twice, by my desire, found on him 7 rs., and he then counted the money in the box, and found 13 rs. I had previously informed Mr. Jameson, that I had put 20 rs. that morning into the box and 6 pice. I did put 20 rs. and 6 pice in the box. That the man might not suspect a lure, the surplus money I took out. I left the key in the box, but locked the box. There was nothing further said; the prisoner got terrified. I then desired Mr. Jameson to get a police constable. This he refused to do, and I then went, leaving the prisoner and Mr. Jameson at my house, got a constable, and made the prisoner over to him. The police constable took the money from his hands.

Cross-questioned by Mr. Leith, prisoner's counsel.—I gave my deposition at the police. I did not know prisoner long before. All the knowledge I had of him, was that he wished to be employed as a sircar. I never would employ him because the Captain of the ship in which I came out, cautioned me against him. I once wanted to buy some canvass, and the prisoner wanted to get it for me. I never borrowed money from him. I declined the offer to purchase the canvass, and said, that I would get 3 rs. from my home to pay for it; he then gave me unsolicited 3 rs. to purchase the cloth, and I returned it next morning. I call not this borrowing, as I did not ask the loan of him. I had frequently seen him in the streets. I do not recollect of any transactions from the time he lent the 3 rs. to the time he brought the tailor. I never borrowed any other money from him. Mr. Jameson did not look through the door. I had previously thrust a segar through the hole, to see if it was clear and I could see through it. No one saw me put the money into the box. I put the money there because after the prisoner had been in that room on Monday, and on Wednesday, on opening the box I missed 40 rupees. This roused my suspicion, and therefore I placed the 20 rupees in the box. No one saw me put the money there. Mr. Jameson was in the house during all the time the prisoner was there: on my return I likewise found the prisoner there on the landing place, and made him over to the constable. I never consented to hush up this affair if they gave me 40 rupees. The father and other relatives of the prisoner came to me and solicited me to withdraw the case, and I, after consulting Mr. Anley, refused their request.

Peter Jameson, sworn.—I am the chief officer of the Diana, on which vessel the prosecutor came out. I used to visit him at his house in Loudon Buildings, and I saw Nilcomul Witter there. I went to the prosecutor's on the 2d of February by invitation at about 9 o'clock; and about a quarter of an hour after, Mr. Treeby hearing a noise of some one coming, said hush, hush, go and look in another room. I saw him put the prisoner into another room, and I saw Mr. Treeby peep through a hole at a door looking into the room where the prisoner was. A short time after Mr. Treeby called out from that room, Jameson, Jameson, I have caught a thief. Hearing this I went in and saw him holding the prisoner's hands. There was some money in the prisoner's hand. Mr. Treeby, on my first coming into his house on the 2d, told me that there were 20 rupees in the box in that room, and on confining the money again, I found 7 rupees in the prisoner's hand and 13 in the box. Mr. Treeby desired me to call a constable. I refused, as I did not see the prisoner take the money out of the box. After this Mr. Treeby locked up the prisoner in a room and went to get a constable, and I went home. I shifted, and about 5 minutes after I returned and saw the prisoner at large in the streets. I asked him where he was when he was caught by Mr. Treeby. He said at the opposite end of the room: and he further said that the money was his, and he refused to give it up. After this Mr. Treeby came with a constable and gave the prisoner into his charge. I saw no more of the prisoner till I saw him at the police.

Cross-questioned by Mr. Leith.—The prisoner was conversing with me in the room where he took the money, when Mr. Treeby gave him over to the constable. Mr. Treeby, when the prisoner first came on the morning of the 2d, shoved him in there. I have subsequently seen the hole. It is the size of a large gimblet hole. I was examined at the police. Mr. Treeby said that the hole was an inch in diameter, but it was not. It is a bed step box. It is not a box in which I would keep money. The box was shut, but not locked. Immediately after the prisoner went to this room, the prosecutor peeped through this hole, and about a minute after he called out to me. When I went in, I saw the prosecutor and prisoner about 3 or 4 feet from the box. It is an open room, and people may pass through it. I did not see the 20 rupees in the box. Previous to this Mr. Treeby wanted him to give up the 7 rupees, and the prisoner refused, saying no, it was his own. The rupees were not marked, and I could not tell them from any other rupees. I know not Mr. Treeby's means: he came out as a steerage passenger, and after a few days the Captain allowed him to take his meals in the cuddy. I cannot say if the hole was or was not large enough for the prosecutor to see through it. The prisoner is a sircar. I saw him once or twice before at Mr. Treeby's. He appeared very infirmate with him, and was introduced to me by Mr. Treeby, as a sircar. I cannot tell whether his or Mr. Treeby's means are the best.

John Stevens, Constable of the Police.—I went with Mr. Treeby, by the order of Mr. McCann, to bring the prisoner at the bar. I saw him at the threshold of the room, in which the theft was committed. Mr. Treeby said, this is the man that has robbed me, take him into custody. The prisoner said, on being questioned, that he had 7 rupees by him, and said it was his money, and made it over to me. I had no conversation with him at Mr. Treeby's; but at the police, he said that the 7 rupees were a balance of 8 rupees he had brought out with him, previous to going to Mr. Treeby's in the morning. He spoke very good English. He said that the money was his own, and denied the stealing of it.

The prisoner on being asked, said, I, on the 26th of November, lent the prosecutor 3 rupees. This he returned on the 29th, and required of me to lend him on a bond 200 rupees, to furnish a house. I said, I would do so next day, and he called at my office, opposite Rustonjee's house, and whilst I was there counting out the money, my father called and told me not to lend it without the security of Messrs. Bates and Elliott. On this I locked up the money, and told the prosecutor, that I would go and enquire of Messrs. Bates and Elliott on the subject. Hearing this, the prosecutor got enraged, tore up the note, and said he would be revenged on me, as I had disgraced him. After this he called on me 3 or 4 times, and not finding me, he left word with my brother, to send me to him, as he had business for me. I therefore waited on him on the 29th, and he desired me to get him a tailor and a running sircar, and said that he would recommend me to many ship Captains, friends of his. On the 31st I took the tailor who is now in this Court. The prosecutor gave the tailor, some clothes to sew on the 1st of February. I again, by his desire, waited on the prosecutor, who was all day employed in correcting circulars; and on the 2d, I again in company of Joy Kisson sircar, and my uncle, went to the prosecutor. On my quitting my house, my servant, in the presence of Ram Kisto Jagut Paddea, who came to get some medicines from my house, gave my watch and 8 rupees to me. I, on arriving at Mr. Treeby's, gave my uncle Govind 1 rupee to buy a pair of shoes for my sister. My uncle wanted more money from me, but I said that I would require cash to pay a Baboo 10 rupees that day. After I went to Mr. Treeby, he pushed me into the room, and in shoving me my waistband got loose, and I took the money from waist, fastened the cloth to my waist, and was counting the money to see if it was all right, when Mr. Treeby rushed into the room and called me a thief, and taxed me with stealing the 7 rupees, but I supposed that he was joking with me. After this Mr. Treeby went out and Mr. Jameson after him, and I locked up the door of Mr. Treeby's shop and was pacing the streets. Had I been a thief, I might have run away. Shortly after Mr. Jameson returned and desired me to open the door, and whilst I was conversing with Mr. Jameson, Mr. Treeby came with a constable, and said that I was the thief, and had me taken into custody.

Ramdhon Mittur, the prisoner's father, was his first witness.—He said:—I have seen the prosecutor before: I have seen him before at my son's office. The first time I saw him there, was on the 26th of November last, when he borrowed 3 rupees from my son, which he returned in 2 or 3 days. I saw him again another day—the day I do not remember. On that occasion, my son had counted 200 rupees to lend to the prosecutor, on Mr. Treeby giving a promissory note for it. I told my son not to lend cash without the security of Bates, Elliott and Co. I selected Elliott and Bates, because, Mr. Treeby came in a ship of Bates, Elliott and Co's. I knew they were formerly acquainted. Hearing this my son, who had counted the money out in heaps of 20 rupees each, put the money up and refused the loan, and the prosecutor consequently got enraged and tore up the promissory note he had written. There were 2 other sircars present who came there in hopes of getting situations: their names were Sreecally Ghose and Bidabuff Pal. There were some others, but I know not their names. Mr. Treeby then grumbled and said, I shall see you by and by. I know English a little. The meaning conveys a threat, though I suppose he meant that he would see him in a few days.

Jaykisson Mullick.—I am a writer. I have seen Mr. Treeby before. On the 1st of February, the prisoner at the bar took me to Mr. Treeby's. I saw Mr. Treeby there, and Mr. Treeby gave me some circulars to fill up the omission. Mr. Treeby gave them to me to alter. The prisoner introduced me to Mr. Treeby. I know not on what terms the prisoner and Mr. Treeby were. Prisoner never did any business for Mr. Treeby before. I live near the prisoner's house and I know him. Prisoner and Govindoss his uncle, came together; the prisoner had that day money by him. I know it, because when the prisoner gave Govindoss one rupee to buy a pair of shoes, Govindoss asked him to give him some money, and the prisoner opened his waist, took out 7 rupees, and said this is all I have, I cannot spare any out of it. This was before he went into Mr. Treeby's, when we landed from the boat at Colvin's Ghaut. I saw the prisoner give 7 pice. The rupees I first saw when he refused Govindoss. No Brahmins accompanied us, but one asked charity at Colvin's Ghaut. I am a Kaste by caste. I did not go to the prisoner's house on the 2nd, but met him in the streets on the day the prisoner was arrested. On that day Mr. Treeby put the prisoner in a room. I sat below on the stairs when the prosecutor came down and told me to go away.

J. Elliott, sworn.—I am a partner in the firm of Bates and Elliott. I know the prisoner at the bar: he has been employed as a ship's sircar in our house, and in managing small investments. He was about one year in our employ, and I always found him an honest, straight-forward man. He never required advances from us, but always made them himself. The Diana was this voyage consigned to our house and so was the Albatross and the Hygie. I recommended the prisoner to the Captains of all these vessels, and they were all well satisfied with his mode of conducting business. The prisoner's office is opposite Mr. Rustomjee's. I know

Mr. Treeby and have seen him since his arrival here, and we have dealings with him. The prisoner never spoke to me nor our firm regarding any loan to the prosecutor. The dealings we had with Mr. Treeby were in miniature paintings. Captain Hawkins, of the Diana, introduced Mr. Treeby to me.

Jaykisson Mullick re-called.—Govindoss was with the prisoner and I, and no one else, on the 2nd. I do not know Juggernathdoss.

Govindoss sworn.—I am uncle to the prisoner. I live with him and collect his rents. On the 2d of February, 1837, the prisoner, I, and the last witness, came from our house, took a boat at Kidderpoor Ghaut, and landed at Colvin's Ghaut. The prisoner, previous to his leaving the house, received in my presence from his servant 8 rupees and 10 pice. 7 pice the prisoner paid the boatman at Colvin's Ghaut, and gave me one rupee to buy a pair of shoes, and gave me the key of his office and told me to go and open it. I did not see the prisoner again, but heard that he was taken up to the Police. Juggernathdoss is the mangy of the boat in which we came. The first time we saw him was at the Ghaut. I never saw any transactions betwixt Mr. Treeby and the prisoner.

Mr. Treeby re-called.—I have been once at the outside of the prisoner's office. I went to order a mosquito net for Mr. Jameson. The prisoner lent me the 3 rupees in a street near a druggist's shop. I never asked him to lend me 200 rupees: it is false. I never drew up a promissory note for any such loan. I never had any dispute with him about the loan of any money. The prisoner at the Court said, that the money was his own. The statement of the loan of the 200 rupees is, I swear, false, and invented by the prisoner and his relatives.

Chief Justice.—The charge against the prisoner is of a larceny. If you believe prosecutor's evidence, even if the prisoner removed the money, it is larceny. There are many cases thus established. In one, a man took a bag and removed it to another place, and it established the crime. (Two other cases were here quoted.) If the prisoner's story is true, there is not a more malicious conspiracy invented to ruin an innocent man. No two stories can be more contradictory than those of the prosecutor and the prisoner. Here the Judge detailed to the Jury, the evidence taken in this case. In so doing he pointed out several minor discrepancies in the depositions taken, commenting on the nature of them. The Judge remarked, that it was strange that the two sircars were not brought forward to prove the circumstance of the required loan of the 200 rupees, which was positively denied by the prosecutor; or the words used by the prosecutor on this loan being refused by the prisoner, as stated by witnesses—viz., I will see you. This, the Judge said, is a common phrase for natives to use, and one not likely to be used by a person so lately arrived here. He likewise remarked, that Mr. Elliott's evidence, besides giving the prisoner a good character, shewed that he was a man worth some money, and therefore he could not have been driven by distress to commit the act. These are all the comments that the Judge deemed necessary to make on this case, with this exception, that the whole case rests on the sole evidence of the prisoner, except what the prisoner's own counsel extracted; viz., that Mr. Treeby had mentioned to Mr. Jameson that 20 rupees were in the box, and after the prisoner was taxed with the theft, the money found in his hand and in the box, amounted to exactly 20 Rs. Thus he left the case in the hands of the jury, saying, that if they believed Mr. Treeby's statement was false, he had committed an act for which he ought to stand where the prisoner was. He concluded by saying, that if they had any doubts on their minds, to give the prisoner at the bar the benefit of it.

The Jury retired for upwards of an hour deliberation, and on their return, gave their verdict of guilty against the prisoner.

The Judge then told the prisoner, that he had been found guilty of the crime of larceny. After a full very deliberate investigation of his case, the jury had found him guilty of stealing Co.'s rupees 7, the property of Mr. Treeby; and now that the jury was satisfied that he had endeavoured to shelter himself under perjured witnesses, it aggravated his offence: had they believed his statement, they must have disbelieved Mr. Treeby. The judge said that he did not intend to pass the heaviest sentence the law allowed. The prisoner hitherto moved in good society, and it was degradation enough to him to stand in court in the manner he did, before so many natives of respectability who were present to learn the result of this trial. The judge said that he would not sentence him to labour in the House of Correction; but yet his offence was serious, and he must not punish him too leniently neither. He then sentenced the prisoner to 2 years imprisonment in the Common Jail of Calcutta.

The Court was much crowded by many respectable natives during the trial of this case.—Ind. Gaz. Feb. 24.

Edward Arnold Swaine, was placed at the bar. The indictment stated, that in the Sessions the 3rd of Oyer and Terminer of 13th of July 1836, Swaine was with two others tried and found guilty of breaking into the shop of Phillip de Rozario, on the 18th April, 1830, and transported and having been found on the 18th of February instant, contrary to the laws, within the limits of this charter.

The prisoner said I plead guilty; but I beg to observe that I was taken up by the whaler to the Sea Shells, and there I told Mr. Harrison the Governor, that I was a person under sentence of transportation to Prince of Wales's Island; that I had been way laid and taken up by the crew of the whaler Harpooner before my time, and begged to be sent back to Penang. Mr. Harrison the Governor sent me to the Mauritius, and from thence I worked my way here, in order to get back to the place of my transportation. It would be in vain for me to deny that I am Edward Arnold Swaine, as many here can identify me. I plead guilty (though warned by the Judge that it is a capital offence,) and I leave my case to the mercy of the Judge and Jury.

The Judge.—You have pleaded guilty to the charge against you. Have you any thing to say that why sentence of death should not be passed against you?

The prisoner again pleaded guilty, and said that he left his case to the mercy of the Judge and Jury.

The Judge then said, that it is provided by the 9th Act of George the 4th, Clause 74th, Section 31st, that if any person be found within the limits of the charter having escaped from transportation and having returned before his time has expired, he is liable to be sentenced capitally: nevertheless it being provided that the King has his full prerogative reserved in him to pardon our commute this sentence, as he may deem fit. After reading this, the judge again said now what have you to plead? If you have any thing to plead, plead now and say why should not the sentence of death be passed against you. The prisoner again pleaded guilty, and said that he treated his case to the mercy of the judge and jury.

The Judge.—It is not my intention to pass the capital sentence against you, but I cannot pass less than transportation. You with two persons named Briton and Pote, were transported for fourteen years, because you were notorious for having gone in a gang for some nights committing gang-robberies. The former punishment was light considering the offence, and even if you had pleaded not guilty, there were proofs sufficient to have established your guilt. The proofs are very simple, and there are evidences enough on the records of this Court, and witnesses produced, to have substantiated your identity and his pleading guilty has shown, he has done right; for, if you had pleaded falsely, you would only have aggravated his guilt. The story, that you was kidnapped, waylaid, and forcibly taken by the crew of the Harpooner, is a made-up story, for, if you had not been willing to go, and had given any intimation to the Police authorities at Penang they would have stopped the vessel. It is, therefore, my opinion, that your escape was a voluntary act of your own, and this escape you effected even before half the term of your transportation was over, as it appears by the evidence recorded here from the Government of Penang. Thus I cannot sentence you to a lesser punishment than the remaining unexpired term of your sentence. Therefore, the sentence of this Court is, that you be transported for the term of seven years to the South-East Coast of Martaban.

After this sentence had been passed, the prisoner thanked the Judge and retired.

Issurehunder Day, charged with having on the 1st November, 1836, forged and counterfeited a receipt for 200 Rs., with intent to defraud G. C. Arbuthnot and others, by the same paper, to wit, A. R. Jackson, T. Dickens, and R. H. Cockerell, &c.

Prisoner pleads not guilty.

Boobun Mohon Dutt.—I am a sircar in the employ of Gillanders, Arbuthnot and Co., Merchants and Agents, of Calcutta. Mr. Arbuthnot is gone to Europe. Looks at a paper and says, I saw this before at the police; it is my employer's paper, and purports to be a draft of Dr. R. Jackson. The first time I saw it, it was at my employer's office at Permit Ghaut. This was brought to me by one Nilmony Doss on the 1st November. As it is usual for drafts, the payment of which has been ordered by my master, to come to me for payment, I paid the amount in notes and in cash, to the amount of Co.'s Rs. 200, to Nilmony Doss. The note was a Union Bank note, No. 2,532, for 100 Sa. Rs., 8 notes of 10 rs., each, of other banks, which being less than 50 Rs., in value are not entered, and the balance 8 Co.'s Rs. were paid in silver. These together make 200, viz. 180 Sa. Rs. make 192 Co.'s Rs. and 8 in silver complete the 200 Co.'s Rs. When I made this payment Madub Chander Seal was by me. I know not English; but Madub knows and reads it. Mr. Arbuthnot's order is right. I know it because when it was produced before me by Mr. Robinson at the Police, I marked it by the signature of Nilmony Doss on it, who signed his name to the receipt before me. I know not English and Madub Chander Seal made an English entry in the books, of the payment of cash before me. I knew Nilmony Doss before. Looks round and says I cannot recognize Nilmony Doss again. Does not recollect ever seeing the prisoner at the bar. Never saw Nilmony Doss before or after this transaction. The prisoner at the bar is a stranger to me. I enquired of Madub Seal the purport of this paper and of Mr. Arbuthnot's order of payment, previous to paying it.

Questioned by the Prisoner's Counsel, Mr. C. R. Prinsap.—I know the order again by the receipt on the paper signed Nilmony; and I only recollect the particulars of the notes and cash by the book which is kept by Madub Chunder Seal. I paid the money and Madub Chunder Seal made the entry before me.

Madub Chunder Seal, sworn.—I am a sircar of Messrs. Arbuthnot and Co. I used to sit in the office near the last named witness. Looks at a paper on which Mr. Arbuthnot wrote pay. I then saw this paper. I can read and write English. The order to pay is in the hand writing of G. C. Arbuthnot: this is his name. As far as I know, Mr. Arbuthnot wrote pay on it, and I desired Bhoobun Mohon, the last witness, to pay it, and he did so. It was put into my hand by the man who granted the receipt and called himself Nilmony Doss. I never saw the man before since. Looks about the court. I do not recollect the man and therefore I cannot identify him here, even if I were to see him. He took a sit by Bhoobun Mohon Dutt, in my presence, and wrote the receipt for the cash, and I made the entry at the time. Bhoobun Mohon Dutt paid the money, still I can by referring to the book specify in what manner the cash was paid. Looks at the book and says there was one Union Bank Note, No. 2532, for Sa. Rs. 100, 8 more of different Banks of 10 Rs. each, and 8 Co's Rs. in cash. I never knew anything of the prisoner. The first time I saw him, was at the Police Office. Mr. Arbuthnot is gone to Europe.

Cross-examined by prisoner's Counsel.—Mr. Arbuthnot went to Europe only last Saturday. Many payments are made in the day through me. I keep the notes in a box and make the entries of the payments.

Dr. A. R. Jackson, sworn.—I am a Surgeon in the H. E. I. Company's Medical Service. I acted for some time as Secretary to the new Fever Hospital. From the 1st of May 1835 to 1st of Dec. 1836, I did not collect the subscriptions with one or two exceptions; but I signed the receipts of the subscriptions during the time I was Secretary to the institution. All the receipts for the subscriptions were signed by me. I know the prisoner at the bar; he was temporarily employed as a copyist by my assistant Mr. Morris in the new Fever Hospital Institution, in the room of another, during the sickness of the permanent man. He was under Mr. Morris, and recommended to me by him. Subscription books for aid to this Institution were circulated in Calcutta and its neighbourhood. I have not the books by me, but I believe one is in court. Looks at a book and says this is one which is marked as being sent to Messrs. Gillanders and Co. The writing of Gillanders, Arbuthnot and Co. is in the hand writing of Mr. Arbuthnot, according to my knowledge of his hand writing. I cannot swear to the figures 200 as I did not see him write them. This identical book was not, to the best of my recollection, brought to me; from time to time the book was in the custody of Mr. Morris. I left the details of this duty completely to him. I had no conversation with the prisoner whilst employed under Mr. Morris. I should suppose that he had access to the subscription books. Looks at a receipt and says, no part of it is my hand-writing. Neither Mr. Morris nor any other person was authorised to sign these receipts for me. I cannot swear whose hand-writing it is, though I can recognize the hand-writing to assimilate to several writings in the office. I do not know when prisoner entered Mr. Morris's service and when he quitted it. There were similar books of subscription sent to the other agency houses. The other books are at the Union Bank.

Cross examined by prisoner's Counsel.—I might have seen the prisoner before 10 or 12 times in passing the office. It was an institution originated by private individuals; but I would now deem it a public institution. It is not supported by the government.

J. Morris, sworn.—I am an assistant to Dr. Jackson in the Fever Hospital institution, and have been so since the 4th of June 1836. I circulated subscription books to the different agency houses. Looks at a book and says I have seen this book before; it is one of the books I signed before; there is my hand-writing in it. This book was sent to Messrs. Gillanders, Arbuthnot and Co. I do not know their hand-writing. It was there from the 24th of June to the 1st of November, for the purpose of obtaining their aid in obtaining subscribers to this fund. When I received the book I saw this mark on it (points to a mark in the book). Similar subscription books were sent to the other agency houses. The receipts are made out by me, signed by Dr. Jackson, and the money collected by the Union Bank. Arbuthnot and Co.'s subscription, to the best of my knowledge, is not paid. On the true receipt being sent to them they presented a forged receipt and said they had paid it. I was not then present. The sircars of the Union Bank say they have not received it. The prisoner was on the 20th of Aug. 1836, engaged as a substitute for another man up to the 11th of this month. In September he, on the man for whom he was employed returning unemployed, was for 3 or 4 days, employed in filling up the receipts of the subscriptions and the circulars. I know his hand-writing, and have seen him write. The papers were under his charge and he had access to them as a sircar of the New Fever Hospital Institution. The prisoner at the bar had likewise charge of the book I hold in my hand. The receipts were, with the exception of the one or two, one to the Governor-General and few others, which would not admit of printed forms, all printed receipts. On a person subscribing, a list was formed; this man from this list filled up the printed bank receipts. I examined them, put my initials to them, and then Dr. Jackson signed them, and they were sent to the Union Bank, which collected the money for those receipts from the subscribers. I did give instructions for a receipt for Arbuthnot and Co. to the prisoner at the bar in English. He understands English very well. [The prisoner himself admitted this.] I gave him directions to make out the receipts, both for the donations and the subscriptions, from the lists. I have not those lists here. I sent the receipt for Arbuthnot and Co.'s subscription to the Union Bank, as I do others, with a letter. I have a receipt for it. The receipt for Gillanders and Co.'s subscription is not here. I believe it is at the Union Bank. Looks at a receipt and says this is not the receipt I sent to the Union Bank. I am most certain of it. It is not Dr. Jackson's signature. I have seen about 1,000 signatures of his; he has repeatedly signed his name before me on the back of the receipt. The receipt, I believe to be in the hand writing of the prisoner at the bar, but I cannot say in whose hand writing the signature is. I cannot read Bengally. I never authorised the prisoner to write the receipt. There are my initials in pencil on it. I made them on the day the sircar of Gillanders, Arbuthnot and Co. showed it to me at the office of Messrs. Gillanders, Arbuthnot and Co. The judge said this is all he had to ask him at present, but he would, perhaps call him again.

J. Jackson sworn.—I am a partner in the firm of Gillanders, Arbuthnot and Co. I know Mr. Arbuthnot's signature. Looks at a paper and says, that is his writing. The word pay, and the signature below of G. C. Arbuthnot and Co., is his. Looks at a book and says, that the donation of Gillanders Arbuthnot and Co. is Messrs. Arbuthnot and Co. I have never seen this book before, nor know when the subscription was made; but I know that it was made. I do not know when the book came or when it was returned, or when the donation was paid; but I know it was paid. I know this receipt being entered as passed. There was another receipt for this donation came to me from a collecting sircar to the institution for payment, but recollecting that we had already paid once, I mentioned the circumstance and the money was not paid.

The prisoner's counsel declined questioning this witness.

Hurrischunder Mittur, sworn.—I am employed in the 2 Sub-Committee department in the Fever Hospital Committee.—Mr. Morris is the Sub-Secretary. I was never under Mr. Morris directly, but under 2 or three members of the Committee. I have known the prisoner ever since the 29th of Sept. last, but was not in the same department with him. I knew him by seeing him employed in the office of the institution. I was employed in August, but my duty lay chiefly at the Bank of Bengal; but from the 29th September I saw him almost daily. I used to see him write. Our desks in the office were opposite. I know his hand writing (Looks at a paper.) I can read and write English. This looks like the writing of Isserchunder, the prisoner at the bar. I believe it to be his hand writing, but I cannot swear positively it is his; because I did not see him write. The writing on this receipt I believe to be Isserchunder Day's signature. I cannot say whose hand writing it is. I have seen but very few receipts signed by Dr. Jackson, and I am not sufficiently acquainted with his signature to identify it in court. I am still employed in the New Fever Hospital Institution's Office. I have seen the prisoner's Bengally writing and I know it. The writing on this receipt in Bengally does not appear to me to be like his. I do not believe it to be his.

The prisoner's counsel declined questioning this witness.

Govind Chunder Bonnerjee, sworn.—I am a Mohorir for Bengally receipts at the Union Bank, and was so in Dec. last. I recollect the 24th Dec. last. I have my memorandum book here (Produces a book and says, this book is kept by me, and the entries are made by me at the time the cash is paid.) On the 24th of Dec., I gave change for a Union Bank Note, No. 2,532 of 100 Ca's Rs. I gave, on a receipt being given to me, a memorandum to the person who gave me the receipt, this person took the memorandum to the cashier and he paid the money. The memorandum was a check. The receipt is in this book. It is drawn up by me and signed by the party who changed the note. The signature is Isserchunder Day, inhabitant of Jaun Bazar. The writing is that of Isserchunder Sircar, on behalf of Captain Clift, a Union Bank Note, No. 2,532 for 100 Sa. Rs. Defendant changed it for Sa. Rs. 100 cash, 24th Dec. 1836. Signed Isserchunder Day.

Mr. Prinsep objected to this book being produced as evidence: he said that there ought to be an authenticated translation of it filed in as evidence.

The Chief Judge overruled this objection: he said that the court could not prevent some time Bengally books being brought forward as evidence in criminal cases; but if Mr. Prinsep required an English translation of it, Mr. S. Smith, the Interpreter to the court, would translate it now in Court.

Mr. Prinsep wishing for a translation of it, Mr. S. Smith thereon translated the paper for his satisfaction in the court, and the translation was filed on the records of this case, as a documentary evidence on behalf of the prosecutor. Witness looks round and says, I do not recognize the person here now. I never saw that person ever before or after. I recollect seeing the prisoner at the bar at the police. I never recollect seeing him before or after that time.

Cross-Examined by prisoner's counsel.—The circulation of the Union Bank is great—about 3 or 4 lakhs of Rs. This note has often been to and from the Bank since it was made.

Hurrischunder recalled. Looks at the signature in the Union Bank book and says, with the exception of the word Sree, I believe the signature of the name Isserchunder Day, to be in the prisoner's hand writing, but I cannot swear to it, as I have not seen him write it. Prisoner's counsel declined questioning this witness.

Ram Lochun Nundy, sworn.—I am a mohorir at the Union Bank and make entries of the notes that come to be discounted there. I have the book here. It is kept by me. There is amongst the entries, an entry of the 24th Dec. 1834 for 100 Rs., for the exchange of a Union Bank note No. 2,532 for 100 Sa. Rs. I do not see the person who buys the note to be changed annually. The notes are brought to Govind Chunder Bonnerjee before they are brought to me. He gives a memorandum and endorses the note and brings it to me, and I from those make my entries. I do not sit near Govind Chunder. So many persons come every day, that I have not time to look up and observe the person who brings it to me. I have too much to write. The prisoner I know; he was employed by Messrs. S. Smith and Co. printers, in crediting cash to the name of Messrs. S. Smith and Co. I have known him for 3 or 4 years.

Cross-examined by Mr. Prinsep.—I made the entry from the note, but I have not brought the note.

Jonadun Pal, sworn.—I am a cash payer at the Union Bank. I recollect the 24th of Dec. I have brought my books here. Looks at the book and says the writing is in the hand writing of Permanand Shaw: I paid the money and he wrote it in my presence. It is an entry of cash paid to the amount on a check from the cashier for the payment of Rs. 42-10-8. After the cash is paid, the memorandums are entered in a book and compared and then thrown away. I first recollect seeing the prisoner at the Police. I never saw him before or after. I do not recollect ever seeing him at the Union Bank. I said the same at the Police Office.

Cross-examined by Mr. Prinsep.—The Bank collects for the New Fever Hospital. Whether they have collected ever since Jan. last I cannot say; but this I know, that they have collected for that institution several sums of money. Isserchunder Day is a very common name: there are many Hindoos of that name in Calcutta.

Seetaram Samoodah, sworn.—I am employed at the Union Bank, I cannot say any thing of this transaction until I look at my memorandum book. Looks at a book and says, this book is kept by me—it is my hand writing. It is a memorandum of a payment of 6 notes of Sa. Rs. 40 each to one Isserchunder Day for Capt. Clift. It was paid on the writing of Ramlochun Nundy, for the payment in exchange of a note of Sa. Rs. 100, viz. 6 notes of 10 Sa. Rs. each and 40 Sa. Rs. in cash. The memorandum was made by Govindchunder Bonnerjee. I gave the 6 notes that were paid,—the note that was received is not entered in my book.

Prisoner's counsel declined examining this witness.

Sheshchunder Dutt, sworn.—I collect bills for the Union Bank. I collect bills of the New Fever Hospital Institution. I have receipts for some that I collect. I have one bill in the name of Gillanders, Arthurhat and Co. I received it from the Union Bank. (Produces it.) I went to the house of Gillanders, Arthurhat and Co. to collect the cash, but one Buddenath Sen, a witness there, told me that it had already been paid, and refused to pay it. I have never received the amount of Messrs.

Gillanders, Arbuthnot and Co.'s donation. It is about 3 months ago that I took this receipt to them for payment. When I took this paper I took a book with me. The book is at the Union Bank; it is a subscription cash book.

Cross-examined by prisoner's Counsel.—I received this bill about 2 months ago, and it has ever since been at the Bank. I have been at the Bank 5 months. There are many sircars employed in collecting bills, but I only collect for them the bills of the Fever Hospital Committee and none other. The Bank collect all the Fever Hospital's bills.

Mr. Morris recalled. Looks at a bill and says I have seen it before. These are my initials and Mr. G. J. Gordon the presidency Surgeon to the Fever Hospital Institution. He was appointed to that situation on the 20th of Nov. 1836. I have seen Mr. Gordon's signature, and I know it. The body of the note, with the exception of the word their and the date, is in the writing of Iserechunder Day. I do not receive the amount collected.

Cross-examined by the prisoner's Counsel.—All the printed forms are of this kind. They were first received in June. The printed forms were adopted at my suggestion. I have known the Fever Hospital since the 4th of June last; it was established in May 1835. I am sure the body of the note and the filling of the note, are both in the same hand writing and are both written by the prisoner Iserechunder Day. I see no difference in the writing, except that the one writing is written stiff and cramped up, and the other is round and fuller. I do not know whose hand writing is on the back. I have seen it before attached to the bill. I should suppose it is that of Col. Young, the Secretary to the Union Bank.

The prisoner's counsel wished that the 2 writings be shewn to the Jury for their opinion on this subject.

John Jackson recalled. Does not answer.

Sheshchunder Dutt.—I believe the writing on the back is a Bengally sircar's writing. Pronoccomar l'agore says the writing on the back of the printed form is in the hand writing of Col. Young.

The Judge told the prisoner, he had an opportunity to plead his defence; if he had any thing to say, as his counsel could not plead for him or call his witnesses. The two English receipts were here read and then handed over by the desire of the Jurymen to them for their examination.

Prisoner said I was employed on the 25th of August. I do not know when the subscription book was given. On the 24th of Sept. a draft letter was given to me by Mr. Morris to copy. After this the subscription books began to come, and they were kept in an Almirah, and the key was not with me. When Mr. Morris directed me to take out a book or make out a bill, I did so, but always before Mr. Morris. I used to go the office always after Mr. Morris and leave before. Mr. Morris used often to send me out on messages. I know nothing further of this matter. I am perfectly innocent of this charge. One day Mr. G. J. Gordon, the Secretary to the institution, charged me with a forgery, and had me taken up to the police. There at first Mr. Robison desired me to give bail; but when, after a lapse of a day or two I produced two persons to be my bail, Mr. Robison refused to take bail. After this my brother petitioned Mr. Robison not to give me more uneasiness, but hand my case to the Supreme Court, and Mr. Robison, in receiving this petition, complied with it. This is all I know and I am innocent of this charge.

The prisoner said he had no witnesses.

The Chief Justice.—Gentlemen of the Jury, the prisoner at the bar is indicted on a charge of forgery a receipt in the name of Dr. Jackson, the Secretary to the Fever Hospital, with intent to defraud Gillanders, Arbuthnot and Co. There is no proof of the prisoner's having passed the note. It is not requisite that the whole body of a forged document be written by the person charged with the forgery. If it is proved that he wrote a receipt of it, it is sufficient to establish the charge. It will be requisite first for you to know, whether this is a forged document, and then whether the prisoner has forged it. Then the Judge recapitulated minutely the evidence taken in this case, commenting on it and giving his opinion and advice on the whole, and requesting their serious attention to the same. He said, it is evident, if the receipt marked H is the genuine one, than the one marked A, which purports to bear the signature of Dr. Jackson, is a forged document, and it will be for you to consider whether the prisoner at the bar is the person who forged it; and although there is no proof that the prisoner did receive the money, and that he is not identified as being the person who received the money at either Messrs. Gillanders, Arbuthnot and Co.'s or at the Union Bank, yet if you believe that although he might not have written the name of Dr. Jackson, yet he did write the body of the forged receipt, you will find him guilty of the charge laid against him; but if you have the least doubt you will give him the benefit of it.

The Jury after a short consultation, and having deliberately compared the writings of the two receipts and all the other documents filed in this Court, brought in a verdict of not guilty.

The Judge then ordered that the prisoner be discharged, and he was released immediately.

After the discharge of the prisoner, the Judge told the Jury that they were at liberty to retire for a short time to refresh themselves previous to his calling on another case for trial before them, and they retired accordingly.

Sydnath Kidmugar, was charged with stealing various articles to the value of 56 Rs. from the house of Mr. A. Fleming, junior, in Wellesley Street, Colingah, on the 12th of Feb., 1837.

The prisoner pleaded guilty.

The Judge said that stealing in a dwelling house to the value, or above, 56 Rs. is a capital offence; therefore the least sentence, if I can pass of against you is that of transportation. You can consider and say whether you will take your chance of trial for the offence or still plead guilty and have this plea recorded against you.

The prisoner still pleaded guilty, and said that he left his case to the mercy of the Judge and Jury. This plea was then recorded.

The Judge said, Saranath, you have pleaded that you are guilty of this offence charged against you, have you any thing to say why the sentence of death should not be passed on you? You have been detected, with the goods on you, of stealing in the house of Mr. A. Fleming, and you were caught in the house. I cannot pass a less sentence than that of transportation against you; you are therefore sentenced to be transported to the S. E. Coast of Martaban for the term of seven years.

After this sentence had been recorded, the Judge dismissed the Jury for to-day and the court adjourned till 1 o'clock to-morrow morning.

Putta Oberam, was charged with having received, on the 13th of September, 1836, or a draft from the house of Nundaram Mitter, six Bank of Bengal notes, to the amount of Sa. Rs. 5,500, an account of his employer, Eurapha Komar Swamy, the prosecutor in this case, a merchant at Benares; and instead of paying this sum, according to his instructions, to the Gomasta of Sree Kiseen Mull, he had fraudulently embezzled the same, and under a fictitious name of Poorneah Bewah, a Hindoo female, had deposited it at six per cent. per annum for the term of ten years, in the hands of Duckinunder Mookerjee.

The prisoner pleaded not guilty.

Mr. Osborne, opened the pleading for the prosecution. He said, that, the charge against the prisoner at the bar is, that he being employed by a rich merchant and agent at Benares, named Eurapha Komar Swamy, to establish a banking house for him at Calcutta, did, on his employer's account, as his Gomasta, receive, on a draft transmitted to him by his employer, from the house of Nundaram Muntree, in six Bank of Bengal notes, the sum of sicca rupees 5,500; and instead of paying this sum, as directed in his letters of instruction from his employers, to the Gomasta of Sree Kiseen Mull, Banker, who had drafts remitted to him signed by Eurapha Swamy, for 7,500 Sa. Rs. to be accepted and paid by his Gomasta, the prisoner at the bar, the prisoner evaded the payment of them on false pretences, and having under the fictitious name of a Hindoo woman named Poorneah, accompanied by a man named Shurseah, as the agent of Poorneah, deposited these notes for her benefit, and to her credit, for the period of 10 years, at 6 per cent. per annum, into the hands of Duckinunder Mookerjee, banker of Calcutta.

He then related, that the prisoner on his arrival at Calcutta, in August last, had brought several letters of credit from his employers, as recommendations to bankers at Calcutta. He, during the two months after his arrival at Calcutta, put up at the house of one Bissonath But; after this he removed elsewhere.

In September last, the prisoner received from his employers a letter of credit in his favor for Sa. Rs. 5,500 on the house of Nundaram Muntree, with instructions as to its disposal. On the 13th of September he received the money, and after signing the debit in the books of Nundaram Muntree for that amount, placed the money in his own name as a deposit into the hands of the Gomasta of Nundaram Muntree. On the 13th of September, he drew this sum out and decamped from Calcutta. On the 15th of September 1836, Bissonath But, on hearing of the prisoner's abscondment, went to the Bank of Bengal, and had the payments of these notes stopped. A day or two after this, he received information from Mr. Udny, the Secretary to the Bank, that two of these notes were then presented at the Bank to be cashed. On receipt of this intelligence Bissonath But hurried to the Bank, and having got the names of the person who cashed them, he commenced retracing the possession of the notes back from the person who had them cashed at the bank to the person who received them from the prisoner at the bar. The result of this investigation was, that Baboo Duckinunder Mitter had received them as a loan on granting a Bengally bond for them in the name of a Hindoo woman named Poorneah, from the hands of a person calling himself Shurseah, who represented himself to be the agent of this woman, through the agency of the prisoner at the bar, on the 14th of September last, for the period of 10 years at 6 per cent. per annum. Baboo Duckinunder has, it appears, since this loan was effected, hearing the particulars of this case, placed the sum of Sa. Rs. 5,500 in the hands of Messrs. Carr, Tagore and Co., to be restituted to the prosecutor, if, on the result of this case, it should appear that he is the person legally entitled to receive this money.

Bissonath But sworn, examined by Mr. Leith. I am a Brahmin, and have dealings in small cash transactions. I have had several correspondence with Eurapha Komar Swamy, the prosecutor in this case: he is a rich banker, residing at Benares. I have never seen him: I know the prisoner at the bar. He came to my house in Chait last, with letters of recommendation from the prosecutor. He put up at my house for two months. He came because Swamy sent him here to establish a banking house for him at Calcutta, and acted as his agent here. He received at hiset out from Benares from Swamy 50 rupees, clothes and a servant, and his future pay was to be adjusted hereafter. I heard this from the persons who accompanied the prisoner from Benares, and in the letter the prisoner delivered to me these facts were stated. This statement was made at my house in the presence of the prisoner.

The prisoner said, I do not understand the prosecutor's witness perfectly, because I speak the Rawnée dialect; there are persons in the Burra Bazar, who understand that language; but there are none, that can speak it in this Court now.

Mr. J. King, the Jailor, sworn.—I often had occasion to converse with the prisoner. I did so in Hindoostany, and he perfectly understood me.

Bissonath But's examination continued:—The prisoner always spoke to me in Hindoostany, and understands that dialect perfectly well.

An interpreter was here sworn; but the prisoner objected to him. Bissonath But looks at a paper, and says, I have seen this before; it is a letter of credit, and I received it by dawk. (Looks at another paper.) This I likewise received by dawk; it is written by Eurapha Swamy. This paper was enclosed in the former paper. I went with this letter of credit and asked Baboo Rada Kristo, the gomasta of Nundaram Muntree, if he would give the money stated in it. Nundaram Muntree is a banker up the country. These papers were shown by me to the prisoner at the bar; I afterwards went with him on the 12th of September 1836, and got him the money. Rada Kristo Baboo said to me in the prisoner's presence, I do not know this person; but if you will subscribe yourself security for him, and write to Swamy that you have got the money paid to him on Swamy's draft, I will give it to him,—otherwise I will not. I did so, and the prisoner received the money, and left it there to his credit, taking a receipt for the deposit. The money was paid in notes, and there was an entry of the notes made by Rada Kristo at the time. Looks at a paper, and says this is Putta Oberam's receipt for the 5,500 Sa. Rs. granted to Nundaram Muntree in my presence. The rest of the writing below the prisoner's signature is mine. This paper was afterwards transmitted to Swamy. This cash was received by the prisoner to answer the bondies Swamy had drawn here, to the amount of 7,500 Sa. Rs. This transaction was communicated to me both in letters by Swamy, and the prisoner himself said that Swamy had drawn 7,500 rs. from the house of Hursoha. These bondies are almost due, and Hursoha has given an order to Sree Kiseen Mull, to receive this sum from Swamy: how is this amount to be paid? After receiving the 5,500 Rs. the prisoner said, as soon as Sree Kiseen Mull sends a man to receive this money, I will pay it to him. After the prisoner had received the money he came to me daily as usual, till the 15th of September, 1836; on the eve of that day the prisoner ran away. That same day a man of Sree Kiseen Mull's came to me, with an intention to demand the payment of the 5,500 Rs. from the prisoner, and asked me where he resided: to oblige him I sent a man to call the prisoner, to come and pay these drafts on him. I had seen the prisoner that day a little previously; but when I sent for him, he did not come. I then sent a person named Ramjee, with the man who came to demand the 5,500 Rs. from the prisoner, to his house. After this I did not see the prisoner again for 23 days, and then I saw him at the house of Duckenunder Mookerjee. There Hurchunder Sahon said to me, "here is the person you have accused of theft, now settle this affair amongst yourselves." Hearing this accusation, the prisoner said to me, "You call me a thief, I am not a thief, you are the thief," and abused me grossly. I replied, "You have received money on account of Swamy, to pay Sree Kissun Mull, and when the Mull sent for you, instead of paying it to him you ran away; is this not like a thief?" Hearing this, the prisoner talked at random, and abused me, and Duckenunder said, Putta Oberam has deposited this money at interest, at 6 per cent. per annum for 10 years; after the expiration of that period, I will pay it to either the prisoner, or to whosoever it may then belong. Putta Oberam has placed it with me, in the name of Poornesh, a Hindoo female, and I will before that term not pay it unless I choose." The drafts traced to the possession of Duckenunder Mookerjee, were those whose payments I had stopped at the Bengal Bank, having previously obtained their pumbers at the house of Nundaram Muntree, where they were paid to Putta Oberam. I learnt from a letter I received from Mr. Udny, that two of the notes had been presented there for payment, and went to the persons who had presented them, and traced one of them to Conny Lal Tagore, the rest were in Conny Lal Tagore's possession when I called on him. The prisoner was not with me at the time, because he had previously absconded. I conjectured this, because he had removed from his residence, and could not be found. During the conversation I had with the prisoner at Duckenunder Mookerjee's, I desired him to refund the money and save his employer's credit; and on his refusing to comply with this request, I followed him to Meer Buhir's Ghat, and had him arrested there. After the arrest, he was taken before Mr. O'Hanlon, the magistrate who said, that as the draft was to the credit of the prisoner he had a right to dispose of the money as he pleased and released him. After this I had him watched, and he was detected at Haut Khola Ghat, endeavouring to escape to Serampoor. He was on this occasion again taken into custody, and I laid a complaint against him before Mr. Macfarlan the magistrate. The drafts of Swamy have not been paid here; they were returned and paid at Benares. I have had transactions with Swamy for one year and a half. I declined acting as his gomasta here. There are persons here in Calcutta, who have seen Europha Kumar Swamy. (Names 2 persons.) I have not the letter the prisoner brought me from Swamy here; it is at my house. When the prisoner came to me, he said, Swamy has sent me to you, and for what purpose this letter will inform you. He then told me, Swamy intends to establish an agency house here, do you hire me a house; we will live together in it; and look you out for 2 gomastas, and 2 domestics. Hereafter we must buy a house, and I will be the superintendent here of this concern for Swamy, and act by your advice. He was to be a ghomasta and not a partner. What funds has he to become a partner with Swamy? What settlement the prisoner made with Swamy regarding his remuneration as his ghomasta, I do not know; but he must have made some. Prisoner declined questioning this witness.

Ram Bhow, sworn, and examined by Mr. Osborn.—I am servant of Swamy Jaffuda. I came here in Falgoun last. I used to go to Europha Swamy on the Ranny's business at Benares; he is a rich Banker there and a great man in every respect. The prisoner used to attend his office there, in expectation of being employed. I have seen the prisoner in Calcutta. Swamy told me in the prisoner's presence, of his intention to send him to Calcutta, in order to establish an agency house at Calcutta for him, and he added that Putta Oberam would put up at Bissonath But's house. The prisoner left Benares by water on the 7th of Vangs last year, and left it by land, on the 11th of that month, for Calcutta. The prisoner used to sleep at my house at Calcutta, and took his meals at Bissonath But's for 1 month; afterwards he took them for 4 months at my house. He left my house on the 15th of Sept. 1836. On that day, when I was going to Bissonath But's, the prisoner said that he would accompany me. From Bissonath's we went together to an agent, where the prisoner received 6 notes to the amount of Sa. Rs. 5,500, and as I had never seen any notes in my life, he said look, these are notes; their value is 5,500 Sa. Rs. He then put them into his waistband and told me, now you may go to the Butgie's and I will go home. I went to Bhutgie's and found that he was asleep. When he awoke he sent a person with me, to call Putta Oberam, and I returned home with that person, and informed the prisoner there of this message.

The prisoner replied to the message, I will go by and by with Ram Bhow, and shortly afterwards he said that he was going towards the river side to take an airing. About an hour after his departure a servant of Butgie's came with a Banker's servant to demand the 5,500 rs. from the prisoner. I sent a person to search for him and call him. Shortly after this, the prisoner returned, and looked at the drafts for payment on him, and told the person who brought them, these orders are for 7,500 Sa. rs. and I have received but 5,500 rs. to meet them; but never mind, Swamy is a respectable man, and will soon pay the balance; and added, as it is now late in the evening, you can go home, and to-morrow I will settle these payments with you at the Butgie's. I decline now, as I am a new hand, and ignorant of the forms of business, otherwise I would pay you now. After this I went out to a poojah in the neighbourhood, and the prisoner staid at home. On my return I found the outer-door of the house locked, and the key missing. This induced me to enquire where the prisoner was. The proprietor of the house replied, "perhaps at Butgie's." I then went to Butgie's, but he was not there. I then returned home, slept at my landlord's house, and the next morning, on opening the house I lived in, I found that the prisoner had decamped with his traps; and I did not after this see him for twenty-five days, and then I saw him at the house of Duckenunder Mookerjee.

The prisoner declined questioning this witness.

Radhakissen, gomasta of Nundaram Muntree, merchant, Burra-Bazar, sworn.—I know the prisoner and Bissonath But; I saw them together on the 12th of September at my Banking-house. They brought a letter of credit to me. (Looks at a letter and identifies it.) They asked me for the money, and I replied, Putta Oberam is a stranger to me; but if I can get a guarantee for him I will pay the draft. Bissonath But said, I will be his guarantee; I then debited in my books Swamy 5,500 sicca rupees, and credited the prisoner at his request that sum,—got them to verify these entries and got a letter from the prisoner and Butgie for 5,500 sicca rupees on Swamy. I then granted a receipt for the deposit to prisoner. This paper, (looking at one,) is the receipt of the prisoner and Butgie for the 5,500 sicca rupees. I received it from them, and sent it by dawk to Swamy at Benares. On the 15th of Sept., the prisoner came again with Ram Bhow, and returned me my acknowledgment for the 5,500 rupees, and received in five notes of 1,000 rupees each, 5,000 sicca rupees, and one note of 500 sicca rupees, total six notes of the Bengal Bank. The entries of the numbers of the notes, were made at the same time with the payment of them to the prisoner. (Produces his books and reads the numbers.)

They were, Nos. 19,623, 19,363, 19,333, 21,399, 32,399 and 22,646; of 1,000 rupees each, and number 13,336 of 500 Rs. These are the numbers, and this entry was made on the occasion by my son in my presence. I compared the numbers on the notes with this entry of them, and found them to be correct. After receiving the cash the prisoner went away. I do not know Swamy Nunderam Muntree has corresponding houses all over the country. Nunderam Muntree resides at Bheekaneer.

The prisoner declined question this witness.

Bissonath Butpre-called and questioned by the prisoner.—Query. Is it not usual, when any person deposes a person as his gomasta to another place, for him to get the wages of that person, and file a paper of his appointment, and register it in the neighbouring Court, in the presence of two witnesses? The reply is—No.

Stanroo, sworn.—I was sent from Benares by Swamy with the prisoner to Calcutta. Swamy sent him to establish a house here for him, and gave him, when he took leave, 50 rupees and clothes in my presence, and paid me five rupees. I was sent as a cook to the prisoner. On the 15th of September last the prisoner went to Moorshedabad. We left Calcutta at eight o'clock in the evening. We went from our house to Cosminitter's Ghst, and I had the prisoner's bundle on my head. There we hired a wagon, and proceeded that night to Barrackpore, and next morning we crossed over the river to Serampore, and from thence we went to Hooghly, where we engaged a boat to take us to Moorshedabad. After a residence of seven days in that city, I asked to return to Calcutta for my clothes. The prisoner at first refused to accompany me; but eventually he did so. He transacted no business at Moorshedabad. He on his arrival here, went to Baboo Duckenunder at Howrah, returned accompanied by Duckenunder, and we crossed over all three to Calcutta. The prisoner on his return to Calcutta put up at Duckenunder's cootee four days, where a quarrel occurred between him and Butjie. I being a servant of Swamy and hearing the prisoner charged with fraud to him, left his service. The prisoner kept himself within doors during the day time, all the four days he resided at Duckenunder's house, but used to go out occasionally at night to the river side. I was cooking for the prisoner, when he first intimated to me at night, his intention of quitting Calcutta for Moorshedabad, and set off immediately without eating his meal. (To a question of the prisoner.) I do not know what pay the prisoner used to get from Swamy. Query second. If you, who were a servant under me, were to get 500 rupees for your marriage what was I to get proportionately? Reply—I don't know; Swamy gave you no vakeelnama, but gave only verbal directions to you in my presence.

Hurra Nunda Roy.—I am gomasta of Sree Kishen Doss and Sooruj Mull, bankers. I know Bissonath But. I do not know Kurapha Swamy, nor the prisoner. I received three hoondies. (Looks at some papers and says.) These are them. I received them from the gomasta's at Benares, by dawk. I sent them by a peon named Ramjee, as directed by the note enclosing them to me, to Bissonath But, who would point out the person on whom they were drawn Putta Oberam, to me. I did not receive the cash from the prisoner; but Swamy paid it at Benares. Questioned by the prisoner. I know not why the draft was drawn on you by Swamy.

Ramjee, peon, sworn.—I am a peon in the employ of the last witness, gomasta of Sree Kishendoss and Sooruj Mul. I cannot recognize papers as I cannot read or write. There were once three papers given me by the last witness, to get an acceptance on them or some money by a person, who Bissonath But was to point out to me. Butjie sent me to the prisoner, who read the papers, and told me to come the next day to the Butjie's, and he would pay me the money there. On enquiry next day at the Butjie's, I learnt, that the prisoner had absconded.

Bissonath But re-called. (Looks at three papers) These are the hoondies that the last witness brought to me to ascertain the particulars; they are drafts on the prisoner. I do not know what their amount is, as they are written in a language I don't understand. They are drawn by Swamy, of the prisoner, in favor of Sree-kissen Mull and made payable to his gomasta here.

Baboo Duckenunder Mookerjee, sworn.—I am son-in-law of Hurrishchunder Tagore. I first became acquainted in March or April with the prisoner. I had some money transactions with him in September, but the date I don't remember. He came to me with another man named Shursha, and deposited with me 5,500 sa. rs. to the credit of a Hindoo woman named Poorneah. The amount was in five notes of 1,000 sa. rs. each, and one note of 500 sa. rs. Their numbers correspond with the note Mr. Preston wrote to me about. I had taken a memorandum of the notes, but I have not brought it with me. They were Bank of Bengal notes. I do not know the woman in whose name they were deposited; all that I ever knew of her was by the account of the prisoner. I acknowledge my fault in not bringing the memorandum of the Nos. of the notes. I gave a bond for the 5,500 sa. rs. The original bond I have given to the prisoner. I heard from the prisoner that the woman was a rich widow up the country, and Shursha is her mookar. As I did not lend the money I made no inquiries about her. I have the amount by me, ready to give it up on being exempted from all future claims on the obligation I gave for it. As this deposit was advantageous to me, I accepted it: if it were not so, I would not have accepted it. At the time I swore that the money was with Messrs. Carr, Tagore and Co., it was there; but now I have withdrawn it. I was present at the quarrel between Bissonath But and the prisoner, who soon after this deposit was made, disappeared for twenty days. On his return, he was four days at my house, because I wished to get him to return the bond I gave him, and to induce him to return the money to the proper owner of it. I lent these notes to Connyall Tagore, on his promissory note to me, at 12 per cent., a few days after they were deposited with me. I lent them before I had intimation of the prisoner's fraudulent conduct. I do not think the interest is too low for Hindoo females to receive; for as they have no commercial dealings, they cannot make advantageous investments of their monies. This witness was very flippant in his replies to Mr. Osborne. The Judge told him that his replies were highly improper, and though he might make light matter of this charge, it was a serious one in the Judge's opinion, and his conduct in not bringing the memorandums was very wrong. This witness said, that the first notice he had to bring them was at ten o'clock this morning, at Mr. Hedger's office, and thinking it might be too late to go back for them, he did not do so. He knew the prisoner to be a man of property. Prisoner asked him what would be the expense of sending a person as an agent for Baiza Baie, the widow of Scindea, to England.

Hurrishchunder Tagore, sworn. I have no employ. I am the father-in-law of the last witness. I have seen the prisoner at the bar occasionally. It was about the 15th of Sept. 1836, when he lent money to my son-in-law. As the party depositing the money refused to take an acknowledgment in Bengally for it, I wrote one out in Hindoostanee. Duckenunder signed it, and then secured the money, viz. Bank of Bengal notes; 3 of 1,000 rs. each and 1 of 500 rs. He next day lent the money to Baboo Connyall Tagore. The notes were deposited in the name of Poorneah Bewah. She is a complete stranger to me, and I made no enquiries about her. A quarrel did take place with the prisoner and Bissonath But about this, in my presence. Prisoner remained after this 2 or 3 days more in my house. I might have seen him at the police. I do not recollect seeing him since. I do not recollect going to see him at the jail. (Here he was reprimanded by the Judge and desired to give direct replies.) I never saw the prisoner at the jail. I never had cash transactions with the prisoner before. I never saw the person who acted as mooktar for Poorneah before or after the 15th of September last.

Baboo Cannylall Tagore, sworn—Yesterday at 5 p. m. I received the subpoena of this Court to bring my books, &c. connected with my loan from Duckenunder. I have not brought my books. The No.'s of the notes were taken down by my sircar before me. The No.'s of the notes were all that were required, and I have brought them. These No.'s I cannot tell by memory. Duckenunder Mookerjee once lent me 5,900 Co.'s Rs. Hurrishchunder Tagore knowing that I required 5,900 Co.'s Rs., wrote to me that if I would grant a note payable after three months, in favor of Duckenunder Baboo, he would lend me the amount. I did so, and sent it by my servant Ramilhon, who brought me the cash. I received in Bengal Bank notes 5,500 rupees and the balance in silver. The prisoner represented himself to me as an agent of Baiza Baiz.

Seehchunder Sait, sworn.—I keep the No.'s of the notes at the Bank of Bengal. I produce these notes here. I got them from Mr. G. Udny, the Secretary to the Bank. These books are kept by three persons. They are the registry of the No.'s of the Bank of Bengal notes, both as to their issue, and their return. Issued on the 22nd August 1836, returned on 31st October 1836 No. 13,336 for sa. rs. 500.

The prosecutor's attorney failed to prove, by whom those notes were paid in into the Bank, and likewise to identify the notes produced in Court to be the same notes which the gomasta of Nunderam Muntres had paid to the prisoner, and that they are the very notes which Duckenunder Mookerjee received from the prisoner; for none of the persons through whose hands they passed, had put any memorandum on them to identify them again. After this the translations of papers filed in this case, were read to the jury, and they closed the prosecutor's case.

The prisoner declined saying anything in his defence, but put in a written paper, which contained, as he said, his defence. It was a petition and was thus worded.

The petition of Putta Oberam.

Sheweth,—That religious enthusiasm incited this petitioner to visit Benares, where he dwelt. In 1835, he entrusted for Shurseah 400 gold mohurs in Erepha Swamy's hands. In 1836 Shurseah asked me for this money, and I demanded it from Swamy. Swamy replied, the money is spent. On hearing this I said, that I would pay Shurseah, but as I intend going to Calcutta, I must there receive this money, with interest. Swamy said very well. After I had been here some time, I remarked one day to Butjie, it is very strange this money is not remitted to me. Butjie said it will come in a few days no doubt. Shortly after this the boomie came in my name, and I received the money. This ended the petition. The prisoner then said verbally, I have not stolen this money, but received it on my receipt. I had four witnesses as to the deposit at Benares. Why is not the prosecutor here to swear to the charge himself. Butjie wanted me to lend him this money, and on my refusing the loan to him, saying that I had already paid it away, he trumped up this charge against me, and had me taken into custody and brought to the Police, where the case was dismissed by Mr. O'Hanlon, the Magistrate. After this Butjie again prosecuted me for this, at the Supreme Court, where, as the charge was one of felony and I had, even by the prosecutor's own statement, made myself liable only to civil action, I was again acquitted, before Sir B. Malkin, the presiding Judge, by the jury. But Swamy, not being satisfied with this verdict, has again prosecuted me maliciously, aided by false witnesses. My four witnesses are at Benares. The Judge here said, that if he had stated this circumstance before the trial was called on to the jailor, he should have heard of it, and if any respectable persons would then have verified that such persons are at Benares, and that they are respectable persons, whose evidence would be material to the prisoner in this case, he would have postponed the trial of it for their attendance—now it is too late.

The prisoner replied I was a poor man and put in jail, who was to give me this information and advice. I came as an agent for Baiz Baiz, the widow of Doulut Rao Scindia, never as the servant of the prosecutor. This closed his defence.

The Judge then addressed the jury, and said, the prisoner under section 100 of the criminal act, relating to this country, is charged with embezzlement and larceny; you must first be satisfied the prisoner is Europha Komar Swamy's, the prosecutor's servant, and that the money he received was Europha Komar Swamy's, and that it was entrusted to the prisoner, to be employed for the benefit of the prosecutor, and that instead of so doing the prisoner has converted it fraudulently to his own use and purpose. Here the judge detailed minutely the evidence taken in this case, commenting on each point adduced; after he had concluded these remarks, he told the jury, that if they had any doubts on the case, to give the prisoner the benefit of it.

The jury retired for about half an hour, taking all the documents filed in this case with them, and on their return, passed a verdict of guilty against the prisoner.

The judge after the verdict was recorded, addressed the prisoner. Putta Oberam, the jury has found you guilty of embezzling your master Europha Komar Swamy's money, to a large amount. You who were employed to protect his property here, are the first to rob him of it. I do not intend to pass the severest sentence the law admits of in this case against you; but I cannot permit you to remain any longer in this country. The sentence of the Court, therefore, against you is, that you be transported to the S. E. coast of Martaban, for the period of seven years.

After this the Judge discharged the jury for to-day, remarking that he strongly disapproved of the facility with which the loan for sa. rs. 5,500 was contracted, between the prisoner at the bar and Duckenunder Mookerjee. After the jury had retired, Mr. Osborne moved the court, that it being left to the judge by the 110th section of the criminal act, in case where money had been feloniously or fraudulently obtained, and the charge substantiated, to order the restitution of the money to the prosecutor, he begged that an order may be passed to that effect, in favor of the prosecutor in this case.

The Judge replied, that as Duckenunder Mookerjee, had failed to bring his memorandum book of the numbers of the notes he received from the prisoner, and as neither the gomasta who paid the notes to the prisoner, nor Duckenunder Mookerjee, who received them from him, had put any mark on any of them, so as to be able to identify them again in court to-day; and as the prosecutor has thereby failed in their identification, he cannot order their restitution. He again commented on the facility with which this loan with Duckenunder was transacted, and disapproved of Duckenunder's whole conduct generally in this case.

After this the court adjourned till 11 o'clock to-morrow morning.—India Gaz. February 27.

MADRAS SUPREME COURT.

The trial of nineteen sepoys, for an assault and rescue was entered upon on Thursday last, and occupied the Court not only the whole of that day and the following, but a part of Saturday, when a verdict of Guilty against six, viz. Maonlan, Choultan, Coopen, Chinnian, Francis and Chinaman, was recorded and the others acquitted.

His Lordship, Sir E. J. Gambier, desired it should be communicated to the Prisoners acquitted, that the Jury had taken a merciful view of their case: a doubt did exist, and the Jury had given them the benefit of that doubt: they were then ordered to be discharged. His Lordship then proceeded to pass sentence on the six who had been convicted. He observed they had been found guilty on testimony that left no doubt of their guilt—they had been convicted of disturbing the public peace, and as sepoys they ought to be the last persons to be guilty of such proceedings; his Lordship said there was nothing in the evidence that had been adduced to distinguish one from the other—they had been equally guilty and must equally suffer and the sentence awarded was—That they be imprisoned each for two months.—Madras Courier, Jan. 30.

Yesterday, as may be supposed, much anxiety was felt on the subject of the trial of Lieutenants H. Green and C. H. Winfield and Ensign J. H. M. Phillips of the 18th N. I. and Mr. Assistant Surgeon Maginnis, for an assault and rescue. From the character of the evidence that had been given on Saturday, and which, if not impeached or confuted, it was supposed would make against them; and the consequences be such as might go far to affect their future prospects.

The Court was opened at 11 o'clock, but was unable to proceed with the trial until towards 12, in consequence of the absence of one of the Jury; he at last made his appearance, but not till a fine of 70 rupees had been recorded against him, when the trial was proceeded with.

Four other witnesses on the part of the Prosecutors were examined and Ramalingum, one of the witnesses, examined, on Saturday, re-called and further examined when the Court informed the Counsel for the Prisoners, that the case on the part of the Prosecution was closed.

Mr. Smith, on behalf of the Prisoners, addressed the Jury at considerable length—remarking on the offence charged and evidence adduced in support of it, with much judgment and ability—appealing to the Jury, whether it was likely the parties charged could have committed themselves in the way and to the extent described; but he assured them whatever impression the evidence as given before them might have produced, he was prepared to show that, wherein the witnesses had not confuted each other, their testimony was altogether unworthy of credit. We are unprepared to follow the learned gentleman in all the arguments he brought to bear on the case, but we could have wished he had refrained from appealing to the sympathy and compassion of the Jury: his object, we feel assured, would have been attained had he sought nothing from their compassion, and been less solicitous to draw their attention to the state of his clients' finances than the merits of the case he was prepared to make out for them. We dislike these appeals to the tender mercies of a Jury where no real cause may exist to justify such a course, for in nine cases out of ten they are calculated to do more harm than good.

But two witnesses, it may be said, were called to depose to facts connected with the case, and their testimony went to disprove the graver part of the offence charged against the Prisoners, and to divest it of the great criminality which the evidence for the Prosecution had clothed it with: other witnesses were, it was said, in attendance, but it was by Counsel deemed unnecessary to call them. Both Col. Conway and Hanson, the Adjutant and Quarter Master Generals of the Army, spoke in the highest terms of the peaceable and amiable character of Lieut. Green, who they believed was the very last officer in the army that would be guilty of the offence now imputed to him. The defence having been gone through, it appeared to be the wish of the Bench to adjourn the Court to the following day; but the Jury having made known that they were quite satisfied and prepared to return a verdict, the Judge was relieved from the duty of summing up; observing, if the Jury had agreed upon a verdict, it would be unnecessary for him to detain them with any observations; the verdict of the Jury was then taken in the usual form, and the Prisoners declared severally—Not Guilty.—Madras Courier, Jan. 31.

SATURDAY, 11TH FEB.

(Before Sir B. Malkin, Commissioner.)

DISCHARGE OF INSOLVENTS.

John Howard D'Souza was called, and being sworn to his affidavit, was discharged, no body opposing.

Emanuel Gonsalves, (opposed by Mr. J. Gray, Printer of the Bengal Hurkaru.) examined by Longueville Clarke, Esq., said, he was arrested originally at the suit of one John Elias, under a decree of the Petty Court, and was discharged after having filed his petition; was also arrested at the suit of one Rongoun Ulee, for four rupees four annas, and released, was last arrested at the suit of one Kenderdine upon a decree of the Petty

Court, but whose debt was not inserted in the schedule. Did not incur the debt of four rupees in cash; but in goods. The schedule was filed on the 31st of December 1836, and Kenderdine's debt was contracted on the 30th January 1837. Kenderdine is a man. Does know much of him, but does not know his place of residence. Kenderdine came to the jail on a visit, and the petitioner asked him for the loan of 32 sicca rupees, which Kenderdine lent. Did not know that sicca were scarce, as many of them are in circulation. Nobody saw Kenderdine give examinant the money. Does not know how Kenderdine found out that examinant was discharged, and in answer to the Commissioner said, he was arrested on a Judge Warrant from the Petty Court. The case of Kenderdine has not been decreed, but will be heard on Monday the 13th. Was not summoned to Kenderdine's case but was arrested and taken to the Petty Court, the Commissioner of which Court wished to release the examinant on security, which examinant could not give. Kenderline did not appear on that day, but sent a Doctor's letter, saying he was sick. The Commissioner of the Petty Court wished the examinant to come to the Court on Monday next, but examinant refused to go. Is in debt to Mr. Gray in the sum of 1,251 rupees, being the amount of damages and costs obtained against examinant in an action of libel. Is in debt to Mr. Martindell, Attorney at Law, for costs. Mr. Martindell never rendered examinant's account, and withheld the accounts though examinant often called on Mr. Martindell for them. Believes Mr. Martindell intends taxing his bill after examinant's discharge by this Court. Has no property. Knows Doorgapersaud Bannerjeea, but not Mugdun Mohun Mullick. Never lent Doorgapersaud 1,000 rupees. Never saw the paper produced by Mr. Clarke. Did not receive that paper before. Did not get that paper from Doorgapersaud for money to the amount of 500 rupees in the month of February 1835, which Doorgapersaud repaid last year. The 500 rupees was not examinant's own, but the property of a widow of the name of Fernandes since dead. He refunded her the money previous to her demise. Took no security from Doorgapersaud, beyond a promissory note, but not the one produced by Mr. Clarke, as it has too many cuts, and examinant never got such cuts in his life. Returned the promissory note to Doorgapersaud, on receiving the amount of it from him. Of the amount of debt to Mr. Gray, 100 Rs. is only the amount of damages, but the rest is costs.

In reply to Mr. Strettell, insolvent's Attorney, he said he was released on Roossun Ullie's suit, the debt having been paid by Mr. Gray the opposing creditor, without a reference or consent of examinant. Mr. Gray took out execution on his judgement, and withdrew it, without arresting examinant.

Mr. Clarke argued as follows: First, that the insolvent having been discharged from prison, subsequent to presenting his petition for release from prison, the whole proceedings fell to the ground. He might have been entitled to relief while in custody—what relief could be now afforded to him? The custody in which he now was, did not exist when he presented his petition, how then can he be released from that, against which he has not petitioned? Where is to be the limitation? Suppose a man who is in confinement presents his petition and is released by his creditors before the hearing, twenty years afterwards, he is again taken up on a new debt, (as is the present case) shall he, after a lapse of twenty years, go back on his old petition? The notion is preposterous: yet, if there be any thing in the insolvent's claim for discharge, this practice must be introduced, for there is nothing to distinguish between one day, or twenty years, or at least there is no authority for drawing any distinction.

The second point was, that the present confinement was no confinement at all. It was purposely caused by the insolvent. What was his statement? A man whom he never saw before, whose residence he did not know, and who without any motive for which he could account, called on him in jail, and lent him 32 rupees; and having done this, he brings an action in the Petty Court. But does not appear at its hearing, and though the Commissioner offered to release the insolvent if he would promise to come back on Monday, the insolvent preferred going to jail. An imprisonment depending, on such a story, must be treated as a mere fraud on the insolvent's part, and he must be considered; and his case adjudged, as if he were not in confinement, and cited a case that occurred in this Court some time since of Willoughby Fraser Hare, an insolvent, who was not considered entitled to relief, as he was not in custody at the hearing of his application; that though the above case was not exactly analogous to the case of Gonsalves, yet if went to support the arguments already adduced; and concluded by observing, that setting aside other circumstances, the insolvent could not avail himself of the act to be relieved of damages awarded against him by the Supreme Court.

Sir Benjamin Malkin held the arguments adduced as strong against the insolvent; but said that though the Act of Parliament required persons in actual prison to be released, yet the words were not quoted in the insolvent act. He, however, concurred with Mr. Clarke in denying the prisoner relief for the amount of damages awarded against him, and asked Mr. Strettell whether he had any amendments to propose to the schedule?

Mr. Strettell suggested some amendments, when the insolvent was remanded to this day fortnight to amend his schedule.

In answer to an observation of Mr. Strettell's, that he had evidence to adduce, and that the observations of Mr. Clarke did not operate to deprive the insolvent of the benefit of his petition, the insolvent having been in custody at the time of presenting his petition, and having assigned his property to the assignee, and brought himself within the provisions of the act which did not require a party to be in custody at the time of his hearing, however this might be the opposing creditor having himself paid the detaining debt for the purpose of rendering nugatory the proceedings which had taken place, could not avail himself of his own wrong, and that he considered such an attempt after the order of Court, to amount to a contempt.

CONTEMPT OF COURT.

In the Court for the Relief of the Insolvent Debtors in Calcutta. In the matter of James Cullen and Robert Browne.

The Humble Petition of James McCillop, of London, Merchant and Agent. Sheweth.

That your petitioner, on the 6th day of November last past, presented his petition to this Honorable Court praying that Thomas Holroyd, Esq., the assignee of the estate and effects of the said James Cullen and Robert Browne, should pay to your petitioner as a creditor of the said estate, certain dividends then due and payable at the rate declared, and also all dividends which might thenceforth become due and payable on the claim of your petitioner appearing admitted on the schedule of the said James Cullen and Robert Browne.

That this Honorable Court, on the day and year last aforesaid, was pleased to order and direct that the said assignee should make such payments as was prayed for by your petitioner in his said petition, unless cause should be shewn to the contrary.

That certain creditors of the said estate having, by their counsel, opposed such order being made absolute, several proceedings have been had on the petition of your petitioner, and that on the 14th day of January last past, the said James Cullen was examined as a witness in this Honorable Court at great length, touching the said matter, and that on the 21st day of January last past, Rumsomoy Dutt was also examined as a witness in this Honorable Court touching the said matter.

That the proceedings on the matter of the said petition are not yet closed, and that other witnesses are still to be examined both on behalf of the said creditors so opposing your said petitioner's claim, as well as on behalf of your petitioner.

That on the 20th day of January last past, a certain letter signed a creditor was published in a certain daily newspaper called the "Englishman and Military Chronicle," published and circulated in Calcutta, and which said letter contains many untrue statements, and unfair comments regarding your petitioner's said claim, now pending before, and under the consideration of this Honorable Court.

That the said letter also contains an untrue statement regarding the conduct of the said James Cullen, and the matters deposed to by him before this Honorable Court, which said statements are calculated to induce a belief, that he, the said James Cullen, had been guilty of perjury, and had acted fraudulently.

That the evidence of the said James Cullen is most material in support of the claim of your petitioner, and that such charges against the said James Cullen as well as the said other statements made and published in the said letter, tend to prejudice the case of your petitioners, and are, as your petitioner humbly submits, a contempt of this Honorable Court.

That Joaquim Habert Stocqueler is the Proprietor and Editor of the said Englishman and Military Chronicle newspapers.

Your petitioner humbly prays that the said Joaquim Habert Stocqueler may be directed to attend before this Honorable Court, and that such order may be made touching the said contempt as to this Honorable Court shall seem meet and the justice of the case require.

A copy of the Englishman of the 20th January last, was appended to the above petition from which the Clerk read out the letter of a creditor and also read an affidavit of one Rodriguez in the employ of Messrs. Swinhoe, Attornies at Law, together with a copy of the Englishman of the 9th of February, from which the leading article was read out.

The Advocate-General then read the following paragraph from the letter of a creditor

"I had almost forgotten to mention, that Mr. Cullen has refused to make over some of the property of the house, which was not properly made over to the Assignee at the time he received his discharge, although I believe at the time of his getting it, it was necessary to swear that such was the case. This I should say vitiated the proceedings that give it him, he certainly should be the last person to attempt to injure the wretched remnant he has left us." It was obvious Mr. Cullen was here accused of refusing to assign his own interest in property, and having falsely sworn he had done so, in order to procure his discharge. So far from this being the case, Mr. Cullen on presenting his petition, had conveyed to the assignees all the interest of any kind or sort, which he possessed in any property whatsoever, but a Power of Attorney had been sent to Mr. Cullen by Mr. James McKillop, to execute deeds for that gentleman. Now there was real property belonging to the house in which Mr. McKillop had the legal, though not the beneficial interest, and when the assignee wanted to sell these estates, it was necessary to get Mr. McKillop to join in the conveyance. Mr. Cullen, under the power of attorney, had in several instances signed Mr. McKillop's name; but when the assignee refused to admit Mr. McKillop's claim as a creditor, then Mr. Cullen considered, that he ought not to assist the assignee in making further sales, by continuing to sign Mr. McKillop's name, without that Gentleman's authority; he offered, however, to do so, if the assignee could obtain the opinion of his own counsel, that he, Mr. Cullen, would not be acting illegally. Accordingly the assignee's two counsel were consulted, and they gave a joint opinion that under the circumstances Mr. Cullen ought not to sign Mr. McKillop's name to any more conveyances, and that if he did, he might be made a party to equity suits. Such were the real facts. Could any thing be more fair than the conduct of Mr. Cullen, and was there the slightest foundation for the charge of fraud and perjury? Was there any thing to justify the gross and unfounded misrepresentation contained in the letter of a creditor? The learned counsel said he could assert without fear, that the charge contained in the letter was a falsehood, without saying any thing regarding the conduct of those who would wish to trample on persons already buried in deep misfortune. It was quite unnecessary for him to tell the Court their duty, that of punishing by fine, or imprisonment for a contempt. He quoted the 1st Section of the Insolvent Act, and held that comment on evidence pending a discussion in Court, was a clear contempt and cited second Atkinson 469, 471; but that he was prepared to abandon the present proceedings, if Mr. Stocqueler (present in Court) would give up the author of the letter in question. The learned Counsel had subpoenaed witnesses who were present, by whom, if he failed to discover the author of the letter, he would be obliged to make the Proprietor of the Englishman newspaper liable for such an unfounded publication as the letter of a creditor.

Mr. Stocqueler did not answer, and the learned Counsel then said he had no alternative, but to leave the matter in the hands of the Court.

Mr. Strettell said that he had been solicited by Mr. Stocqueler to assist him, and suggested that the order sought for by the Advocate-General must be a Rule Nisi; that Mr. Stocqueler had attended under an order to be examined, which he could not do where such examination tended to criminate himself.

The Advocate-General then called Mr. Robert Buckland, who, on being duly sworn, deposed, that he, Robert Buckland, is employed in the establishment of the Englishman. That Mr. Joaquim Habert Stocqueler was the Editor and Proprietor of the Englishman newspaper on the 20th of January last past, and also on the 9th of February instant. That the papers produced were published from the Englishman Press on the dates stated, the aforesaid Joaquim Habert Stocqueler being the Editor and Proprietor.

Mr. Strettell again urged that Mr. Stocqueler was not prepared and sought for a postponement.

The Commissioner thought there was no objection to allow time, but that it rested with the Advocate-General to take security or Mr. Stocqueler's word for his appearance on a future day.

The Advocate-General said he would be satisfied with Mr. Stocqueler's word for his appearance, and the case was accordingly postponed to Monday the 20th instant, 11 a. m. of the day

INSOLVENT ESTATES.

An order was made for a dividend of ten per cent. in the estate of Ferguson and Co., and for a final dividend of fifteen per cent in that of Mr. Wm. Fange Clarke.

The Advocate-General applied on account of the Bank of Bengal, for an order to oblige the assignee of Ferguson and Co. to admit the claim of the Bank to dividends upon the sum of about 6,50,000, for which that firm had already been declared liable upon the bill transactions connected with the firm of Alexander and Co. Mr. Longueville Clarke contended, that the Insolvent Court had not power to adjudicate a claim of this kind, and the claimants should bring their action in a regular way. With the consent of both parties, the case was postponed till next Court day, but with an understanding, that the Assignee should reserve for the Bank, out of the dividend now declared, as if its claim were recognized to the full amount. —Ind. Gaz. Feb. 13.

MONDAY, 21st FEBRUARY.

In the matter of James Cullen and Robert Brown.

This was the application in which Mr. Stocqueler had been allowed time to prepare his opposition to the Advocate-General's motion for contempt of court.

Mr. Strettel, in the first place, objected to the appearance of the Advocate-General, and put in a certificate from the officer of the court, that on the part of Mr. James Mackillop there was no retainer on the file.

Sir B. Malkin thought that was a matter for the discretion of the court, and enquired if Mr. Strettel had any thing to urge, as to the power of the court to punish for contempt, or as to extent of punishment, supposing this a contempt, in which the powers of the court ought to be exercised.

Mr. Strettel then urged several objections to the power of the court, pointing out that this application was made on behalf of James Mackillop, a party not now within the jurisdiction of the court. As to the letter of a creditor he urged that it was such as might have been expected to proceed from a party whose situation had been changed from affluence to poverty by the failure of Crutenden and Co., and though not legally justifiable, one which the court would treat with lenient consideration. He entered at much length into the circumstances which called forth the various objectionable passages in the letter, and drew the attention of the court to the absence of any affidavit from Mr. Cullen, or the party on whose behalf this application was made, contradicting the assertions in the letter. Mr. Strettel then put in an affidavit, sworn by Mr. Stocqueler, which set forth;—that Mr. J. Mackillop is a resident in London, and, as the deponent believes, not personally subject to the jurisdiction of the court;—that Mr. Justice Malkin, the commissioner before whom the proceedings relating to this matter have been chiefly if not wholly had, is not a subscriber to the Englishman, nor is any copy thereof sent for his perusal. That the letter signed a creditor which appeared in the Englishman of the 20th of January last, was received at a time when the deponent was busily engaged, and that being acquainted with the hand-writing of the correspondent, whose previous letters he was not aware to have been objectionable, he sent the letter down to the press without reading the same, and that he did not read the letter until the same had been published on the following day. That on Sunday, the 22d January, a letter was received by the deponent in manuscript, from Messrs. Waddington and Wilson, attorneys for the assignees of Crutenden and Co., which letter contained a contradiction of the statement contained in the letter of a creditor, that he was then for the first time made acquainted that certain parts of the letter were considered to be objectionable and to contain an unwarranted imputation respecting Mr. Cullen. That immediately on the receipt of the letter of Messrs. Waddington and Wilson, he put the same into the hands of one of the compositors for the purpose that it should appear in the Englishman of the following day, with an editorial observation, directing the attention of the readers to the letter last mentioned. That he was informed Mr. Thomas Holroyd had called at the office during his absence, and requested that the letter might not be published, as it had been sent by Messrs. Waddington and Wilson, without his, Mr. Holroyd's, sanction. That Mr. J. H. Leighton wrote to the Englishman office a letter, on behalf of Mr. Holroyd, containing the like request; and that Mr. Leighton, also, on the same evening, called at the office, when the deponent expressed his desire and readiness to insert any refutation of the letter signed a creditor, if he could obtain any authentic account of the transaction therein alluded to. That on the following morning a note was brought to the Englishman office from Messrs. Waddington and Wilson, requesting the return of their letter, which was accordingly returned to them. That the deponent would have editorially observed on the letter of a creditor, and regretted that the same had been published, but that he was left in difficulty as to the real circumstances mentioned in the letter, and was therefore unable to do so with justice to either party;—that the observation contained in the letter of a creditor, being hypothetical, the deponent did not on perusal of the same, believe that they would or could throw any discredit on the evidence of Mr. Cullen, nor does he believe the publication of the letter can or will influence the decision of the court or injure the interests of Mr. James Mackillop.

Mr. Advocate-General and Mr. Clarke were heard in support of the application. But the hour at which the court rose prevents the reporter giving any part of their observations.

Sir B. Malkin, in giving judgment, said, he had no doubt that this was a court of record without any limitation, and perfectly competent to interfere in this matter; and he had as little doubt that the letter of a creditor was a contempt of this court. But the question was, is it such a contempt as the court is called on to visit with a punishment? With reference to that point, the case appears under very peculiar circumstances. When this matter was first brought forward, the court, at the request of Mr. Strettel, allowed Mr. Stocqueler nine days to prepare an answer, and, certainly at that time, he did entertain considerable doubt, whether this was a case in which the court would use that power with which it is vested, — that is, whether had Mr. Stocqueler urged it, there had not been, in his opinion, a palpable excuse for the publication of the letter. He thought it possible that Mr. Stocqueler, referring to the author of the letter, might have said, here is a person of a certain station in society, the author of this statement, and although, strictly speaking, the communication should only be made to the parties by whom he is deputed, I do not think I ought to be subjected to any punishment in giving publicity to it at his request. But on looking at the paper, it did appear to him that the publication was intended for a more extensive circulation than to the parties only by whom the writer purported to have been deputed. He had already said that the matter came forward under peculiar circumstances, for Mr. Strettel had not argued that the publication was excusable on the ground to which he had just alluded, but that the letter was excusable, not on the part of Mr. Stocqueler, but on the part of the person who composed it. But the peculiarities of the case did not stop here. The affidavit went on entirely different grounds to those advanced in support of the case. At the time of making this application, it certainly did appear to him to be rather a hard measure to go against the publisher and not against the author; but after the cases cited, it appeared difficult to take any other course, as the parties there proceeded against were the publishers and not the authors. In the case in 2d Atkins it was urged, by way of alleviation, that the parties did not know the nature of the paper, and that printing papers and pamphlets was a trade by which they got their living; "but," Lord Hardwicke said, "though it is true, this is a trade, yet they must take care to do it with prudence and caution, for if they print any thing that is libellous it is no excuse to say, that the printer had no knowledge of the contents, and was entirely ignorant of its being libellous; and so is the rule of law, and I will always adhere to the rule of law in these cases." Now, though he had sworn he published inadvertently, it was clear that Mr. Stocqueler knew, and might have given up the name of the author of the letter; and, not having done so, he stands precisely in the position of the case in 2d Atkins. In the case in 13th Vesey the satisfactory account given by the printers seems to have weighed with the court. There Lord Mansfield said "the maxim actus non facit reum, nisi mens sit rea cannot be made applicable to this subject in the ordinary administration of justice; as the effect would be that the ends of justice would be defeated by contrivances. But upon the satisfactory account given by the printers, though under a criminal proceeding, they would be in mercy, in a case of contempt, though I have the jurisdiction I will not exercise it." And on the authority of that case he would have been inclined to act, could he have seen a complete and satisfactory account contained in the affidavit of Mr. Stocqueler. After giving that affidavit full consideration, it appeared to him to be merely as to the question of libel or no libel on Mr. Cullen, professing his readiness to insert a counter-statement of the letter complained of which he did not think was likely to be injurious to Mr. Cullen. But, it did not appear that any expression of regret had been published by Mr. Stocqueler regarding his inadvertence. The affidavit was merely as to the question between Mr. Cullen and Mr. Stocqueler, but did not contain a word having reference to the question between Mr. Stocqueler and the court. To that there was no answer; of that there was no account whatever. The learned judge then alluded to the power he had of inflicting a pecuniary fine which he said, if he inflicted, would enable the party who is behind to come forward and prevent Mr. Stocqueler being the sufferer. It was not for him to say the party ought, or ought not, to come forward. But it was more satisfactory to him that he had a discretionary power to punish by fine rather than to punish by commitment. He did not treat the subject as one in which Mr. Stocqueler intended to interfere with the due administration of justice, by the publication of anything likely to influence his mind, or the mind of any other commissioner, but on the grounds of the decision in 2d Atkins, "nothing is more incumbent upon courts of justice, than to preserve their proceedings from being misrepresented; nor is there any thing of more pernicious consequence, than to prejudice the minds of the public against persons concerned as parties in causes, before the cause is finally heard." He did not think this was a trivial case, and he was glad he had the power of visiting Mr. Stocqueler with a fine of Rs. 500 for the offence.—Englishman, February 21.

COURT OF REQUESTS.

FEBRUARY 15, 1837.

Before Messrs. G. J. Gordon and C. W. Brietzcke, Esqrs., Commrs.

KENDERDINE versus E. GONSAVES—suit for Sa. Rs. 32.

CASE OF PERJURY AND COLLUSION TO DEFRAUD CREDITORS IN THE INSOLVENT COURT.

The defendant in this case having confessed the debt on Monday last, and said that he had nothing to urge against a decree being passed against him for the amount, for which he was arrested on a judge warrant, obtained by the plaintiff on the 3d instant, on an affidavit of debt, the Court decreed the case.

Yesterday, the Commissioners conceiving, from some circumstances brought to their notice, that Kenderdine had connived in this matter with Gonsalves, in order to have him put into jail again, after his release on the 2d of this month, in order to enable Gonsalves to proceed with the proceedings he had adopted through his attorney, Mr. C. G. Strettell, to enable him to take the benefit of the Insolvent Act.

An order was issued for Kenderdine's appearance to-day at this Court, at 10 o'clock, A. M., and the jailor of this Court was likewise instructed to bring up Gonsalves into this Court, to have the matter re-investigated.

Kenderdine was the first person examined, Gonsalves being all the time Kenderdine's evidence was taken, kept aloof in another room.

Kenderdine deposed, that he knew Gonsalves for about 9 years. The last time he saw Gonsalves previous to his visit to him in the jail of Calcutta, was about the time Gonsalves's wife died, this was about 8 years ago; since which period he has been serving in several situations on board of different vessels to and from Calcutta. His last voyage was in the Resource about 2 years ago; after this he served as a writer in Mr. Smoult's office, and has from the commencement of this year set up as a provisioner, to supply provisions to ships lying off the port of Calcutta. On the 6th of January last, he went with some provisions on board the General Palmer and the Louisiana, and sold them to the crew for ready money 200 rupees. He did not recollect their names. The money he received was, in all, sicca rupees 45. On his way back, he went to Kidderpore bazar, where hearing that his friend Gonsalves, who had at one time assisted him with small loans about eight years ago, and had at that time endeavoured to get him a situation at the Hurkaru Press, where he was then employed, and with whom he got acquainted at a party, was in the Calcutta jail, he went on the 6th, at about 12 o'clock, into the Calcutta jail to see him, and they had no conversation except that on Gonsalves inquiring of him what he was doing, he said that he had set up as a provisioner. Gonsalves asked him to lend him 32 rupees. He pulled out sa. rs. 32 out of his pocket and lent them to him. Gonsalves wrote out a receipt for Co.'s rupees 32, writing company's in full. Kenderdine remarked to him, that he had borrowed sa. rs., and why did he give the receipt for Co.'s rs. Kenderdine took the receipt home, and there, 2 or 3 days afterwards, erased the word company, and substituted sa. rs.; this is the reason why the ink of sa. rs. is darker than the rest of the ink. There were pen, ink and paper in a drawer when Kenderdine lent the money. After this, he went to live with Gonsalves's child's mother in Mery Janny's Gully, on the 20th of January. He did not know at that time, that Gonsalves was the father of the child. He learnt this afterwards on the 2d, when the female, whose name he did not know, told him that Gonsalves was the father of the child, and would not support it, and that he would be released to-day. This was on the 2d instant. He then formed a bad opinion of Gonsalves, and came the next day and took out a judge warrant from this court on oath, and went with Mr. Goulman, the bailiff, and had him arrested.

There were several contradictions in this deponent's evidence; first he said that he had received the money on the 6th inst., then he said on the 3d instant; again he said that he had not seen Gonsalves for 8 years previous to his visit in the jail; then he said that all the time he was very intimate with him, and had paid him the money he had borrowed from him, either before or after his return from sea, asserting both positively. Further he said, that he had never settled his accounts with Gonsalves, and could not say if he did or did not owe him some money; yet, on account of the sums he borrowed from him, he never gave nor had from Gonsalves any receipt for the money lent to him; again he said that Gonsalves had taken once a promissory note from him, and another time a receipt; further he said, first that he had borrowed money once, then twice, then several times from Gonsalves; moreover, he said that it was something less than 4 rupees; that he had in riding out on horseback run over an old man, who wanted to prosecute him, and he paid him this money to hush up the matter; again he asserted, that the loan was sufficient to pay all his debts, but could not say if it was 10 rupees or 100 rupees. Once he said that Gonsalves had no family and then spoke about the child. In fact the Commissioners were obliged to admonish him, repeating that he must be very cautious, and not so very prevaricating in his evidence, and that he must give direct and distinct answers and not evasive replies; and Gonsalves was repeatedly admonished in like manner.

Gonsalves's depositions were much more contradictory than Kenderdine's, and he contradicted Kenderdine in many respects; 1st, that he has been only once married, and his wife is still living? 2nd, that the last time he saw D. Kenderdine previous to his culling on him in jail, was about 2 years ago, and not 8 years. 3rdly, that it was 9 o'clock when Kenderdine called on him at the jail. 4thly, when he lent the money about 8 years ago to Kenderdine, it was only once, and he took a promissory note from him, which he returned on his paying him up the loan. In his own evidence he contradicted himself. He said, that he did not know in whose house his child's mother lived, and whether she took any lodgers or not; and immediately after said, that the mother of his child lived with her mother, her name is Anna Francisca. The house the mother lives in, is her own property. It has 6 rooms, and there are 6 tenants in them. Then he said that the corrections made on the face of the receipt which he had granted to Kenderdine, were made at the time, and the difference of the colour of ink arose from the ink, pen, paper, all being had; next he said, that Kenderdine pointed the mistake out to him, took the paper home, and altered it at his house, then he told him of it; again he said, that he never saw Kenderdine, nor had any communication with him since the 6th of January, when he borrowed from him the 32 Sa. Rs., till the time he confessed judgment in this court; he had not seen him 8 years previously, but only once by chance in the streets; never corresponded with him during the 8 years, and yet was all the time very intimately acquainted with him. Supposes he recollected Kenderdine at once, when he came into the jail to see him; never asked him what profession he now follows. Does not know if he had any more money by him beyond the 32 Sa. Rs. in his pocket; only asked him for the loan of 32 Sa. Rs. abruptly, and made no other inquiries as to what he had been doing these last 8 years, not did Kenderdine enquire of him as to how he had passed the last 8 years. Never inquired of Kenderdine what he was now doing, because he knew positively for about 6 weeks before, that he was a provisioner. Does not know how Kenderdine came to know of his being in jail; has been on various suits in jail ever since May 1836, with the exception of one day, viz. the 2nd of Feb. 1837. On this day Mr. Benson (a relative of Mr. Gray, to whom Gonsalves is indebted 1,200 Rs. for costs and damages on a libel case decreed against him in the Supreme Court,) brought Gonsalves's release in his pocket to the jail. The amount for which Gonsalves was confined was 4 Rs. at the suit of Roshunally, and he supposes Mr. Gray paid this money, in order to annul the proceedings in the Insolvent Court, by letting Gonsalves be free again. After his release Gonsalves went to Ballaghata to hire a boat, and gave the boat mangy 21 Rs., the balance remaining of the 32 Sa. Rs. which Kenderdine lent him: from Ballaghata he went to see several friends, and there at 8 o'clock in the evening he went to see the child; there he had an altercation with his mother about not allowing any maintenance to the child; he then went and slept with another woman at the Boitakhana end of Bow Bazar. He did not go to his wife because she is absent from Calcutta, and has been so for these 5 or 7 years. He could not say if she was alive or dead. Next morning deponent peeped from the house where he slept at Boitakhana to where Anna Francisca lived at Mery Jany's Gully. He gave only one long peep, and seeing that there was no one ready to pounce on him, he went to see her; there the bailiff arrested him. He never, he positively can say, saw Kenderdine there. Knows the bailiff; this is him (pointing to Goulman the bailiff.) Never asked him at whose suit he arrested him, or to produce the writ on which he arrested him. Is most positive that he never saw Kenderdine at the time of the arrest. It was on the 3d instant at midday; and the bailiff took deponent direct to the jail. The debt is a just one and deponent owes the money to Kenderdine. He cannot tell whether Kenderdine has paid him all the money he lent him—supposes so, and cannot tell whether he lent him 10 Rs. or 100 Rs., or whether he lent the money to him once or ten times. Deponent is no relative of Kenderdine. He, cannot tell how long it is since he lent the money to him or when he repaid the cash—he supposes so, but is not sure; their accounts were settled. When Kenderdine repaid the money, deponent returned him his receipts. Has heard that Kenderdine has been in the seafaring line ever since eight years voyaging to and from Calcutta, but never saw him during these 8 years, because deponent used to stick to his business at the Harkara office, and never see low company. How Kenderdine came to know of his being in jail, he knows not. His child by Anna Francisca is a boy, aged 6 years. Does not give any thing for its maintenance. Supposes Anna Francisca out of spite had him arrested, but cannot tell. The money he borrowed from Kenderdine was sicca rupees, not one company's rupee amongst them. They were all lent in cash, nothing in notes. Although Gonsalves knew the money was 32 Sa. Rs. he wrote the receipt for 32 Co.'s Rs., without adding the batta to it, as he should have done.

The Commissioners, after this, consulted, and having, severely reprimanded Gonsalves for the very prevaricating and evasive manner in which he gave his replies—they being thus, "I suppose so," "I think so," "I believe so," or "I don't know," "I cannot tell," "I do not remember"—they said, that it was a very painful investigation they were pursuing, and told him to answer explicitly, had he and Kenderdine ever settled their former accounts of 8 years. To this he replied, he supposed so; and nothing further could be extracted from him. He was trembling at the time with apprehension, and could not tell when he had married even, but it was some time when he served in the Calcutta Journal.

D. Kenderdine re-called, said that a Mr. Benson came to search him the day after he had arrested Gonsalves on this affair, at his house, but being a stranger to him, he would not have any thing to do with him. Cannot positively say that he has paid all that he owed Gonsalves as the accounts were never settled. He might then perhaps, be in his debt still, but he supposed not. Whether he paid him or not he could not tell. Query put to him, that if he could not say whether he did or did not owe Gonsalves money yet on the old account, how could he swear that Gonsalves owed him 32 rupees? By so doing he had perjured himself. No reply.

Goulman, the bailiff, who arrested Gonsalves, deposed, that he arrested him at Anna Francisca's, at about midday, on the 3d instant. Kenderdine was with him at the time, and pointed the defendant out. Defendant told Kenderdine, what is the good of your arresting me, I have no money to pay you, and if you once put me in jail I must stick there. To this Kenderdine said, that in that respect he may do as he liked, and had the defendant arrested. After the arrest was made the bailiff took the defendant direct to the big jail of Calcutta. Is quite positive of Kenderdine seeing and talking with Gonsalves on the day of the arrest.

The Court after this desired the parties to take their places respectively at the bar of the bench, as allotted to plaintiffs and defendants: after they had done so the Commissioners said, that they had at first decreed this case under a wrong impression of its being a correct claim by the defendant's confession of the debt, but from what had now transpired to-day, they verily believed that the whole affair is a concocted collusion between D. Kenderdine and E. Gonsalves, to enable the latter to defraud his creditors in the Insolvent Court; both the parties are liable to be prosecuted in their opinion for a fraud, by any of their creditors; and D. Kenderdine in addition thereto, is likewise liable to be prosecuted for a perjury, for he had, when he could not positively state whether he still owed to Gonsalves or not any part of the monies Gonsalves had advanced him 8 years ago, yet with this uncertainty on his mind, he still had the audacity to come to the Court of Justice and swear positively that Gonsalves owed him 32 Sa. Rs., and without ever demanding the sum on the bare ipse dixit of Ann Francisca, a woman who, it appears, is not on the most friendly terms with Gonsalves, because he allows her nothing for the maintenance of his child; he had without further enquiry sworn that Gonsalves was about to quit the jurisdiction. Their several depositions, are full of evasions, prevarications, and contradictions, and they do not bear out as straightforward, true statement as to the manner in which this debt was contracted. The depositions will be kept in Court, and if any person interested in this business, should hereafter prosecute either of these parties for either fraud or perjury, the Commissioners would then produce these depositions, and therewith what their impressions were regarding the affair, before another tribunal. As to the present case, the decree is now reversed, and the case is dismissed, and the prisoner is at liberty to go where he pleases.—Ind. Gaz.

COURT OF THE COMMISSIONER OF REVENUE AND CIRCUIT FOR THE 18TH DIVISION.

(HELD AT ALLIPORE, WEDNESDAY, 8TH FEBRUARY, 1837.)

BALLYGOON TANK CASE.

This day had been appointed for the decision of the above case, which has so often been brought to the notice of the public; but at the sitting of the Court, the Commissioner informed Mr. Bignell, who appeared on behalf of Mr. Pattle and Baboo Govindpersaud Bose, that he had just received an order from the Government of Bengal, directing him to transfer to the Session Judge the whole of the duties connected with criminal justice, and that he was therefore incompetent to decide these appeals. Mr. Bignell submitted that the Government order could not have been intended to prevent the Commissioner disposing of cases which had already been investigated by him, and were now ready for decision but must be considered as having only a prospective operation with reference to new cases. The Commissioner observed that, much as he might regret the delay to which the appellants would be subjected, the wording of the Government letter was precise, and left him no option, for it declared the transfer should take place from the date of the receipt of the order. He must therefore make over Mr. Pattle's appeal to the Session Judge; but with reference to Govindpersaud Bose's case, there was a further difficulty, for he appealed not only against the imposition of the fine, but also against that part of the order which regarded the possession of the tank; and under the construction which had been given by the superior authorities to the words "duties connected with criminal justice," in Act 7 of 1835, (in pursuance of which the Government had made the present transfer) it appeared that though the appeal as to the fine must be decided by the Session Judge, yet the Commissioner was the only authority competent to pass a judgment on that part of the case which related to possession. There might no doubt be great inconvenience in this mode of proceeding, and it seemed hard to tell a party that he must appeal to two distinct authorities against one and the same order; but he (the Commissioner) had no power to remedy this defect, and he must therefore call on the case of Govindpersaud Bose, and decide the right to possession of the tank, endeavouring to keep the question, as far as possible, distinct from that of the fine.

The depositions of several witnesses (which had been forwarded by the Magistrate on the 13th December and 10th January) were then read. The general purport of their evidence was to the effect that the Tank was Government property, situate within the Lines of the Body Guard, dug by order of Captain Montgomery about 1800, and that it had not been shut up subsequent to Mr. Barlow's order in January 1833, or at any time previous to the complaint in October last against Mr. Pattle. To contradict this testimony, Mr. Bignell put in a letter dated November 1833, written by Mr. Cowell, the then tenant of Govindpersaud Bose, shewing that that gentleman had, in compliance with the directions of the Baboo, fenced in the Tank, and forwarded a memorandum of expenses connected with the work, in which was included an item for an Europe patent padlock. Mr. Bignell also begged to supply an important omission in the Magistrate's proceedings. Mr. Patton on the 13th Dec. had addressed a rubakaree to the Commissioner stating that he had requested the Collector to search the records of his Office with a view to ascertain whether the Tank were Government property; but, by some oversight, the reply of the collector to this requisition had not been forwarded by the Magistrate. An attested copy of the Collector's rubikaree, dated 20th January, was now produced, which shewed that that officer, after an examination into the papers in his office, and a local investigation, was satisfied that the Government had no claim to the property, that it had never been included in the Lines of the Body Guard, and that it had belonged to the parties from whom Govindpersaud Bose derived his title.

Mr. Bignell now contended that the right of Govindpersaud to the possession of the tank, and to deal with it in such manner as he might please, was fully established. In January 1833, Mr. Barlow, the former Magistrate, had passed orders declaring the Baboo to be the proprietor of the tank, and to be at full liberty to do with it whatever he chose. This order had never been appealed against, and, under Regulation II. of 1829, if not appealed against within a month, it was final, and could not now be altered by the Commissioner.

The Commissioner asked, how this argument could be reconciled with the present appeal—the Magistrate's order as to possession of the 14th Oct. merely repeated the order previously given in the case of Mohun Sing, decided in July last, and against that order Govindpersaud had not appealed within a month.

Mr. Bignell submitted, that it would be quite a sufficient answer to say, that Govindpersaud Bose had never been made a party to the case of Mohun Sing, that he knew nothing of it, and could not be bound by an order passed behind his back. But he would go farther, and contend that the whole proceedings in Mohun Sing's case, as far as they had any relation to the tank, were ab initio a nullity, the criminal authorities having had no jurisdiction whatever in the case, except the reference to the alleged assault. The Magistrate must have taken up that case under Regulation XV. of 1824. Soon after the promulgation of this Regulation, considerable doubts were entertained as to the description of cases to which it was intended to apply, and several references were made to the Nizamat Adawlut on the subject. The result would be found embodied in a circular Letter of that Court addressed to the various subordinate authorities, dated 17th Dec. 1830, which declared that the Regulation did not extend to disputes between parties, each of whom did not claim a permanent or proprietary interest in the land, or other property of which the possession was disputed. Now it was quite clear that Mohun Sing never pretended to any such interest in this tank, and the whole proceedings were therefore illegal. Mr. Barlow, on the contrary, had acted quite regularly, for he declined to proceed with the case before him, litigated between Mr. Ainslie and Mr. Cowell, until Govindpersaud, the proprietor, was made a party. Mr. Barlow's order therefore was final, and Mr. Cowell's letter sufficiently shewed what had been done in pursuance of that order. If any persons had since taken water without permission, it was a trespass on their part. As to the question of the proprietary right, he (Mr. Bignell) must protest against the competency of the Commissioner to decide the point; but as evidence had been taken concerning it, he had thought it right to put in the Collector's rubukaree, which was decisively in favor of Govindpersaud—it was founded on the original documents in the office of the Collectorate, and the loose, hearsay evidence produced by the Magistrate could not for a moment stand against it.

The Commissioner considered Mr. Bignell's objections to the proceedings in Mohun Sing's case to be valid; but observed that as Govindpersaud was a party to the present case, it was now competent to the Court to entertain the question of right to possession, leaving the Civil Courts to decide the proprietary right, if it should be brought before them. He considered the possession of Govindpersaud to be fully established by Mr. Barlow's order, as well as by subsequent proof, and it must therefore be upheld. At the same time, he thought there was evidence that, for a period of more than 30 years, the neighbours had enjoyed the privilege of drawing water from the tank, and he was of opinion that this constituted such a kind of prescriptive right of access for that purpose, as ought not to be disturbed on an investigation of this nature. In the dispute between Mr. Cowell and Mr. Ainslie, before Mr. Barlow in 1833, this question had not been in litigation; and, indeed, the right seemed to have been recognized by Mr. Cowell, Govindpersaud's tenant, in a letter to the Magistrate, subsequent to the order in favor of Govindpersaud. There was some evidence to shew that since that time, parties had occasionally met with opposition in going to the tank, but most of the witnesses deposed to their having taken water as formerly. He therefore ordered that Govindpersaud should be upheld in his possession of the Tank—that his right to enclose it, and keep a Chowkeedar, or adopt any other means for its preservation, should be recognized—but that he must allow free access to all persons, for the purpose of taking water, from sunrise to sunset. The Commissioner considered this order to be in perfect accordance with Mr. Barlow's decision.

The question as to the fine was, as above stated, made over to the Session Judge.—Ind. Gaz. Feb. 15.

SUDDER BOARD OF REVENUE.

THE SYLHET QUESTION—REVENUE.

On the 31st of January 1834, the Sudder Board suggested three points for the consideration of the local authorities of Sylhet, regarding the general revenue administration of the district. viz. 1st, whether it would be advisable to revert to Tehseeldaree management. 2d. Whether a general survey and mapping of the whole district would be advisable for the security, present and prospective, of the Government dues. 3d. Whether the extension of the provisions of Regulation X. 1818, to Sylhet, would not be a desirable step.

On the 27th of June, Mr. Stanforth, the then Collector, answered the propositions as follows. To the first, he was opposed, from motives of economy, and on the grounds, that the revenue had, with the exception of late years (when peculiar circumstances affecting the prosperity of the Agricultural community had caused the contrary) been collected with equal punctuality, in the present method, as during the period when the Tehseeldaree system prevailed.

To the second, likewise, his opinion was opposed, from the immense labour and expence which would be necessary to its accomplishment.

Of the third, however, he expressed himself in very favorable terms, and stated that the sentiments of the landholders were equally well disposed towards it.

The present Collector, Mr. R. H. Mytton, revived the subject in an address to the Commissioner, of the 15th or Dacca Division, in which he pointed out the imperious necessity of introducing some change in the system, there being about two lakhs of rupees in arrear, and the jumma of the whole district not much exceeding three lakhs; that for the first kists (instalments) of the year 1835, (1242 Rs.) viz. Jpyt, Assaur, Sawun, it became necessary to advertise 26,250 estates for sale, or within a few hundred, every mehal in the district. That such a state of things may have been brought about by the scarcity that prevailed in the two previous years, and by the low price of agricultural produce complained of, but Mr. Mytton was strongly of opinion that the system of forcing payment by sale is one of the great causes.

He also pointed out the great labour and difficulty attendant upon the sale of estates, and the impossibility of bringing the arrears to a close, and that the mere holding of sales would be sufficient employment for an officer during a whole year; besides the difficulties thrown in the way by the former proprietors of estates protesting against the sales; investigations of their objections, and of hosts of witnesses being examined, and that there are so many as 80 suits of the kind pending, during which, delivery to purchasers is suspended, which deters bidders from appearing at other sales. He therefore strongly recommended the extension of the provisions of Regulation X. 1818, to the district of Sylhet, with the omission of clause 4, section 5 of that Regulation.

On the 19th of August 1825, Mr. Mytton, after having concluded the balance of the past Bengallee year, again reverted to the number of estates it became necessary to sell, amounting to so many as 1,004, being twice the number sold in the year 1241, and four times the number sold in 1249, both of which were years of scarcity and distress, and though agricultural produce was exceedingly low in the year 1242, the plenty of it in a measure made up for the smallness of the value; and in comparing this result with other preceding years the increase appeared still more extraordinary. In 1236 there were 63 estates sold, and Mr. Ward in 1821, when he advocated the abolition of the Tehseeldar system, stated that an actual sale hardly ever occurred.

Mr. Mytton, also attributed the cause of evil so important not only to the community, but to the character of the British Government, to the circumstance of there not being perhaps 15 men in the whole Zillah worth 5,000 Rs. and very few worth even that sum, the consequence of which is, that the purchasers and auctioneers are needy adventurers possessed scarce of more than sufficient to pay the deposit money, and who purchase with the intent of re-selling to some of the former partners in the estates at a profit, and trusting to this expedient to collect sufficient to make good the purchase money. He also exposes the trickery practised by the mooktars in the district, and concludes by strongly recommending the introduction of Regulation X. of 1818, as before proposed.

After a little correspondence on the subject, Mr. Lewis, the Commissioner, submitted the whole of the papers for the consideration of the Board, with his opinions, which are as follow :—

His first objection rests upon the fact that the principal difficulty in realizing the Sylhet Revenue arises from the extraordinary number of sub-divisions into which almost all the landed property in the district (not excepting even the smallest estates) has been resolved; and concludes from the results of late years, it has increased to a still more mischievous extent, and has in fact arrived at that point, where a strong and natural re-action has begun to operate. He fears that the extension of Regulation X. to the district would tend to stay a wholesome process, and that its practical effect would be to nail the district down as it were to a state of universal pauperism, which is its present characteristic, and from which nothing but the re-consolidation of the estates, would allow it in any degree to emerge.

That the original defect should be traced to the manner in which the permanent settlement was made, and had it been concluded there on the same footing as other districts. Mr. Lewis was of opinion that Sylhet would with ease have borne double the assessment laid upon it; nor could any other proof of the lightness of the assessment be required than the fact that the 10th or 20th shares of the estates paying a sudder Jumma of 1, or 2 Rs. have had all along a saleable value. After giving one or two striking examples, Mr. Lewis contends that the extension of Regulation X. would give permanence to the declension from a bad state to a worse, instead of rectifying in any degree the evil under which the district has so long labored.

The natural remedy for the evil,—that which will restore the district again at any rate to the condition in which it was 40 years ago,—appeared to him to be the sale for the arrears of revenue, and instead of considering such sales under the circumstances of the case an evil, he does not doubt that the most beneficial course for every one concerned, is to sell as expeditiously as possible all estates in arrear, nor would he stay his hands did the number of sales amount to ten, instead of one thousand.

The second objection which occurred to him, rested on the mischievous effects which would probably accrue from the inroad of so vast a number of peons and peonies as he thought would be requisite for serving monthly the processes described in Section IV., Regulation X. 1818, on a body of malgozars amounting in number to a quarter of a million; and another feature in the proposed innovation which he considered objectionable, would be the deprivation to the owners of the estates, of the option of relinquishing their engagements with Government at any time they may think it proper, or advantageous to themselves so to do, which having a fundamental characteristic of the revenue settlements, should not be lost sight of; and concludes by saying, that the concession he would be inclined to make to the peculiarities of the Sylhet district, would be to allow the recovered co-parcener not in arrear, to bid for the property in an imalee form, of which he possesses a share; and to check more effectually the fraudulent purchase "benami" of a defaulting sharer, he thought it would be a great improvement were such transactions constituted misdemeanors, and made punishable on proof in the Criminal Court with imprisonment and confiscation of property.

The senior Member of the Board concurred generally in the reasons assigned by Mr. Commissioner Lewis against the introduction of the provisions of Regulation X. 1818 into Sylhet. That the existing evil could only be remedied by measures which would gradually diminish the number of the small proprietors, and lend to their holdings being purchased and consolidated. To this end, it appeared to the senior Member urgently advisable, that the sales for arrears of all talooks in the Sylhet district (the Sudder Jumma of which does not exceed 100 Rs.) should only be held once a year; when, if the arrears are realized, most objectionable evils, harshness and official trouble would be saved. On the other hand, as in ordinary course, the lots that do not fetch the amount of their arrears should be purchased by the Government and gradually consolidated, re-assessed in the prescribed manner, and formed into larger estates. With reference to the peculiar circumstance of the Sylhet district, it appeared to him of the first importance for the security of the Government Revenue, for the diminution, if not prevention, of the litigation which now necessarily prevails, as well as for the permanent security of private rights and the improved comfort of the people generally, that all measures should be resorted to which hold out just expectations of opportunity to eradicate gradually the numerous small tenures by contriving that they should be consolidated and formed into respectable estates. The local authorities could very usefully influence opulent individuals of the district to assist, in promoting the measure, and it might also, in some degree, be brought about by the Government purchasing solely for this purpose. It appeared to him not only most highly desirable but of great importance, that the survey which has been partially made should be fully completed. The minute concluded by stating that the Board were favourable to a co-parcener not in arrears, purchasing the portions of defaulting sharers.

The Junior Member, Mr. C. W. Smith, after careful consideration of the arguments, advanced by Mr. Lewis and those of Mr. Mytton, and having duly weighed the reasons assigned by the senior member, was of opinion that Mr. Mytton's proposition was decidedly the best, Sylhet being a district characterized by features totally distinct from the districts with which the Board had usually to deal; and though he would greatly deprecate the introduction of that enactment into the Bengal districts, it appeared to him peculiarly fitted for the district of Sylhet.

In Sylhet the land-holders, (he observed) in point of fact, are in no way to be distinguished from cultivators with a right of occupancy, save by a proprietary, which their system of endless subdivision, has deprived of even so much value as to be worth the trouble of looking after; and where the extent of the share is still sufficient to make them at all anxious to preserve it, they have learnt to look more to a gambling chance of redeeming it from a pack of adventurers who frequent the sales and bid and purchase, merely to re-sell the shares as purchased to those of the defaulters, who have still the means of redemption, than to preserve their property by the prompt payment of the revenue.

We have not time to enter further into the views entertained by the Junior Member, but merely to state that Mr. Mytton's proposition met with his general approbation. This was followed by a long minute in review by the Senior Member, but bringing the matter to nothing final.

The third Member, Mr. Walters, proposed, that instead of introducing Regulation VIII. of 1810, into Sylhet, which would involve a great delay, and the necessity of a New Law, he urged that the Collector be empowered immediately to proceed under the provisions of Section 4, Regulation I, 1801, which would have the same effect exactly, and would at once embrace the modification suggested by Mr. Mytton in the law proposed, viz. the power of still bringing to sale certain estates which circumstances may render it desirable to apply the sale process to. This Law was acted on in Littagong with great effect. Tahseeldars were also introduced there with effect, and might be tried in Sylhet; he therefore urged the Board to authorize the Collector to act under Sec. 4, Regulation I, 1801, at once: if the measure were successful, the other Regulation could be modified and introduced, if necessary, at leisure. As for Poendas, if their employ be an evil, sales (he considered) are a much greater one.

The Board this day agreed to address Mr. Tucker, Collector of that district during its prosperity, on the subject of the introduction of Regulation X. of 1818, and observed that the deterioration commenced about the time when Mr. Tucker was withdrawn from it, and that since the period of his collectorship it has not been in the enjoyment of the wealthy state in which it was during the time he was in charge. That from his intimate knowledge of the Zillah, he would perhaps favor the Board with his views as to the cause of its present condition, that the present Collector has been advised to enforce with discretion Sec. 4, Regulation I, 1801, and to apply himself to discover the cause of deterioration, and to propound a digested plan for the location and employment of Tahseeldars, but that no detailed instructions would be given until the receipt of Mr. Tucker's reply.

The Board also ordered a letter to be addressed to the Commissioner, in which they entertain the subject as difficult and of great importance, with a few minor injunctions regarding the Collector of Sylhet.—Ind. Gaz. Feb. 3.

NO. 1, SEENARAIN GOOFT'S CASE.

On the 29th of August last, the Board of Revenue annulled the sale of the above mentioned Estate on the following grounds:—

1st. The selling and Estate after the tender of the balance had been made by procuring a rubacarri from the Judge, enabling the Collector to credit it with certain deposit.

2d. Making an unnecessary reference in reply to that rubacarri, or selling the estate before the answer to it had been received.

3d. Selling an estate where the owner or any of the owners of it has a deposit in the Treasury.

4th. That it was not specified whether a copy of the advertisement was sent to the Civil Court.

5th. That the estates were advertised for sale on the 29th of October, and not brought to sale before the 10th of November and 5th of January, and that it is not specified whether this delay occurred by postponement, or adjournment.

The Board also severely reprehended Mr. Deputy Collector Bidwell on the subject, and on the 22d of October last, the Commissioner of the 15th, or Dacca Division, submitted for the consideration of the Board from the Deputy Collector, and Mr. Collector Mytton, two letters both dated the 7th October.

To the first objection Mr. Bidwell urged that he was not aware that procuring a Rubacarri was a tender of payment, and that if it were so, it would be easy for a Merasdar of Sylhet, after making a similar tender to avoid paying any revenue and keep back his estate from sale for an indefinite period, and other minor reasons against the Board's objection.

To the second Mr. Bidwell replied, that the Judge's rubacarri directed to be carried to the appellant's credit the amount deposit due to Kallee Ruttun and Rajisurree, in liquidation of an amount of a decree against them. There was nothing in it that shewed to what amount they were severally responsible, and the deposit was proved due to Rajisurree only. Mr. Bidwell did not therefore think that the reference could properly be called unnecessary. And Mr. Bidwell answered the other three grounds of objection in justification of himself.

Mr. Mytton, the Collector, thought Mr. Bidwell's letter fully explanatory of the views under which he had proceeded to the sale of the Talook, and took up some general remarks of the Board on sales, and urged his objections in rather a conclusive way, and Mr. Commissioner Lewis, in forwarding the letters of Messrs. Mytton and Bidwell, entered into an explanation of his own orders on the subject.

That he did not consider the tax precept of the Court to be a full and legal tender of the arrear, although at the same time he was unwilling to deprive the petitioner of the whole benefit of it, and accordingly determined to confirm one of the sales and annul the other, as the sum claimed did not cover the balance due at the time of sale from both properties, giving the petitioner the opportunity of saving which ever he preferred. That the talook of which the Fazilut was thus claimed, was sold in June 1831, and that the parties had ample opportunity to adjust the accounts without bringing their disputes so close upon the period fixed for the sale of this other talook. With reference to the delay the Commissioner urged that the account sale of the lots in question arrived in the office only a short time before he commenced his circuit, and could not be disposed of until after his arrival at Sylhet, as a Sylhet account sale is a very voluminous document.

He also thought that the course pointed out in the Board's letter would be illegal, as the Collector appeared to the Commissioner to have no more authority to appropriate the money of the Mirasdar which chances to be in deposit in his treasury, for the payment (without his consent) of the rent of any other of his talooks, than he has to force him to pay in, on the same account, a sum which he may chance to have in his hand, or at his Bankers. Mr. Lewis concludes by saying, that he thought the explanation given by the Naib Moonshee exculpatory.

The Board, however, in their final orders, saw no reason whatever to alter the decision at which they had formerly arrived, or to modify in any degree the terms in which that decision was expressed, and that they will never exonerate from blame an officer who should sell an estate while the owner has a deposit in the Treasury ; they, however, made allowances for the difficulties with which Mr. Mytton had to contend, for the existence of which they did not hold that gentleman, but his predecessor, responsible.

The Board also observed, that the registry of intermediate mutations, is at Sylhet in absolute abeyance, and attribute the existing evils to that cause : they strongly urge the Collector to put in force the Registration laws and having by them obtained a proprietary body to deal with, he should recognize none but the recorded proprietors, and on the subject of the influence of the Omiah, the Board have directed the Collector to inform himself whether or not the Telsoel Mohurris in Sylhet, as elsewhere, have not established a system of agency between the Talookdars and themselves in the matter of Revenue payments, as the Board were inclined to think that Sylhet did not differ from any other zillah in that particular. If true, a great deal of the existing confusion would turn out to be the work of the interested Mohurris, who gain chiefly while they keep the Malgozars and the Collector as much as possible in the dark as to their proceedings. That if the practices above alluded to exist, they should be clearly and expressly prohibited. The Board concluded their orders by directing the serious consideration of the Commissioner to the subject.

NO. 2. SALE CASES OF PATNA.

A letter from Mr. C. Tucker, late Commissioner of Patna, was read, of date 2d January last, in which that officer explains the cause of delays that have occurred in twenty-six sale cases, between the dates of sale and the dates of his Reports to the Board. The Commissioner attributes the delay to a determination of the Board requiring with the transmission of the proceedings in the native languages, English Reports embracing translations of the petitions of appeal which mainly contributes to the delay complained of. That in June 1836 last the appeals amounted to 25 in number, and that on the 27th of December last, when he gave over charge to Mr. Davidson, they amounted to twenty-six. Since the 27th of December, Mr. Tucker had reported on seven cases, and intended finishing the rest previous to his departure from Patna. Mr. Tucker made it an invariable rule in regard to Government Revenues pending appeals to the board, that if the purchase money was sufficient to cover the balance and the future kists for a period of one year, he directs the collector not to give possession to the purchasers, but to leave the late proprietors in possession. If the sales should be confirmed by the Board, the Government get their Revenue from the proceeds of the sales up to the dates of the annual dustuks to the purchasers from which dates only the latter payments commence. If the sales should be cancelled, the estates are again advertized for the accumulated balances. If on the other hand the purchase money is but barely sufficient to cover the arrears due at the time of sales, he directs the purchasers to be put in possession conditionally, and on their giving security to make good the rents realized by them during their occupancy, in the event of the sales being cancelled ; and whenever Mr. Tucker could, without apprehension of loss, he has kept the late proprietors in possession till the sales were finally confirmed by the Board.

The Board, however, expressed themselves dissatisfied generally with Mr. Tucker's explanation, and have directed a circular order for obviating at once all delays which may have been caused by the reasons assigned by Mr. Tucker in the sale of lands, and the subsequent reports.

APPOINTED OF DEPUTY COLLECTORS UNDER REGULATION IX. 1835

The Board has suggested to Government the necessity of empowering them in the first instance with authority to effect removals and changes of Deputy Collectors under Regulation IX. of 1835, in their divisions, upon sufficient cause being shown for that purpose by the local functionaries ; and in the second, they have submitted for the consideration of his Lordship in Council, the defectiveness of the present rule of nomination, which gives to the Commissioners and Collectors, and withholds from the Board, the power of naming such officers. They have submitted that in addition to the nominations handed up to Government (through the Board) by the local functionaries, the Board should be empowered to add to the number of candidates for selection, and that an indispensable condition in the qualifications of candidates, should be a competent acquaintance with the English language, as in settlements it has been found, that the employment of deputies unacquainted with English, tends rather to impede than to facilitate the exertions of the European supervisors.—India Gazette, Feb. 6.

KHURRUKDEEA.

The revenue from this pergunnah, previous to the Company's accession to the dewanny, was paid as a tribute into the treasury of the Naib Soolah at Patna, but owing to the turbulent character, of the ghatwals and the difficulty of bringing them under any sort of control, it always required a battalion to realize this fluctuating revenue, the expence attending which process more than counter-balanced the sum obtained by it. Randa Khan, under the instructions of Ally Verdy Khan, the subadar of Bengal, entered the pergunnah with an armed force, conquered it, and drove out the rajah of Khurrukdeea, through whom hitherto the ghatwals had made their payments.

When the British rule succeeded, the pergunnah stood in the name of his son Rajah Ekbul Allee Khan ; and soon after, was annexed to Captain Browne's jurisdiction, by a letter from the Patna council, dated 17th October 1774.

In their letter of the 19th September 1774, the Patna council, in writing to the Supreme Government, mention the revenue as being rather in the light of a compensation with the ghatwals, than as a settlement found on the annual produce of the lands.

The Board have been unable to find any record of the progress made by Captain Browne in the settlement of Khurrukdeea, but it is probable that he confined himself to giving pottahs to such ghatwals as he could attach to the British interests, of a nature similar to those which he granted to the adjoining ghatwals. In fact this pergunnah remained much longer in a disturbed state than Churkye : for in consequence of its being an appendage of Rajah Ekbul Allee Khan, it so happened that, when that nobleman, after having committed overt acts of rebellion in pergunnahs Neehal and Samory, suffered a defeat from the military force sent against him, he retreated to Khurrukdeea, and with the assistance of the ghatwals of that place, whom he forced to make common cause with him, held out for a considerable time, until at length, being driven out of the country, and his chief adherent, Agheet Sing, and some other sirdars, being killed in action in July 1782, matters were brought into better order.

The villagers in this pergunnah were included in the decennial settlement of 1792 upon two descriptions of tenure ;—the Ghatwalee Mocurree and the Ticka Mocurree ; the latter being mere farms, subject to a new arrangement on the expiration of the terms of years for which they had been granted.

For the latter description of tenures, that is, the village held in farm, the collector of Ramghaur submitted a report under date the 29th August 1799, with a list of the villages, recommending that, in such of these villages in which there were ghatwals claiming a settlement, they should be admitted to engagements, since they were equally entitled to that privilege with those whose villages had been already included in the decennial settlement; and for the remaining villages in which there were not parties claiming the settlement as ghatwals, that the present farmer should be admitted to a new lease.

After some further correspondence, which it is not necessary to detail, the villages, hitherto farmed, were definitively settled, and the pergunnah then stood thus:—

Ghatwallee villages, 38 mouzahs }	13,607 11 14 3
aselee Dakhilee..... }
Moocuree 12 ditto..... }	814 15 10 1
52 Farmed villages, including }
Mouzah Mudhurka, farmed to the }	6,334
raja

20, 756 11 5

The settlement, which, as it included the whole of the villages farmed at the time of the decennial settlement, and was formed under instructions to make it a perpetual settlement, may be considered conclusive and final; it was sanctioned by the Governor-General in Council under date the 15th Feb. 1810, the ghatwals and moocureedars being allowed to pay their revenue direct into the treasury.

CHUCKYE.

At the period when Captain Browne was placed in charge of Jungle Turry Districts, in September 1774, the Chuckye lands were attached to the pergunnah of Giddore, and the whole was in the zamindari of the same party, with this difference, however, that the zamindars, having no hopes of realizing a revenue from the ghatwals of Chuckye, had declined engaging for the Chuckye lands some years previously, and the rents were collected for their own benefit by the ghatwals who merely paid a small sum as nuzzurana.

In fact no land settlement had been made, the ghatwals were in complete possession, and their only acknowledgment of superiority, independent of paying the nuzzurana, was in their furnishing men to protect the passes, or to attend the zemindar when he had occasion for a force.

The sum of nuzzurana paid by the ghatwals in 1773, was Rs. 829-4, paid to the center of Giddore. In that year Captain Browne completed a settlement with the ten principal ghatwals for the several talooks at an aggregate jumma of Rupees 3,268-5-6.

He reported this settlement to Government, and in the same year it was approved by the then Governor-General and Council of revenue.

The moocuree istemree pottahs which were in consequence granted to the ghatwals, have no specification to the extent and boundaries of the talooks, or of the villages comprised in them; but they appear to have been duly authenticated by Captain Browne, to have been granted at different periods up to the year 1780, and to have the words 'by authority of the Supreme Council,' &c. in English above his signature.

From the period above mentioned, the ghatwals of Chuckye have paid their revenue direct to government, the only instance in which it was attempted to add an increase on the jumma paid by them, was in 1789, when the collector, from a doubt whether Capt. Browne had authority to make these grants, proposed a general augmentation of the jumma, which was negatived by the orders of Government directing that no increase should be levied on the pottahs of talookdars, tickadars, or ghatwals; and in this order the mukhma to the zemindars of Chuckye of two annas in the rupee was confirmed.

The variations in the amount of revenue are not recorded in the Board's office; but it does not appear from the correspondence that Captain Browne ever attempted to levy an increase from any ghatwal, after he had granted him a sunnud. However it is not difficult to assign a reason for those variations, for it is to be observed, that both Khurrukdeea and Chuckye were in a very disturbed state for a considerable period of time even after Captain Browne relinquished his charge in June 1780. It is probable that it was not until some years after he obtained the sanction of Government to his settlement in 1774, that he succeeded in making a definite arrangement with each ghatwal, adjusted the talooks and villages to be allotted to each person, and fixed the respective jumma each should pay, and this surmise is strengthened by the fact, that some of the sunnuuds were only granted in 1780.

The Board have endeavoured to ascertain the circumstances under which the zemindars have continued to hold these villages, while the Chuckye lands generally were settled with the ghatwals. Upon this point they find that when Captain Browne separated Chuckye from pergunnah Geddore, the three villages in question still remained attached to that pergunnah, there being then an engagement with a farmer for them which made it impracticable to separate them from Geddore until after the expiration of ten years; and it is then to be concluded, that having been permitted to hold the above villages when the separation above alluded to took place, the zamindars were eventually admitted to engage for them, as being the occupants of them in the manner of Naukar lands under a moocuree pottah granted to them by Captain Browne.

OPINION OF THE BOARD WHETHER ANY NEW ASSESSMENT CAN BE LEVIED ON THE CHUCKYE LANDS.

From the extract of the report to Government of Mr. Secretary Harrington, under date the 3rd Aug. 1792, it is obvious that the ghatwals of Chuckye were admitted to the privilege of that settlement, in preference to the rajah who had declined to engage for the revenue at an early period, and who in fact does not appear to have had any proprietary right, but to have been merely a sort of highland chieftain, through whom the ghatwals compounded for such tribute as the ruler of the country could exact from them by force of arms, and to whom they were under the conditions of a feudal nature to assist with armed followers and to accompany in his hunting parties, similar to the terms of service which prevailed throughout mountainous part of the country in question. In fact the ghatwals were the proprietors of the land time out of mind, the ghatwals had hereditary and transferrable rights, and when occasionally dispossessed they received a malikanah, until the rajah was merely the representative of the family which conquered the pergunnah. It was upon this understanding, apparently, and of his having declined to take any part in the fiscal arrangements of the pergunnah, that the rajah of Chuckye was not admitted to a settlement in 1774, but received a moshahuta and a moocuree grant of three villages, in lieu of his former rights as the feudal lord, and as a maintenance to himself and his family.

As the ghatwals were admitted to the privilege of the decennial settlement of the talookdars comprised in their respective sunnuuds, their rights in regard to the talooks in question, will not be affected by the provisions of section XVI. Regulation VIII. of 1793, and it only remains to enquire whether there are any lands in Chuckye which, from not being included in the limits of talooks or villages comprised in that settlement, are still liable to assessment.

In the opinion of the Board there are no lands liable to assessment. the decennial settlement was introduced in these purgannahs at a time, when, doubtless, the greater portion of the lands was uncultivated; and the measure was a most reckless sacrifice of resources which might reasonably have been drawn from these purgannahs, had the villages been farmed from time to time, till the state of the cultivation was such as to have warranted a settlement in perpetuity; but the measure was probably recommended by cogent and urgent reasons of expediency, and the same remark would be equally applicable to almost every district included in the decennial settlement. It is to be observed of Chuckye, that the ghatwals were admitted to engage for the talookahs without any specification of the component parts of villages comprized in each talookah, and without the slightest clue to the boundaries of each talookah; there would, therefore, be insuperable legal difficulties to any attempts to make a new assessment, and any such attempt would be opposed to the principles guaranteed by government in forming the decennial settlement.

Independent of legal difficulties to such a measure, arising from the want of any means of identification of land included and excluded from the settlement, it would seem to the Board that it was the bona-fide intention of the revenue authorities, to include the whole of the Chuckye land in that settlement.

Mr. Collector Leslie, in his letter of the 10th October 1790, two years previous to the decennial settlement, in reference to the orders of government, under date the 14th January of that year, deciding that no increase should be laid on the pottahs to the talookdars and ghatwals of Chuckye, by which order his increase of ten per cent. on the amount of those pottahs was disallowed, states that he is at a loss to know from whence the mushahara hitherto received by the dis-seized zemindars, is to be paid, because the whole of the purgannah of Chuckye is let upon mortgagee rents to different parties, to the exclusions of the zemindars.

This letter furnishes ample proof that the revenue authorities of the district of the time being deemed the whole area of Chuckye to be included in the settlement, and as the arrangement, then in force, was the basis of the decennial settlement for Chuckye, the argument applies with equal force to the decennial settlement itself. The Assistant Collector of Ramghur, in a letter dated 16th July 1809, again mentions the whole purgannah with the exception of three villages, as being included in the grants to the ghatwals, upon a fixed jumma, and upon these data he grounds an objection to admit an application from the ousted zemindars to have their names recorded in the settlements; since he says they could derive no advantages under such circumstances from being admitted to the settlement nor levy any increase from the ghatwals. Upon the margin of this letter there is a note in the hand-writing of Mr. Secretary Harrington, to the following effect:—"any settlement of these lands is of course impracticable."

In short Chuckye and Khurrukdeea are parallel cases; they were together included in the decennial settlement, and the settlement appears to have included the whole of the lands in each case, and so far as the ghatwale tenures are concerned the settlement was final. The arrangement in 1809 had merely reference to a perpetual settlement of 52 villages, which were suffered to remain in farm when the decennial settlement was concluded; and it is the deliberate opinion of the Board, under all the circumstances, that any attempt to resume and assess any part of the Chuckye or Khurrukdeea lands, should be carefully avoided as being opposed to the principle of the permanent settlement.—Englishman 7th Feb.

CONSULTATION, —FRIDAY, 3d FEB. 1837.

IRREGULAR SEPARATION OF ESTATES—TALOOK HISSA. SYED MAHOMMED NATIR.

An Estate, or Hissa Syed Mahommed Natir, was settled at the Decennial settlement at rupees 2,521-7.

Subsequently 61 portions aggregating a jumma of rupees 2,099-8 were irregularly separated at different times up to 1805, leaving of the original estate only a jumma of rupees 421-15.

In 1805 this 1st portion bearing, as above stated, a jumma of rupees 421-15 as., was sold by auction for its balances, and purchased by Joy Gobind.

Up to 1827 all these shares (62 in number) were held as separate Estates. In 1827 or 1828, Mr. Tucker re-annexed the whole number one to another and re-consolidated the Estate as Hissa Syed Mahommed Natir at a jumma of Rs. 2,521-7.

In 1835 the Collector sold this whole Estate for balances of Revenue; but the sale being appealed to the Board it was annulled upon the ground that the portion of Joy Gobind at a jumma of Rupees 421-15, though irregularly separated had become a distinct Estate in consequence of the sale of 1805, and could not now be re-annexed to the rest of the Talook; on this the Collector raised the following questions.

"It being granted that Joy Gobind's portion has been irrecoverably separated, what is to become of the 61 separations made previous to that sale? Are they to be re-integrated or are they to be recognized? and supposing the former to be ruled, and the Estates thus to become two separate holdings, then, if a fraudulent or erroneous allotment should be discovered between the two jummas, (viz. Rs. 421-15 and 2,099-8) can such allotment be revised under Regulations II. 1811, and XIX. 1814?

The Collector thought that the 61 separations might be reintegrated, and the re-allotment had it necessary.

The Commissioner thought neither possible, as the sale in 1805 of one portion, had in his opinion confirmed all the previous separations.

The Board, after a careful consideration of the case, and of Mr. Collector Mytton's last report on it, were of opinion that it has been formally ruled by the Supreme Government of India, that a Government sale of any portion of an Estate, though illegally, or irregularly separated, is a recognition tantamount to a formal confirmation of the separation, of the portion thus sold, and has all the effect of a confirmation, and as such that it fully and finally bars the revenue authorities from re-annexing that portion to the original Estate.

If, therefore, a discovery and proof to the satisfaction of Government, of fraud, or error in the allotment of jumma upon a share so separated and sold, be made within ten years from the sale (i.e. the confirmation of the separation) the allotment will be open to revision, although the separation cannot be cancelled.

In applying the foregoing construction of the law to the case before them, the Board found that the public sale of that portion of the original Estate which was purchased in 1805 by Joy Gobind, at a specified and fixed jumma of Rs. 421 15, is equivalent to an acknowledgment of the separate statutes of that portion, both as to the separation and the jumma, and as more than ten years have elapsed since that transaction, they perceived that no allotments could be had on any grounds. But the condition of the rest of the original Hissa, or Estate, is obviously in no degree affected by the sale of 1805 save only as regards its connection with the portion, sold, to which the remainder can never now be re-annexed. Upon any subdivisions and separations which may have obtained within this remaining portion of the original Estate, the sale of 1805 can be allowed to effect whatever—they must stand, or fall precisely by their own merits, and the circumstances attaching to them.

This remainder, it seems, was separated since the decennial settlement illegally and irregularly into sixty-one portions, and no confirmation, and no sale equivalent to a confirmation of a separation has occurred in any of them. The Board, therefore, fully concurred with that part of Mr. Mylton's suggestion, which related to their liability to re-annexation; but differed from Mr. Mylton in considering any re-allotment of jumma upon, or between the purchased share of 1805 and the remainder, legal or possible.

It was therefore ordered, that the Collector should consider the "Hissa Mahommed Natri", which at the decennial was one Estate at a jumma of rupees 2,521-7, as now forming two Estates—one, the portion purchased by Joy Golind in 1805 of which the jumma will stand at rupees 421-15. The other, the rest of the Hissa of which the jumma will be rupees 2,099-8.

Commissioner to be instructed accordingly.—India Gazette, Feb. 8.

Some delay having occurred between the date of an appeal against confirmation of sales, in several cases, and the report thereof to the Board, Mr. Tucker, late officiating Commissioner of Patna, has been called upon to explain, and to state whether in the interim the payment of Government revenue has been held in abeyance, or if not, what measures have been adopted to ensure its punctual realization.

First, as to the delay, Mr. Tucker asserts, that the Board's determination to require, with the transmission of the proceedings in the native languages, an English report, embracing a translation of the petition of appeal, to be answered paragraph by paragraph, has contributed mainly to the delay complained of. On his first taking charge of the office Mr. Tucker ventured to predict this would be the case, from the great number of the appeals preferred; but the Board insisted on having a detailed English report in each case.

Mr. Tucker then refers to his letter, under date June last, in which, he states, he fully exhibited the time occupied in this single branch of a commissioner's duty, and solicited permission to forward the appeals then pending without an English report. Mr. Tucker states: no part of his duty has been more incessantly pressing than that of superintending the sale proceedings of the collectors up to the date of annulment or confirmation by himself. There, he is of opinion, a commissioner's task should finish, not only because his time is very unprofitably occupied in translating petitions, and entering into a defence of his own act, but because it is vicious in principle to allow the officer whose order is appealed against to higher authority, the opportunity to exercise his ingenuity, to prop up and defend his views of the case, which should be decided on its own merits alone. Unless some very glaring or gross mistake has been committed by the commissioner, it is morally certain that his endeavour will be to impress the Board with his own view of the case,—it cannot be otherwise,—and thus the Board, if they look at the commissioner's proceedings at all, must come to the consideration with a prejudiced mind. If on the contrary, the Board allow no weight to the commissioner's report, but decide on the merits of the appeal from what they find recorded in the proceedings in the native languages, then, Mr. Tucker asks, for what end is this report called for? It will not be said that the Board are incapable of coming at the merits without its aid. The civil courts from the lowest grade decide daily suits in which property is transferred from one individual to another, but it was never heard that an appeal, being preferred to a higher tribunal, the judge was required to enter into a lengthened defence of his opinions and in a language foreign and unknown to the appellant. The judge's reasons for the decision he has come to, are recorded in his decree, and he is not permitted to add or to subtract therefrom. Why should the revenue courts alone pursue a different course and occupy the time of their officers in defending decisions already passed, the propriety of, or otherwise, of which, should be tried by the record itself and by nothing else?

With regard to the Government revenue pending an appeal to the Board, Mr. Tucker states, he laid down a rule for himself which he has seen no reason in practice to depart from. If the purchase money is insufficient to cover the balance, and the future kists for a period of one year, he directs the Collector not to give possession. If the sale should be confirmed by the Board, the Government get their arrears of revenue from the amount due to the purchaser, from which date only, the latter's payment will commence. If the sale should be cancelled, it is again advertised for sale for the accumulated balances. By this method the revenue is secured and disputes and adjustments of wassiat on either side are avoided. If, on the other hand, the purchase money is but barely sufficient to cover the arrear due at the time of sale, Mr. Tucker directs the purchaser to be put in possession conditionally, and on his giving security to make good the rents realized by him during his occupancy in the event of the sale being cancelled. In short when he can do it without apprehension of loss, Mr. Tucker keeps the late proprietor in possession till the sale has been confirmed by the Board. The only objection to this system, he remarks, is that it may encourage appeals merely to retain possession. But he has not found it so in practice, and he thinks the other advantages would counterbalance this evil even if it existed.

The Board, under date 6th ultimo, have replied to this communication, and after noticing the sales which gave rise to this discussion, but which it is unnecessary to particularize here, proceed to comment on Mr. Tucker's explanation. As to the first point, namely, that the delay is owing to the practice of the Board "in insisting upon a detailed English report, embracing a translation of the petition of appeal to be answered paragraph by paragraph."

Upon this assertion the Board remark, first that if it be valid at all as an argument, it must apply not only to Patna, but to all the other divisions of which there are but few of less important and lighter duties than Patna; yet the Board have no complaint from other Commissioners, and, what is still more important, they find no corresponding delays, in the sale proceedings of other commissioners. But were they to give every advantage to the argument, by supposing, in the face of facts, that it is very applicable to Patna, though it applies nowhere else, it must still be considered as not confined to one but affecting every Commissioner who has presided over that division. Yet the Board have not received any such intimation from Mr. Tucker's predecessors, who seem to have made light of the evil so seriously felt by him, and who, at any rate, never found it to cause such extraordinary delays, as those to which he declares himself to have been compelled. The inference is inevitable; that the practice Mr. Tucker objects to, if it has the effect which he would attribute to it, has it not, in all divisions, or upon all Commissioners, nor even upon one division in particular, but only upon one single Commissioner, who alone, of many within its influence, finds himself driven to unheard of delays, by the injurious nature of its effects. The Board are unable to make any alteration in their practice to meet this solitary case, even if they could concur with Mr. Tucker that the delay adverted to was owing to the cause adduced.

In the second place, the Board remark upon the explanation above quoted, that it assigns to the Board a practice which they do not observe. The Board do not "insist upon a detailed English report, embracing a translation of the petition of appeal to be answered paragraph by paragraph." See amended orders 27th July 1834, as follows:—

"The body of the letter will contain the objections made by the appellant and the Commissioner's replies inserted oppositely, and it will conclude with a brief intimation of the Commissioner's opinion whether any plea has been advanced, which, in his opinion, affects the validity of the sale.

"When allegations are made which are foreign to the only point (legality) to which by the tenor of paragraph 9 of the orders of Government, date 10th November last, the right of appeal to this Board is restricted: the Commissioners will briefly insert the objection, but opposite to it will merely observe, "not relevant as to legality," under Regulation XI. 1822, Regulation VII. of 1830, or other existing law."

These Commissioners, the Board remark, who strictly observe these orders, do not think it necessary to send a detailed English report, or a translation of the petition, or even to answer it paragraph by paragraph. They merely give the allegations and replies at full length, where those relate to charges of illegal proceeding against themselves, and their subordinates. This is all the Board require and it is easy to shew that this much at least is indispensable, and that Mr. Tucker's arguments against the order do not apply.

The Board then reply to the assumed analogy between the case of a judge trying a cause which is afterwards appealed to a higher power and a commissioner confirming a sale; and urge that in one case the party acts as a judge, but in the other the commissioner is in the position of a defendant in the suit.

Mr. Tucker's mode of proceeding as regards the possession of parties pending the decision of a sale case, is in the Board's judgment, objectionable, and likely to create unnecessary confusion. The procedure which should be adopted in such circumstances, is very simple; but as there is reason to believe a difference of practice prevails, this subject will be separately noticed in a circular about to be issued.

The Board have submitted to Government three propositions, for the improvement of the system under which deputy collectors, under Regulation IX. of 1833, are at present appointed and employed.

First, that the Sudder Board be empowered, at their discretion, to transfer deputy collectors from one district to another within the same division.

Secondly, that a discretionary power of nomination to the office of deputy collector be vested in the Sudder Board, as well as in the Commissioners of Revenue.

Thirdly, that a competent acquirement of the English language be made in future an indispensable condition of appointment to a deputy collectorship.

The Governor of Bengal entirely concurs with the Board, in regard to the first and second of these propositions, and has authorized them to act accordingly; but with regard to the third proposition, his lordship is not prepared to lay down a strict rule which would, in effect, exclude a great number of highly efficient individuals from a much coveted branch of the public service. At the same time his lordship is alive to the superior advantages that would result—in the great economy of time and labour on the part of the superintending officers more especially—from the employment of deputy collectors able to draw up their reports, and settlement statements, and the like, in English. With a view, therefore, to the encouragement of the study of that language, and to the general benefit of the revenue department, the Board are authorized to announce publicly, that when candidates for deputy collectorships are on a par in regard to other qualifications, a preference will be given to the person who is most competent to transact business in English.

A circular to the above effect is now being lithographed, and will be dispatched to all Commissioners, with instructions as to publicity in (say) two days.

The Board have recently addressed Government for orders on the following case that has occurred in the Patna division. In 1828-9 Churs Durveshpore, Muckdumhpore, and Abdal Chuk, were attached by the collector of Patna, professedly under Sec. 13, Regulation II. of 1819, which subjects parties refusing to attend when summoned by the collector in cases of chur lands claimed by Government as liable to assessment to a daily fine, by order of the commissioner, the sum being fixed, and the order confirmed by the Board, but the attachment being in fact in contravention of the law under which it was ostensibly issued, the collector having made it without reference either to the Commissioner or the Board. The case out of which the attachment arose was decided on the 7th February 1834, in favor of Government, the churs in question being declared subject to payment of revenue, and the collections realized by the collector were appropriated thereto. In consequence of which, together with another claim on the part of the proprietors as malikana, they withheld the revenue due from another portion of their estate called Talook Securiash, until it reached with interest and penalty Rs. 13,775. The Commissioner is desirous of adjusting the account by allowing and demanding interest and penalty on both sides, and then striking a balance. The Board, however, according to their construction of the regulation, and considering the manifest irregularity of the attachment, deem that the full amount of the collections on the chur lands prior to the decree and amounting to Rupees 5,325, should be refunded to the zameendais, together with interest at 12 per cent. per annum, and that the demand for penalty on the Government claim should, in consideration to the hardship of the case, be remitted and interest only at 12 per cent. levied from them. Thus reducing the claim on account of revenue from 13,775 Rs. to Rs. 11,939, and allowing the parties an interest on the Rs. 5,325, Rs. 2,740, or altogether the sum of Rs. 7,627, on which principle of adjustment, the Board have sought the sanction of Government.—Englishman, Feb. 11.

PRESIDENCY,—MONDAY, 6TH FEB. 1837.

Present James Pattie and Henry Walters, Esqs., Members, and F. J. Halliday, Esq., Secretary.

The Secretary brought the following case before the Board this day for discussion and orders.

Government. { Regarding Butwarrah Law of Estates in Zillah Rajeshye.

PARTITION OF ESTATES, RAJESHYE.

On the 15th of December, 1835, Mr. R. D. Mangles, Secretary to the Government of Bengal, forwarded to the Sudder Board three Petitions in Original from the co-parceners of an Estate in Zillah Rajeshye, by which, it appeared, that an entire estate was sold for a balance of Revenue due; and Mr. Secretary Mangles conveyed it as the opinion of His Lordship, that under Section XXXIII. Regulation XIX. of 1814, the several shares should have been allowed the option of paying up their proportions of the balance due, and that the portions of the defaulting shares alone, and not the entire estate, should have been sold.

The Board, in April 1836, submitted a question for the consideration of Government, originating in the above case, where a doubt was expressed by Government as to whether the Revenue authorities had any power of annulling Butwarrahs, as Regulation XIX. of 1814 and other Regulations on the subject, did not confer it. The Board argued the following:—

“That in the first place the foregone practice of the late Board of Revenue and of the Sudder Board in respect to the quashing of Butwarrahs, is established by the actual exercise of the power in several cases divided by them from the year 1814 up to the year 1833; and secondly, the fact that though the law does not recognize by an express enactment the power of the Revenue authorities to quash Butwarrahs, it does not appear to them to go the length of denying that power, since in practice it was known to exist when the law was passed. It also seemed inconsistent with analogy of proceeding, that the authority upon which the power of granting applications for Butwarrahs is bestowed by the law, should not equally exercise the power of withdrawing that sanction, whenever it may be clearly apparent that the parties who made the application have no sincere intention of bringing the partition to an issue, and when, so far from fulfilling the requisitions of the law and forwarding the measure to the best of their ability, they protract the Butwarrah to a period of many years, and sanctioned with the enjoyment of the privileges and immunities which it is manifest that the law never contemplated should be extended beyond a moderate and reasonable limit, they withhold their Revenue to the close of every year, without showing the slightest intention to proceed; thus plainly indicating that a fraudulent and not a legitimate purpose induced the original application.

That Regulation XIX. of 1814, contemplates two classes of Butwarrah cases, viz., those in which the co-sharers are all mutually agreed to divide an Estate (clause section IV.), and those in which, one, two, or more proprietors of a Joint Estate held in common tenancy shall be anxious to have separate possession of his, or their respective shares: (clause II. section IV.) and the provisions of clause II. section XVII. of the Regulation in question was evidently enacted only with reference to those co-sharers who, in the latter case, to the injury of the other co-sharers, obstruct and impede a division in order to compel them to produce their accounts, and desist from obstructing the progress of the Butwarrah. No provision, or even allusion is made in the Regulation to the large class of cases, such as those in which the Revenue authorities have exercised the power of quashing the proceedings and declaring the Estates no longer under partition. In the third place, the Board also represented the very serious opposition to the due realization of the Revenue and the hazard of interminable litigation and difficulty, which will be incurred, by denying the validity of all former exercise of the power by the Revenue authorities, and of declaring each and every instance of the exercise of that power illegal. There could be no doubt, that every advantage would be taken of such a construction of the law, to a lamentable extent, which the Board had no immediate means of ascertaining with accuracy, and after going into examples, and instances bearing upon the reasons above given, the Board gave it as their decided opinion, that they saw no means of checking the evils which have been shewn to exist to so serious an extent, unless the Commissioners of Revenue and the Sudder Board of Revenue are entrusted with the power of quashing Butwarrahs whenever those authorities shall be satisfied that the parties have no real intention to bring the proceedings to a decisive issue, and have, in reality, no other purpose or object than that of obtaining for their estate exemption from sale for arrears, until after the close of the year, to the hindrance of the punctual realization of the Revenue. The Board concluded by observing, that the returns to a reference recently made under their orders to the several local authorities, shew that the prompt realization of Revenue to the amount of twenty-four lakhs of rupees per annum, is not merely impeded, but is at present always liable to be protracted until after the close of the year for which it has become due.

On the 8th of November last, Mr. Secretary Mangles forwarded to the Board, under orders of Government, the minute of Mr. Ross, then a member of council, and instructions, that if the deliberations of the Board led them to conclude that a modification of Regulation XIX. of 1814 is called for, the Board should submit a draft of such rules as they would recommend in amendment of the provisions of that law. That the Government entertained the subject as of great importance to the interests of the higher classes of the agricultural community, and, through them, of their tenantry.

We give Mr. Ross's minute in full, it being too short and concise for analization.

NOTE.—It is true, as Mr. Colvin says, that Sections 33 and 34 of Regulation XIX. of 1814, are unaffected by the proposed act referred to by Mr. Melville, but those Sections are not sufficient for the protection of a weak sharer of the joint estate against his more powerful co-sharers.

By the enactments quoted, a sharer of an estate advertised to be sold for the recovery of arrears of Revenue, while under Butwarrah, may save his share from sale by tendering to the Collector, before the day of sale, his portion of the arrear due. But a poor man may not be able to make the required tender if his more powerful co-sharers have collected the rents of the entire estate, and withheld from him his proportion of them. In fact it is only by effecting a timely Butwarrah that a poor sharer can preserve his property from sale for default not his own.

The existing Butwarrah Law (Regulation XIX. 1814) should therefore be amended, for as the Law now stands, a Butwarrah cannot be obtained by a sharer of a joint estate if the other sharers are opposed to it.

(Signed) A. Ross.”

15th September, 1836.

The Board thought that the late alteration as to sales, and the power of a co-partner in a Butwarrah Mehal (if he be himself out of balance to purchase other shares) will sufficiently do away with all the delay and inconvenience which has been experienced, and that no further alteration is required. But the Board were decidedly of opinion that no Butwarrah should commence or be carried on until ordered by the Courts of Law, and that every application for Butwarrah shall be made to the Courts, and that they should, in all their stages, be carried on by the Courts.

Nothing final, however, has been done, in consequence of the Board having agreed on the preparation of the rules proposed in Mr. Secretary Mangles's letter above quoted.

CONSULTATION, —FRIDAY, 20 FEBRUARY.

ABOLITION OF INTEREST ON ARREARS OF REVENUE, ASSAM.

The local authorities at Assam suggested to the Board the abolition of the interest on arrears of Revenue for the following reasons.

That the object of issuing pottahs, at a great expense of time and labor, viz. to define for the ryots' confidence the exact sum which he is to pay in order to prevent oppression, is frustrated by the levy of interest; for as any delay in the payment of a kist makes it necessary to open a running account between the chowdhry and the ryot, the latter, in the state of ignorance common to Assam, can there have no protection against or over the actions of the former.

That the levy of interest almost always falls unjustly, for as the greater number of the ryots contribute small sums under 3 rupees each, and as the chowdhries do not possess sufficient skill and industry to calculate to a nicety what amount each of those who fall in arrears, ought to pay respectively, they usually levy from all so much per rupee, and Captain Bogle, Officiating Collector of Assam, imagined it was generally done on a scale considerably exceeding the demand of Government.

Both Captains Jenkins and Bogle agreed in thinking, that all circumstances considered, the chowdhries and others are partly punctual in their payments; and the former officer, is also of opinion, that the discontinuance of the levy of interest in Assam, will lead to no delay in realizing the revenue of Government. Should it however be found to be productive of procrastination by the ryots, he would propose to meet the evil with a fine of a definite sum per cent. on each term of the kists allowed to elapse without payment.

The Board recommended the propositions of discontinuing the levy made by the local authorities to the favorable consideration of Government, as it would appear, by a reference to the statement from the Revenue accountant, that with the exception of the year 1833-34, the Revenue realized by the levy of interest in Assam has not ever amounted to 3,000 rupees per annum, on an average of five years. That sum the Board submitted, is too small to be worth the labor of collection, considering especially the harassment and annoyance it creates, and the door it opens for fraud and oppression, that the discontinuance of the demand of interest in Assam would, in that respect, assimilate the condition of that country to the state of Arracan where no interest is levied on arrears of Revenue.

The object of Government being to encourage agriculture in Assam, and thereby to increase its population, every facility to population that can possibly be devised, should be given to this waste and desert country. The exaction of interest on arrears of Revenue, is not only inconsistent with the nature of the Revenue system in force in that province, but is totally opposed to its success. Were the obstacle removed, the Board fully anticipate that the inconsiderable sacrifice now recommended, would be more than compensated for, by the increased Revenue which might be expected to be obtained.

FRIDAY, FEB. 10, 1837.

IMPORTANT TO COLLECTORS.

Mr. T. H. Maddock, Officiating Special Commissioner of the Calcutta Division, on the 2d instant, brought to the notice of the Board the delay in the preparation and transmission of Government replies to appeals from Decrees passed in its favor by the Officers employed under the resumption regulations, and that in consequence there are no cases ready to be brought before the Special Commissioners.

The Board have instructed the Commissioners of Dacca, Jessore, and Chittagong, seriously to admonish the Collectors upon the above complaint and to acquaint them, that in the event of an appeal going against Government in consequence of their delays and omissions, they will, beyond doubt, be held personally answerable to Government for the loss sustained.—India Gazette, February 13.

On the 22d of Sept. last, the Commissioner of Patna submitted to the Board extracts of a letter addressed to Mr. Loughman by Mr. Hathorn, Collector of Behar, on the occasion of delivering over to him charge of his office. From these extracts it appeared, that Mr. Hathorn had experienced much difficulty in realizing the revenues of 107 estates, valued in 1,227, which he believed was attributable to their being over assessed; that he had considered that it would be unjust to the proprietors to bring them to sale during the successive unfavourable seasons with which the district had been visited, and that failing to induce parties to settle their accounts, he had exposed them for sale without obtaining any offers, which induced him to place them under attachment about the end of 1835, with a view to making personal enquiries as to the real cause of the default. Mr. Hathorn then stated that the period of his intended visits to these estates coinciding with the arrival of the Commissioner at his sudder station, he was under the necessity of giving up his intentions, and of appointing the head Carmoongo to make the requisite enquiries. The balance of the estates up to the end of 1243, is stated by Mr. Hathorn, to be Rs. 1,70,772, the sum realized by the Carmoongo up to 9th July 1836, Rs. 21,654.

The information appearing insufficient, the Commissioner was requested to make a more full report, and at the same time to state why the Collector had not purchased the estates on account of Government when no bidders were found. Neither the full information called for, nor the explanation required regarding the Collector's conduct, have as yet been received by the Board. With the imperfect knowledge they possess, it would be difficult to say what is the cause of the insolvency of the estates in question. Mr. Tucker thinks there is reason for believing that over assessment forms no part of the cause, and that the mischief, it is more probable, is occasioned by a succession of bad seasons, and, in some instances, by bad management. In support of the former opinion, he adverts to the fact that the highest rate of assessment has been paid for a series of years, but he does not take into consideration, that though the proprietors deprecate the sale and desire an investigation of the resources, they are willing to enter into engagements to pay up the arrears on condition only of a revised assessment. Besides, it is not improbable that the proprietors have hitherto answered the Government demands on the credit of their estates, but have since been denuded of every resource by the succession of bad season. If this supposition, which appears to be corroborated by the statement contained in the petition of some of the proprietors, be correct, it may with some reason be inferred, that the assessment fixed on this and other estates in the six pergunnahs, does not enable the proprietors to provide for a succession of unfavourable seasons.

The Board, however, would not have it understood that the insolvency of these estates, is altogether, or in a very considerable degree, attributable either to the influence of seasons or the pressure of assessment. The real cause can be ascertained only by actual local investigation, until which time the statements of interested parties must obviously be received with much caution and distrust. And when the facts of these very estates having fully satisfied the Government demands for a number of years, is adverted to, coupled with their present insolvency, there appears much ground for apprehending either alienation of resources to large extent, or very extraordinary mismanagement on the part of the proprietors.

The documents which accompany the Board's report to Government, contain numerous references to casualties of season experienced in Behar during the last three fiscal years. This subject, it appears from Mr. Hathorn's letter to Mr. Loughman, had impressed itself on the mind of the Collector, but unfortunately, without leading him to take those steps which were required of him, both by the orders of the superior authorities and by a sense of duty towards the Government. A report required from him on the petition of certain malgozars, of Behar, was left to be furnished by his successor; and the reason assigned for the omission is that although convinced in his own mind that considerable indulgence ought to be shown to the petitioners to enable them to bear up against the "unprecedented calamities" suffered by them, he was afraid that Government would not be disposed to afford relief to the extent required by their necessities. It will appear not a little surprising, say the Board, to his Lordship in Council, that an officer of Mr. Hathorn's standing should fall into such an error of judgement as to deem it preferable that the suffering landholders should rather receive no relief than that the relief should be inadequate, more especially when it is considered that in the total absence of relief their embarrassment would hang on them from year to year, if not terminated by the alienation of entire property.

After noticing other circumstances, the Board recommended that an experienced and intelligent European covenanted officer be immediately deputed to the spot to ascertain not only the defects that have existed, but likewise the measures which are calculated to effect improvement. The Board are likewise of opinion that the success of the investigation depends very materially on bringing these estates to sale, and purchasing them on account of Government, in the absence of offers for them sufficient to cover the outstanding balances. This, they remark, is the only certain means of effecting a thorough enquiry, by divesting the proprietors of all opportunities of thwarting, either by direct or indirect influence, the measures of the local officers. Should it hereafter appear that any of these proprietors are entitled to the particular consideration of Government, the Board are assured that Government will indulgently receive whatever recommendations of that nature may be made, even to the extent of restoring possession of the property.

A reply has been received from Government to this communication, in which his lordship remarks with great regret, the serious errors into which Mr. Collector Hathorn appears to have fallen, and requires the explanation of that officer's conduct, which the Board have called for. His lordship would be entirely disposed to concur with the Board's recommendation that an intelligent and experienced covenanted officer be deputed to the spot were the services of a competent officer of the class available for the duty, without withdrawing them in the middle of the season for Mofussil operations, from business of equal importance. His lordship has, therefore, appointed Molvee Khyrat Ali, whose abilities are very highly spoken of, to commence the necessary enquiry.—Englishman, February 14.

CONSULTATION,—THURSDAY, 2D FEBRUARY.

SETTLEMENT OF ESTATE—JESSORE.

Mr. Secretary Mangles, with reference to the orders of Government of the 1st May 1832, and 3d March 1834, transmitted on the 20th December 1836, an extract of a letter from the Court of Directors, dated the 9th March 1831, and requested that the Board in furnishing the Report of the settlement of Pergunnah Syedpore and of other estates in Jessore, should also supply the information required in the extract which we give below.

EXTRACT of a letter from the Honorable the Court of Directors in the Revenue Department, dated the 9th March 1831, No. 8.
(78 and 79). The Judicial powers to be vested in Collectors according to Regulation IX. 1825, have as yet been considered only to the Collector of which the ryots are liable at the hands of zemindars and other superior landholders, and the still existing imperfections of the means of protection which your Government affords to them. The powers to be vested in Collectors by provision of the Regulation referred to, were intended to supply what was found deficient in the means of protection afforded by the regular courts. But the circumstances brought to light in the proceedings before us, not excepting the misconception and the mistakes of which you had occasion to complain in the communications of the Board of Revenue in the Lower Provinces, are far from impressing us with a confidence in the remedy. We trust that you have been very attentive to the proceedings of the Collector of Jessore, in applying that remedy to the redress of the injuries sustained by the ryots and others in the Kiamut Pergunnah, Syedpore. We expect that a minute report of all that has been done by that officer, will have been procured by you and transmitted to us, and that we shall find some ground in it on which a judgment may be formed, whether the end we desire to see attained is really provided for, by the means in which you now confide. We abstain from saying more at present, both because we desire fuller information, and because we cannot but hope that this subject has particularly engaged your attention, among the other particulars connected with the late extensive changes in the system of superintendence. We must, however, remark, that since the year for which Mr. Maxwell was vested with the special powers in the Pergunnah of Syedpore must have expired in August 1827, we can see no good reason for the long delay which has left us without any report of the proceedings up to the present date.

Shahabad, and to the Collector of Jessore in respect to a single Pergunnah.

(True Extract.)

(Signed) ROSS D. MANGLES,

Secretary to the Government of Bengal.

The facts of this extraordinary case are as follows :—Mr. Acting Secretary Molony's letter of the 4th August 1826, vested the Collector of Jessore with the special powers described in Section XX. Regulation VII. 1822 in Pergunnah Syedpore for a period of one year from the date of the letter, as a preventative against the serious evils entailed upon the ryots of the above establishment in Putnee by one Mahommed Ameer, in consequence of the illegal and oppressive conduct of that individual. The letter also intimated, that it would be extremely satisfactory to Government if Mahommed Ameer could be induced to relinquish his purchase on receiving a fair compensation from the trust estate. Mahommed Ameer expressed his willingness to relinquish the Putnee Talooks, provided he was re-imbursed the amount of purchase which he had paid, and was allowed a compensation of ₹2,000 rupees on account of the expense incurred in the building of a Kutcherry, &c. The Government, at the recommendation of the Board, ordered the acceptance of Mahommed Ameer's terms, and the Collector of Jessore was instructed to resume the Putnee estates and suspend adoption of the special measures directed in Mr. Molony's letter.

Some discussion ensued respecting the formation of a jummaabundy for those Estates, and after a reference by the Board to Government on the subject, Mr. Secretary H. T. Prinsep, on the 30th of August 1827, under orders, directed fresh measurement and hustaband of the Mehals to be commenced upon with a view to a fair jummaabundee being made at the current rates of the neighbouring Zemindaries, and that the permission to retain land as Lakhiraj should not be too readily conceded to ryots; but that the jummaabundee should be made on the principle of demanding full revenue for the lands, and when made, that pottahs should be granted to the ryots in the same manner as would be done were the Para. 18. The proceedings referred to in these paragraphs are important as evidence of the gross oppression to Estates under khas management from any other cause. The collections were directed to be either made by a Suzawul, or formed under stipulations to maintain the jumabundee.

On the above orders being communicated to Mr. Commissioner Barwell, that officer, on the 21st of June 1830, submitted to the Board the settlement papers of the Putnee Estates above alluded to, from which it appeared that Mr. Maxwell had fixed the jumma at rupees 18,624-2-1 in perpetuity, being rupees 3,495-2-13-2 above the average jumma of the two previous years. The Board expressed themselves satisfied with jumma bundy and presuming that the Suzawul had given adequate security, and would be required to account regularly for his collections, as well as to make his remittances punctually to the Sudder Treasury, authorized the management of the Estates to be continued in his hands. They at the same time directed the Commissioners attention to a large quantity of uncultivated land in each of the Mehals for which the neighbouring ryots might be encouraged to enter into jungle hoore engagements, and that the surplus difference between the Putnee jumma, and that now fixed, should be remitted annually to the Government agents to replace the sum refunded to Mahommed Ameer.

It did not appear that Mr. Maxwell had particularly attended to the instructions of Government regarding the mode in which the settlement should have been made.

The Lakhitaj lands were not included among the assets of the Estates for the reason that "none of them came under the original Putnee settlement." Moreover, it seemed Mr. Maxwell's intention to resume them for the advantage of Government. It should be observed that though the object of Government in directing a new measurement and hustabod was to relieve the ryots from the pressure under which they laboured, the circumstances not sufficiently adverted to in the settlement conducted by Mr. Maxwell, and the result was, that the ryots were burdened with an assessment in the proportion of 6 to 5, greater than that of which they complained, and it was subsequently brought to the notice of the Board that the ryots were not less dissatisfied with Mr. Maxwell's assessment, than they had been with the former one. Government, in directing the prevailing rates of the neighbouring Pergunnahs to be taken as the standard, contemplated that the assessment formed on that principle would be more favorable to the cultivators, than that imposed by the late Putneedar.

The inequality of the assessment became manifest in a short time, as on the 18th September of the same year, the Commissioner reported that the management of the past year, respecting pergunnahs Khalispore and Moheswarpassa had lacked prosperity in the lands of the Suzawul, and recommended for the sanction of the Board an arrangement made by the Collector to let in farm those two estates for three years at a jumma of 1,600 rupees less than that fixed by Mr. Maxwell. As no explanation was given in regard to either the heavy balances above alluded to, or to the necessity of farming the two mehals, Khalispore and Moheswarpassa for 1,600 rupees less than the rental fixed by Mr. Maxwell's jumma bundy, the Board called upon the Commissioner for the necessary information, they at the same time observed, that provided the rates of Mr. Maxwell's jumma bundy were not infringed, the arrangement in regard to Tuppeh Sobinah was apparently unobjectionable. But the Board finding their repeated endeavours to procure explanations unavailing, authorized the Commissioner on the 17th June, 1834, to let the Estates in farm on condition that Mr. Maxwell's jumma bundy should not be disturbed.

Advertisements inviting farming tenders were repeatedly promulgated, but unsuccessfully. The Board consequently, on the 11th June, 1833, at the recommendation of the Commissioner sanctioned the sale of the two mehals under Putnee tenure, at a jumma fixed by Mr. Maxwell. No purchaser came forward although several expressed their readiness to purchase if the jumma were reduced, and Mr. Acting Collector Mills observed, that though he could not uphold Mr. Maxwell's settlement, he did not attribute the difficulty, so much to a deficiency of assets in the mehals themselves, as to the inequality of the assessment, it being in some cases too high, and in others too low, and after a few explanatory remarks, gave it as his opinion, that an abatement of 1,000 rupees in the Mofussil should be made as being likely to afford satisfaction to the parties. The Commissioner, however, recommended, that previous to sanctioning such a step, the actual resources of the mehals should be ascertained by a revised settlement, of the expediency of which, there would be little doubt, it was accordingly sanctioned by the Board on the 24th September, 1833, and Mr. C. Grant was entrusted with the duty of revising the settlement, and by his report appeared, that although he called upon the ryots to make their objections in writing against Mr. Maxwell's jumma bundy, not one durkhast was received, nor could he induce them to agree to that jumma bundy. It was also Mr. Grant's conviction, that is, if objection could be taken to Mr. Maxwell's settlement it should be on the part of the state; for that not only did the rates appear to be moderate but that Mr. Maxwell's, after having fixed his rates on the different sorts of soil, and having added up the sum demandable from each individual, made, in almost every instance, large deductions. Mr. Grant ascribed the unwillingness of the ryots to agree to Mr. Maxwell's settlement to their obstinacy, and to their conviction, that nothing higher than that settlement will be enforced. Mr. Pigou is also of opinion, that they are entitled to no sort of indulgence, his experience of their conduct, both while Judge and Commissioner, having convinced him that they are turbulent, and unreasonably reluctant to pay their rent.

CONSULTATION,—TUESDAY 7TH FEBRUARY.

MR. BAUGMOODEE—JUNGLE MEHALS.

On the 16th January 1842, the Commissioner of Burdwan reported the demise of Bhoopnath Singh, Zemindar of Baugmoodee, in Zillah Jungle Mehals, leaving a minor of the age of seven years, and suggested that the estate should be placed under the Court of Wards. The Board requested the Commissioner, to call upon the Collector for a report to the Sudder Jumma of Baugmoodee, in reply to which, the Commissioner of Burdwan submitted an original letter from the Acting Collector of the Jungle Mehals, which stated the Sudder Jumma of the estate at rupees 2,266. On receipt of the above information, the Board instructed the Commissioner to direct the Collector to report on such arrangements as he would propose, in the event of the estate being taken under the management of the Court of Wards. The Commissioner recommended that the widow of the late zemindar should be entrusted with the management of the Mehal. But the Board authorized the estate to be taken under Ward management, as they observed that they would not sanction the widow being entrusted with it, and ordered the Collector to invite farming tenders.

On tenders being invited, but one person came forward, the Rance Chandmonee, the mother of the minor above alluded to, and the Commissioner recommended her being allowed a farming lease for five years at the annual Jumma of rupees 5,501. The Board sanctioned the farming lease, directing the security bond to be duly registered, and noticed to the Governor General's Agent, that arrears of the Government Revenue due from the Mehal Bhaugmoondee amounted to 1,004, nearly a moiety of the annual demand, which ought to have been discharged previous to other disbursements prescribed in the Board's circular order of the 24th August 1832.

The Governor-General's Agent requested a copy of the above order, and on the 28th of January 1836, reported that when the Rannee, mother of the minor, took the farm of Bhaugmoondee, she engaged to be answerable for the outstanding balances amounting to rupees 4,836-7-3. The agent also promised to be more particular in sanctioning remissions for the future and further informed the Board that the security of the farmer, the Rajah of Jaulidha, was considered worthless, and it was found necessary twelve months ago to place the estate under a Suzawul; by whom the collections were latterly made. That the Rajah was deeply involved, and his Malgoorazree had fallen so much in arrears, that it was also found necessary to appoint a Suzawul to collect the Government revenue of his lands. The agent was also of opinion that the sale of any portion of estates belonging to the zemindars in his agency, would lead to disturbances, as they are ~~not~~ so much involved, and that their security would, in no case, be received; but that if the Rannee mother could furnish other approved security, she should again be allowed to resume the farm.

The Board, on the 9th May, 1836, requested to be furnished with detailed particulars of the sum of rupees 3,589-15-0-2, which the agent had reported he had called upon the Rannee farmer to pay, and would state what portion of the outstanding farming rental of the Mehal has been realized, and whether she has offered approved security to continue in her farming engagements of the estate in question. The agent submitted two statements, the first of which shewed the Mofussil demands, collections, and balances of Baugmoondee from 1,240 to 1,242, from which it appeared that the balance was rupees 2,449-5-8-2, forming a portion of rupees 3,589-15-0-2, which had been remitted by the agent; and the other exhibited the arrears due from the Rannee farmer, on the 1st June 1836. In consequence of Saugurnarrain Sing, a Shikumnee Zemindar of Nowagurh, having become surety for the farmer, and his surety being considered good by the assistant to the Governor-General's Agent, the Rannee was allowed, on the 23d September 1835, to commence the collections. The circumstance was not however reported to the agent by his assistant, until the former reached Bancoorah in February last. The agent made every exertion to recover the balance from Saugurnarrain Sing; but being unable to realize it, on the 2d of April last, directed a lot bundee to be prepared, and the property pledged by Saugurnarrain to be advertized for sale, in the hope of inducing him to provide for the payment of the arrears of the Mehal Bhaugmoondee. Immediately on learning that his property had been advertized for sale, Saugurnarrain proceeded to the assistant's kutcherry at Bancoorah, to make arrangements for liquidating the arrears, but died there on the 2d May last, leaving a minor son. The Mehal Bhaugmoondee was consequently again placed under sequestration, and enquiries were instituted regarding the security of a competent Suzawul under whose management it would be desirable to retain it until the minor proprietor of Baugmoondee came of age. The agent concluded by recommending, that if the arrears of Baugmoondee could be recovered from the minor son of the late Saugurnarrain Sing, a person should be appointed to the collection of the rents of the property pledged by the surety in preference to selling the same.

The Board, previous to passing orders on the case, directed the agent to submit for their information a copy of the security bond of the late Saugurnarrain, in order to ascertain if it rendered liable the property of the deceased, now of the minor, who is heir at law. The agent furnished a copy of the bond, and the consequence was, that the Board transmitted to him a revised form of a security bond. The agent, in acknowledging the receipt of it, explained that the estate of the late Saugurnarrain Sing was a jungle estate, the sale of which was likely to give rise to disturbances, and was unadvisable. That his assistant at Maunbhoon had been instructed against taking such estate in security for the future, and with references to existing circumstances, he thought it preferable to recover the balances of Baugmoondee by collecting the rents of the landed property pledged.

The Board, after maturely considering the whole of the correspondence and circumstances connected with this case, directed that the Governor-General's agent should be informed of the very unsatisfactory mode of procedure adopted in many respects, and sanctioned in others, by the agent, and after a review of all the explanations given by him, the Board thought that it was the duty of the agent to have severely censured the mismanagement of his assistant, Mr. Hannington, and have annulled the whole of his proceedings, and the remission to the Rannee of rs. 3,589-15-0-2 by the agent, was quite unauthorized, as the Board did not think themselves empowered to do such a thing. They have informed the agent, that they will hold him liable for the balance now amounting to rupees 9,107-3-6-2, as it was only through very great mismanagement and neglect that so large a balance was allowed to accrue, and that Mr. Hannington should be informed that he will be held responsible pecuniarily and personally, should an eventual loss occur, and that he (Mr. Hannington) should be warned against a repetition of such lax and injudicious proceedings.—India Gazette, February, 15.

CHARGES AGAINST MR. COLLECTOR ROBERT WALKER.

Charges having been preferred by Mr. Robert Good against Mr. Robert Walker (now out of employ), late collector of Mymensing, an investigation took place under the orders of Government, dated March 1833, to report on Mr. Walker's public conduct in general. A recent dispatch has again brought this subject to the notice of the Board. But we give the proceeding from the commencement of the report.

FIRST CHARGE.

That on the 1st of April 1832, Nazir Poucet Lol, with the knowledge of Mr. Walker, and for the purpose of liquidating a debt due by that gentleman to his late Sheristader, Raj Kisheon Chowdree, who had stood security for his debt for a considerable sum, summoned the omlah of the Mymensing collectorate, to the house of the treasurer, Joogul Kishore Sein, and there required them to contribute to a subscription for an immediate remittance to Calcutta, and that the said omlah, accordingly, were forced to contribute a sum exceeding 3,000 Rs. in amount in cash and by assignments on their salaries, which was received by Poucet Lol for the purpose aforesaid.

REPORT ON THE FIRST CHARGE.

The first point which should have been established in this case by the prosecutor, is the alleged fact of Mr. Walker having been in debt to Raj Kissen Chowdree in the manner stated. We have, however, as yet, been able to obtain no proof of it, either in the course of the investigation of this charge, or of the contents of letters [dates set forth] in which the subject is reviewed. In the prosecutor's lists of witnesses there are the names of seven individuals, residents in Calcutta, by whose evidence, we imagine, it was intended that the alleged debt, and perhaps the appropriation of the alleged extortion should be proved. But, it will be perceived, that Mr. Good has altogether failed to furnish the information required by the Board, to enable that authority to examine the Calcutta witnesses, although repeatedly called on by us to do so.

With regard to the extortion charged, one witness only (No. 24) has deposed to the fact, but he does not implicate Mr. Walker in the transaction. All the other witnesses either say they know nothing of the matter, or that they heard of it only, but not of Mr. Walker having been concerned in the extortion. Under these circumstances we feel bound to acquit Mr. Walker of this charge.

SECOND CHARGE.

That Issurchunder, formerly a mohurrir in the collector's office at Mymensing, had been called upon by Poucet Lal, in April 1832, to contribute Rs. 70 towards a subscription for an immediate remittance to Calcutta, in liquidation of a debt due by Mr. Walker to his late sheristadar, Raj Kishen Chowdree was unable to pay more than 25 Rs. of the sum required, and that he was, therefore, suspended from his office by Mr. Walker. That the sum of Rs. 700 was paid by Goluck Roy, and received by Poucet Lal, with a view to place the said Goluck Roy in the situation of the late incumbent, Issurchunder; and that the said Issurchunder having been reinstated in his office by the Commissioner, was forced to resign, every distressing mode of annoyance, having been adopted and practised by and through Poucet Lal, in order to compel him to do so.

REPORT ON THE SECOND CHARGE.

It certainly does appear that Mr. Walker suspended Issurchunder from office, but there is no proof whatever that he did so, because the former failed to pay up the 70 Rs. said to have been demanded from him. The real cause of his suspension is stated to have been the loss of some paper. Twenty-two persons have been examined in this case on the part of the prosecution, not one of whom says he was an eye-witness of the sale of Issurchunder's situation to Goluck Roy, or of the payment of any money on that account. But Gopal Dhur deposes that he heard from Goluck Roy that he paid Rs. 700 to Poucet Lal for the situation. This, however, the said Goluck Roy has denied; and Gopaul Chund, Lokenath Chowdree, and Kalepersaud Surmu, have given evidence in a similar way, with this difference, that they name Gungaparsaud (Goluck Roy's father) as their authority for what they heard, and they do not specify any particular sum as the amount paid. The rest of the witnesses either declare that they know nothing of the transaction, or what they do state amounts on the most to hearsay. And it has not been proved that Issurchunder was ultimately forced to resign his situation in consequence of the ill usage he experienced from Poucet Lal. We, therefore, pronounce Mr. Walker on this charge, Not Guilty.

THIRD CHARGE.

That Soebchunder Chatterjee, late head writer of the collector's office, absconded in August 1830, and that although his duties were performed from the 1st of September to the 22nd October 1830 (when Mr. Bird was appointed to the situation) by the under clerks, Messrs. Ward and Jordan, yet they were not paid the salary of the situation mentioned for the period above stated, amounting to about Rs. 119, notwithstanding their having petitioned to that effect that the said amount was not carried to the credit of Government, though two years had elapsed; and the Government accounts from September 1830 to October 1832 had been transmitted to the superior offices, but was embezzled by Mr. R. Walker. And that after information had been given of the said embezzlement to the local Commissioner, by the prosecutor, the said embezzlement and other similar ones, were brought to credit in the books of the Collectors' office and not before.

REPORT ON THE THIRD CHARGE.

In our opinion it does not follow that because Messrs. Ward and Jordan performed the duties of the situation of head writer during the short period it was vacant, they were, therefore, entitled to the salary attached to it in addition to their own, which appears to have been their claim. We therefore impute no blame to Mr. Walker for not having complied with such application, particularly under the circumstances stated by him. With regard to the charge of embezzlement against Mr. Walker, it has been completely disproved by the books of the office and the evidence of the witnesses adduced by the prosecutor, from which it is clear that the money said to have been embezzled has been all along in deposit in the treasury, and never was removed therefrom. And as to the delay which occurred in bringing that sum to the credit of Government in the books, there may have been neglect and irregularity in this, but in our judgment nothing criminal.

FOURTH CHARGE.

That the late commissioner of the Dacca division, Mr. C. Tucker, had, on the 28th December 1831, sanctioned the disbursement of Rs. 106 for two almirahs, four chairs, and carpets for the use of the Mymensing Collector's office, and that a warrant was issued in January 1832 to the treasurer to disburse the said sum which was accordingly charged under the head "inefficient balance", for the said month. That though ten months had elapsed since the disbursement of Rs. 60 for the two almirahs, they were not purchased, but the said amounts embezzled by Mr. Robert Walker. And that after the prosecutor had lodged his information, and not until Mr. Dunbar had taken charge of the collector's office, were the said two almirahs purchased for forty rupees.

REPORT ON THE FOURTH CHARGE.

The evidence for the prosecution fully establishes that the two almirahs and all the articles included in the estimate were purchased, partly in Mr. Walker's and partly in Mr. Dunbar's time, and are now in the collector's office, leaving one rupee six annas of the amount of the estimate unexpended, which is still in the treasury; thus demonstrating that this charge of embezzlement against Mr. Walker, is wholly without foundation.

FIFTH CHARGE.

That Chunder Seekar Barat, formerly a mohurrir in the collector's office, was compelled to resign his situation in consequence of the annoyance he experienced from the late Sheristadar, Raj Kishen Chowdree, his brother Gope-Kissen Chowdree, and their nephew Govindchund Chowdree, with no other object than to cause a vacancy for the said Gopee Kissen Chowdree, who was accordingly appointed to the said Barat's situation and also the record-keepership, drawing the full salary of both these offices. That the said situation was afterwards made over to Govindchunder Chowdree (the nephew of Raj Kissen and Gopee Kissen) who was obliged to quit it in consequence of having been disgraced by Poucet Lal, who usually selects and recommends candidates for offices in the Collectorship. And that the said Poucet Lal, with the permission and knowledge of Mr. Walker, sold the said appointment for Rs. 350 to Ramlochan Mojumdar, the present incumbent, who was the highest bidder for it.

REPORT ON THE FIFTH CHARGE.

Of the eight witnesses examined in this case, Harroo Pureshad Roy and Churree Sunker Corrae, they heard from Kashes Mojumdar and Ramlochan, that some money had been paid to Poucet Lal to secure the vacant situation for Ramlochan; but the said Kashes Mojumdar and Ramlochan deny the truth of the statement

Three other witnesses (names them) also give similar hearsay testimony, the last naming Mr. Riley as his authority, and the two former none at all. There is no further evidence against Mr. Walker, we therefore acquit him of the charge.

SIXTH CHARGE.

Notwithstanding and in direct violation of the resolution passed by Government in the General Department on the 7th of February 1828, the Revenue Accountant's circular of 1829, and the Local Commissioner's letter of the same year, Mr. Walker had not brought to the credit of Government several sums [subjoined], the same being unclaimed salaries on account of vacancies of the fixed establishment of the Mymensing collectorship, but through his official influence had caused, by the aid and connivance of the native treasurer, the said sums to be surreptitiously taken out of the public treasury with the deliberate intent to defraud the Government of the said sums. [Here follow the items.] With having restored the above sums, amounting to Rs. Rs. 369, into the public treasury and brought them to the credit of Government in the month of October 1832, after the prosecutor's representation on the subject had been made to Mr. Commissioner Middleton, with no other view than to screen himself from the charge of embezzlement.

REPORT ON THE SIXTH CHARGE.

The embezzlements here charged are numerous, but the circumstances connected with each item and that which formed the subject of the third charge, are precisely the same. Our report, therefore, on that case, with the exception of that point of it, which relates to the claims of the writers, is entirely applicable to this; and we accordingly beg leave to refer to it as expressing our opinion with respect to the next charge also.

On the 9th April 1833, Government communicated to the Commission, [in effect] that the interference of Mr. Good with the proceedings of the Commissioner shall no longer be permitted, but that Mr. Walker's public conduct shall be subject to the strictest enquiry, both as regards the charges preferred by Mr. Good, and any other circumstances which may come to the knowledge of the special Commissioners. This scrutiny was gone into, and a report drawn up thereupon, the substance of which may be gathered from the final paragraph as follows:—

"The Board having required from us the decided expression of our opinion with respect to Mr. Walker, we declare, that in the absence of all proof of guilt, he is, on every principle of justice, entitled to a general verdict of acquittal and restoration to office."

Mr. Pattle, the senior member, was not satisfied with the non-transmission of several papers which he considered of much importance in this investigation. He urged that it was necessary the whole record should be before the Board, and that Mr. Walker should, with reference to the debt alleged due by him to the sheristadar, he required specifically to state, if Raj Kissen Chowdree were his creditor when appointed sheristadar, and if he were, to what amount,—whether still his creditor, or if paid, when and what manner paid. Mr. Pattle entered minutely into the evidence forwarded to him. This minute is voluminous. Further enquiry appeared to him indispensable. And further enquiry was made accordingly. The special commission being dissolved, the Board conducted the investigation, as regards witnesses in Calcutta. The result of this subsequent investigation may be gathered from a letter addressed by the government to the Sudder Board under date 14th July, 1834:

His honor in council observed that the special Commission appointed to conduct the enquiry regarding Mr. Walker, recorded in the first instance, the following opinion on his case generally; (see concluding paragraph of the report above.) The result of their further investigation of Mr. Walker's proceedings in the case of Rajkissen Roy, the former seristadar of the Mymensing collectorship, was, however, thus stated in the concluding paragraph of their subsequent report, of July 25th, 1833. "With respect to Mr. Walker, we have now to declare, that in our judgment, his conduct in the case of Rajkissen Roy was quite unjustifiable; and we must add, that it has left in our minds, an impression with respect to his official character in general by no means favourable.

The Board detailed at length the sentiments formed by them on a review of the circumstances attending the nomination, appointment, and removal, of the individual referred to, and of those connected with the suspicious character of several drafts drawn from the Mymensing collectorship on the General Treasury, and traced to that person, and to Mr. Hughes, attorney at Calcutta, by whom Rajkissen Roy was originally recommended to Mr. Walker's patronage, and who avowed himself to have acted on several occasions as Mr. Walker's attorney. Copies of this detail were communicated to Mr. Walker, and a full opportunity afforded him of urging any facts or considerations by which the unfavourable impression expressed in them could be removed. His honor in council entirely concurred in the opinion intimated by the Board, that the explanations offered by Mr. Walker, on these points, are quite insufficient and unsatisfactory.

The government, therefore, concurred in the general remarks, recorded by the Board on this part of the investigation, and which are as follow:—

"On the whole, the Board are of opinion, that the facts elicited in regard to Raj Kissen Roy's leave of absence in February 1832, to the charge of corruption adduced against him by the collector, and never at all followed up, and to the length of time during which the alleged misconduct of the seristadar, was kept from the knowledge of the Commissioner, are very discreditable to Mr. Walker's official character, which again, the circumstances connected with the drafts, as above detailed, lay open to the still graver suspicion, upon strong presumptive evidence of having been indebted to his seristadar.

Under these circumstances his honor in council considered it proper to resolve that Mr. Walker be finally removed from the Collectorship of Mymensing, and placed, from the date of his suspension from that office, on the allowances of a civil servant out of employ, until the pleasure of the Court of Directors can be ascertained with regard to his future disposal.

The case was submitted to the Court of Directors, and a despatch has been received, under date 21st March last, of which the following is an extract:—

"It is possible, as suggested by the special commissioners, that further explanations may be obtained through Rajkissen Chowdree, regarding the draft transactions, which you will of course immediately report to us, with any additional proceeding you may take. Raj Kissen must not, however, be restored to office, unless he furnishes a complete and satisfactory account of these transactions.

MEMORANDUM, FEBRUARY 11TH, 1836.

Raj Kissen Chowdree attended this day at the Board and being asked if he is able to give any information on the subject alluded to by the Honorable Court, [see extract above] declares that he is unable to give any information on the subject beyond what he has already furnished in his deposition before the Board of July 12th, 1832. But that he is willing, if called upon, to explain fully the nature of his transactions with Mr. Hughes, with which Mr. Walker had and has no concern.—Englishman.

In June last, Mr. M. A. Bignell submitted a petition, on behalf of the Rajah of Tipperah, praying for the reversal of the orders of Mr. Commissioner Dampier, directing the Collector to enforce against the Rajah, sections 14 and 15 of Regulation 9 of 1833.

Mr. Bignell set forth, that some time since the Rajah was called upon by the Collector to give in Zemindaree papers comprised under the denomination of "village accounts." In compliance with this requisition the Rajah furnished the best accounts he was able to make out, but which were necessarily imperfect. The Collector objecting to these, the Rajah desired that, in order to enable him to prepare the accounts in such way as the revenue authorities desired, he might be favoured with a form of the papers required, and that four years might be allowed him to measure his extensive zemindaree, without doing which it was impossible for him to render the accounts with any degree of accuracy. This petition was sent to the Collector, with a recommendation by the Commissioner that its prayer should be granted and the Commissioner forwarded it to the Sudder Board, expressing his opinion, strongly in favour of the reasonableness of the application. The general accuracy of the above statement is strengthened by a Persian rohnakree of Mr. Dampier himself. From this, it appears, that the Collector having last year struck off of his file, certain summary suits for arrears of rent instituted by the Rajah, on the ground that the putwarree papers had not been filed according to Regulation 9, of 1833, the Rajah appealed to the Commissioner, who ordered the Collector to investigate all such suits, inasmuch as a petition for a delay of four years had been forwarded for approval to the Sudder Board by the local authorities, and no answer had been received. In consequence of the above orders of the Commissioner, the Rajah's suits against his defaulting tenants were admitted and adjudicated, in due course, until 9th May last, when the Commissioner wrote to the Collector, directing the enforcement of sections 14 and 15, Regulation 9, 1833.

On the 9th of May last, Mr. Commissioner Dampier announced to the Board an entire change in his opinion, stating his belief of the Rajah's previous insincerity in the matter of the village accounts, and advising them that he had recalled his instructions to the Collector, leaving the matter entirely in the hands of the Board. "This mode of leaving the matter entirely in the hands of the Board," says the latter in reply to Mr. Dampier, "it now appears was the very singular one of directing the Collector with great urgency to enforce all the penalties of Regulation IX. of 1833, against the Rajah—to throw out all his suits pending, or to be filed hereafter, and to advertise his estates with the utmost strictness in case of a failure on his part to meet the instalments as they fell due.

The Board then contrast the Commissioner's letters of June 1835, and May 1836, censuring his proceedings in this matter as not only irregular and inconsistent but harsh and inconsiderate. They state that Mr. Dampier must have seen in the communications of the Board, their strong desire to facilitate in every possible way the rajah's efforts to retrieve his affairs,—a desire founded no less upon justice and humanity than prudence and expediency. They express their reluctance to interfere with the orders of their subordinate officers but in the present case they are constrained to suspend, the Commissioner's orders of the 9th and 21st May, and to direct him to restore to the file all the suits of the Rajah of Tipperah which have been struck off in consequence of those orders; to allow the Rajah full power to secure his rents by filing suits in future, and three years from the date of instructions for the preparation of village accounts.

Mr. Dampier, in his reply, brings to the notice of the Board, that he did not consider himself by the previous recommendation of indulgence to be shewn to the Rajah, precluded from taking steps to ascertain if that indulgence was abused, and cancel it, if such appeared to be the case. He enters at length into the delay on the part of the Rajah, offering explanations in regard to his order, and suggests the necessity of taking a written engagement from the Rajah that he will produce once in six months to the Collector, proofs of his having been in earnest in the prosecution of measures for the production of the putwarree papers, to be reported to the Board, and also that he should be given to understand that the continuance of the indulgence depends on his showing himself to be sincere in his endeavours to produce the papers.—Englishman.

CONSULTATION, — WEDNESDAY, 15th FEBRUARY.

IMPORTANT TO INDIGO PLANTERS — POWER OF RYUTS — ZILLAH PUNNA.

On the 4th instant, Mr. Bignell, constituted attorney for Mr. John Russel, by address to the Secretary, requested him to bring the following circumstances to the notice of the Board.

That in March 1835, Mr. Russel, took a lease from Government for ten years of certain lands in the Deputy-Collectorate of Punnah, at an annual rent of sicca rupees 4,500; that in the succeeding year pottahs had been granted to ryuts by the Collector for the greatest portion of the cultivable lands comprised in Mr. Russel's Ejarah. That shortly after Bignell's client had obtained possession, Mr. Studdert persuaded many of the ryuts that their pottahs gave them an absolute proprietary right in the soil, which they were at liberty to transfer, by sale or otherwise, to any party they might please. That Mr. Studdert purchased a great number of these pottahs and then re-transferred them to their former holders (or rather granted a species of sub-pottah) on the condition they should not cultivate any indigo for Mr. Russel. That Mr. Studdert petitioned the Deputy-Collector to sanction these sales and grants, and to make the necessary transfers in the sherista of the Collectorate. That under these circumstances Mr. Bignell applied for the interference of the Sudder Board to protect his client in the enjoyment of his rights under his lease from Government; and that the Board on the 3d October last, after a very careful consideration of the whole case, passed their orders, declaring that the pottahs conveyed no transferable rights, and directing the Deputy-Collector to make known to the ryuts that the transfers being illegal, they could not be recognized by the Revenue Authorities.

At the time the above order was issued, it was hoped, it would have proved effectual for the protection of Mr. Russel, and would probably have done so, had the then Deputy-Collector, Mr. Ogilvie, continued in his appointment; but circumstances had since occurred which obliged Mr. Bignell again to solicit the attention of the Board to the case.

Many of the ryuts who had transferred their pottahs as above mentioned having failed to discharge their rents, Mr. Russel, in conformity with the regulations, procured the deputation of an ameen to attach the personal property of the defaulters. The attachment took place on the 17th of August last, and on the succeeding day, the 18th, the arrears due were deposited with the moonisiff by certain parties on behalf of Mr. Studdurt, whom the ryots stated to be proprietor of the jotes, as they termed the lands held under the pottahs granted by the Collector. The sums thus deposited, Mr. Russel declined to receive, as the moonsiff required the receipts to be given in the name of the party depositing, and to have done this, would of course have been a recognition by Mr. Russel of Mr. Studdurt as his tenant, and besides, the costs of the attachment were withheld. Mr. Russel, therefore, petitioned the moonsiff for the sale of the distrained property. The case having been represented to the Deputy-Collector, that officer directed the moonsiff to postpone the sales, and to forward the money to his office, and on the 8th September passed an order, to the effect, that Mr. Russel might take the arrears due to him; (meaning it was presumed, without prejudice to the question in dispute, for Mr. Russel gave the receipts in the names of the original pottah holders); but that as to the costs of the attachment and subsequent expenses, a proper order would be given when the case was settled. Neither the petition of Mr. Russel's mookther, written in Bengallee, nor Mr. Ogilvie's order, clearly exhibit the facts of the case; but from the date of the latter, it was thought sufficiently apparent that the Deputy-Collector meant his decision as to the costs, to be dependant upon the result of the reference Mr. Russel had made to the superior authorities on the subject of the illegality or otherwise of the transfer of the pottahs. It is very natural the Deputy-Collector should have intended this, for if the transfers were legal, Mr. Russel's proceedings might certainly be held to be vexatious, as there is no doubt he would have obtained payment, had he chosen to recognize Mr. Studdurt's alleged rights, while, on the other hand, if the transfers were illegal, it was quite clear Mr. Russel had acted with perfect propriety, and was entitled to all his costs. Mr. Bignell was also informed by his client, that Mr. Ogilvie did in fact verbally express himself in open Court to the above effect.

The question of the costs does not appear to have again come before Mr. Ogilvie, and that gentleman, obliged to leave Pubna on account of ill-health, the case was taken up by the present deputy collector, Mr. Torrens, on the 7th of January last. That gentleman has decided that Mr. Russel is not entitled to his costs, because, as the arrears were deposited the day after the attachment took place, and Mr. Russel refused to receive them, it is evident that his proceedings were vexatious, and that his object was to put the opposite parties to the utmost possible expense.

Mr. Bignell was aware that there was no appeal against a summary decision of the Collector, in a case like the present, except on the ground of irrelevancy, but he submitted the facts for the consideration of the Board, trusting they will adopt such measures as they may deem expedient for the support of their own order. Although the Deputy-Collector has not, in terms, pronounced a decision directly opposed to the Board's instructions, yet that he has done so in effect, was Mr. Bignell's apprehension. The Deputy-Collector thought Mr. Russel's proceedings vexatious; whether they were vexatious or not depended entirely upon the right, or otherwise of the ryots to transfer their pottahs. If Mr. Russel were bound to receive as a tenant any one to whom the ryots chose to sell their pottahs, then Mr. Bignell admitted he was not entitled to his costs; if, on the contrary, Mr. Russel was not bound, then it was clear, that he was entitled to them, for the tender of the money in Mr. Studdurt's name was a nullity. The Sudder Board have now determined that the revenue authorities will not recognize the transfer of these pottahs, because they are illegal and yet the deputy collector has recognized them. Mr. Bignell said, he (the Deputy-Collector) had recognized them, because his decision appears to be utterly unintelligible upon any other principle. As to the order already passed, he feared his client had no remedy, except by an action in the Civil Court; but he would earnestly solicit the interference of the Board to prevent a recurrence of such a proceeding.

The amount of the costs is comparatively immaterial, — it is the impression produced on the minds of the ryots, who regarded this decision as highly favorable to their pretension that Mr. Russel so much deprecates. The mere circumstance of the moonsiff having taken the money, and giving receipts for the same, when paid in on account of Mr. Studdurt, (although Mr. Russel refused to receive it), they were led to consider as an acknowledgement by the Civil Courts of their rights to transfer their pottahs, and when they find that such refusal on the part of Mr. Russel has been treated by the Collector as a vexatious and unwarrantable proceeding, it is not difficult to foresee what the result will be.

In his former address, Mr. Bignell dwelt at some length upon the consequences that would ensue, if the ryots of these lands, and others similarly circumstanced, were to be allowed to transfer their pottahs to whomsoever they pleased; and as he believed the Board were convinced that the effect of such a system would be at once ruinous to Mr. Russel and most embarrassing to the Government, Mr. Bignell further stated, in confirmation of his argument, that after the moonsiff had received the sums of money tendered in the name of Mr. Studdurt, that person re-sold several of the pottahs he had purchased to men of the most notoriously disreputable characters. Bagshie Buddon Sur, who had been three times turned out of the zillah by former magistrates for mal-practices, having previously been treated in a similar manner by the magistrate of Jessore; Gopaul Sircar, whose brother was apprehended and confined as being connected with a gang robbery, but discharged for want of evidence; Hurrymohan Oddicarry, who has himself been confined and discharged in a similar manner; and Narrain Moozeemdar, the head of a gang of robbers, in whose house were discovered all the implements of dacoity and a considerable amount of property believed to have been stolen. If the lessee of a Government Khas Mehal is to be compelled to accept such parties as these for his under tenants, Mr. Bignell thought there would be but few competitors for the lease.

Mr. Bignell concluded by bringing to the notice of the Board a petition, a copy of which was annexed to his letter, in which a man of the name of Fuckerchund Moozeemdar stated, that Mr. Studdurt, having purchased certain jotes from the ryots, had re-sold them to him petitioner, who prayed that his name should be registered in the Collector's books. The Deputy-Collector, on the 3d of January, instead of complying with the Board's orders, and informing the petitioner that the transfer was illegal, merely directed the durkhaat to remain in the sherikats.

The Board have ordered a copy of Mr. Bignell's address to be sent to the Commissioner of Bauleah, from which it appeared that their orders of the 3d of October last, (which denied the power of the ryots of the char in question to transfer their pottahs, and prohibited the Revenue authorities from recognizing such transfers if made) have not been attended to by the Deputy-Collector of Pubna. The Board have no power to alter or amend the proceedings of Collectors in summary suits for rent and revenue, but they desired to be informed of the real facts of the case, and the grounds on which the Deputy-Collector may have acted as described, since his proceedings in this particular, if correctly stated in Mr. Bignell's address, seemed to contravene the Board's orders of the 3d of October. They further requested the Commissioner to acquaint them of the terms and manner in which their orders above alluded to were conveyed to the Deputy-Collector. — India Gazette, February 22.

PROPOSED RULES FOR HOOKAMEE GRANTS.

Rule 1.—Clause.—When any Hookamee Grant in which the lakheraj tenure and the right of property in the lands are vested in the same parties shall be resumed or expire, the lands shall be assessed, and the settlement with the parties in possession, under the general rules contained in Regulations VII. 1822, and IX. 1833, excepting in so far as is otherwise mentioned in Clause 2.

Clause 2.—In case of resumed Hookamee grants in the provinces of Bengal, Behar, Orissa (excepting Cuttack and its dependencies) or Benares, if the Munhreedars shall have been in possession of their grants previous to the following, viz:—

The Bengal year 1178, if the land be situated in Bengal.
The Fussily or Willaity year 1179, if in Behar or Orissa.
The 31st August 1781, if in Benares.

The revenue to be paid to government shall be equal to one-half of the annual produce of the land, calculated according to the rules, at which other lands in the pergunnahs of a similar description, may be assessed. If any part of the lands shall be uncultivated, the proprietor is required to bring it into cultivation, and to pay such progressive increase, to be regulated with reference to the reduced rate of the assessment on the cultivated lands, as the Sudder Board of Revenue, with the sanction of Government, may deem reasonable.

Rule 2.—When any Hookamee grant, in which the lakheraj tenure and the right of property in the land are vested in distinct parties, shall be resumed or expired, if the lakherajedar and his ancestors shall have continued in the possession of the land for a period of 60 years, if the lands be situated in Bengal, Behar or Orissa (excepting Cuttack and its dependencies, or Benares) or from the date of the acquisition of the country by the British Government, if the lands be situated in any other part of the territories, the settlement shall be made with the lakherajedar and the tenure, when so settled, shall be held to be hereditary and transferable, and the parties claiming the zemindarree interest or other proprietary right in such mahal, shall not disturb the possession of the lakherajedar or his heirs and representatives; and any suit preferred by such persons in a court of judicature, contrary to the intent and meaning of this rule, shall be dismissed with costs.

Rule 3, Clause 1.—If the lakherajedar and his ancestors shall have been in possession and management of the land, but not for the period specified in Rule 2., the settlement shall nevertheless be made with the Munhreedar; but every dispute or claim, regarding the proprietary right, either between the grantee and the grantor or other party, or their respective heirs or successors, is to be considered as a matter of a private nature to be determined by the civil courts; and the Munhreedar shall continue in possession until dispossessed by a decree of the Dewanny Adawlut.

Clause 2.—If the lakherajedar and his ancestors shall not have been in the possession and management of the lands, but the same shall be in the possession of the proprietor, the settlement shall be made with the said party, under the general rules contained in Regulation VII. 1822, IX. 1825, and IX. 1833, which rule shall likewise be applied re-adjusting the assessment whenever the proprietor shall be admitted to a settlement of the lands by the operation of the preceding clause.

Rule 4.—Clause 1.—If the settlement be concluded with the lakherajedar under Rule 2, or Clause first rule 3, the assessment shall be adjusted on the actual assets according to the rules contained in Regulation VII. 1822, IX. 1825, and IX. 1833, after such deduction for malikanah as may be required under rule 5, except in the cases specially provided for in the following clause:

Clause 2.—If the lands inherited or the resumed grants, be situated in the province of Bengal, Behar, Orissa (excepting Cuttack and its dependencies) or Benares; and the Munhreedars shall have been in possession of the same previous to the following periods: viz.

The Bengal year 1178, if the land be situated in Bengal.

The Fussily or Willaity year 1179, if in Behar or Orissa.

The 31st of August 1781, if in Benares.

The revenue to be paid to Government shall be adjusted in the same manner as prescribed in clause 2, rule 1, and resumed grants similarly circumstanced in which the lakheraj tenure and the right of property in the land are vested in the same party.

Rule 5.—Clause 1.—When the lands may be settled and assessed under rule 3 and rule 4, if the zemindar or other proprietors of the land shall have received malikanah or proprietary dues, whether in the shape of a percentage in money, kind or land, or otherwise during the existence of the lakheraj tenure, he shall continue to receive the same in like manner as if the resumption had not taken place, but he shall not be entitled to any land-rent, produce, or profit beyond what he may have enjoyed, up to the period of the resumption of the tenure, or would have been entitled to receive, in the event of Government having confirmed the same in perpetuity, free of assessment.

Clause 2.—The decision of the settlement officer in regard to the malikanah under the preceding clause, shall be liable to revision by the Commissioner and Sudder Board of Revenue, but no claim to the proprietary due, or respecting the nature or amount of it, which may be finally disallowed by the revenue authorities, in such cases, shall be cognizable in any court of judicature. But the prohibition shall not be construed to extend to bar the jurisdiction of the courts in respects of claims between individuals to the proprietary allowance, when that allowance shall have been sanctioned and adjusted by the revenue authorities.

Rule 6.—The nature and amount of the malikanah fixed under the preceding rule, shall be duly recorded in the settlement proceedings; and if the malikanah be enjoyed in the shape of a specific portion of land, the limits of such portion shall be defined with proper land marks, and described in the map accompanying the proceedings of settlement.

Rule 7.—The malikanah in money, or kind, settled under the rule 5, shall be payable to the proprietor by the lakherajedar with whom the settlement may be concluded, and any arrears of such malikanah which may from time to time become due, shall be recoverable in the ordinary civil courts.

Rule 8.—In the event of a lakherajedar, entitled under rule 2 to a settlement of his resumed tenure, declining to engage at the jumma proposed to him, the officer conducting the settlement shall proceed, as in the case of a zemindar refusing to engage for his lands; but on consideration of the loss to which the Government may be exposed by such recusancy, by the deduction of a double malikanah in the event of the lands being let in farm or held khas, the per centage to be allowed to the recusant lakherajedar shall be fixed at a rate of not less than five per cent. and not exceeding ten per cent, on the produce of the lands after deducting the malikanah of the proprietor.

Rule 9.—Should the tenure of lakherajedar, settled as described in rule 2, escheat to Government, the party possessing a zemindarree interest or proprietary right in the lands, shall be admitted to engage for the revenue, subject to a fresh assessment, to be adjusted on the actual assets under the general regulations.

Rule 10.—If the title deeds on which a lakherajedar claimed to hold his lands free of assessment, shall be declared by a final judgement of a competent court to have been forged or fraudulently altered, no length of possession either in the occupant or his ancestors shall be held to entitle him to a settlement for the lands, but the settlement shall in all such cases be made with the proprietors of the lands, under the general regulations.

Rule 11.—The cases of Hockmee lakhersjedars, who may be excluded from the privilege of obtaining the settlement of their resumed lands by the operation of rule 3, but who, either in their own persons, or as representatives of the former lakhersjedars, or both, shall have in the enjoyment of a specific portion of the produce of the lands under the denomination of the rent for the periods specified in clause 2, rule 3, according to part of the country in which the lands may be situated, and shall be specially reported to Government. If shall be lawful for the Governor of the presidency to grant to such of them as are entirely destitute, such pension for life or otherwise as he may deem proper.—Englishman, February 23.

CONSULTATION.—SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 18, 1837.

Permanent Settlement of Estates.—Zillah Cuttack

Mr. Secretary Mangles, on the 23d of November last, notified to the Board the sentiments of the Right Hon'ble the Governor of Bengal, on the report submitted by the Board, on the 30th of September last, on the settlement of Talooka Millepore, in central Cuttack.

Mr. Mangles observed, that the revision of the assessment in this instance, appears to be complete, and great credit is due to the officers by whom, severally, it has been conducted and revised for the pains that have been bestowed upon it. Mr. Ewart is entitled to especial commendation for his intelligence, and industry. The jumma imposed is declared to be very moderate, and there is, therefore, every reason to expect that the settlement will stand the test of seasons of different productiveness. His Lordship was consequently pleased to confirm it for a term of twenty-one years.

As to the rate of moquoddumma allowance, the Governor gave it as his opinion, that Mr. Rickett's apparent notion that zemindar is entitled to 20 per cent. under Section VII. Regulation VII. of 1822, was clearly erroneous on the grounds stated by the Board, which was rendered still stronger by the words in the clause subsequent to those quoted, "twenty per cent. on the amount of the jumma payable by, or through them respectively,"—proving that a class of persons standing between them and the malgozars, as the moquoddummas of Cuttack, were contemplated by the legislature as participators in the enhanced rate of malikana guaranteed, under the specified circumstances, by the law above cited. His Lordship concurred with the Board that 20 per cent. to the moquoddum will constitute the "fair allowance" referred to in the 2d principle laid at the conference of the 2d January 1835; and that under the circumstances of the case, 10 per cent. will be an ample grant for malikana; and the small trouble and risk of collection from responsible moquoddums, to the zemindar.

In treating of these tenures, the Governor was inclined to think that sufficient attention had not been paid to what would seem to be an essential distinction, in regard to the respective rights of khurreddars.

When the Zamindari right has been purchased by the khurreddar, these parties are manifestly entitled to all the immunities of full proprietorship,—including malikana if recusant, and the zemindar of the mahal in which the independent tenure is situated, through whom for public convenience, their revenues should be paid, will be abundantly compensated for their trouble and responsibility by an allowance of five, or at the utmost 10, per cent., on the score of expenses of collection.

Where the lien purchased has been of that party not a proprietor, (a term which should be used with great caution, for the Governor does not admit "a proprietary right" to be vested in a moquoddum, in the same sense as that in which it is passed by a malik), the zemindar is as certainly entitled to malikana, as well to compensation of the nature above referred to, and this should be fixed on the same scale as that granted in regard to those villages the rents of which are paid to the Sudder malgozars through a moquoddum.

The lands of recusant khurreddars, of whatever class, should be made over to the zemindars upon the same terms as other lands of the village, minus any malikana which it may be necessary to assign to the parties referred to, the zemindar being only the farmer of such lands.

The Governor did not desire, that the foregoing instructions, as far as they direct that the parties who originally purchased their khurredda tenures from moquoddums, should not to be regarded as invested with the same rights and immunities as those whose liens are derived from zemindars, should be considered imperative upon the local authorities, if they or the Board shall be of opinion that sales of land by moquoddums, sanctioned by the ruling power, previously to British acquisition of the province, were understood to convey, and did actually convey the same rights as sales of a similar nature made by the superior class of landholders. If Mr. Commissioner Ricketts, or any of the Collectors of the province, (to all of whom these and other orders involving important principles should be communicated) shall be of opinion that his Lordship's views must be carried into effect without practical injustice to what has been regarded as the second class of khur e ddars or without serious inconvenience in drawing the line of distinction, the instructions above given will be reconsidered. Real rights and all equitable immunities, especially those for which value has been given, must be carefully upheld. On the other hand caution must be used not to create such rights, attended with the inconvenience and expense of paying malikana to recusants, who ought to have no encouragement to a refusal to enter into engagements for the payment of moderate revenue.

Upon the question of the management, resumed lakherraj lands, his Lordship also thought it necessary to lay down general principles to determine the present and regulate all future cases.

The Governor did not agree with Mr. Mills, nor altogether with Mr. Commissioner Ricketts, in regard to the claims of zemindars to malikana, and of the moquoddums to compensation, on resumed lakherraj lands. Both these officers build the assumed, rights of the zemindars upon sect. XI: Regulation XIX of 1793, and the Collector is further of opinion that the moquoddum "is fully entitled to compensation."

This latter pretension, as one of right, the Commissioner very properly rejects; but he urges on behalf of the zemindar, that Regulation XIX. of 1793 assigned the property of resumed land "under a hundred beegals to the zemindar within whose estate the land might be situated." The Board gave no opinion upon the question of right, but recommended that the expenses of the intermediate management of the moquoddum should be avoided, by assigning to the zemindars the direct collection of the rents of all resumed lakherraj lands.

In disposing of the question of right, the Governor did not think that the zemindars of Cuttack are entitled under the law of 1793 above cited, to be regarded as proprietors, and, in that capacity, to receive malikana from rental of resumed lakherraj land.

This opinion is formed, firstly upon the term of Section XXII; Regulation XII: of 1806, which declares "the revenue assessable on all lands (without exception on the point of extent) which shall be adjudged or become liable to the payment of revenue," to belong to Government, the second clause of the same section, collected with the following section, proving that the legislature of that day contemplated the assessment of every resumed tenure with the "proprietor," meaning the dis-seized lakherajdar. Section XXIV, only extends to Cuttack those provisions of Regulation XIX, of 1793, "not superseded by the forgoing rules;" but it was clear to His Lordship, as above stated, that Section VI. of that law is overriden by Section XII. Regulation XII. of 1805; secondly, all doubts as to the intentions of the Legislature of 1805—if such can exist,—are removed by clause 1st Section II. Regulation II. of 1819.

At the same time that it was evident, that with respect to small patches of land, not exceeding a few beegahs in extent, it was most desirable that the revenue of Government should be collected from the dis-seized lakherajdars, and paid into the public treasury by the party responsible for the revenue of the estate, within the general idea of which such petty holdings are situated; and it is equally clear that the malikana be ostensibly denied in the first instance, as that to which the sudder malgozar in the supposed case, as no lawful claim. Such an allowance must be made to that party for the trouble and risk of collection, as may make it worth his while to undertake it, and may enable him to stand up against the contingency of untoward seasons. Further, it seems certain, that ere the period of the settlement now about to be formed throughout the province has expired, all distinction between resumed lakheraj and common ryottee lands will be lost, nor with reference to the consideration, that, whether it be denominated malikana or otherwise, a sufficient per centage must be left to the Sudder malgozar to effect the ends above alluded to, nor does there appear to be any sufficient inducement for the attempt to preserve such distinction in regard to petty tenures. They should, therefore, be merged at once in the general estate, carefully maintaining the rights which appertain to the dis-seized lakherajdars as dependent talookdars.

The Board are requested to report, after consulting the Commissioner, what should be the limit in respect of area of tenure, to this mode of disposal; it being understood that the proprietors of all resumed lands exceeding that limit in extent, will be admitted to engagements, as Sudder malgozar, such parties,—but only where the tenure exceeds 100 beegahs—where, in this lordship's judgment, entitled by law to malikana on recuancy.

As respects the collections from dis-seized lakherajdars, (not permitted to enter into immediate engagements with Government) whose tenures are situated in moquddum villages, his lordship cannot agree with the Board in thinking it advisable to dispense with the agency of the middlemen in question, an arrangement of which would induce a double system of management into the same village. On the contrary, he would carry through the principle of blending such tenures altogether with the ryottee land of the village, assigning, both to moquddum and zemindary, the pecuniary immunities from the one, as from the other description of land.

On the subject of remuneration of putwarries. In principle, his lordship was inclined to agree with the Board that it is expedient "to include the money payment (to putwarries in the zemindar's jumma,) and to pay the allowance from the Collector's treasury;" but he felt some alarm in contemplating the expense of time and labor which would certainly accrue to the Collector and his establishment from rendering so numerous a class of officers, throughout an extensive district, immediate stipendiary servants of the state. He requests, therefore, that the Board will re-consider the point, with reference to the consideration above stated, and to the hazard which the putwarries would run of receiving no money payment at all from estates the Sudder malgozar of which fell into arrears. The Governor was disposed to think, if there be no objection,—which does not present itself at this moment to him,—that class of officers in question might advantageously be paid solely in land, the attachment of which, in case of contumacy, would be a very effectual measure of coercion. The Board are requested to report on the general subject after consulting the local authorities, in order to its being disposed of definitively.

His lordship entirely approved the measure in regard to village police reported by the Commissioner. It is most desirable that the immunities enjoyed by these parties should be rendered so valuable, as to engender a strong fear of being deprived of them on account of misconduct. The Board were requested to direct the Commissioner to impress this principle of proceeding, upon all the officers conducting settlements throughout the province.

The expenses incurred in the formation of the assessment, (sicca rupees 1,219-14-19-3) were considered very disproportionate to the value of the mahal. They were sanctioned at the recommendation of the Board, but his lordship trusted that the Board would immediately take effectual measures for the reduction of the rate.

The Board have abided by the foregoing instructions, and have instructed the Commissioner and the local authorities accordingly.—Ind. Gaz. Feb. 24.

MISCELLANEOUS.

CALCUTTA.

THE DISTRICT CHARITABLE SOCIETY.—The annual meeting of the District Charitable Society, was held on the 30th of July. The office bearers of last year, whose services were available, were re-elected, and in the room of Dr. Cameron and Mr. Robertson who have left, and Mr. C. W. Smith, who is about to leave Calcutta, the Archdeacon, Lieut. Col. Beaton and Mr. Walters were elected Vice-Presidents. Two donations of 500 rupees each were announced, one of them from a gentleman who reserved his name from publication, the other from Baboo Dwarkanauth Tagore, in addition to his annual subscription of 100 rupees. The report also mentioned a monthly donation of 80 rupees for six months from Lord Auckland, to defray the expense of certain experiments with iodine, conducted by Dr. W. Stewart, in the treatment of lepers, from which great hopes are entertained, 500 rupees were granted for the relief of the native poor in addition to the monthly appropriation of 700 rupees to the Native Committee. The receipts and disbursements during the past year are, receipts Rs. 47,996 and disbursements Rs. 46,470. The Ladies' committee has been engaged in carrying into execution a resolution adopted last year "that the females, whether adult or children supported by the funds of the District Charitable Society, be assembled in a room provided for the purpose to perform needle work, if competent to do so, under the superintendence of a person engaged for that object, and, if unable to work, to receive instruction in the same from the same person." The workhouse experiment has produced, during the first eight or nine months, from the earnings of the women, more than half the expenditure of their maintenance, namely, Rs. 22-12-1 upon an average per month against a monthly disbursement of 88 rupees.

HUMAN SACRIFICE.—The information which was published recently regarding the commission of a human sacrifice at the shrine of Bankiniasur in Zillah Bardwan, has attracted the attention of Government; and the Commissioner of the Moorshedabad Division has been directed to cause investigation to be made into the case.

REMOVAL OF A SAND BANK.—Mr. Larruletta, Collector of Tolls of Jungypore, states that he has succeeded in removing the sand bank that was forming in the Bhaugretty, below the village of Gyzabad, and increasing the depth of water to five and a half feet in the shallowest place. He reports that two other banks have appeared, one of which, near Lalbaz, has increased wonderfully during the last month, the other however, near Rangamatta, is disappearing of itself, and perhaps no expense will be required for its removal.

ESTABLISHMENT OF A HOSPITAL.—Intelligence has been received of the proposed establishment of a public hospital in the town of Hurdwan. The hospital is to be got up by the aid of subscription among the zemindars there, with some pecuniary assistance from Government.

COLLISION OF THE COURTS.—A question of considerable public interest was decided in the Sudder Dawannee Adawlat on the 1st instant. Mr. Elliot Macnaghten was appointed by the Supreme Court in February 1836, to be the receiver of the whole estate of Mrs. Mariam Hume, deceased, an Armenian lady formerly residing at Dacca, the disposition of whose property has been the subject of much litigation. Mr. Macnaghten, in virtue of this appointment, petitioned the judge of Dacca for the payment over of certain sums of money, deposited in that court, which had been realized by the execution of decrees, given in favor of the late Mrs. Hume. With this application the Zillah Judge refused to comply, on the ground that previous to the appointment of Mr. Macnaghten by the Supreme Court, a guardian and manager had been duly appointed by the Mofussil authorities, on behalf of the infants, who are entitled to one moiety of the whole estate of the deceased, and whose share of the amounts levied under the above mentioned decrees, constitutes the fund which the Supreme Court Receiver claimed to have paid over to him. Against this order of the Dacca Court, Mr. Macnaghten, appealed to the Sudder Dewannee, who, on the 1st instant, after hearing Mr. Bignell, in support of the appeal, dismissed the petition, and confirmed the order to the court below. The presiding judge observed, that Mr. Bird's appointment as guardian of the infants had been confirmed by the Sudder Dewannee two years previous to Mr. Macnaghten's nomination by the Supreme Court; that as to the power of the Sudder to confirm Mr. Bird, under Clause 7, Regulation 1, of 1800, there could be no doubt whatever, its judgment, to such effect being expressly declared to be final; that the subsequent nomination of another party by the Supreme Court, could not do away with the appointment previously made by a court of independent jurisdiction; and that whatever might be the consequences of such a decision, he felt bound to uphold the order of the Dacca Judge, and to declare that Mr. Bird, and not Mr. Macnaghten, was the proper party to have possession of the infant's moiety of Mrs. Hume's estates. It now remains to be seen what the Supreme Court will do under these circumstances: if it attempt to enforce its order, it must come into direct collision with the Company's courts; if, on the other hand, it quietly pass over the matter, it must stultify itself by the tacit acknowledgment that it has issued mandates and made appointments to which it is utterly unable to give effect.

RAJAH OF BURDWAN.—The soi disant Rajah of Burdwan, was released from his captivity at Hoogly on the 3rd instant, the sufficiency of his securities having been established.

MURDERS.—A sepoy at Barrackpore, murdered his wife's mother on the 3rd instant. The murderer has effected his escape.

A Moonshee who resided in the house of C. B. Greenlaw, Esq., was poisoned on the 2d instant. A coroner's inquest was held on the body, on the 3d instant, and a verdict of wilful murder returned against some person unknown.

A Hindoostanee woman named Ram Behi, was murdered on the 10th instant, by her servants, it is supposed, as they have absconded, and property to the amount of about 5,000 rupees, belonging to the deceased, is missing.

A man was drowned in a tank in Entally on the 6th instant. It is supposed that he was intoxicated and drowned in that state by two persons who accompanied him to the tank to bathe, and these individuals have, consequently, been taken up on suspicion.

It appears that some clue has been found by the Police, which bids fair to lead to the apprehension and punishment of all the murderers of Ojagar Sing the Sheik merchant. A Mosulman who lived near the residence of the deceased, and disappeared after the murder took place, has been apprehended as one of the parties concerned in the murder; and a female relative of the deceased, who lived in the same house with him, and who had at first affected to be quite ignorant of the affair, seems to be an actor in the tragedy; with two others at Chinsurah, one of whom is the man who hired the shop in which the Sheik was found murdered.

MURDER AND SUICIDE.—The Darogah of Kidderpore reported to the Magistrate of the 24-Pergunnahs on the 10th instant, that on the afternoon of the 3d, a man named Hurry Churno wounded a young man named Nuffoo, with a dows on the road, after having done which Hurry took to his heels, and on arriving at his own domicile, used the same instrument in annihilating his wife, named Bherma, and in putting an end to his own existence. Hurry Churno, had some time ago discovered certain infidelities in the conduct of his wife, and had detected Nuffoo in illicit intercourse with her. On the date of the murder, Hurry had returned to his house at an unusual hour, and had then witnessed stronger proof of the inconsistency of his wife, had waylaid Nuffoo, and having wounded him, fled under the impression that he had committed murder, and under the excitement completed the tragedy by destroying his wife and putting an end to his own life.

ATTEMPTED MURDER.—Nubbee Bux, a kidmutgar, in the employ of Dr. Peel Bell, Garrison Surgeon, attempted to murder his master on the night of the 19th instant. The Doctor had retired to rest, when something awoke him suddenly, which he could not account for. On looking round he found that the doors were open: this circumstance immediately made him proceed below for a light, on doing which, he stumbled over a man in a crouching posture. This person he laid hold of, and succeeded in wringing a large carving knife from him, which he had in his hands, and afterwards, through the assistance of the native doctor, Ramchunder Day, the prisoner was made over to Sergeant McKenzie, of the main guard. The doctor on looking about, found his silver plate removed from the almirah to the bathing room, and it was on the following evening that he discovered a slight wound on the inside part of his arm; and the shirt about there, bloody. Suspects, that the time he awoke suddenly, the wound must have been inflicted. The knife is the property of Dr. Bell.

DEATH FROM INTOXICATION.—Mr. Joseph D'Monte, a petition writer attached to the Police Office, was found dead in his bed on the morning of the 8th instant. It is said the deceased, who was a habitual drunkard, was killed by having taken a very large quantity of opium and rum before retiring to bed.

A DEAD CHILD FOUND.—On the morning of the 9th instant, a dead child, aged a few days only, was discovered in a drain within Suckan's alheet division.

ACCIDENTAL DEATH.—An old wall of a granary fell on a hut, within the Coomartoolly division, on the night of the 18th instant, and the latter giving way, two men, who were in it, were buried under the ruins. The Police and neighbours came to their assistance, and on removing the bricks and rubbish, found one of the men dead and the other severely bruised.

RIOT, ASSAULT AND CAPTURE OF POLICE OFFICERS.—On the 14th instant, information was lodged at the thanna of a place called Bebee's Abad, within the salt chowkee of Nebhausum, in the zillah 24-Pargannahs, that the inhabitants of the place had established khalaris, and were in the habit of manufacturing salt clandestinely. The daroga of the chowkee brought the matter to the notice of the salt agent; and that gentleman ordered the deputy Nauzer of the Sudder Cutchery, the Mohurrir, the Chuprasy and the Burkundauze of the Darogah and the Police Burkundauzes, and the Chaprasies of Rampoor and Baroocepoor, for the apprehension of the offenders. These about fifty or sixty in number, about seven or eight o'clock on the morning of the 15th instant, proceeded to the place; and on searching the home-steads of three or four of the inhabitants, salt was discovered; when Ketaubdee Mundal, the Mundal of the place, with two or three hundred men, armed with sticks, confronted the officers engaged in the search, and commenced a dreadful battery with their sticks on them, so that seven or eight of their number were seriously injured. Two or three persons are missing, and no trace has yet been found of them. The Mundal has made prisoners of the Darogah of Bhampurpoor, the Mohurrir and the Burkundauze of the above named chowkee, as also of the Manjee of a guard boat, and has detained them in his custody.

AFFRAY ATTENDED WITH WOUNDING.—Five natives, were convicted before the Magistrate of the twenty-four Pergunnahs on the 23d of December last, of having created an affray in a fair held at a village called Koonpura, and having severely wounded an up country brijebassy with a spear and clubs. They were sentenced to imprisonment with labor in irons for 5 years.

THUGGEE.—The assistant to the general superintendent for the suppression of Thuggee, Captain Lewis, as well as the magistrate of Burdwan, Mr. Skipwith, having cause to believe that a certain person who acted as Mohafiz or record keeper to the magistrate of Beerbhoom named Radhamadob Ghose, keeps connexion with Thugs and assists and advises them in their proceedings, wrote to the magistrate of Beerbhoom, to send him over to them for trial. The Magistrate was also informed that two of the record keeper's brothers have been apprehended as Thugs, and that a gristaree parwana, or order for arrest, has been issued against a third.

A reward of 800 Rs. has been sanctioned by Government to be paid to the Nazir of the Magistrate's Court of Burdwan, for apprehending about 50 thugs, who have been made over to the superintendent for the suppression of thuggee.

FIRE.—Mr. Payne's house and property, had a very narrow escape from being destroyed by fire on the 9th instant. His stable was set on fire by the carelessness of one of his syces, who left a light burning in it, whilst he went to his dinner; and it is supposed the light was kicked down by the horse, a fine Arab, which was burnt to death. The loss of the stable and salt houses, was the only further damage Mr. Payne sustained; but had the wind been from the north, instead of the south-west, nothing could have saved his house and the valuable property it contained.

EMBANKMENTS.—An enquiry has been directed to be instituted by the Government into the nature of cuboolits entered into by the Zemindars of Hoogly, Burdwan and Midnapore, for the purpose of ascertaining how far the Government are liable to bear the expense of pool-bundee, or repairing of the embankments, while remissions were made to the landholders at the period of the perpetual settlement or subsequent period to maintain them at their own expense. The enquiry will be attended with considerable saving to the state.

EDUCATION COMMITTEE, THE VERNACULAR LANGUAGE.—The Education Committee, it would appear, have earnestly set themselves about encouraging the study of the vernacular dialects. They recently addressed the Committee of the School Book Society, desiring to ascertain if they could supply them with good Hindui books, the work in that language at the present in use in some of the schools under their controul, being defective in many respects. The Secretary to the School Book Committee has been directed to write in reply that they will shortly be able to comply with the wishes of the Education Committee, as several elementary treatises in the Hindui language, prepared by some distinguished friends to native education, have lately been received for publication.

OPIMUM CULTIVATION.—Government have determined to encourage the cultivation of the poppy in some of the districts comprised in the 1st or Meerut Division, under an arrangement similar to what has recently been adopted in the provinces of Behar and Benares. A Mr. Johnson has been appointed Sub-Deputy Opium Agent to commence operations from the next opium season, viz. July 1837.

ENCOURAGEMENT TO SERVANTS OF THE PREVENTIVE DEPARTMENT.—It is said that Government, with a due consideration of the policy of giving every encouragement to that responsible and deserving class of its servants engaged in the preventive department of the customs, has recently modified some of the rules relating to that body, which will have the effect of placing them on a more favourable footing than before. The full extent of the alterations in question is not mentioned, but it is said that, in case of sickness, the supervisors are to have free medical attendance, medicines gratuitously; and in the event of serious illness, are to be entitled to draw half of their allowances, and to have a substitute provided.

SALE OF A PORTION OF THE KIDDERPORE PREMISES.—The Committee of Docks lately established, have disposed of part of the Kidderpore premises to Government for Co.'s rupees seventy thousand, for a Depot for the Iron Steamers.

SURVEY OF THE RIVER.—It is not generally known, that Captain Lloyd, of the Indian Navy, has been employed for the last two years, making a survey of the river Hooghly, from the Calcutta new Mint to the Sandheads. Two parts of the chart has been sent in, viz. from the Mint to Culpeo, and from the latter place to about Kedgeres; the remaining one is expected to be finished this year.

NEW OBSERVATORY IN CROWNINGHER.—We yesterday visited the new observatory erected under the superintendence of the engineer department on the ground at the east of the Sudder Board. The building is rectangular standing north and south, the dimensions are 40 by 32 feet, and the extreme height from the ground to the top of the dome is 33 feet. It has a triangular staircase in front with the year 1837 in stone figures.

On entering, two piers are seen rising from the foundation through the second floor, and on the wings two instruments are placed for observations. On the upper floor two piers support the altitude, azimuth circle, and the transit instrument. Over the azimuth circle a moveable circular dome is fixed, which works round, and opens conveniently for the purposes of observation. Mean time will now be regular shewn as a post has been erected to signalize with the telegraph at the Fort.

THE MILITARY ORPHAN INSTITUTION.—Letters from Kurnaul and Benares mention, that the feeling is so strong in respect to the mismanagement of the Orphan Asylum, disclosed on the late trial, that requisitions have been in circulation at those stations for the dismissal of Mrs. Wyatt and Mr. McQueen. That from Kurnaul has reached Calcutta. It bears the signatures of 55 officers.

MEDICAL COLLEGE.—Government has determined, not to nominate another Principal to the Medical College, but to appropriate the salary of that office to two new Professorships. Drs. Egerton and Chapman are to be the additional Professors.

PRIZE FOR MEDICAL MEN.—Baboo Gourmohun has offered to any medical gentleman the prize of 1,000 rupees, who will succeed in extracting the stone from the bladder without pain and cutting.

VACCINATION.—Dr. D. Stewart has intimated, that with the view of extending more generally the benefits of vaccine inoculation throughout Calcutta, he proposes to establish a depot for the purpose at each end of the town, and to superintend personally at each place twice a week, as well as at his own house.

The following days have been fixed for attendance at each depot between 10 and 12 A. M., viz. Monday and Thursday—Park Street; Tuesday and Friday—Gardentillah; Wednesday and Saturday—at Dr. Stuart's residence, No. 1, Chowringhee Road.

IRON BEAMS FOR BONDING WAREHOUSES.—It is said that in order to avoid the loss of so much time as will be required to get out iron beams from England to support the floors of the Bonding-warehouses, enquiries are making as to the practicability of getting them cast at the Porto Novo Iron Works.

COLLECTION OF IMPORT DUTIES.—The Board of Customs has not sanctioned the principle of conversion suggested by the Chamber of Commerce for the purpose of facilitating and rendering more certain and equitable the collection of import duties.

BENGAL ARCHERY. The silver bowl shot for by the Bengal Archers, was won by J. C. Wilson, Esq.

THE BORING EXPERIMENT.—The accident which happened, to the mud-shell in the boring experiment in the fort, has been got over by the bringing up of that instrument, which speaks well for the industry and ability of the Sappers and Miners, who are employed upon the work. The boring has now reached to a depth of three hundred and twenty-six feet, and has been accomplished in the most perfect manner; and the water in the pipes rises considerably higher than in any of the adjacent wells.

MR. ROBERTSON THE AERONAUT.—Mr. Robertson made a very beautiful and lofty ascent at Lucknow recently. He quite astonished the king and the people, cleared about eight thousand rupees, and has proceeded on to Agra.

MOFUSSIL.

DEATH.—The increase obtained by Ram Mohun Roy, to the King of Delhi's pension some four years ago, has now, for the first time, been paid. The sum, amounting to Rs. 25,000 per annum, will be borne on the expenditure from the present year.

Four Russian spies, it is asserted by the natives, are in the Delhi territory, in disguise, sounding the feelings of neighbouring chiefs and potentates!

Sunghree Beg, Cotwal, of notorious fame, and the Nazir of the Criminal Court, have been each fined and suspended from office, and are, it is said, likely to be dismissed.

PATNA.—An earthquake took place at Patna about ten o'clock on the night of the ninth instant, and another, between seven and eight, the following morning.

AGRA.—General Allard arrived at the station on the 8th instant, and left on the 10th, to proceed via Muttra to Meerut. The gallant officer was received by Sir C. Metcalfe, who invited a large party to meet him on the 9th.

The Masonic Lodge of Agra, has determined on selecting a Deputy Provincial Grand Master, and on petitioning the Grand Lodge at home, to send out the necessary warrants of authority. Colonel Lindsay is the individual selected to be raised to this dignity.

Joota Ram and his son, under an escort from the 52d regiment, arrived at Agra on the 31st of January, and on the 2d instant proceeded on towards their future residence, Chunar, with a detachment from the 47th, under command of Captain Blake.

MONGHYR 10TH FEB.—At 5 minutes past 8 this morning, Monghyr was visited by a smart shock of Earthquake, which lasted but a few seconds. The vibration seemed to be from east to west. The very unusual state of the weather at this season of the year, for some time past, may in some measure account for the before-mentioned visitation.

MEERUT.—The crew of a Calcutta boat, with goods on board, insured by Messrs. Kemp, Brothers and Company, who recently found by an employ of the Commissariat of Meerut, between Ghurmuckteer, and Anoopshuhur, busily employed in taking in a cargo of grain, after they had discharged the insured goods on the bare shore, to be left to the mercy of the tender conscience of the people of that neighbourhood. The individual in question saw the goods on board again, and compelled the manjee to come on to Ghurmuckteer, having, moreover, ascertained that a bribe of 25 rupees had been given and taken to affect the exchange. No less than 40 rupees per 100 mounds are given at the ghât for the conveyance of grain thence to Cawnpore.

On the 28th of January, the 11th Dragoons marched out, and the 16th Lancers marched into this station.

REDUCTION IN THE PRICES OF STUD HORSES.—It is said that Government contemplate a reduction in the prices of their stud horses, in so far at least that officers should be allowed to select chargers from the ranks at the reduced price of 500 instead of 800 rupees.

NAVIGABLE COMMUNICATION.—It is stated, that there is some chance of a navigable communication being opened between the Hindoun, (a stream running from hills through the western part of the Doab into the Jumna a little below Delhi) and the Ganges, through Meerut. The plan originated with Captain Wroughton, Revenue Surveyor, who is carefully examining the course and aptitude of the Eastern Kalee Nuddee, which takes its rise near Katowlee, and passing a short distance to the East of Meerut, and past Babhooghar, falls into the Ganges in the neighbourhood of Futtighur. Captain Wroughton's plan is to deepen this stream considerably and increase its waters by means of the Kotra Canal passing through Meerut, which is to be sufficiently enlarged, so as to absorb, and carry off into the Kalee Nuddee, the whole, or nearly so, of the waters of the Hindoun, which are now of little or no use to the cultivator or navigator.

NATIVE STATES.

BHURUTPORE.—The Commander-in-Chief reached this city on the 9th of January and was received with every attention by the Rajah. In the evening His Excellency visited the palace, where he was entertained after the usual fashions of native courts; on the next day he accompanied the Rajah on a battu, and on the third proceeded on his march.

CABOOL.—The mercenaries employed by long custom at this court, under the designation of Kussulbashies and Hubalshies, have become so discontented at the present pacific position of affairs, that they have been conspiring to remove Dost Moomud and place a more turbulent chief over them. Some concessions and a few presents on the part of the old Afghan have conciliated them or postponed their hostility to a future period.

To so low an ebb has the power of Dost Moomud fallen, that even his nobles heard him on his throne, and refuse to attend his durbars.

It is said, that Sirdar Mahomed Khan being informed that Mirza Burkut Ally, a very rich merchant of Bokhara, had in conformity with his highness's desire, arrived near Pargunah Bilman, within four stages of Cabool, hastened to receive him; which he did with becoming hospitality and politeness. His Highness has borrowed two lakhs of gold patkees on the mortgage of a number of pearl necklaces, and his object is to commence hostilities against Peshawar.

PESHAWAR.—Sahadut Khan, the famous bandit chief, who had come to terms of agreement with Koonwur Share Sing to abstain from levying contributions upon travellers and from oppressing the inhabitants in the vicinity of Peshawar, has been detected in a correspondence with his former associates, and when spoken to about it, boldly declared that until his lawful possessions were restored to him by the Sikhs, he would continue to practise his old trade; which declaration induced the Koonwur, upon the persuasion of Sultan Mahomed, to comply with the demand, and restore to the bandit his jagheer of 12,000 Rs.

Futtay Khan, Bucktour Walla, has met with a signal defeat from the Sikh troops at Peshawar, under the command of Sirdar Hurtee Sing. Nulwa Walla, who also captured this refractory Chief's fort, and razed it to the ground. The loss of the Sikhs is stated to be twenty, to be killed and wounded, but that of their antagonists considerably more.

HERAT.—Mirza Jehangeer, the son of Shah Kamran, the Herat Chief, with the view of closing the breaches which have from time immemorial, existed between Herat and Candahar, sent valuable presents to the Candahar Chief, accompanied by strong expressions of good will, which the Candahar Chief gladly excepted, as he had ever lived in constant dread of Herat, and which he acknowledged by suitable returns of the best his land produced. Dost Mahomed of Cabool, hearing of these interchanges of good-fellowship, prepared presents, exceeding in value and extent those of the Candahar Chief, which he intends to send as a propitiatory offering to Runjeet Sing, hoping thereby to secure his powerful aid and influence.

JEYPORE.—The Thakoors of that noted place Khialie, who have long been celebrated for their exploits as brigand chiefs, and who had on one occasion beaten off a large force sent from Jeypore against them, five years ago, were emboldened to try their luck with a detachment of Major Forster's cavalry, lately, who had been sent to seize some of the offenders there. About a hundred and fifty matchlock-men took post in a strong gurree, having some guns and several jinjals, and ample quantum of stores for a good defence. Under such favourable circumstances, they hesitated not to fire on the horsemen the moment they came within range of their shot; the horsemen immediately dismounted, and in a most gallant manner, charged through the village to the gates of the fort, killing and wounding a number of the insurgents; Major Forster and some Infantry and guns were close at hand; but the three Principal Thakoors, submitted ere he could arrive; with these and thirteen jinjals and fourteen iron guns, and other booty, the detachment returned to Joonjoo in triumph the next day; the village has now been entirely destroyed and the Fort blown up.

HYDRABAD IN SCIND.—About four hundred Beluchese residing in the forests, mounted on camels, stormed the western parts of the dominions of the Amers of Scind, which are situated at the sea-shore, and plundered the inhabitants thereof. The sufferers made their grievances known to the rulers, and they lost no time in dispatching one of their resaladers, at the head of two thousand troops, accompanied by several field pieces, for the chastisement of the marauders. The former marched day and night on the expedition, till they succeeded in overtaking the latter, who being thus surprised, leaving their camels, attempted to escape, but were pursued by the Sepoys, who killed and wounded some of them and took prisoners others, and proceeded back to the dhabar of the Amcets.

INTERVIEW BY PATIATA.—It is said, that the Governor-General's Agent of Amballa, has desired Maha Rajah Kurram Sing, the chief of Patials, to make over to the Company, the zillah of Flee, which has from the days of old formed a parcel of the territories of the Maha Rajah. At this His Highness felt much annoyed, and is said to have addressed his courtiers thus:—"It is a pity that there is no one in Punjab, capable of coping with the Company Bahadoor. Indeed, the arrow of wisdom and contrivance can have no effect against the shield of prosperity, yet, if it be the Company's pleasure, to force all the possessions from the hands of the whole host of the chiefs of Hindoostan, I will not submit to parting with mine without resistance; the result, however, will depend on the pleasure of God."

REPORT.—The native newspapers from this quarter state, that Runjeet has illegitimated slavery throughout his territories, and is about to pass a severe penal enactment for its suppression.

A Mr. Foster, who had been presented to the Maha Rajah, was asked why he had visited Lahore; he replied to seek for employment. The Huzoor told him, that the command of one guldun would be bestowed upon him, for which gracious favour the gentleman made a suitable and handsome speech, whereupon the Maharaja was much pleased and made him a present of one hundred rupees and a pair of shawls.

An urzie was received from Koonwar Sher Singh and Sardar Tej Singh, intimating that they had crossed the Attock with their troops, in pursuance of the Huzoor's orders, and that they would shortly arrive at Balahore. A purwanah was written in answer, enjoining them to be particular and vigilant in passing through the country, so that the crops might not be injured, or the Krimdars oppressed by the soldiers.

Mr. Vigne reached Lahore on the 21st of January and brought many interesting drawings of Cabool, and the countries he has visited along the route. The principle one is a panoramic view of the city of Cabool, and its environs, which is said to be in a more finished style than the one of Cashmerre.

A short time since a box was opened in this city, in which a fakier had been enclosed for two months, without food or drink. Runjeet had taken every precaution to prevent access to him, having first locked the box, locked the door of the room inclosing it, the latter was surrounded by a wall, the door of which was locked and built up with bricks and clay. The man was sworn up in a bag, in a sitting posture, and appeared on first opening the box inanimate, his eyes, mouth, and nostrils had been shut. The first part of the resuscitation consisted in pouring hot water on his head, and placing a hot cake on the crown of it, the nostrils were then opened, through which he breathed like a porpoise; next the mouth was forced open by main strength, and the tongue brought forward, it having been laid back on the roof of his mouth, the pulse was not felt at the wrist for some time, and not plainly, until the legs and arms had been stretched and rubbed; he soon began to talk, after getting some warm milk and sugar, and in a short time appeared none the worse for his abstinence; the heat of the body was greatly above the standard of health from the first, and as it subsided, the circulation became established.

Jondh Sing and Gobind Jua submitted that they had made the necessary preparations for Captain Wade's reception; the courtiers were immediately desired to attire themselves in their best suits to do honor to the distinguished guest, who having reached Lahore, was honored with a salute of 5 guns, after which the Maharaja visited the Sahib Bahadoor, when interchange of presents took place, the Huzoor retiring highly gratified with his visit.

Shah Oodeen, the Vakeel of Dost Mahomed Khan, represented that Peer Mahomed Khan, his Master's brother, had arrived at Jelalabad with 700 horse; the Huzoor told him to give information when Peer Mahomed should reach Peshawur, and a Jagheer would be bestowed.

MADRAS.

THE GOVERNOR OF PONDICHERRY.—His Excellency the Marquess De St. Simon, Governor of Pondicherry, arrived at Madras on the evening of the 21st of February. The usual salute of 19 guns was fired on the following morning in honor of his arrival. The following is an instance of the liberality of the Marquess De St. Simon. A mercantile establishment at Madras advanced a sum of money, some years ago, to a gentleman filling a high appointment in the Civil Administration of Pondicherry, for the purpose of enabling him to establish a silk manufactory there. The speculation, which was a private one, although undertaken for a public object, proved unsuccessful, and the individual to whom the money was lent, was compelled to quit this country, unable to discharge the debt he had contracted to the firm at Madras. Since the Marquess De St. Simon's accession to the Government, it has been resolved to make the transaction a public one, thereby relieving the parties who had advanced the money from loss, on the ground, as that distinguished individual has so justly observed, that "private enterprise having the public good in view, should receive all the support and encouragement that can possibly be extended to it by the Government."

NOTICE TO NAVIGATORS.—Navigators frequenting the coast of Coromandel, are aware that there exists at Porto Novo, 10 leagues South of Pondicherry, a smelting furnace, the chimney of which is very lofty and throws out from its summit a light so brilliant as to be taken at times for a light-house. They should be cautious of confounding this light with the one at Pondicherry, or by such a mistake they might touch the bank of Coleeroon for want of water. At the Northern point of the bank, in four fathoms, the chimney bears W. 50° N. The best way of ascertaining whether they have reached Pondicherry or Porto Novo, is after they have shaped their course to stand in boldly to the shore and keep the lead going. To the East and N. E. of the bank, the soundings diminish rapidly, in some places a fathom at a cast. In the neighborhood of Pondicherry, on the other hand, the soundings diminish gradually and uniformly. The bottom off the Coleeroon bank is of sand and good for anchorage, if the sea breeze is not too strong.

TRIAL FOR ASSAULT.—Nineteen sepoys were tried on the 26th ultimo for assault, and six of the party pronounced guilty and sentenced each to be imprisoned for two months.

Lieutenant H. Green and C. H. Winfield and Ensign J. H. M. Phillips, of the 18th N. I., and Mr. Assistant Surgeon Maginnis, were, on the 30th of January, tried for an assault and rescue from the Police authorities. The prisoners were acquitted.

COLONEL CONWAY.—Col. Conway was on the 31st of January, appointed definitely to the command of Hyderabad with the rank of Brigadier.

THE SARRAWADY MERCHANT.—The schooner Sarrawady Merchant, parted from her anchor on the 29th of January, about 8-30 A. M. At the time the weather was perfectly fine with a light breeze from the eastward. In attempting to let go a second anchor the cable jammed in the haws and sail was made on the vessel, but having about 50 fathoms of cable hanging to her bows, the sails had no effect, and she dove on shore between the tunnel and Messrs. Parry and Dare's. During the day the stores, rigging and sails were landed by the Master Attendant's department, and the vessel went to pieces in the night.

DINNER TO SIR F. ADAM.—The friends of Sir F. Adam, gave him a dinner at the Club House on the 30th of January.

MR. LUSHINGTON.—C. M. Lushington, Esq. was sworn in as an acting member of Council on the 30th of January, in the room of Mr. Russell, whom some recent discovery has found to be out of it, as well in the eye of the law as in that of a plain view.

MR. RUSSELL.—Mr. Russell, the Commissioner, has, however, left the force in Goomsoor and proceeded to Madras, in hopes of assuming the reins of Government on the approaching departure of Sir Frederick Adam, should his honor's successor, Lord Elphinstone, not arrive in time.

On the 8th instant, at a meeting held at the College Hall, it was determined to erect a monument in the Cathedral of Madras, to the memory of the late Bishop Corrie. The sum of 9,003 rupees was subscribed on the spot.

WHITE ELEPHANT.—A white elephant is now in Madras, which has been sent from Coimbatore by Government, en route to Ava, as a present from the Honorable Company to the King of that country.

ACCIDENT AT SEA.—On the 11th ultimo the Ship Golconda, of 800 tons. Capt. Bell, from Bombay bound to Madras, saw off Point de Galle, the land in sight with a light breeze from the S. W., a barque laying too a head. Captain Bell very properly supposing assistance was required, ran up to the barque, which proved to be the Caledonia from Bombay, bound to Bengal. After exchanging a few words of no importance within hail, it fell calm and the two ships came in contact. The Caledonia, being the smaller ship, received considerable damage in her hull about the poop and star-board quarter. By means of a breeze which sprung up, the ships got clear, when Captain Bell sent on board to know if any assistance was required, and having been answered in the negative by the chief mate the boat returned with Lieutenant and Miss Dunbar passengers, who had taken alarm and begged to be received on board the Golconda.

SWEARING IN OF MAGISTRATES.—On the 31st ultimo Captains M'Neil and Whistler, the new Police Magistrates, were sworn in at the Supreme Court, vice H. Morris and C. Feed, Esquires, resigned.

BISHOP CORRIE.—The Revd. Doctor Corrie, Bishop of Madras, expired on the 5th instant, universally regretted.

BOMBAY.

COURT-MARTIAL ON MAJOR GEORGE STORY.—A court-martial held at Secunderabad on the 4th of January, for the trial of Major George Story, of the 37th N. I., for conduct unbecoming of a gentleman, in having made false statements, found him guilty, and sentenced him to be discharged the service. The sentence has been confirmed.

THE BYCULLA CLUB.—It is intended to remove the Byculla Club into the fort. In reply to a letter from the Club to the exporters of ice from the United States, the former have been informed, that the exporters cannot undertake to supply them with ice, as it is found that the speculation does not remunerate the parties engaging in it.

DEATH OF GOVIND ROW NANA SHAHEB.—Govind Row Nana Shaheb of Chichnee, departed this life on the 1st instant, leaving no issue behind him.

MR. WEDDERBURN.—It is with much regret that we have to announce the departure to England of Mr. Wedderburn, who for so many years has so materially contributed by his social qualities and eminent abilities not only to the delight of the society, but also to the prosperity of this presidency.

ROBBERIES.—It is reported that many robberies are taking place about Hangul on the side of the Dharwar, and to quell and apprehend the robbers, it is said, that a detachment under a non-commissioned European officer has marched from Dharwar.

The following is an extract of a letter dated November last, from a passenger of the Hugh Lindsay—

"I wrote you two lines via Bagdad, just to tell you of our adventures. We were plundered and made captives by the Arabs at a place called Lemlool, 40 miles below this, and I don't know yet how we escaped being all murdered, as was intended. We drank a little sherry in our boat, when armed men were posted all around us, and behind every bush or little broken wall to be seen, besides having a fifth of us a man to stab us in the back. The sherry was thought brandy, and that we were therefore desperate. A man called out that we had drunk brandy, and the villains left the boat, the Shaick then sent orders that we might go. In the evening we were promised our lives, and taken by one of the chief plunderers to his house, in the hopes that he might secure of himself the remainder of our property. Here we were kept for 7 days in terrible suspense, and were at last chiefly indebted to a set of monkey-dancers from Bagdad for our deliverance, after attempting to rob us twice during the night. We kept our guns and one or two pistols, as they have percussion locks, all with flints were stolen, a great thing in favour of the former. This is the only place we have found people peaceably disposed. Two days ago, after leaving Lemlool, they intended to murder us merely to deter the starab from coming up the river. We are sending of a horseman to Col. Taylor to see and assist as far as Hillah, where our troubles will finish I hope. I don't anticipate much difficulty, therefore, and when once at Bagdad I shall write you again. As the mails go on from Hillah to Aleppo by one of the officers of the expedition, who is accompanied by one of Ali Pasha's Officers (a Seyd) had we not kept him close to us, there is no doubt we should have been all dispatched."

REVOLUTION IN DEMAUN.—The following letter, to the Editor of the Bombay Gazette, intimates a revolution in Demaun—

"I have just seen a gentleman who has arrived here from Demaun in the suite of Senhor Gama, the Governor of that place, from whom I have gleaned the following particulars, which will be more circumstantially narrated in your next. On the night of Friday last, a body of troops, under the command of Major *, rose up in arms and proclaimed the Constitution of 1820, as has been lately forced upon the Queen at Lisbon. This revolution has only been used as a pretext to overturn the authority of Senhor Gama, by persons who are under the greatest obligations to him; but I have only time to add just now, that many of the most respectable families in Demaun have fled to Bombay, and that you may expect a more detailed account from me of these proceedings before the next issue of your publication.

THE LOSS OF THE SHIP TIGER.—Intelligence has been received, that the ship Tiger, from Liverpool, bound for Bombay, which touched at, and left the Cape of Good Hope on the 6th of July last, and which has not since been heard of, was either wrecked or totally lost, and that the whole of the passengers and crew,—the unfortunate Captain excepted,—were saved.

CEYLON.

LADY HORTON.—At a public meeting held in the Colombo Library on the 14th of January, it was determined to present LADY HORTON, previous to her approaching departure from the island, with pearl ornaments en suite, as a token of the respect and esteem entertained by the society of Ceylon for her Ladyship. Several complimentary addresses were made on the occasion, that of Mr. Justice Jermie in particular, was very generally applauded. On the 16th LADY HORTON was pleased to express her readiness to comply with their wishes, to a deputation of gentlemen who waited upon her Ladyship to request her acceptance of the present.

MALDIVE ISLANDS.

A letter from the Collector of Customs at the Maldiva Islands mentions, that Her Majesty the Queen was safely delivered of twins at 35 minutes past 7 on the morning of Christmas day. Her Majesty is doing as well as can be expected. His Majesty entertained a select party on the occasion with pipes and opium.

From the same source it is intimated, that a new tariff is in preparation, the principal feature of which is that a duty of 2½ per cent. will be levied on the exportation of coir rope, and a bounty of 20 per cent. on that of arrack.

Commerce is represented as being in the most deplorable state, speculators being unwilling to touch coir at present from their having no guarantee that the duty may not be doubled by this time next year; and most of the importers would, it is said, be happy to dispose of their imports at prime cost. The Government have fixed the current value of the copper pice at ¼ of a penny sterling; and that of four of the old copper challes (which possess exactly the same intrinsic value) at ½. This proceeding has caused the most extraordinary sensation on change, and will materially damage the operations of the betel and arrack merchants.

SINGAPORE.

Singapore news to the 31st of December, has been received during the week. The pirates seem now to have been scarred away, at least for a time, from the vicinity of the Straits, through the active measures adopted for their extinction. The Wolf and Zephyr had been cruising about in search of the buccanniers in the Straits of Durian, a famous piratical haunt but had not met with a single suspicious prahu, while the Bugis and other trading boats, were seen quietly pursuing their voyages undeterred by apprehension of molestation.

CHINA.

China news to the 23d of December, has been received. The affairs of the foreign barbarians in the celestial empire, it would appear, have now arrived at a crisis. The Chinese authorities still persisted in their determination to uphold the laws of the empire, and prevent all foreigners from permanently residing in Canton, which they have hitherto been suffered to do. The commission of Sir George Robinson, as Chief Superintendent of the China Commission, had been abolished, and he had retired. The Commission is now composed of two Superintendents, Capt. Charles Elliot and Alex. Johnson, Esq. In consequence of this change, the present Superintendents have been obliged to relieve themselves of the duty of despatching vessels, which office has been delegated to Capt. Crockett and Jannity. The black tea question had been settled. Owing to the vigilance of the Mandarins, smuggling had almost entirely been suppressed. The stock of unsold opium, at the date of the last advices, was 5,000 chests. The hong merchants were nearly all ruined; and one had failed. Trade was at a complete stand, money extremely scarce, and exchange rising very rapidly. — The arrivals of the ship Lord Auckland, and also of the Lord William Bentinck, the latter of which was supposed to have been lost in the Straits, from the circumstances of a number of cotton bales bearing marks corresponding with those of her cargo having been picked, are announced. Both ships had made very long passages from Singapore.

PERSIA.

The following is an extract of a letter from Therau, dated 12th Nov. 1836:—The Shah seems to be in a considerable scrape at present; he has been among the Turcomans on the Loogann; the troops were hungry, and plundered the friendly tribes of that people; the others seeing this, went off with their property into the desert and have recently been plundering H. M.'s camp, and have carried off many small bodies of stragglers of the army and others. The baggage cattle of the Russian Ambassador were about the first carried off, and since then very many cattle, a good many soldiers and servants, and it is said two guns, have been taken by the Turcomans! People in camp, by most recent accounts, suffer immense privations. 400 men of one single battalion were recently seen on the road, having sold their arms, &c. and deserted. And this desire to get out of their troubles is very strong among the rabble, whom the Shah considers a disciplined army! How he is to get back I know not, but it still seems doubtful, notwithstanding the disgraces of the present campaign, and the difficulties that surround him now, whether H. M. will not still try to go to Meshed this year! The revenues of this year (5 months of which still remain) are all expended; the people are oppressed and disgusted, but still the Shah writes by every letter for more infantry and more ammunition.

"H. M. is coming (or trying to come) to Jahgerin, from which place we will see whether he will march towards Tehran or Meshed. The Russian Minister and his tool, (the Persian Minister for Foreign Affairs,) press the Shah to go on to Herat this year! but if H. M. does take this advice (which it does not seem improbable,) I think he may probably forfeit his crown.

"All the present difficulties of the Shah's situation may do good ultimately, for I imagine that he must receive lessons in the school of adversity before he will open his eyes to his own position, or that of his miserable country.

"The total failure of Sir Henry Bethune, in his attempt to acquire authority in the Camp of our protégé; his removal, and that of the rest of the detachment and party from the camp, was accomplished entirely by Russians and Perso-Russians. And if the same party manages to get the Shah to persevere in going to Meshed this year, they will have displayed great talent in carrying the scheme to a successful issue.

"The British Mission remains at Tehran till the Shah's plans are known, and its doing so will in all probability put our Minister in a most favorable position for showing the Shah how unwise has been his recent conduct, and how dangerous is the advice of Russia."

Thus it appears that the influence which the British power had in placing the Persian monarch on the throne made but a slight impression, so slight that Russian intrigue has effectually neutralized it in a very short space of time.

We cannot well understand the game that is being played; it appears most singular that, however circumstances may favor us, we are always on the losing side with Persia. It might be thought that the service received by the monarch of those domains from the British, would have convinced him of their desire to aid him and give him sound counsel; but whether there be mismanagement on the part of our representatives at that Court, or that the Shah is driven by his fate to his present excesses, so it is that we are reduced to the part of mere spectators, and our society tolerated not from love but fear.

The country appears to be in that state of anarchy, that little is now required but to direct the movement in either way, as it might suit the interests of England or Russia to guide it. Russia evidently has the power and is not wanting in the will; England has now, we fear, neither, and what the result may be, it were idle of prophecy to predict.

The present Persian Monarch is following the footsteps of his predecessor, but from all accounts he will not die a crowned head as Futti Ali did.

REVIEW OF THE CALCUTTA MARKET.

(From the Bengal Hurkaru Price Current, Feb. 25.)

INDIGO.—The market has been at a stand since our last, and we have heard of no sale.

Account from the Factories are favorable; in Kishnaghur and Jessore rains have been general, and sowings on the low lands are in progress, while the high-lands are cultivating, which owing to the long drought had become as hard as flint; Tinhoot has had partial showers, but sufficient to go on with the sowings; on the "Bhagrutty" the planters are busy sowing away, and the rains already fallen, will probably enable them to complete one half of their cultivation. On the whole, prospects are fair for the ensuing season.

RAW SILK.—The demand for this produce continue for the English market and prices are well supported.

SILK FINE GOODS.—The demand continues favorable particularly for Corahs for shipments to England; but operations are restrained by the absence of supplies in the market. We quote the prices of the assortments as in our last.

COTTON.—Without report of transaction, and the prices remain stationary at our last quotations.

SALTPETRE.—The want of tonnage to England, consequent on the increased number of vessels now loading for the Mauritius, has tended to repress shipment of this produce. A purchase of 3,000 maunds Ghazepore for the English market is the only transaction reported since our last, and we have no change to notice in prices.

SUGAR.—We have heard of no transaction for the English market. A purchase of 400 maunds Burdwan produce is the only transaction reported by a naive for shipment to Bombay. The prices may be quoted as in our last.

LAC.—Some purchase of Shell are reported with the transactions of the week for the American market, at unaltered prices. Dye has been without enquiry since our last.

GRAIN.—Shipments of Moonghy Rice to the Mauritius and Bourbon continue in active progress, and purchases to the extent of about 70,000 maunds have been made since our last. We have no change in prices to notice.

OPIMUM.—The second sale of the Season was held at the Exchange on Monday last, the 20th instant. The purchases are reported to have been principally made for re-sale on the Spot, by speculators who are anxiously waiting the return of the Isabella Robertson, from China in order to enter the market.

The following is the result of the sale—

	Chests.	Highest.	Lowest	Average.	Proceeds.
Behar	1,500	1,645	1,580	1,591-14-3	23,87,840
Benares	980	1,465	1,430	1,442-3-6	14,13,375
Do (Chests 20 at				750	15,000

The following have changed hands since our last, viz.—

10 Chests.	Patna.	Co.'s Rs.	1,595
15 "	ditto.	" "	1,590

The Stock of the first sale, remaining uncleared to the 24th instant is Patna 1,698 chests and Benares 730 chests.

TIN.—Without report of sale. We quote the prices at a further reduction since our last.

PEPPER.—A few sales of Eastern Bhoory have been effected, shewing a slight reduction in price.

MAIZE AND NUTMEGS.—Are in limited enquiry. A sale of the latter is reported at our former quotation.

CLOVES.—Have slightly improved, and a sale is reported at our quotation.

MULE TWIST.—The market continues favorable, and the prices of some of the assortments have slightly advanced on last week's quotations.

TURKEY RED YARN.—A sale is reported at our previous quotation.

OTHER DYED YARNS.—Without enquiry.

CHINTZES.—The market continues very inactive. A few sales of Bengal and Neutral Stripes have been effected, at full former prices.

WHITE COTTONS.—The demand in our market continues to exist for Cottons of light fabrics, viz. Hook Muslins (of middling quality) Jaconets, Mulls and Lappets; but we hardly notice any change in prices.

WOOLLENS.—The demand continues for Woollens of coarser descriptions at full former prices.

CORPER.—Sales are limited, and we have no change to notice in our last quotations.

IRON.—Sales during the week have been effected to a fair extent; but the bearing of the market in respect to prices, has declined on several of the assortments since our last.

STEEL.—Without sale since our last report, and the assortments remain as last quoted.

IRON.—Also without sale. Pig is quoted at a shade of decline.

SPELTER.—A sale of 200 maunds is reported with the operations of the week, shewing a slight reduction in price.

TIN PLATES.—Have advanced in price, as will be seen from the sale reported.

QUICK SILVER.—Remains as in our last.

JUVENILE BALL.

The Juvenile Ball of Mons. Dupuis, was an exceedingly well conducted, and highly pleasing entertainment. The children danced, with much grace, and the innocent gaiety, and beauteous buoyancy of childhood, exhibited by these pretty little creatures, did one's heart good to look upon. Monsieur Dupuis's pupils do the greatest credit to his choregraphic accomplishments.

At about eleven the juveniles, and their chaperons, made their exit, and the adults commenced dancing. There must have been at the very least 700 persons collected in the room. A regular olla potrida, composed of sections of every grade and class of society resident in this good city. Law, physic, and, for aught we know, divinity, might each have recognised numbers of votaries, and disciples; then there were civilians, and colonels and constables. Every trade had at the very least its half-dozen representatives, and the very press itself was pressed into the service. It was to us a pleasing spectacle and a good and fair criterion whereby to estimate the ease and comfort enjoyed by the industrious and orderly portions of this community. The ladies were all well dressed, many of them superbly. The dancing was very good, and the gaiety and brilliancy of the scene, equalled any thing we have witnessed in this locality, the batchelors' fancy ball always expected.

We trust, that Monsieur Dupuis will take an early opportunity of exhibiting another phasis, in the acquirements of his pupils.—Hurkaru, March 31.

THEATRICALS.

MASANIELLO.

When it is considered that the original production of Auber's superb opera of Masaniello, took the managers of the French, German, and principal English theatres three months to prepare,—that it was submitted to sixty rehearsals,—that it concentrated all the musical and saltatorial talent in Europe.—and cost each theatre about five thousand pounds, the attempt of a very small company of foreign artistes, [assisted by a small band of English amateurs and a detachment from an infantry regiment,] to present the opera in Calcutta after a ten day's preparation, and only three imperfect rehearsals, will appear bold—very bold indeed. We tremble, on such occasions, for the victims of comparison. Half of Calcutta society have been spectators of the best efforts of the best performances in Europe, and when they behold the endeavors here made to amuse them, they are not so much struck with the respectability of the essay, all things considered, as with its palpable inferiority to that which they have left behind.—We do not, therefore, expect to find every body in ecstasies with what was seen on Saturday night, nor shall we shape our observations with reference to the admirable performances of which we have ourselves been no unfrquent spectators. We regard the attempt to pre-ent Masaniello the other night per se, and, we must say, that it was, in this view, altogether a highly successful affair, and would have been still more successful, had the orchestra been much better drilled. The Barcarolle,—the chorus of the Revolt—the Market Chorus—the duet between Pietro and Masaniello—and Pietro's song in the fifth act "voyez du haut de ces riages, &c." were sung with infinite spirit and effect, drawing down peals of applause. Mademoiselle Lémery (or L'Hem-mery, as the cockney critic in another paper writes her) was in very good voice, her execution particularly neat and felicitous, though the music of her songs was rather imperfect and badly arranged. Bonniol and Fluery were in very fine voice, and played with great energy. We never saw Bonniol to so much advantage.—Fradin, as usual, was correct and impressive.

With regard to Mrs. Leach's Fenella, we shall merely observe that seeing that she is not a pantomimist or a dancer,—that she must have had but very few rehearsals,—that she is entirely ignorant of the language in which the piece was performed, and very imperfectly acquainted with the music, the performance did her much credit.

Frequent repetition would doubtless render the portrayal of the various passions by which Fenella is agitated infinitely more impressive and effective; but it is only long practice, and a regular apprenticeship to ballet and "dumb shew," that can enable a woman of even Mrs. Leach's genius and talent, to take high ground as a pantomimist.

The costumes, the grouping, the arrangement of the scenery, (which in itself is detestably old) the performance of the ballet, &c. were all in very good style. The Nouveaux and their little girl were loudly applauded, as was the active and improving amateur, (one of M. Nouveau's pupils) who danced the Bolero with Madame, and took a conspicuous part in the Turandotta. This last formed a pleasant feature of the market scene, which, by the way, was very well managed. There was no lack of fish, fruit, flower, or fagottocini. The market chorus owed something of the effect with which it was given to the splendid voice of Mrs. Goodall Atkinson, who, with Count Almaviva, obligingly took a share in the performance. Finally, the volcano, with its flowing lava, its explosion, its violent eruption, &c. produced a magnificent effect, showing that the Chowringhee Theatre has now a machinist who is thoroughly "up to his work," and capable of doing full justice to all the magical illusions with which The Wound Demon (the piece he has chosen for his benefit) abounds.

Such has been the success of Masaniello that we observe the French Company, yielding to the solicitations of many persons who were present, and to their own polite desire to gratify many who were not—propose to repeat the performance on Wednesday evening. We have no doubt they will have a second bumper.

(Since writing the foregoing we have been favored with the following critique from the pen of a highly talented correspondent, who has often adorned our paper with his observations.)

One who sets himself to the task of criticism, should by rights compel himself to sink the expression of his own opinion in deference to the opinions, as apparently expressed, of the public. It is his duty not to pronounce on the excellence or the inferiority of a performance by solely his own impression of it, and he should in so far distrust his own judgment, as to correct his idea of what he saw, by nothing the visible effect, of the thing seen upon the audience. A neglect of this most wholesome rule causes our critics to launch out but too frequently into "panyerical superlative,"—the reflection of their individual impression, upon matters which merited no more than a very ordinary modicum of applause, or to predicate "total failure" of a case wherein they themselves, perhaps alone, entertained the opinion boldly pronounced by them as the general one. There is no doubt that the due observance of this rule, is, as is the case with so many maxims, admirable in spirit but difficult in execution, a matter next to impossible. People will insist that others should see with their eyes, weakened perhaps though they be with the effects of a false glare,

"———mistaking eyes
That have been so bedazzled with the sun
That every thing they look on seemeth green."

This failing is, we hear, declared to be one singularly observable in us, and in our critiques. We are, of course, unconscious of the error, and (if we be so guilty as is said) are about even on this very occasion to incur again the imputation of the crime of overpraise—that lese majeste in the eyes of the more bilious members of "a judicious and discriminating public."

Masaniello, played by the French Company on Saturday night, gave for the first time to a Calcutta audience the spectacle of a five act tragic opera. The specimen of this branch of the drama so offered them is a most favourable one. The story of the Fisherman Viceroy, his strange and rapid elevation, his miserable end, is in itself highly dramatic and of easy adaptation to the stage in any form of serious action, though in none more so than the tragic opera. The subject is heroic, the incidents stirring and energetic; ample room is afforded for heightening the general effect by the aid of spectacle, and these advantages have been seized and turned to the best account by the veteran dramatist Scribe. The language of the opera is singularly good, and the situations natural and impressive. The interest is judiciously thrown entirely upon the hero, Masaniello, and his sister, the dumb girl, Fenella. The first act which does no more than prepare by development of the simple plot of the piece for the entrance of Masaniello, can be considered only in the light of an introduction to the business of the drama, conducted, during the remaining four acts, by the people either subservient, or in opposition, to their leader. In this consists the peculiarity of the opera. Auber has thrown his whole strength into the chorusses, and, by masterly management of his art, keeps up the varied expressions of feeling among the mixed multitude of a fiery and impassioned people with continued fidelity and unabated power. There is always something grand in the united out break of strong feeling, even among the least picturesque of all possible mobs. Crabbe used to say "there was poetry in a Westminster election," and although not quite enthusiast enough to sympathise in the supposed poetic essence of the gin-drinking patriots in question, the effect of their united energies is, we must confess, imposing. Hence the impression invariably produced on the stage by a well-wrought chorus, well acted, as well as well sung. It is truly spirit stirring, and, from the rudest ages of the drama to the present day, the chorus has been alike employed to work up an effect. Auber's chorusses in Masaniello are brought forward in the most prominent portion, and, in fact, sustain the body of the piece. He covers the front of the stage with a infuriated populace maddened against their oppressors. Masaniello is among them, but we forget him in the crash and tumult with which he is surrounded. The people are, in fact, for the time the principal character. Few modern composers have attempted so to dignify the chorus. We do not think that any have so well succeeded in it as Auber; it is a difficult task in which even Meyerbeer (as in the Margherita) was confessed to have failed.

The contrast offered to all this noise by the silent eloquence of the mute Fenella, is striking, and constitutes, what dramatists call "a valuable incident." The union of dumb show with expressive music, is, under these circumstances, peculiarly effective, relieving the attention, and the ear, from what might otherwise prove a monotony of sound and action.

Fenella was in the hands of that very clever little person Mrs. Leach, who has, in a new walk of the drama, given fresh evidence of her versatility, and of that power of conception of character which marks the presence of true histrionic talent. The difficulty of the undertaking to her was doubtless enhanced by having to play in conjunction with foreigners, and by being obliged to study and make herself mistress of the music of a piece with which she was wholly unacquainted. The character could not have found in Calcutta a better representative. The expression of countenance, so indispensable in naturalising pantomime, was never wanting in aid of action, and she was throughout perfectly at home in the intricate situation, in which she appeared as the principal character. Her play in the fourth act was to us as good a piece of mute expression as we have seen, and the audience seemed to testify a similar opinion. Klvire, the character taken by Mamlle. Léméry, is prominent only in the first act, wherein that accomplished singer gave the cavatine, "Plains du sang supreme," with a degree of precision more like that of a well touched violin, than the ordinary execution of the voice. Her variations on the last movement were performed with exquisite neatness and grace. A little opportunity occurred in the fourth act for the display of her powers as an actress, of which she took due advantage. Bonniol appeared as the principal character, Masaniello. He has ordinarily performed parts, of so comparatively quiescent a nature, that we were not prepared for the degree of energy with which he supported the role herein assigned him. Excellently dressed, and evidently determined to do his utmost, he threw himself into the spirit of the character, and acted as well as sung the music. The best piece in the whole opera is the duet in the second act, sung by him and Pietro (Fleury.) The music is of a most spirited character, worthy of being married to the ardent aspirations for freedom, and determination to achieve it.

Amour sacré de la patrie,
Rendous nous l'audace et la fierté ;
A mon pays je dois la vie.
Il une devra sa liberté,

It is really a most noble composition, and is said among more excitable temperaments, in lands where the political allusions are applicable, to have excited the jealousy of constituted authorities, lest it "should swell the soul to rage," and rise enthusiasm to the boiling point of an emue. Fleury appeared to singular advantage in this duet, and was warmly applauded; we never heard him sing better; his barcarole in the fifth act was also very good. Welter was in a less prominent character, but it is not fair in this opera to attempt individual criticism of separate performers, the effect being produced chiefly, as above explained, by chorusses, in which the whole take part. These morceaux d'ensemble were better managed than any thing of the kind that we as yet have seen at Chowringhee. It was not one of the regular stand-in-a-row chorusses, when you see a set of people express all manner of passions by alternate protrusion of the right hand and the left, with an occasional half turn to their next neighbour, a glance at the canvas hangings over head for resolution, and a poke at the foot lights for contempt. The Masaniello's followers, strongly re-inforced by supernumerary fishermen, really played every one as if he were indeed a conspirator, and the rushes up and down the stage, the popular fury en masse, was extremely picturesque and expressive.

The strength of the female chorus, was a great addition, and, told, course much in the general effect. Add to this, dances by the Nouveaux in the first act, including a pas-séul by their little daughter, an admirably grouped market scene, and well executed tarantalla; a procession well conceived and performed on the occasion of Masaniello's being invested with the robe of authority, and led off on horseback; and lastly a Valcano scene in the fifth act, the mountain throwing out stones and lava, &c. &c. &c., and we may fairly say that the French have worked hard to deserve applause, and give their opera every attraction which they can command.

The house was very crowded, and the audience apparently highly satisfied. The piece will, we understand, be repeated this week.—Englishman, March 6.

SIGNORA SCHIERONI'S BENEFIT.

Signora Schieroni's benefit at the Theatre on Monday night, went off with great eclat. The estimation in which this most deserving favorite of the public is held, secured for her the ready assistance of both professional and amateur talent, and she was enabled to present an entertainment equally varied and attractive. Music, of course, was the staple; but in order that the patrons of what is pleasantly termed the "legitimate drama" might be gratified, and that the foreign yoke might press with reasonable lightness on the public withers, the Signora, prudently consulting the taste of the community, as displayed in recent selections, such as "The Duel," "High life Below Stairs", &c., produced, as a refreshment between the two parts of the concert, a piece by Poole called "Intrigue or the Bath rool." We have little to say regarding this piece and perhaps the less said the better; for although it was performed cleverly enough, it has very little to recommend it. Even Sir Fretful himself would admit, that it "wants incident." It is, in short, what the Italians call a porcheria.

The only parts in it which afford the least scope to acting, are those which were performed by Mrs. Chester and count Almaviva, and their admirable acting and singing, gave full effect to the honour of the characters. The comic duet the drollery of which, we confess, is rather too much adapted to the taste of the galleries, to please us, was encored. Mrs. Chester's "Should he upbraid," was very sweetly sung: it is a simple melody, and she had the good taste to avoid those finiture by which such trifles are frequently married by English singers. Captain Absolute and Mr. O'Mauley succeeded in performing the difficult task of making something out of nothing,—at least they made the most of characters which had very little in them.

The concert consisted of a good selection, and the pieces were skilfully contrived to combine and give the best effect to a very strong array of fine voices. Schieroni was in excellent voice, and in the first part sang two pieces in character in her best style. The Rondo with Chorus, from "La Pietra del Paragone," was in particular full of that fine expression and graceful finish which give such a zest to Schieroni's singing. Her duet with Fleury from Coccia, was spirited and beautiful. Fleury never appeared to greater advantage than in this duet: his ready apprehension of the Italian manner, and his style of execution, were equally excellent. The piece which seemed to excite most expectation, was the Semiramide duet between Schieroni's and Léméry, this being the first occasion of their singing together. No one who heard the duet could have been disappointed; it was, indeed, a most delightful performance. The other duet "Bella imago," between Schieroni and Welter, did not go off so well. Welter did not seem to feel at home in the piece, and his magnificent voice produced comparatively little effect in his own air from "Le cheval de Bronze," in which he was at home, he delighted the audience. Léméry, Bonoli and Almaviva each had an air all well sung. It was found necessary to omit the beautiful tozetto from L'Inganno felice, in which we were to have heard Linton with Schieroni and count Almaviva. A part of the band of H. M.'s 26th Regiment were in the Orchestra, we believe for the first time. They do not appear to be quite familiar with the description of music given on this occasion, which may account for some want of firmness and precision in the ensemble, which will, no doubt, disappear with practice; there are some amongst them who evidently understand the use of their instruments well.

The Theatre was filled slowly, but before the first Act was over, the house was crowded. We sincerely trust that the results have proved satisfactory to the meritorious beneficaire.—Hurkaru, March, 8.

THE GREEN EYED MONSTER AND THE BRIGAND.

The Green Eyed Monster and the Brigand were performed before a very good house on Monday evening. Of the Green Eyed Monster we shall only say, that it brought out the Secretary in grand force; his Baron de Peyhenhausen, was a masterly performance.

Mrs. Chester was a very sprightly and Espiegle Louise, and the German Heuduc, though ill dressed, was very amusing. Colonel D'Arnstadt, was in the hands of our best Amateur.

He was exceedingly well dressed, and walked his part with his usual felicity and good taste.

The Brigand, which followed, was exceedingly well got up. We noticed all the French artistes on the stage. The music was very good—the composition of Mr. Hamerton; but, strange to say, notwithstanding all the talent put into requisition on the occasion, it was not so well executed by the Brigands as it might have been. The dresses were very pretty. Mrs. Chester was in admirable voice, and is rapidly winning the good feelings of the Calcutta audiences—she will be a great favorite in a short time. Not to make invidious comparisons, she is in her line, a better actress than any now in Calcutta, in addition to which, she has a superb voice, which has been well cultivated.

Nassaroni was very great; but we thought him too polished for the character: there was a want of roughness in some of the scenes, and he could not help shewing that the drawing room of prince Bianchi, was as familiar to him, as if he had lived there all his life; a little less of grace, a dash of uncouthness of gait and manner, was all that was wanting in his delineation of this amiable vagabond.

Both the pieces went off with great success, and the plaudits were incessant.—Hurkaru, March 15.

LE BARBIER DE SEVILLE,

Le Barbier de Seville, was played to a tolerably well filled house. The performance of this opera by the French Artistes, taken as a whole, and looking upon it as an effort made by Artistes, and not by mere Amateurs, was but indifferent. The only really good thing of the night, was the Bazile of Monsieur Welter. This gentleman personated the intriguing music master, with great force and effect. His conception of the poet and his execution of the famous "la Calunnie" were quite novel. The usual reading of this part, is that of a dry, caustic, cunning, and unprincipled fellow, who would sell his soul for a mess of pottage, and who, like other people we could name, lives upon his rascality, his great weapon being calumny, and his grand principle in ethics being "the end justifies the means"—make money honestly if you can, but at all events make money, and so forth! We thought Bazile excellent in the third act, but to us he appeared too forcible in the second, and his delivery of some of the passages, in la Calunnie, which evidently took wonderfully with the audience, struck us as bordering on the ludicrous, to which, from the sublime, we are informed, there is but one step. His dress and appearance were, however, perfect, and it will be some time before this public will have an opportunity of seeing this part so well personated.

Fleury was very correct, very dapper, very vivacious, and very much applauded; but as the Barber, his voice suited not the music he had to sing, and his falsetto screech, in Largo al factotum, and in one or two other passages, made people stare not a little. The part should have been assigned to Welter. Fleury should have taken Bartolo. Bonniol, as the Count, sang prettily, and that is all that can be said of him—his acting was indifferent. Madlle. Léméry, was, we thought, ill-dressed, and sooth to speak, disappointed us as Rosina. Both her acting and singing wanted expression. We must not forget to notice the clever way, in which Fradin threw out, into prominent notice, the insignificant part of the commandant of the Town-guard: it was an exquisite little bit of acting. Taken as a whole, as we before have said, this was an indifferent performance. In the concerted pieces, there was a want of a plumb, of ensemble, and of half a hundred other French phrases, by which enlightened Critics of the present day, delicately insinuate their disapprobation of those whose exertions it is more easy to blame than to imitate or emulate. We are bound, however, in common justice to say, that the audience appeared very well pleased, and we only venture to hint in the politest way in the world, and just by way of insinuation, that they ought not to have been satisfied with such a performance; but that is their affair and not ours, and so ends our catechism. —Hurkaru, March 20, 1837.

HENRY IV. PART 2ND.

If any man understands the taste of the Calcutta Public, it is our worthy Dramatic Secretary. Accordingly his benefit nights are not such in name only, for there is no beggarly account of empty boxes when Mr. Farmer caters for the appetites of our play-goers. We are not to attribute to his own unbiased judgment the selection of the kind of entertainment which he generally provides. It is almost always addressed more to the eye than to the mind. There is no sin, however, in thus satisfying the sight-seekers, and there is nothing very heinous in pocketing their cash for "value received." We have often remarked of this society, that it exhibits a certain juvenility of taste that enables it to enjoy a spectacle at the Theatre in the same spirit in which little boys get a half-penny peep at some travelling puppet-show. Few of those persons who attended our Chowringhee Drury on Monday last, had any occasion to exclaim with Coleridge:—

"Ah! that once more I were a child again."

Why did the Secretary select a play from Shakespeare? Do the people of Calcutta care a straw for that prince of Poets? It would be the grossest insult to their fine boyishness of spirit to answer in the affirmative. He knew what he was about. With his usual tact he passed over the first part of Henry the fourth, in which almost every word is a flash of wit or wisdom, and fixed on the second part on account of a coronation pageant. He was in no way concerned to think that Falstaff was less witty in the part selected, as he remembered that his appearance would be unaltered. He would have the same white poll and round belly, and what more could be required by an audience who are all eyes? There were one or two fine scenes of sentiment and passion that were evidently received with some impatience, but nothing could be more eager and hearty than the applause bestowed upon the 150 "auxiliaries," who walked slowly one by one in very pretty dresses along a narrow slip of red cur wd cloth, stretched across the stage. To have omitted this scene would have been to make a Christmas pudding without the plums. Amidst all the finery, however, there was an air of melancholy and desolation. The whole procession passed through a solitary street. There were no loyal shouts of exultation, for there was no populace. The only lookers-on that appeared upon the stage, were Falstaff and his two or three associates. We suspect that there was in all this a sly hit at the audience who were to be regarded as the gazing mob, for there were certainly no sight hunters on the stage, if we except the single party already mentioned, who were too much absorbed in more important objects to care about the mere spectacle. But seriously speaking, we were thoroughly disgusted with all this trumpery, though we cannot blame the Secretary for turning his knowledge of this society to a handsome professional account. He is fit for better things, but he knows that the audience would not receive them. We cannot say that his poverty, but not his will consents, because we hope that he has played his cards so well as to be free from any pecuniary difficulties; but we are convinced that his benefit nights are not to be taken as a criterion of his taste but rather of his shrewdness, and that he sacrifices his own judgment to please the public, in doing which he does but labour "in his vocation."

Of the performance of the principal parts something must be said, though it must be very brief and not very laudatory. There was considerable chastity and neatness of style in the personation of the Prince of Wales, though he was sometimes hard and cold; and some truth of feeling, occasionally injured by a too stiff and laboured declamation, in that of the King. The Falstaff was a failure—even as addressed to the eye. He was not half fat enough and was much too easy in his movements. The amateur who performed the part, is undoubtedly one of the very best of our comic actors, but on this occasion his usual spirit and humour quite forsook him. Even his memory failed him, and in the laughable scene in which Falstaff puns upon the names of his recruits, the point of a joke was often omitted or destroyed. In addressing Wart for instance, after the dismissal of Mouldy and Shadow, he called him a mouldy, instead of a rugged wart, and he omitted the humorous speech to Feeble "prick the woman's tailor well." Justice Shallow, by the Secretary, was really a very good piece of acting. This gentleman almost always succeeds well in his old men. The blustering Pistol went off admirably. There were a few other parts very respectably performed, but it is hardly worth our while to go any further into detail. —Hurkaru March 29.

AGRICULTURAL AND HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY OF INDIA.

A General Meeting of this Society was held at the Town Hall this morning, at half-past 9 o'clock, (March 8, 1837).

Present.—Dr. Wallich, M. D., V. P., in the Chair.

The Hon'ble Col. Rehling; W. Storms, Esq.; Capt. Leach; G. A. Prinsep, Esq.; A. Colvin, Esq.; J. C. Wilson, Esq.; D. B. Syers, Esq.; C. K.

Robinson, Esq.; W. Speir, Esq.;—Cowie, Esq.; John Allan, Esq.; M. Staunton, Esq.; H. M. Lowe, Esq.; Archibald Grant, Esq.; W. Masters, Esq.; D. Hare, Esq.; G. F. Speed, Esq.; C. Hutchins, Esq., and John Bell.

Visitor.—Captain Carter.

The proceedings of the last Meeting were read and confirmed.

The following gentlemen proposed last month, were duly elected by ballot, viz. :

J. F. Cathcart, Esq., C. S.; Jas. Hills, Esq., Senior; Jas. Hills, Esq., Junior; G. S. Hills, Esq.; Frederick MacLagan, Esq.; Nath. Alexander, Esq.; W. Speir, Esq.; Baboo Maudhub Dutt; Dr. G. N. Cheek; M. Bignell, Esq.; G. Cheap, Esq., C. S.; Dr. O'Dwyer; Capt. Lyagh; W. H. Macnaghten, Esq., and Lieut. Hannington.

The following gentlemen were proposed, viz. :

Proposed by the Secretary, seconded by the chairman. That with reference to the zealous efforts made by Colonel J. Colvin, introducing the American cotton seed and Otaheite sugarcane into Upper India, and to the great interest taken by that gentleman for many years in the proceedings of this society, up to the moment of his departure for England, that gentleman be elected an honorary member of the Agricultural and Horticultural Society of India.

Mr. C. K. Robison was quite ready to support any proposal that would do honor to Colonel Colvin, but objected to the above motion, as irregular; Colonel Colvin being still a member of the society, and after much irrelevant discussion, as to the power of the society to elect honorary members thus situated, which discussion took up much of the society's time, Mr. Robison consented to the original motion with the following addition—"and that as a further mark of the great respect in which Col. Colvin's services are held, that the gold medal be presented to him."

Resolved,—That the question be finally settled at the next general meeting.

Some members thought that the proposal, either in its original or subsequent form, was not in accordance with the rules of the society, although the Chairman contended that there was a precedent as regard Mr. Bell's motion in the case of Sir Robert Colquhoun, while there was no provision made for the award of gold medals. The honor of being elected an honorary member—or to wear a gold medal, or both, is therefore a subject for the grave consideration of members before next meeting.

ORDINARY MEMBERS PROPOSED.

1. His Excellency Monsieur Belier, Governor of Chandernagore, proposed by Sir Edward Ryan, seconded by Dr. Wallich.

2. Captain Carter, 73d Regiment, proposed by C. K. Robison, Esq., seconded by Dr. Wallich.

3. W. Jackson, Esq., proposed by H. M. Lowie, Esq., seconded by Dr. Wallich.

4. D. Pringle, Esq., C. S., proposed by H. Walters, Esq., seconded by W. Storm, Esq.,

5. A Grote, Esq., C. S., proposed by H. Walters, Esq., seconded by W. Storm, Esq.

6. Dr. Furnell, proposed by H. Walters, Esq., seconded by W. Storm, Esq.

7. J. H. Crawford, Esq., proposed by H. Walters, Esq., seconded by W. Storm, Esq.

8. George Taylor, Esq., proposed by John Allan, Esq., seconded by W. Storm, Esq.

9. J. W. Yule, Esq., proposed by John Allan, Esq., seconded by W. Storm, Esq.

10. W. Hickey, Esq., proposed by John Allan, Esq., seconded by W. Storm, Esq.

11. W. F. Fraser, Esq., proposed by John Allan, Esq., seconded by W. Storm, Esq.

12. T. A. Pitkin, Esq., proposed by D. McPherson, Esq., seconded by W. Storm, Esq.

13. R. S. Crawford, Esq., proposed by Mr. Bell, seconded by W. Storm, Esq.

14. Kenneth Mackenzie, Esq., proposed by Mr. Bell, seconded by W. Storm, Esq.

15. T. H. Gardiner, Esq., proposed by Mr. Bell, seconded by W. Storm, Esq.

16. C. Brownlow, Esq., proposed by Dr. Wallich, seconded by Mr. Bell.

17. A. Harris, Esq., proposed by W. Earle, Esq., seconded by Mr. Bell.

18. A. C. Bidwell, Esq., C. S., proposed by J. P. Grant, Esq., seconded by Mr. Bell.

19. Dr. Drummond, proposed by Dr. Strong, seconded by Dr. Wallich.

20. W. Ainslie, Esq., proposed by Alexander Colvin, Esq., seconded by J. C. Wilson, Esq.

21. The Rev. James Charles, proposed by J. C. Wilson, Esq., seconded by A. Colvin, Esq.

22. Charles Dearie, Esq., proposed by Captain Leach, seconded by C. Hutchins, Esq.

23. W. W. Kettlewell, Esq., proposed by C. Hutchins, Esq., seconded by Captain Leach.

With reference to the motion of the Rev. Mr. Boaz, which, by a resolution passed at the last meeting, was handed over to the Committee of Papers for further consideration, the Secretary drew attention to a report, signed by the President and Members of the Committee, to the effect, that they could not at present recommend the adoption of Mr. Boaz's proposition. After the report was read which called forth further discussion, it was proposed by Mr. C. K. Robison, seconded by Mr. Archibald Grant, that this report lay on the table, for the consideration of members, to be finally settled at next meeting.

Two boxes of bulbs purchased from Mr. Arnold, through a resolution to that effect last month, were placed on the table. As the quantity was small the Secretary had reserved distribution, until authorized by the Society, and it was resolved, that such members as wished, might help themselves, and that the remainder be given over to Dr. Wallich for propagation in the Society's nursery.

The Secretary informed the meeting that he had sent some samples of Colonel Colvin's acclimated Upland Georgia cotton to gentlemen, and would proceed to read the reports of Dr. Speir and Mr. Willis, who had kindly taken the trouble to examine the staple. As Mr. Willis's report had that moment been received, he would give Dr. Speir's views on this interesting subject. First, From W. Speir, Esq., to the Secretary, dated the 6th March, forwarding a report by that gentleman, upon a sample of the bale of acclimated Upland Georgia cotton, grown by Colonel Colvin, and presented at the last meeting.

Dr. Speir, says, "I find the greatest part to be of considerably longer staple than our best native cotton; but there are also a number of pods of which the staple is very short. On mentioning this to Colonel Colvin, he informed me, that the people employed to collect this parcel had gathered along with it the produce of some plants of country cotton."

"Upon the present sample, I shall merely remark that the staple, with the exception abovementioned, is equal to the American in length and also in fineness, but has lost a little in strength."

"Colonel Colvin states, that it was grown upon a sandy soil in Purnea, which was useless for every other purpose, and that the quantity produced is equal to that of the native sorts."

The sample upon which Dr. Speir reports, is the produce of the fifth year's crop, from seed originally imported from America, and he thinks that any deterioration which may have taken place, is at least not very rapid, since in the present instance it is after five years, 30 per cent. superior to that of the country, and will, it is to be presumed, maintain its superiority for some years to come."

Upon the whole, Dr. Speir's report is highly encouraging, to those who have time to attend to cultivating cotton themselves.

From Joseph Willis, Esq., to the Secretary, dated (this-morning), on the same subject.

Mr. Willis offers his opinion, under great disadvantages, being left to find out the origin, and general history of the sample before, but he pronounces it Upland Georgia. His general premises accord remarkably with the opinion expressed by Dr. Speir, and thinks that it would sell for 20 to 25 per cent. more price in England than the cottons common to the Upper Provinces.

From J. Thomason, Esq., to the Secretary, dated Azimghur, February 3d, enquiring for the sugar-cane, a supply of which he had been led to expect from Calcutta; intimates having received supplies of the Otahellie cane from Captain Sleeman's plantation at Jubbulpore, and from the Agricultural Society of Lucknow. Mr. T. adds, "the former was much larger, thicker and finer than the latter," and that both dispatches reached Azimghur in a tolerably good state. That the Agricultural prospects of that district were superb at the date of his letter.

From Major Honeywood to the Secretary, dated London, October 8, 1836, advising his arrival in England, and of having delivered over to his Agents, Messrs. Crawford, Colvin and Co., several copies of the 2nd volume of the Society's transactions, which he had kindly taken charge of, and that the parcels had been forwarded to their respective addresses by that firm on the same day.

Major H. solicits a supply of fresh seeds from the Himalaya mountains, especially of forest trees, and tenders his best services to the Society in England.

From Dr. James Anderson, Secretary to the Beerbhoom Society, dated 10th February, applying for seeds and plants; mentions, that the chief food of the hill-people in that district is Indian corn, and requests a supply of the Foreign Maize and Joonla paddy. Dr. A. adds, that the indigenous Maize produces only one small and very inferior ear.

Memorandum.—The Secretary had dispatched some seeds including some Himalaya paddy and American maize, promising more on the receipt of a supply expected from the United States.

From R. Lowther, Esq., to the Secretary, dated Allahabad, Feb. 7th, acknowledging the receipt of the Secretary's letter of the 25th Oct. and consenting to hold his services at the Society's disposal should he remain at that station. Mr. Lowther mentions having received charge of all the remaining cotton seed from Capt. Watt, on the departure of the latter from Allahabad, of which Mr. Lowther had forwarded one bag to Dr. Stevenson at Lucknow, who had promised to distribute it. Mr. Lowther intimates intention to forward a small supply of Sandoway tobacco seed, the produce of his own garden.* The crop had turned out very fine, the seed-plants being 7 and 8 feet high. Mr. Lowther accompanies his communication with a paper of fly powder, for destroying insects on young plants, and affords some useful hints on the best method of cultivating strawberries.

From the same to the same, dated Feb. 22d, stating, that Mr. Turner, the Commissioner of revenue, had relieved him of all the cotton seed, with an intention of distributing it through the Tusseeldars, between Allahabad and Cawnpore, with injunctions that the seed is to be given to those only who are likely to give it a fair trial.

Mr. Lowther promises a further supply of tobacco seed, and expresses his willingness to meet the wishes of the Society for the establishment of a garden at that station.

Memorandum.—Col. Colvin, favored the Secretary with perusal of a letter from Mr. Lowther, to the same effect. Mr. Lowther, proposes to call a meeting as soon as he is put in possession of an outline of what is desired.

From H. T. Pinsep, Esq., Secretary to Government, dated the 8th Feb., in reply to the Secretary's letter of the 3d idem, in reference to the transmission of queries on subjects of an agricultural nature to residents in the interior; states, that the Governor of Bengal participates in the objects of the Society, and that communications on such subjects may be circulated free of postage.

Memorandum.—This letter, with the Society's, to which it is an answer, and the queries therein referred to, have been printed, and are now ready for circulation.

From Dr. Wallich to the Secretary, dated Feb. 17th, forwarding some silk worms' eggs, received from Mr. Edgeworth of Lodihana at the request of Capt. Wade. Mr. Edgeworth, does not state what sort of silk worm it is or whence derived. The Secretary on opening the paper, found many of the eggs hatched, and with the concurrence of Dr. Wallich, he is now rearing them on the full grown mulberry leaf. The eggs are altogether different from some he received lately in Bengal for the purpose of sending to Mr. Blundel in Assam, and these being in the same state, Mr. Bell was obliged to adopt the same course with them. They are now arrived at the stage of cocooning, in which state the Secretary intends forwarding them in perforated boxes, so that Mr. Blundel may receive either a colony of moths, or their eggs.

From Robert Cole, Esq., Secretary, Madras Literary Society, dated 7th February, requesting a complete series of this Society's transactions, in return for which he offers to send a copy of their journal.

Memorandum.—The Secretary had complied with Mr. Cole's request, availing himself of an opportunity which presented, to forward by Dr. Haffnagle, copies to the Madras and Bangalore Agricultural Societies, also.

From M. C. Crane, Esq., dated 21st February, forwarding specimens of the Pernambuco and Bourbon cotton, grown at Singapore.

From Captain W. H. Sleeman, General Superintendent, Mussoorie, dated February 11th. In reply to the Secretary's letter of the 23d January, with enclosures on the subject of transmitting sugar-cane, to the Collector of Ahmednuggur, states, that the correspondence has been forwarded to Lieutenant Brown, in charge of the Jubbulpore plantation, and expresses his willingness to meet the wishes of the Society on this or any other occasion.

In continuation of a former letter, gives an account of two different kinds of bamboo; notices the circumstances, and suggests a query as to the effect of lighting on the growth of the bamboo.

* This seed has been since received, and is now at the service of applicants.

From D Macleod, Esq., of Seonee, to the Secretary, dated February 9th, seeking information, regarding Tussur silk, which is manufactured in that district. Requesting to be informed what may be considered the value of two species of country cottons termed "mun-noca," and "dos cupas," stating they can both be cultivated to any extent in that part of the country, and offering to send down specimens, if required. Noticing an advantage possessed by the Indian agriculturist, in being able to sow the same description of crops from year to year, without the application of manure.

From John Donald, Esq., of Bareilly, dated February 11th, requesting to have some varieties of cotton and tobacco seeds for trial in his district.

From D. B. Syers, Esq., to the Secretary, dated February 28th, presenting to the Society, 16 maunds of fresh cotton seed for distribution in the Mofussil.

From Captain W. H. Sleeman, to the Secretary, dated Dehra, February 20th, stating that by a letter from Lieutenant Charles Brown, at Jubbulpore, to

Lieut. Kirke, some of the Otaheite cane, at the Jubbulpore plantation, this season, weighed eight seers each, or 16 lbs., and measured nine cubits; clearly demonstrating that the canes have not deteriorated, for, adds Captain Sleeman, "I do not believe that the canes of the plantation from which the original stock was taken by me in January, 1827, weighed more."

From John Allan, Esq., dated also this morning, forwarding an interesting extract from a letter of a gentleman at Dundee, on the mode of treating flax, promising further information on the same subject.

From R. S. Thompson, Esq., forwarding extract from the letter of Mr. Chimes, of Rio Janeiro, soliciting a supply of East India sugar-canes of sorts.

The thanks of the Meeting were ordered for all the foregoing communications.

PROCEEDINGS OF THE ASIATIC SOCIETY.

Wednesday Evening, the 1st March, 1837.

W. H. Macnaghten, Esq., Vice-President, in the chair.

Messrs. J. M. Mill and W. Cracroft, proposed at the last meeting, were ballotted for, and duly elected Members of the Society.

H. Torrens, Esq., was proposed by Mr. H. T. Prinsep, seconded by Mr. Macnaghten.

Col. Hezeta, proposed by Major Taylor, seconded by the Secretary.

Mr. W. Storm, proposed by Mr. Bell, seconded by Dr. Wallich.

The Secretary proposed the Bishop of Cochin-China as an Honorary Member, seconded by Mr. W. H. Macnaghten;—referred to the Committee of Papers.

Read a letter from Captain H. Harkness, Secretary to the Royal Asiatic Society, acknowledging the receipt of oriental works published by the Society.

Read a letter from H. T. Prinsep, Esq., Secretary to the Government of India, General Department, communicating the following extract from a Letter, No. 15, of 1836, from the Honorable the Court of Directors, dated the 14th September, 1836.

Para. 4. We learn from the Journal of the Asiatic Society, that you have recently transferred the European portion of the books of the Library of the College of Fort William to a public Library in Calcutta, and the Oriental works to the Asiatic Society of Bengal. We observe that this measure is made dependent upon our sanction, but as we are not aware of the reasons which recommended such a distribution, we refrain at present from issuing any directions upon the subject. With regard to the manuscripts, however, it is probable that the collection comprises many copies of several of the works or duplicates of those previously in the possession of the Asiatic Society; and we direct that in all such cases two copies be forwarded to us without awaiting the receipt of our decision upon the arrangement which you have made for the distribution of the contents of the College Library. We, at the same time, desire that you cause to be prepared and forwarded to us by the first opportunity a list of the several works, both European and Oriental, which are included in the arrangement now referred to.

Ordered,—That a list be prepared of the works included in the Court's requisition, and that the manuscripts in question be separated for transmission home through the Government.

The Secretary noted the sale of 2,000 rupees Company's Paper with which the Printer's bill had been discharged.

Read a letter from Monsieur S. L. Laporte, Secretary to the Linnæan Society at Bordeaux, proposing a mutual correspondence and interchange of objects of natural history, which M. Laporte also offers to individual members from his own rich collection of zoology.

Read a letter from Professors Otham Frank, of Munich, acknowledging the receipt of Oriental works published by the Society, and suggesting a list of some of the principal Sanscrit works which it would be desirable to undertake, on the completion of those now in hand.

Mr. E. V. Irwin presented, on the part of the author, a duplicate of the Cronological hypothesis signed Veritas, which was received from Van Diemen's Land some months ago.

Museum.

Mr. Dyce Sombre presented to the Society, through Dr. Burlini, the sword of her late highness Begum Sombre, which she had worn from the year 1778 to the day of her death, and which was always kept by her bed side.

A collection of models of the human hand and foot in plaister of Paris, was presented on the part of Mr. C. W. Smith.

Dr. Wise, Principal of Hughli College, intimated that he was desirous of forming a museum in connection with the Hughli College, and would be happy to receive any duplicates which the Society might be able to spare.

The following memorandum and proposition were submitted by Captain Cunningham:—

"Having been engaged during the past month in arranging the coins in the Cabinet of the Asiatic Society,

I beg to submit to the Members of the Society the following observations upon their collection.

1. The collection of the coins belonging to the Asiatic Society, is so exceedingly meagre in every series of coins, that would be of use to the historian and to the antiquary, and at the same time, the individual specimens are so very poor in point of preservation, that the whole number of coins, which have been many years in collection, is scarcely deserving of the name of a Cabinet. To prove the meagreness of the collection, I need but to subjoin a list of the coins now in the Cabinet of the Society, in which the only really valuable specimen is a gold coin of Mahendra Gupta.

List of the coins of the Society's Cabinet, with their value.

	Co.'s Rs
1 Gold coin of Mahendra Gupta,	30
52 Dekkany gold hoons; some small, others minutely small,	60
7 Modern gold coins, chiefly Nipālese,	25
42 Indo-Scythic coins, including some rudely executed base gold coins,	50
26 Grecian, Arsakian and Sassaniden,	51
30 Māsulmān and Nipālese silver coins,	30
227 Māsulmān pice, all exceedingly common, except a Mahmud,	14
281 Dekkany pice—mostly modern and wanting inscriptions—nearly worthless,	5
115 Small silver coins—punch marks and Varaha series, all bad,	25
166 Chinese and Japanese,	5
25 Continental silver coins,	35
221 Roman coins,	120

2. It is a fact, which must be known to most of the Members, that the Society's collection has not been increased during the last two or even three years by the addition of a single coin; or, in other words, that since private individuals have commenced the collection of coins, there have been few, if any, presented to the Society's Museum: most persons finding more pleasure in obliging a friend, by presenting to him any coins that they may pick up, than in displaying their public zeal by making a donation of them to the Society. I therefore beg to propose,—

As the Society's Cabinet has not been increased during the last three years by the donation of a single coin, and, as from the number of private individuals now collecting coins, there is but little likelihood of any donations being made for the future,—That the Society do either increase their collection of coins by purchasing such as may offer from time to time, in order that their Cabinet, at present nearly valueless, may be useful to the Antiquary in the elucidation of doubtful points in history, or that the Society do sell their present incomplete collection to the highest bidder, and apply the proceeds either to furnishing the Museum with subjects more generally interesting or with furniture indispensably necessary."

The general opinion of the meeting was adverse to the sale of the Society's Cabinet, its preservation being no source of expense; and it was to be hoped opportunities might occur of rendering it more important and rich.

Mr. Bell submitted the following communication on the subject of the statistical inquiries suggested by the Royal Asiatic Society. The author was thanked by the Chairman for his offer to draw up a series of papers on staple products of India, and his note was ordered to be made over to the Statistical Committee.

A very large stuffed specimen of the Ornithorychus patadoxus was presented by Mr. E. V. Irwin.

A letter from Lieutenant N. Vicary, dated Sydney, 28th October, 1836, announced his having dispatched, under care of Captain Davidson, of the Lady Kennaway, a box containing a series of the fossil shells of New South Wales.

Captain Edward H. Harris, Commodore on the Surat station, presented a box of fossil bones from the Peria island in the Gulf of Cambay, which he had procured after much difficulty, expressly for the Society.

Among these are several very perfect bones—an alligator's head differing from that sent by Lieutenant Fitzjames—a buffalo's horn—a very large vertebra—a well preserved Mastodon's tooth in iron sand conglomerate—and numerous other fragments.

Captain A. Burnes' series of the geology and fossil conchology of the Chari range, in Cutch, arrived since last meeting, was laid on the table.

Dr. Pearson read a memorandum on the gaur and gayal, in justification of the name given to the specimen of the former in the Society's museum.—Journal of the Asiatic Society for February.

The transactions of the Asiatic Society of the 1st of March last, present, amongst other interesting things, to public attention, a very dignified paragraph from what in Mr. Prinsep's letter is called the Hon'ble Court of Directors. They appear to be in high but dignified dudgeon, with the Government of India, in the General Department, and it must be very gratifying to the 80 millions of Hindoos, and the rest of their subjects to remark, how searching and minute, is the attention paid by them, to the veriest trivialities. To so insignificant a matter as a few old white ant-eaten volumes and some copies of oriental manuscripts.

We may now fairly hope, that since such things can occupy their attention, that in process of time something may be done to alleviate the miseries attaching to the want of a proper currency, and having got so far, they may peradventure direct their attention to certain late legislative enactments; in short, they may be led on from small things to great, until their name shall descend to posterity, instead of their memories, slumbering, as has been heretofore the fate of most of these honorable personages, in the quiet repose of the grave, undisturbed alike by the gratitude of the millions of this country, as by the thanks of the Indies and Gentlemen proprietors of East India bonds at home. There is one feature in their calm and dignified address to the Government of India, General department, which cannot, however, fail to grate unpleasantly on the feelings of those, whose hobby (foolish people) is the advance and progress of education, both Native and European, East Indian, Armenian, &c., &c., and that is, that the Honorable Company not being aware of the reasons which recommended the distribution of the old books of the College to the Library and of the manuscripts to the Asiatic Society, (it could not be to give people an opportunity of reading them of course) they therefore refrain from issuing any directions on the subject; only this they do determine, that they will save as much of the manuscripts as they can from the ruin likely to ensue to them, in consequence of their dispersion abroad, when they may be made use of, instead of becoming the prey of the cockroach, and the white-ant in Waver's buildings, by having them sent home immediately.

* We have not room for this letter, being of considerable length.—Ed. C. C.

They speak wonders for the determination of the Court to increase their own archives, but very little indeed for their desire to enlighten their Indian subjects; and it is, moreover, a very bad compliment to the curators of the Library, and the Committee, if such there be, of the Asiatic Society, to whose objects and proceedings, by the way, we wish all possible success. It is really gratifying to observe the rapid increase of their Society, under, we presume, the stimulating influence of the attraction of the Government House scientific conversations. Science will soon become quite the rage in this part of the world. The mechanism marches onwards with 7 leagued boots, why do not Messrs. Pittar and Lattey attend with their pretty things, and delight the assembled professors, with a treatise, explanatory about the same?—Hurkaru, March 23.

MEDICAL AND PHYSICAL SOCIETY.

At a meeting of the Medical and Physical Society of Calcutta, held at the Asiatic Society's apartments on the 4th of March 1837.

T. Bell, Esq., M. D., and J. McCosh, Esq., M. D., proposed at the last meeting, were ballotted for and elected Members of the Society.

Letters from the following gentlemen were read:—

From W. Dunbar, Esq., Assistant Surgeon, Ramghur Local Battalion; W. Bell, Esq., Kennaon, Local Infantry, J. Donald, Esq., Madras Establishment; requesting that their names might be withdrawn from the list of Members.

From J. S. Logie, Esq., Surgeon to the Governor of the Agra Presidency, forwarding a very beautiful specimen of mulberry calculus which he had successfully removed from a boy 12 years of age.

From Apothecary J. Hingault, in charge of the station of Sudya, relating a very curious case in which part of a living insect had been expelled from the throat of a patient where it had remained for some days producing great inconvenience. This letter was accompanied by a preparation of the insect in question.

The following communications were then presented.

A paper from J. Downes, Esq., containing an account of a case of extensive injury of the knee joint, with a drawing of the parts.

Hospital cases, with some observations upon the beneficial effects of veratrin in nervous pains, by D. S. Young, Esq., Surgeon, Nizam's service.

A case of fever, accompanied with fits of an epileptic character, by F. H. Brett, Esq., Surgeon to the Body Guard. The last mentioned paper was then read and discussed. The patient was a European, 20 years of age, of good constitution, who was attacked with remittent fever. The disease was treated by bleeding, leeches, purgatives, and repeated doses of calomel and antimony, and on the 5th day he was seized with a fit of epilepsy, followed shortly afterwards by a second attack; he was again freely bled and leeches and a blister was applied to the nape of his neck, antimonials were administered, and the influence of mercury was continued till his mouth became sore. At the end of a few days the patient recovered completely. It appears that about six weeks previously he had fallen from his horse, and striking upon the back of his head, he was doubled over; he had suffered considerably in consequence of this accident, and had not entirely recovered up to the period of the febrile attack.

Mr. Brett, in his remarks upon the case, asks what influence this fall had in producing the above symptoms. He says, that his own impression is, that sanguineous effusion upon the brain took place at the time of the accident; that this led to the fever and ultimately produced the epilepsy. The author makes also some observations upon the administration of saline substances in fever. Stating his belief in the value of this class of medicines, more especially in the shape of effervescing draughts, and he relates a case of recovery from a severe typhoid fever, in which, save small quantities of wine, a blister and mustard poultices with cathartics, the only remedies used were saline draughts in large quantities, to the employment of which Mr. Brett is inclined to attribute the success of his treatment.

DR. BRETT'S NATIVE HOSPITAL.

A meeting was held at the Town Hall on Saturday morning, 10th March, for the purpose of taking into consideration the propriety of establishing a hospital similar to the one now under the superintendence of Dr. Brett. The following gentlemen were present. The Venerable Archdeacon Dealtry, the Rev. T. Boez Drs. Drummond, Corby, Jacob, and Brett, H. Manuk Esq., and Baboo Gourmohun Dey.

The Venerable the Archdeacon in the chair. The following resolutions were proposed and unanimously adopted.

1. That this meeting highly approves of the generous, disinterested and successful labours of Dr.

Brett in his endeavours to relieve the miseries of the indigent native population of Calcutta and of his efforts to establish a native hospital for general purposes.

2. That while this meeting is impressed with the importance of such an institution, remembering that a similar one has been sometime in contemplation (and may soon be matured) under the auspices of the District Charitable Society it recommends that the subject be brought under the consideration of that Society before any further measures are taken for the permanent establishment of Dr. Brett's institution.

3. In the meanwhile, to prevent the possibility of the natives being deprived of the present institution, the meeting recommends it as an object worthy the confidence and support of the public, and that subscriptions and donations be solicited to carry on its operations. The foregoing resolutions were adopted after considerable discussion as to the merit of the undertaking. The thanks of the meeting were tendered to the Archdeacon for his conduct in the chair, and the meeting adjourned. We hope that the public will lend their aid to this effort to meliorate the miseries of mankind.

Subscriptions and donations will be cheerfully received by the Rev. T. Boer, Union Chapel, Burrumtollah, by the Venerable the Archdeacon, Drs. Corbyn, Jacob and Brett., M. Manuk, Esq., and Baboo Gourmohun Dey.—Englishman Feb 19.

Gentlemen,—With reference to the correspondence noted in the margin, I am directed to transmit to you the annexed extract from a letter No. 45 of 1836, from the Hon'ble the Court of Directors in the Public Department, dated the 2d August, in order that the Hon'ble Court be informed of the success which has attended the Sanatorium at Howrah alluded to therein.

I have the honor to be, gentlemen,

Your most obdt. servt.

Fort William, Dec. 21, 1836.

Extract Public Letter, No. 45 of 1836, from the Hon'ble the Court of Directors, dated 2nd August.

11 and 12. Mr. Assistant Surgeon D. Stewart permitted to devote his leisure hours to conducting a Sanatorium at Howrah (experimentally) for the relief of sick seamen.

The loan of some hospital furniture.

10th. We approve of the aid which has been afforded by Government to this very praise-worthy object on the part of Dr. Stewart, and shall be glad to be informed of its success.

TO THE RIGHT HONORABLE THE GOVERNOR OF BENGAL.
Fort William, Jan. 31, 1837.

My Lord,—We have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of Mr. Secretary Prinsep's letter, No. 1746, of the 21st ultimo, communicating an extract from a despatch from the Honorable the Court of Directors requesting information respecting the success of the Seaman's Hospital established at Howrah by Dr. Duncan Stewart.

In reply we have the satisfaction to inform your Lordship, that the establishment referred to appears to have fulfilled the expectations of its founder, in so far as the welfare of the crews of ships in this port is concerned.

The annexed documents and correspondence afford the best information which we can obtain on the subject. Your Lordship will perceive by the report for last year, that 461 patients, including 77 officers of vessels, received medical treatment at the Sanatorium.

Wishing to acquaint Government with the sentiments of parties who cannot be supposed under the influence of professional partialities, and who know the institution only from the benefits which it is intended to confer, we requested the opinion of the Master Attendant, and beg to subjoin his reply.

We have no hesitation in pronouncing the Seaman's Hospital highly useful, and deserving of support. But, though the stipulated payments by the patients have covered most of the expenses, they yield no remuneration whatever to the principal person, the medical officer, and gratuitous services can scarcely be expected, we fear, from all those who may succeed Dr. Stewart, as Assistant Surgeon to the civil station of Howrah.

We have the honor to be, &c.,

TO DR. JAMES RANKEN,

Officiating Secy. to the Medl. Board.

Sir,—In reply to your letter No. 556, dated the 13th instant, I beg to inform you, that since its receipt, I have made a point of enquiring of various commanders, as they come to this office, their opinion of the institution at Howrah, and all those who had had occasion to send their sick there, spoke highly of its utility, and their men uniformly replied to their enquiries when they visited them, that they were very comfortable and well attended to.

I have the honor to be, &c.,

[Englishman.

We invite attention to a correspondence published in another part of our paper between the Medical Board and Government, on the subject of the Hospital for Seamen established at Howrah. It will be in the recollection of many of our readers that about two years and a half ago, a small brochure of Dr. D. Stewart, upon this subject, was very generally circulated in Calcutta. In this pamphlet, which was addressed chiefly to the mercantile community, Dr. Stewart set forth, 1st, the prevalence of tropical diseases of dangerous character among the shipping in the Hooghly, particularly at the certain seasons of the year; 2d, the expediency as regarded the sick, of keeping them on board their own ships even though provided with medical officers, from the necessarily, noisy, crowded, hot and filthy state of vessels the harbour, loading and unloading, the necessarily imperfect nursing, and the privation of all the comforts procurable on shore; 3d, the impossibility of obtaining for such ships as had no surgeons of their own, sufficiently prompt, or regular, or frequent medical assistance from shore; the time of most medical men being fully occupied in town, and it being always inconvenient, and sometimes dangerous and difficult to go aboard, while the usual diseases requiring treatment admitted not of delay, or partial looking after; and 4thly, the inefficiency and insufficiency of the General Hospital, as an asylum on shore for the sick of the river, on account of its distance, of its unsuitableness to their usual habits and associations, of its want of any thing like private accommodation, and of its being chiefly a military hospital, with some wards for townsmen and paupers, who are all mixed together.

Dr. Stewart had already sought and obtained the permission of Government to devote his leisure hours to the management of a hospital, or as it was called, in tenderness to a supposed English prejudice against that word, a sanatorium for ship's officers and seamen. He has also been promised the loan of two dozen hospital beds and furniture, with other hospital requisites, and laboratory utensils from the Government stores, for six months, with permission at the expiration of that time, to purchase them at prime cost, should he desire to carry on the institution. His object in appealing to the Chamber of Commerce, and the merchants and ship's agents, was not to solicit any pecuniary assistance in conducting his experiment, but protection against paupers and against loss from entertaining ship's crews, in defiance of the usual disclaimer by commanders of their responsibility for any debts incurred on shore. By a regulation of the port, no vessel can obtain her port clearance without presenting a certificate from the Steward of the General Hospital, that all claims against her for the treatment of any of her crew admitted into hospital, have been settled at the usual fixed rate of one rupee per diem, and ship captains are obliged, on leaving any of their crew sick in hospital, to leave security for the payment of all further expenses. Although the Chamber of Commerce declined as a body to give any such pledge as Dr. Stewart required, he received assurances from most of the mercantile houses separately, that he need be under no apprehension on that score, and we believe, that not a single instance has occurred of a dispute or of an unpaid bill since the establishment of the institution. The charges which he proposed to fix were the same as those of the General Hospital; for common seamen one rupee a day, for dieting, medicine, hospital clothing, and servants; for officers 2 rupees, the accommodation for them being of a superior nature. In an appendix to his pamphlet, Dr. Stewart gave a figured statement of the number of ships, of officers, and of men, of sick sent to hospital, of sick treated on board of hospital, of deaths on their way to hospital, of deaths on board during each of the five preceeding years, exhibiting the following annual average of

To this was added his estimate of the expenses of the establishment, including house rent, apothecary's salary, servant's diet, medicine, and clothing, and of the income, which would be required daily to cover this to be derived from patients at the stipulated rates mentioned.

The pamphlet contained also some highly creditable testimonials to Mr. Linton's qualifications as an apothecary, and finally some letters from several medical men of Calcutta who had been longest acquainted with the place and the people, expressive of their entire concurrence in Dr. Stewart's views. One of these was from the late Mr. Twining of an opposite character, expressive of the writer's conviction that in every point of view the General Hospital was preferable as an asylum for sailors, to the proposed one at Howrah, which he likewise considered quite unnecessary, and not likely to clear its current expenses. As Dr. Stewart had frequently been taxed with having made an unwarrantable use of this letter, in publishing it with his own comments, we are glad to be able to promulgate his entire vindication.

We have seen the note, on which certainly no comment was necessary.

Within six months from the date of the note, it occurred to some professional gentlemen that a Floating Hospital for sailors would be a more eligible asylum than the Howrah establishment, and measures were accordingly taken to set one going. The scheme, however, entirely failed, though assisted by Government to a certain extent, and the Howrah hospital was again left the sole asylum for the sick sailor.

Upon Dr. Stewart's removal from Howrah, unwilling to abandon an institution which was rapidly rising into public usefulness and in public estimation, he very handsomely presented his assistant, Mr. Linton, with the entire of the Hospital furniture, &c., &c., which he had purchased at an expenso of about 3,000 Rs. upon condition of his continuing to conduct the institution at his own risk, and that he would engage the professional attendance of the civil surgeon at Howrah. This Mr. Linton readily agreed to; but though under his excellent domestic management and vigilant care the hospital continues to furnish him with a moderate livelihood, and to maintain an efficient establishment, he has not been able, at any time, to offer any remuneration to "the principal person" as the Medical Board, very justly remark, and although we do not concur in the "fear" which they express, having "some knowledge of the service," we certainly think it high time for those most interested in the permanency and prosperity of the hospital, the mercantile community of Calcutta, to take some steps to indemnify those to whom the institution is indebted for its utility. Perhaps the Chamber of Commerce will entertain the question, and if it should, we are certain that the great majority of merchants will follow. About 300 rupees per mensem would, we hear, furnish ample remuneration both for Mr. Linton and the civil surgeon at Howrah, for all their trouble, leaving the receipts from patients to cover the cost, of medicines and attendance.—Englishman, March, 4.

HINDOO COLLEGE EXAMINATION.

The distribution of prizes at the Government House, to the Students of the Hindoo College, was a highly gratifying sight. Amongst the visitors we observed the Lord Bishop, Sir Edward Ryan, Mr. Macaulay, Mr. Shakespeare, and many other distinguished members of this society. There were also, besides the Honorable

Miss Eden, a considerable number of ladies present. We overheard the Governor-General and the Lord Bishop, express themselves in the highest degree gratified, and there were other unequivocal signs of approbation and pleasure in the rest of the audience, which was a very numerous one.

The following is a list of the pieces, which were recited on the occasion with the names of the speakers :

THE KING AND THE MILLER.

King,..... Gobind Chunder Dutt.
Miller,..... Nurrotom Dass.

Soldier's Dream,..... Shoshee Chunder Dutt.
Toby Tasspot,..... Gopaul Nauth Mookerjee.
Shakespeare's Seven Ages,..... Ubotar Chunder Gungoly.
Lodgings for single gentlemen,..... Protab Chunder Ghose.

MERCHANT OF VENICE. ACT. IV. SCENE I.

Duke,..... Rajender Nauth Sen.
Shylock,..... Uma Churn Mitter.
Antonio,..... Gopaul Kissen Dutt.
Portia,..... Ubhoy Churn Bhose.
Gratiano,..... Raj Narain Dutt.
Bassanio,..... Rajender Narain Bose.

Salario,..... Gopal Nath Mookerjee.
Nerissa,..... Rajendur Narain Mitter.

Nelly Gray,..... Gobind Chunder Dutt.

THE DRAMATIC ASPIRANT.

Patent,..... Callay Kissen Ghose.
Dowlas,..... Greesh Chunder Ghose.

An Anecdote,..... Bhooban Makun Fagore.

The most ambitious attempt was of course the scene from Shakespeare, in which the young actors acquitted themselves with extraordinary credit. Nothing could be more pure and clear than their accent and intonation, though a considerable noise, occasioned by the Government House servants attempting to exclude some of the visitors at the door, interfered rather cruelly with the effect. What seemed to surprise many persons present, was the great accuracy and precision with which the right emphasis was always preserved, and the genuine feeling of their parts which the boys severally displayed. The humorous pieces, such as the string of poems in Hood's Nelly Gray, the Dramatic Aspirant and the Toby Tasspot, were the most successful perhaps, because the graver pieces required a less interrupted attention in the audience, and were not always well heard in consequence of the noise already alluded to.

Numerous specimens of map, landscape and figure drawings were displayed upon the table, and seemed to receive very general approbation.—Hurk. March 30.

THE FREE SCHOOL REPORT.

In submitting a Report of the Free School for the last twenty months to the Subscribers and Friends of the Institution, the Governors have but little, as regards its general circumstances, to communicate in addition to what is already before the public : their statement, therefore, on this occasion, will necessarily be very brief.

It is perhaps necessary to assign a reason, in the first instance, for so long an interval as that of twenty months having elapsed, since the publication of the last Report. The delay has been owing to a Resolution of the Subscribers at the last Annual Meeting in January 1836, deciding, that thenceforward the Report, before publication, should be submitted to the Subscribers at their Annual Meetings ; and that as it had hitherto been published in June, the Meetings should, by way of accommodation, take place in June likewise. A strict adherence to this Resolution, it will be seen, would involve an extension of the delay to June next ; for the Annual Meeting of 1836 having already taken place in January last, and an extra one in February, it became necessary either to call a third Meeting in June of the same year, for the purpose of discussing the Report, —which does not appear to have been at all contemplated,—or else suffer it to lie over till next June, as seems to have been intended. The Governors, however, upon more recent consideration, thinking it desirable that the accounts should always terminate with the year, that any further delay in the publication of the Report might be prejudicial to the interests of the Institution, determined to call the present Meeting at this the usual season, and submit the Report for approval ; and they not only hope that the course they have adopted will be deemed more satisfactory, but also that it may now be finally determined, that the Annual Meetings may still be allowed to take place in January, as heretofore, when from the suitableness of the season, there is a greater likelihood of a full attendance ; and that the Report of the preceding year be submitted for discussion in that month instead of June.

It will be seen by a reference to the last Report, that the Governors had it in contemplation to add to the girls' refectory in consequence of an accession to their number. This intention has since been carried into effect, and a small room and verandah have likewise been added to the Head Mistress's quarters, which are over the refectory, and which, (consisting of a single room, divided into two by means of a screen) were previously insufficient merely for accommodation, far less for comfort.

This is the only change that has to be noticed under the head of buildings, with the exception of partial repairs, which are entered as a separate item in the table of charges ; but while on the subject, it may be well to remark, that the buildings, especially of the Male Department, require an immediate thorough repair, which at a rough calculation will involve an expense, probably, of not less than 4,000 rupees.

The strict economy that can consist with the welfare and comfort of the children, is observed in regard to the monthly expenditure, to effect which a Sub Committee of three of the Governors has been formed to audit the accounts, while another composed of the same number, and styled the Sub-Committee of Repairs, examines into and reports upon all matters connected with the buildings, before any decision is made by the management at large, authorizing an outlay for repairs.

Among the contemplated improvements by which the Governors hope to facilitate and simplify all details of business ; both as regards their own functions and those of the several officers of the Institution, is a connected Code of Regulations, which is in the course of being framed, chiefly out of the mass of Regulations that are found scattered through the Books of Proceedings since the foundation of the establishment, and which constitute at present the Standing Regulations of the School. These there have been the utmost pains taken to revise, embody, and classify, such additions being likewise made as were deemed necessary ; and they are at present in circulation among the Governors, for whatever further alteration, enlargement, or modification may be found requisite, previously to the final adoption.

There has been a slight increase of the regular current expenditure in consequence of the Head Master's salary having been raised in February 1836 from 250 to 300 rupees a month, and that of the Organist, in August of the preceding year, from 30 to 40 rupees a month; but besides taking these into the account, in comparing the disbursements now submitted with those of former years, it must be remembered that the present are entered in Company's rupees, a circumstance which swells the numerical amount considerably. Converting* the sum total into Siccas, at which rate and currency the outlay has been chiefly made, (though a change in this respect has lately been effected), it would be found, that notwithstanding the above increase, the average standing expenditure of 12 months out of the 20, is not much more than that of 1834-35.

It may here be intimated that the change of currency will henceforward operate considerably in favor of the Institution, and indeed has been doing so for some time. It has of course entailed no reduction of interest from the vested funds, or of the amount which the Government have stipulated to pay permanently, as Old Court House rent; the full equivalent being obtained from these two sources in Co.'s Rupees for what was formerly received in Siccas, as will be found in the table of Receipts. In the Government Donation only, which was formerly 853-5-4 Siccas, a small loss has been sustained, as the amount is now paid in the new currency at the Government rate of 104-8 per 100 Siccas. All private Subscriptions and Donations, however, with the exception of a few instances, in which the Subscribers give the full equivalent for their former contributions; together with all remaining sources of income are paid in the new coin without any regard to its depreciated value; but then again, this portion of the receipts scarcely amounts altogether to a third of the School's resources, and there is far more than will counterbalance any diminution in a reduction of all salaries to the Company's rate, and in the further reduction of a few of these, as vacancies occurred, to the same number of Co.'s Rupees as they before received of Siccas. But what is more, nearly all the other expenses, such as those of diet, clothing, and contingencies, constituting the main outlay, have already been reduced to the new rupee rate; so that two-thirds of the receipts being at the old rate, and about the same proportion of disbursements at the new, the change of currency, as has been observed, has operated considerably in favor of the Institution.

The Governors were in hopes some little time ago of an immediate addition to the funds in the shape of a bequest to the amount of 6,000 rupees or upwards, made to the Institution by the late Mr. Roote of Agra; but legal difficulties opposing the immediate transfer of the money, the matter is still in abeyance. It is hoped, however, that the money will be obtained, and that the benevolent intention of the testator will thus ultimately be fulfilled.

The actual state of the School in all other respects, is much the same as was detailed in the Report of 1834-35. The same course of plain education has been pursued, as was therein stated, comprehending, Geography, English Grammar, Writing and Arithmetic, the History of England, together with such books of a more simple kind, as are used for instruction in reading. Moreover, the nature and principles of the Christian religion are taught every day out of the Catechism and other books, but chiefly from the Bible direct, which is made to constitute a very considerable portion of their daily reading during the hours of instruction, as well as at morning and evening prayers. Two out of the three examinations that have taken place since the Report for 1834-35, was published, viz. that in June 1835, and the last in December, 1836, appeared to give satisfaction to those who witnessed and took part in them, when the children evinced quickness in all matters pertaining to what they had learnt. The intermediate examination in June 1836 was rather productive of disappointment; but this was chiefly attributable to the more advanced boys having left the School in quick succession, thereby leaving the boys of the junior classes to supply their places.

The circumstances of the girls' department preclude their being as far advanced as the boys. Their opportunities of instruction are not equal to what the latter enjoy, more than half of the day being necessarily devoted to needle work, lace and bonnet-making, and such other occupations as may enable them to get a living by their industry, when they leave School. The rest of the day is employed in much the same course of study as is pursued by the boys, and, as in their case, primary attention is paid to their religious education.

Of the health of the children, the Governors are enabled to report favourably. It has happened, indeed, at particular seasons, when, for instance, epidemics have prevailed in and about Calcutta, that considerable numbers have been in hospital at one time; but the ailments have generally been both mild in character and short in duration. At one period, owing to some cause which could not be assigned at the time, and the influence of which was not confined to this establishment, the children became affected with sore eyes, which spread rapidly through the School, and upwards of thirty at a time were on the sick list in consequence; but every case was not only of the most simple nature, but admitted of a cure in a few days. Nor was there one among them, that in the opinion of the medical officer of the Institution could be strictly designated ophthalmia.

Upon the whole, however, the children have enjoyed good health in ever respect, and so exhibited the fairest argument that can be brought forward of the nature of the treatment, which they have been in the habit of receiving. Only two deaths occurred within the whole period of 20 months; one that of a boy, aged 7 years, of spleen, and the other, of a girl, aged 8, of fever and dysentery.

The Governors cannot conclude this Report, without once more adverting to the state of the funds, and in doing so they beg to reiterate their intreaties for increased support. They rest* the grounds of their appeal on the important benefits, which result from the establishment; and they trust, that the single fact,—that 400 children are rescued from destitution, ignorance, and vice, brought up in the fear and love of God, instructed in the Christian religion, and enabled by what they are taught in the School to earn a livelihood when they have left it,—is more than enough to recommend the Institution to a benevolent and discerning public.

PARENTAL ACADEMIC INSTITUTION.

WEDNESDAY,—MARCH 1, 1837.

Agreeably to the notification, several East Indian gentlemen, and many of the European community, attended at the perscribed hour. Among the assembly we recognized Col. Pecket, Dr. Corbyn, and several gentlemen of influence. There were more than a hundred persons present.

It was unanimously proposed and carried, that Doctor Corbyn should take the chair. The Doctor having kindly consented, took the chair, and said, that the assembly met in consequence of an invitation given in the public papers, and proposed that the report of the Committee be read.

Mr. J. Sinaes proposed, that the notice convening the report be read.

Mr. Kellner thought it quite unnecessary.

Mr. Pote thought if it could be shewn that the notification contained any thing that would bear upon the questions to be discussed, that he would second the proposition, provided that the paper containing the notice were at hand, or that Mr. Sinaes had a copy of it in his pocket.

Mr. Wale Byrn asked if a copy of the Hurkaru or Exchange Gazette were at hand, and not being answered either in the affirmative or negative, he repeated the notice from memory and proceeded to read the report, the length of which prevents our giving it here, but which we suppose will be published for general information. We cannot, however, avoid noticing that part of the report which acknowledged the gratitude of the Committee to Dr. Halliday, for the great trouble he took, in personally examining the details connected with the dieting and comforts of the children. The report also bore strongly upon the necessity of such parents as have allowed their bills to run into arrears, and strongly recommend, nay entreated, that all arrears should be paid up.

In one part of the report, the Committee seemed to have experienced great inconvenience from the removal of boys at two early an age, and that part of it caused several trite and appropriate remarks from the chair, and from Messrs. C. Pote and W. Kirkpatrick.

Mr. Pote said, it fell to his lot to propose the first resolution, in doing which he could not avoid giving expression to a few remarks which he thought would be received, as interesting in their connection with the report and with the subjects that would come under discussion during the evening. Mr. Pote then read the resolution which was as follows:—

“That the report now read be approved and published for general information.”

This is the resolution he had to offer, and to adduce such arguments, as he could command to secure the acquiescence of the meeting; he did not think it necessary to enter into much detail; as the meeting, he thought, should concede to every thing contained in the report; he could not conceive how any objections, under the circumstances, could be raised. Education is one of the subjects on which the mind of man has been greatly interested. If this report contain some things in which all may not concur, look at the difficulties in which this institution is placed. In other countries similar undertakings have not the same obstacles opposed to them. In them there is either acknowledged ignorance or some advance in true knowledge; but this is a locality where ignorance exists undetected, or rather mischievously wears the mask of sound philosophy. Where there here utter barbarism, where there here any just information, (speaking of the large mass of natives,) there would be greater hope; there would be in the first case, nothing, comparatively, to eradicate, and in the second, something to build on; but our difficulty is, that we have a false philosophy, a false religion, and these must be displaced to make room for truth. It is a country buried in superstition. In mentioning all this he wished only to touch on the hypercritical objections of some, who might be disposed to take exceptions at some parts of the report. But such hypercriticism was hardly to be expected. What could the meeting require more, to shew the value of this institution, than the general approbation which sent 270 pupils to be instructed within its walls! Mr. Pote, adverted strongly to that part of the report complaining of irregularity on the part of parents and guardians in paying up arrears,—he trusted this would be amended. He said it was much to be regretted that at tea and other parties, among several families, every every subject was conversed on, overlooking education altogether. They seemed quite callous to that subject, and treated it as one which did not require their best attention. India, Mr. Pote remarked, was buried in ignorance, caused by a want of education; that while political economists seemed to occupy their attention with improving the resources of India, they allowed the chief means to escape by which those resources would naturally become superabundant.

Mr. H. B. Gardener here attempted to interrupt the speaker, on the ground of irrelevancy; but was silenced by Mr. Pote, who remarked that he regretted that the gentleman on his left did not seem to understand the difference between ignorance and instruction—(great laughter). Mr. Pote, concluded by a few remarks on the superstitions as yet so largely prevailing in India, and attributed to their existence one of the great causes of the slow progress of education. He also complimented the Committee on the disinterested labor they underwent in behalf of the institution.

Mr. Pote's resolution was seconded by Mr. M. Crow and carried.

Mr. W. Kirkpatrick was afraid to enter into any lengthened observations after the extraordinary impatience evinced by some gentlemen during the luminous speech of Mr. Pote, but he would, nevertheless, enter into one or two points previous to moving a resolution he held in his hand. That extraordinary difficulties have been experienced by persons undertaking the management of establishments for education, could not be denied, and also that great credit was due to the Committee for their labors and assistance in the continuation of this institution in its present favorable position, and that the society were certainly bound in gratitude to the Committee for it; but while all were anxious to encourage the managers in their praise-worthy endeavours, the parents and guardians of the children entirely neglected one of the chief objects of this institution, that of maturing children in the principles of a good and useful education. No sooner does a boy arrive at the first class, then his parents display an eagerness to remove him from school, thereby depriving him of the means of fixing his principles, and consequently of ultimately becoming an useful member of society. It was almost natural to suppose, that before a boy had arrived at that age which is properly considered one at which he could be safely launched into the world, he is taken suddenly from a career of study and introduced into society, quite unprepared to meet objections, and quite unguarded against common temptations. That if a young tree were taken from a good soil, and planted on a sterile one, the result would certainly turn out that the growth of that thriving tree would be stunted. Mr. Kirkpatrick alluded to some instances of parents withdrawing their children from school at such critical periods of their education, even without in the slightest degree being necessitated to take that step; and lamented this practice as a serious evil, calculated to ruin the prospects of the children. He concluded by earnestly advising parents not to withdraw their children from school, until they had been well prepared to act a part in the stage of life. He then proposed the following resolution.

"That this meeting recognizes the usefulness which the institution has in view, and desires a continuance in labors that are calculated to advance the interests of the rising generation."

Mr. G. F. T. Speed seconded the above resolution, observing that he had more than once endeavoured to impress on the minds of those who have the welfare of the Institution at heart, the great necessity of entertaining the views so fully detailed by Mr. Kirkpatrick.

The chairman, previous to putting the resolution to the vote, begged to make a few observations on the remarks which had fallen from Messrs Pote and Kirkpatrick. That he was fully persuaded that the country was in a state of utter ignorance, and that the efforts were either insufficiently strong, or ill conducted to enlighten its inhabitants, and to rouse the energies of the multitude to the cultivation of the mind. The impoverished state of the country could be traced to the ignorance prevailing in it, and were the people at large sensible of the use, and alive to the importance of education, the general resources, the revenues, and the produce of the soil, would develop themselves, and that from the introduction of the sciences. He had visited several eminent academies in Europe, and the improvement made by the boys here, was very, very great and astonishing, and indeed he had heard the remark from several, the Archdeacon, the Rev. Mr. Fisher, and from others, that the annual examinations were satisfactory in the extreme, as regarded the progress of the boys in their general studies. He could not help lamenting the want of attention on the part of parents and guardians in removing boys at too early an age from their studies, and necessarily turning that useful and powerful weapon education into one of destruction. That the observations of Mr. Kirkpatrick were valuable and should be retained in the minds of parents and guardians;—and in promoting the welfare of this institution, the wealth of the parents and of the country would be naturally promoted.—(Applause and Cheers.)

Mr. J. Welsh said something about what he had said last year, and dwelt also on the impropriety of removing children at too early an age from school, after which he proposed the following:

"That the cordial thanks of the meeting be given to the friends and supporters of the institution, for the encouragement afforded by them to its interests."

Seconded by Mr. W. Byrn and carried.

Mr. Byrn, in seconding the last resolution, thought that while the thanks of the meeting were due to those about them, they should not be forgetful of the services of departed friends. The portrait hanging in the room was that of the first establisher of the institution. That his exertions, and his purse had served the cause, and that in his zeal he had staked every comfort in raising the East Indians to distinction, and therefore called to the minds of those present the late Mr. Ricketts, whose chief object was to raise his countrymen in a moral and social degree; that he undertook a perilous and dangerous voyage to improve the condition of the general body, in which act he patiently bore up with the contumely and contempt of the public in his efforts to raise the energies of youth; he forgot his own domestic interests and ended his career by leaving a family perfectly destitute; as before the pension was granted by Government, Mrs. Ricketts was obliged to subsist upon alms-donations, and that the family having grown in years, the pension was inadequate to their support. That he could not help calling the attention of those present, to the case of one who had made his comforts subordinate to the interests of his country. He conceived that Mr. Ricketts had been the first man in the class to which they belonged, and considered it highly necessary that his family should be maintained in a manner suited to the position which its head had occupied. It therefore behoved his countrymen to support his family.

Mr. Byrn also, in every complimentary terms, thanked Dr. Corbyn for the part he had taken in the business of the evening, but made use of the word rank to which Mr. Pote took an objection. He said that he valued Dr. Coabyn as a man, but not for his rank. This last observation of Mr. Pote's seemed to take very well as it called down loud cheers from the assembly.

Mr. Byrn recalled the work rank, but said he thought that Dr. Corbyn had descended from his altitude, and then the debate took an astronomical turn, and the moon and seven stars were rather roughly handled by Messrs. Pote, Byrn and Kellner.

Mr. J. Graham then moved the following, which was seconded by Mr. J. Chill and carried.

"That the undermentioned gentlemen be appointed a Committee of management for the ensuing year: viz., Messrs. W. Byrn, W. Dacosta, C. Francis, J. Hill, J. Jacobs, F. D. Kelner, R. Kerr, C. W. Lindstedt, H. Martindell, W. Stacy, W. Sturmer, J. Welsh, and J. Wood; and that Mr. W. Byrn be the Secretary for the ensuing year, and Mr. J. H. Lorimer Honorary Member."

Mr. Kirkpatrick, previous to proposing a resolution he intended to submit regarding the election of the Committee, expressed his disappointment at not hearing the name of the five gentlemen who had been added to the Committee at the last anniversary. The Secretary here explained, that that addition having been made contrary to a standing rule, strong protests had been sent to the old Committee, and the new members on being applied to, had agreed to withdraw.

Mr. Kirkpatrick then observed, that the proceedings of the old Committee were highly censurable in having taken upon themselves to cancel a resolution of a general meeting, which necessarily superseded the old standing rule. The additional members had withdrawn from motives of delicacy; but the inference of the public, but for the explanation given, would have been, that those members having been proved to be incompetent had been quietly put on the shelf, and the meeting owed it to those gentlemen to re-elect them on the present occasion. Mr. Kirkpatrick then read his resolution, observing that it was based on the principle which had been recognised at the last meeting, by the addition then made to the Committee; the principle, namely, of benefit to the Committee by the accession of new members. The benefit he contemplated would consist not only in extending the sphere of the society's operations by the influence of the new members, but in providing means of improving the system of management, so as to make it keep pace with the progress which society was every day making. He adverted to the necessity of evidence being given that the Institution was in a state of progress; since, without such evidence, it would be naturally assumed that it was retrograding.

Mr. Kirkpatrick then read the following resolution:—
"That in consideration of the great advantage derivable from the accession of new members, it be a rule of the Institution, that three senior members shall go out by rotation at each anniversary, whose places are to be supplied by a new election."

Mr. Speed.—In seconding the resolution adverted to the great disadvantages attendant on a long continuation of the same persons on committees generally; for the experience he had had, as well as what he had gleaned from the information of others, shewed that three or four years in most cases served to give to the institution, wherever it might be, all the information possessed by each individual of a committee of the subjects under their control and management. And this was the case more especially in matters connected with education, from the extensive changes that are annually made in the system and principles of communicating information to youth. It was now upwards of sixteen years since he first became connected with the profession of the education of youth; and while in England he found the necessity of much study of the system pursued, to keep pace with the annual progress of improvements, and every year, he then found there was something new to learn in connection with the subject. On coming to India, other pursuits made him lose sight of these for three or four years, and the works which then reached him from Europe, shewed how vast had been the alterations that had occurred during that space of time in the systems, nay in the very principles of education. Science took a more prominent site in the operations of the teacher, and classical literature and the languages of the ancients were deemed less exquisite. Ever since this, he had continued the study of the new works on education, and he became the more impressed with the necessity of frequent changes in the individuals forming the committees of institutions connected with this most important branch of the exertions for public good, that by so doing you might bring within your reach all the newest information on the subject, and be enabled to graft on the old rules, such improvements as might be picked up in the progress of new principles taught to younger members, and forming parts of their education. Such was his opinion,—an opinion founded on the practical experience of some few years, and which he offered to the meeting unconnected with any private feeling or personal interest, his sole grounds for supporting Mr. Kirkpatrick's motion, being a conviction of the advantages it offered to advance the institution and promote the progress of education.

Mr. Pote was not aware whether the members of the Committee were for or against the resolution. His business would be simply to shew that the arguments which had been urged to support that resolution, were altogether fallacious, and the proposition itself wholly unavailing for. Mr. Pote then proceeded to comment on the remarks of Messrs. Kirkpatrick and Speed. Before admitting that new blood ought to be infused into old subjects (the Committee), as had been observed by Mr. Kirkpatrick, he would wish to see the necessity of such an operation pointed out. He would learn the nature of the disease before he listened to prescriptions for its cure. Wherein, he asked, was the old Committee defective, and how would the new one answer all the purposes, which it was alleged the old one could not. Why, he continued, should the old Committee be ignorant of the improvements that were making, or their notions continue contracted. He did not see the least necessity for the adoption of the proposed measure, nor the propriety of supporting such a resolution. Mr. Pote said, that the Committee had given general satisfaction for the last fourteen years, and that there was no reason now to alter the constitution of it. That parents and guardians had the power to expel members from the Committee, if they found them unequal to the duties entrusted to them. It was not to be supposed, therefore, that in a matter of such importance, they would hesitate to do their duty from an idea of its being an invidious one. Mr. Pote concluded by adverting to the labor and the heavy pecuniary responsibility which the members of the old Committee had incurred, and declared it as his opinion, that it would be next to impossible to find such men to supply their places.

In replying to Mr. Pote, Mr. Kirkpatrick observed, that though Mr. Pote professed to know nothing of the opinions of the Committee on the subject, yet it was quite evident that he had received a special retainer from them, and spoke according to the instructions communicated to him by some of that body. He, (Mr. Kirkpatrick) did not, however, understand why the wishes of the Committee were to be consulted at all on the subject—the question being to be determined by the constituents of the Committee. Mr. Pote had been complimented as being a radical, but all the arguments he urged against the plan were rank Tory, and such as might be brought in support of every abuse and every corruption. The system of re-electing the same men every year, it was said, had worked well; but he appealed to the meeting whether it was not a system which tended to induce great indifference to the interests entrusted to the Committee, and whether it would not tend to contract their minds by obliging them to go year after year over the same ground. The object of the old rule was to have new men over the institution every year; whereas its practical operation had been the very reverse,—the same men being elected year after year without any change. The rule he proposed would necessarily oblige a part of the Committee to go out, and lead to the introduction of new members. He therefore called on the meeting to support the plan on its own merits.

Mr. Pote here observed, that as he had declared, that he was not even aware of the opinion of the Committee, he could not have received a retainer as stated by Mr. Kirkpatrick. He (Mr. Pote) positively denied the imputation.

Mr. Roger Dias addressed the chair, saying, he would, if allowed, offer a few observations on the merits of Mr. Kirkpatrick's resolution. Mr. Dias had referred to, and perused the rules of the institution, and thought clause vii. very objectionable, as, it was more than likely, that that clause would some day prove detrimental to the interests of the institution. Mr. Dias, then quoted the clause which we give.

"That the executive business of the society be conducted by a Committee of management, consisting of 13 members, including the secretary, who are to be elected annually by the society from their own body."

A clause of that kind, was certainly against the welfare of a public institution, and no committees could be perfect, that had the power to re-elect themselves. It was proved that the constitution of the vestry of the Cathedral was defective for a similar reason, and Mr. Dias referred to the trust deed of the Catholic church, which was set aside in consequence of its containing a clause of self election of trustees: above all things, the clause should be rescinded, as there was no other in the set of rules, by which the Committee could be checked, if they did any thing that required immediate correction. The retention of the clause would not perhaps have been so great an evil, if a counter clause were contained in the set of rules. On reference to the list of those forming the present committee, (Mr. Dias disclaimed all personal allusion to any of the gentlemen whose names he would be obliged to cite in the course of his argument) Mr. Dias found several of the members responsible for multifarious duties. Mr. Byrn, for instance, is Secretary, Accountant, and Collector, and on reference to the names of the Committee-men, Mr. Byrn is down as a member. Mr. Jacobs, it also appeared, is in charge of the banks and stationery department and a member of the Committee; and Mr. Lorimer, though a teacher, is an honorary member also. To this state of things there was also great objection, as, if the secretary, the gentleman in charge of the books, and stationery, or the head teacher; were guilty of delinquency, neglect, or any reprehensible conduct, there was no existing possibility of check, as the parties alluded to, would sit in judgment on their own acts. Their errors would be brought under their own cognizance, and it would be inconsistent to suppose, that evils would be remedied as strictly as they should be; were the Committee a distinct body from the officers of the institution. Mr. Dias fully concurred in Mr. Kirkpatrick's views, and remarked, that by supporting Mr. Kirkpatrick's resolution, the institution would open the door to popularity; that the public, while assisting it, would also effectually remove abuses, and as contributions were constantly demanded from the public, the public should have a voice in the conduct and existence of the institution; he therefore hoped that those around him would see the necessity of supporting Mr. Kirkpatrick's resolution as very useful, and essential to the welfare and future prospects of the institution. Mr. Dias was frequently interrupted by Mr. Pote and Mr. Charles Marriot; the latter, however, got rather a severe reprimand from Mr. Dias, and Mr. Marriot's interruptions were effectually put down by Doctor Corbyn, who said, that Mr. Dias's remarks were all to the point, and allusive to committees generally. Mr. Kirkpatrick's resolution, after a great deal of desultory conversation, was put to the vote, but was not carried—being negatived by a majority of eighteen to nine.

Thanks were then voted to the chairman, and the meeting dispersed.—Bengal Hurkaru, March 6.

MEETING OF THE DINAPORE STATION ORPHAN COMMITTEE.

DINAPORE, 4TH FEBRUARY, 1837.

Pursuant to a notice circulated by order of the President, the Committee and Subscribers to the Orphan Society, met at Captain Sage's Bungalow at 10 A. M. The President having taken the Chair.

1st. Proposed by Captain Dick and seconded by Captain Barnard. That the present and all future meetings, of the Dinapore station Orphan Committee, be public meetings, and that the proceedings be published in the Englishman and Hurkaru for the information of the subscribers to the fund. Carried nem. con.

2nd. Proposed by Captain Blundell and seconded by Rev. J. Vaughan. That this meeting cannot recognize in the several management any right to eject a ward from the institution, except for immoral conduct, fully established on unquestionable evidence, and it views the expulsion of Mr. ses Cumming and Polhill from the home provided for them by their parents on the childish plea of insubordination, as an act of injustice, against which this meeting invites the subscribers to the institution to join in a solemn protest. Carried nem. con.

3d. Proposed by Lieutenant Mackenzie, 11th Native Infantry, and seconded by Lieutenant Y. Lamb, 51st Native Infantry. That the use and necessity of an efficient and responsible Board of managers being admitted, a copious infusion of Regimental Officers, stationed near the Presidency, is requisite to make that Board, a true representation of the body of subscribers. Carried nem. con.

4th. Resolved. That the Dinapore Committee, in circulating the votes of the army on the propositions signed by Lieut.-Colonel Maddock and other officers, and the consequent resignation of the Committee of Management, cannot refrain from expressing their regret that the Orphan Society has been deprived of the services of so many able officers, who have, for a long time, given the institution the benefit of their talents and assistance. Carried nem. con.

5th. Resolved. That the unfortunate discussions regarding the establishment, which have attracted the public attention since the nomination of the Rev. Mr. McQueen to his present situation, coupled with the sentiments of the chief justice on the late trial of "Polhill versus McQueen," call, in the opinion of this Committee, for immediate notice from the army; in their judgment Mr. McQueen is not a fit person to be secretary and superintendent of the Upper Orphan School, and the committee are of opinion that Mr. McQueen has for ever forfeited the confidence of his employers. Carried by 13 to 2.

6th. Resolved. That in consequence of the foregoing resolutions, it is the opinion of this meeting, that should Mr. McQueen decline tendering his resignation, and a majority of the voters take our view of this case, that Mr. McQueen be called on to vacate the situations he now holds in the Orphan Institution. Carried by 11 to 4.

7th. Proposed by Lieutenant Mackenzie, of the 11th Regiment, and seconded by Lieutenant Younger, 56th Native Infantry. That it is desirable, provided the services of such a person can be allowed, and obtained, that the post of Secretary to the Orphan Institution should in future be filled by a Clerical, Medical, or Military Officer of the Bengal Army, who would be more likely than any stranger unconnected with the Institution, by community of interest and feeling, to sympathize with the orphan offspring of brother officers. Carried nem. con.

8th. Proposed by Lieut. Mackenzie and seconded by Lieut. Younger, that the election of a Secretary should be open to the votes of all subscribers. Carried nem. con.

9th. Proposed by Lieut. Younger and seconded by Lieut. W. Lamb. That the thanks of this meeting be given to Dr. Corbyn, for the zeal and perseverance he has evinced for the welfare of the Orphan Institution. Carried nem. con.

10th. That the thanks of this meeting be given to the President, for his able and conciliatory conduct in the chair. Carried nem. con.

11th. Proposed by the Committee.—That the Reverend C. Wimberly be elected to represent the Dinapore division in the general management. Carried nem. con.

WM. SAGE, Secretary.

I object; as Mr. McQueen acted under the directions of the General Management, I consider them the responsible agents.

J. R. YOUNGER, Lieut. 56th Regt. N. I.

To this (5th) and to the other resolutions consequent upon it! I object also, because I still think the Rev. Mr. McQueen to be every way capable of discharging his office. If he has erred, and who does not? he has gained his experience by this time, and will doubtless take care not to err again.

J. VAUGHAN, Chaplain.

I dissent from, and disapprove of resolution 6; as unnecessary or, at least, premature.

Proposed by W. P. Grant, Esq., and seconded by Dr.
 Pearson, that the contributions to the Vested Fund, be invested as realized in Company's paper in the joint name of the curators. The paper to remain in the custody of the Government agent, and the interest to be drawn by him, and invested in the Government Saving's Bank in the joint names of the said curators.

Proposed by Mr. Bell, and seconded by Dr. Jackson, and carried unanimously, that with reference to the few opportunities enjoyed by men in business to watch or even to gain an outline of the proceedings of this infant institution, for the successful establishment of which upon a sound foundation all must be anxiously interested, that a copy of the rates and rules of admission as proprietors and subscribers be circulated with subscription books as well for contributions to the Vested Fund as for the admission of new proprietors and subscribers among such members of the community as the curators may deem expedient, with a note as follows :—

To A. B. Esq.

Sir,—Upwards of months have now elapsed since the formation of this Library without having the benefit of your name on its list of proprietors or subscribers.

Feeling assured that the claims of such an institution to public support need only be brought prominently forward to engage your attention, we beg to submit a copy of our rules and rates of admission.

In doing this we earnestly entreat you to consider that, although your time may not allow you either to take at present any active part in its operation or draw largely upon the literary resources, you can render a most important service by contributing towards its solid establishment and future support, and we confidently hope that you will at least afford this testimony of the interest you feel in the prosperity of a public depository of knowledge and recreation which to every individual at some time or other must prove useful.

MEETING TO ERECT A MONUMENT TO BISHOP CORRIE.

The Meeting held this morning at the Town Hall to commemorate the virtues of the late Bishop Corrie with some tribute of respect, was very numerously attended, the Bishop of Calcutta being in the Chair. Among those present we observed Sir Edward Ryan, (apparently quite recovered from his late indisposition), Sir Benjamin Malkin, the Archdeacon and a considerable number of Clergymen.

The Bishop opened the proceedings with a short address, in which he noticed the extraordinary burst of sympathy at Madras on the death of their lamented prelate—As soon as he heard of the subscription opened there, he sent his own contribution to it, not anticipating that it would be followed up by a similar tribute in Calcutta.

The Chief Justice moved the first resolution (see below.) Many who were present would be better able to speak of Bishop Corrie in his clerical capacity; but he had himself had much opportunity of seeing him in private life when Archdeacon of this Presidency, and having been associated with him in the District Charity and on other occasions, he could speak to his kindness of heart and the benevolence for which he was so remarkably distinguished.

The Rev. Mr. Fisher seconded the resolution. He lamented Bishop Corrie as an intimate friend of twenty-two years—a man of a kinder and more affectionate disposition never lived. The meekness of his character was the praise of every one, when Mr. Fisher arrived in the country: it was this and his devoted piety that had recommended him to Mrs. Corrie, who previously had refused many advantageous offers.

The second resolution was moved by Sir Benjamin Malkin, who observed that not having had the good fortune to be in Calcutta when Bishop Corrie was here, he might consider himself the representative of a class (and a large one it was) who admired though they did not personally know him.

The Rev. Mr. Bateman, as seconder of the resolution, spoke to the universal feeling of respect and affection for the deceased, which he had observed to prevail in the course of his travels during the last eighteen months in different parts of India. Considering the difficulties which the Church had to contend with in this country, it was a most fortunate circumstance and a great consolation, that such a man, so excellent a Minister, had existed in India. Such Ministers of the Gospel were what India wanted; the influence of their character was the best possible support to the preacher.

Mr. Mangles moved the third resolution, and was induced to do so, though not in the habit of putting himself forward at public meetings, because he had a strong feeling of regard for the deceased, whose name he had never heard mentioned but with respect and admiration.

The Rev. Mr. Boswell followed as seconder. The late Bishop was the first to take him by the hand on his arrival, and had pursued him with kindness ever since. His charities to objects of distress were unbounded, and his zeal unsurpassed in supporting pious institutions. The High School was founded chiefly by his exertions, and to that excellent Seminary he had appropriated more than 30,000 Rupees from funds placed at his disposal. Nothing was more remarkable than his disinterestedness. It was the greatest possible triumph to Bishop Corrie to receive the mitre, but he had meekly borne his honors and only valued them as a means of extending the influence of the Gospel. Bishop Corrie came out to India as a Missionary, and was to the last a Missionary in heart.

The Chairman, in putting the third resolution, could not resist the opportunity of expatiating again upon the excellent character of the man they were assembled to honor. It was a character you might look at in any point of view—"so lovely—so full of humility and tenderness." A man of Bishop Corrie's amiable character may commit a hundred faults and still his eminent benevolence shall be always perceptible. The news of his death reached him (the Chairman) when he was standing on the beach at Mirzapore: it came like a thunder bolt: it produced a sensation every where. He went on to Chunar—"Who built the Church? Bishop Corrie"—Who did some other pious act—who did every thing? Bishop Corrie. Two prominent features in his character had been well noticed by Mr. Boswell, first his tenderness of disposition and secondly his perfect disinterestedness.

Mr. Fisher followed up this remark by relating an anecdote we but imperfectly caught—that when Bishop Corrie was presented to the King, His Majesty jokingly asked him what made him go out to India again? was it to get rich? The Bishop's answer (he observed) was such that His Majesty was very much struck with it.

The fourth resolution was introduced with a short but very eloquent speech from the Rev. Mr. Charles, to which we much regret our inability to do justice in the slight sketch we give from memory of its purport. Mr. Charles dwelt particularly on the kind feeling and conciliatory tone, which marked all Bishop Corrie's communications with those who happened to belong to a different Church from himself. With him differences of opinion merged in his love for all Christians. He is now among the blessed, and will be remembered with the pious men, whether of the Scotch or English Church, who are recorded in history. Let us raise a monument to his virtues; this will prove our regard for religion better than volumes of argument, than centuries of contention. Mr. Charles here quoted from memory a passage from a book, which had struck him as peculiarly applicable to the character of the deceased, and concluded with a remark that "the whole end of his being was to diffuse its benefits among his fellow men," to whom example of this worthy and pious man was the best legacy he could leave them.

Mr. Greenlaw seconded the fourth resolution, to which (as first worded) an addition was made at Mr. Mangles's suggestion, instructing the Committee to appoint trustees for the scholarships. Mr C. K. Robison, moved the fifth resolution, giving as a reason for naming Messrs. Gisborne and Co. as treasurers for the Subscription, that Mr Gisborne had married the daughter of one of Bishop Corrie's most attached friends. Mr. Beattie seconded the resolution:—after which the usual thanks were voted to the chair by Dr. Jackson and acknowledged by the Bishop, who took the opportunity of mentioning that he had expected Bishop Corrie and Mr. Carr, the Bishop elect of Bombay, to arrive here in the course of next month for the ceremony of the ordination of the latter, when by a mysterious providence the whole arrangement had thus been disconcerted.

RESOLUTIONS.

"1st—That this Meeting has heard with the deepest regret of the demise of the Bishop of Madras, and consider it a duty which they owe to the Church of which he was so distinguished a member, to raise some token of regard to his character at this Presidency, which was the scene of his arduous labours, and his pre-eminent example for almost thirty years.

"2d.—That Subscriptions be solicited for the purpose of erecting a marble slab in the Old Church near those of his revered friends Brown, Martyn and Thomason, and a similar one in the Cathedral; and for painting a likeness of the late Bishop to be hung up in the Old Church Rooms.

"3d.—That the surplus which may remain after defraying the expences of the monuments and the portrait, be appropriated for the purpose of endowing Scholarships in the Calcutta High School, to be called "Bishop Corrê's Scholarships." And that special regard be had in the nomination to eventual preparation for Missionary labour.

"4th.—That a Committee be formed of the following Gentlemen, to see these objects carried into effect, and to nominate the Trustees for the above purposes, viz.

The Ven. Arch. Dealtry,	John Dougal, Esq.
Rev. H. Fisher,	A. Beattie, Esq.
H. M. Pigou, Esq.	C. W. Brietzke, Esq.
Major G. Hutchinson,

"5th.—That Messrs. Gisborne and Co. be appointed Treasurers, and those who are friendly to the above design be requested to forward their subscriptions to those gentlemen as early as possible."—Calcutta Courier, March 16.

MEETING FOR THE ESTABLISHMENT OF A SAILORS' HOME.

TOWN HALL, SATURDAY, MARCH 18, 1837.

The Hon'ble Sir J. P. Grant, in the Chair.

The assembly was numerous and respectable, and among the attendants we recognized Messrs. Walters, Chapman, Spier, Colvin, both the Captains Birch and Johnston, Bagshaw, Macfarlane, G. A. Prinsep, Bradon, and several others whose names we have not time to enumerate.

Mr. W. Spier moved.

"That it is the opinion of this meeting that the welfare of seamen visiting this Port will be materially promoted by the establishment of an institution to which they may look as a refuge from the many ills to which they are exposed."

The Reverend Mr. Boaz, in seconding the above resolution, remarked, that he had been requested by the Committee to explain the object of the present meeting. Sailors, the gentleman observed, were naturally thoughtless, unsuspecting and generous, and how easy it was for the more cunning to take advantage of them, when these natural qualities in them made them an easy prey to the wicked: that seamen, therefore, had a peculiar claim on our sympathy. For the actual service they rendered they had also strong claims on us. They are the medium of commerce or friends against piracy and warfare, and the chief means of conveying to us tidings from those dearest to us, and from our native land. Mr. Boaz, in explaining the nature of the proposed institution, said it was to combine comforts both temporal and spiritual.

In referring to the objections offered to the institution, the two principal, Mr. Boaz said, were that the Home would be an inducement to the men to leave their ships, and the difficulty of supplying religious instruction suitable to all parties. The first objection he thought altogether nugatory, as it was one of the principal objects to prevent desertion; and to ensure the second, there was no objection to the appointment of Clergymen of different persuasions on the Committee. The speaker then alluded to the wretchedness of the unhappy men, who as a matter of necessity, fall into the hands of crimps. That there were many difficulties which opposed themselves to the success of the Home, he was ready to admit, but there was no work ever so good, or great, that had not to contend with obstacles in its establishment; but it was the duty of the wise to overcome every thing in their sympathetic and benevolent efforts. Mr. Boaz referred to the neglect to which all seamen had been, more or less, subjected up to the year 1814, when the excitement of a lively interest on their behalf, originated institutions both in England and America, similar to the one in contemplation by the present meeting. The Institutions in London had been formed successfully; whole ship's crews, shipped by the Committee of Sailor's Homes, had in their occasional calls to this port, during the past year, borne testimony to the orderly and moral deportment. In concluding Mr. Boaz alluded to the state of feeling in Calcutta on the subject, and he was glad at observing a general unanimity in the commendable desire for the success of such a praiseworthy institution. Some feared the practicability of the Plans as now proposed; but with such unanimity, and with the aid of the Magistracy, the mercantile and shipping communities, together with the important influence of the press, all which though they might object to some of the details, yet notwithstanding had, by their liberal pecuniary aid and generosity, given the institution their fullest sanction. With such a combination of friends and influence, the duty of the Committee, would be only to try to succeed.

Mr. H. Walters, in proposing the second resolution, referred to a circular which was distributed at the Hall, and in a few very brief and appropriate remarks, explained the plan, and answered objections very completely. The gentleman felt himself bound, not only in gratitude, but in duty, to propose an asylum, the necessity of which was very evident, and the effect of which would be the welfare of a large proportion of our fellow men. He hoped that those assembled would feel as he did, as to praiseworthiness of an institution which would deprive the wicked from obtaining victims, and would tend to lessen the amount of vice and wretchedness. Mr. Walters then gave the following resolution.—

"That this meeting deem it advisable to attempt the establishment of an institution to be designated "the Calcutta Sailor's Home," based upon the principles of a prospectus recently circulated now before the meeting; the details of which shall be left to the Committee of Management, which may be nominated by this meeting."

Seconded by Captain Ingram and unanimously carried.

Moved by Captain R. H. Birch.

"That the following gentlemen be requested to form the Committee for carrying the plan into effect:—

H. Walters, Esq., R. D. Mangles, Esq., Rev. J. Boswell, D. McFarlane, Esq., J. Dougall, Esq., A. Colvin, Esq., Rev. J. Charles, Captain J. H. Johnstone, R. H. Cockerell, Esq., C. Alexander, Esq., W. F. Birch, Esq., Rev. T. Boaz, Rev. J. Haberman, Captain Fagan, J. Mackay, Esq., A. Grant, Esq., and J. W. Alexander, Esq."

Sir J. P. Grant was unanimously elected president of the Committee.

Mr. Chapman, in seconding the resolution, felt convinced that those whose names had been proposed would, without hesitation, afford every means in their power for the success of the institution. The difficulties, when compared with the object in view, were mere nothing, and he felt assured that the efforts of benevolence would not fail of support from that great source whose bounty was ready to aid the needy, and to comfort the distressed. The trials, he would say, would be nothing, when he called to mind the example held out to us in the Gospel. What could be more satisfactory than to contribute to the bodily welfare, and spiritual wants of a numerous and deserving class of our fellow creatures.

On the above resolution being put to the meeting by the Hon'ble Chairman, Mr. Bagshaw remarked, that in the names proposed, he found those of several omitted who would be of essential service to the meeting. Messrs. J. Phipps and Baldston, and Captain Vint, he said, had had experience in nautical matters, and much to do with sailors, he would therefore propose them as members.

The Hon'ble Chairman remarked, that the most active formed generally the least numerous committees. Mr. Bagshaw then said, that there were several gentlemen whose names ought not to be on the list, as he presumed they had enough to do. He asked what Mr. Mangles was put down for; he had surely enough to do, than to join Committees of this kind. He therefore thought, that gentlemen likely to be useful ought to be introduced into the places of those who had not time to devote to the business, that the Committee would have to transact.

The Hon'ble Chairman remarked, that the names already mentioned were contained in a resolution which was apparently carried, but that he would, in the usual course, put the additional names to the vote, which being done, Messrs. Phipps, Baldstone, and Captain Vint were elected.

Mr. C. G. Strettell said, that he could not be silent on the present occasion, nor bear witness to the extreme necessity of the proposed institution. As paupers' attorney he had various opportunities of observing the state of wretchedness and misery in several classes, and most among the numerous Seamen that come to this port,—of the machinations to which they are exposed, and the ease with which they are fleeced by the rapacious, and inconsiderate people to whom they are necessarily obliged to have recourse, for the want of an Asylum, where such extortions must be obviated. That while he recognized the advantages of such an institution, he was very desirous of impressing upon the local authorities that they were already vested by the public regulations with very extensive controul over Seamen and punch-house-keepers; that the latter were people generally of the worst character, and he need not say, of bad dispositions. That his own professional experience, as he said before, had given him great insight into the nature of the evils which always beset the poor sailor. Inticed by some crimp into some vile place, in the purlieus of either Loll Bazar, or Bow Bazar, and there indulged with intoxicating liquors, and reduced to a state of stupifaction till the leave had outrun, and dreading punishment as a deserter, or a refusal of permission to rejoin his ship, the crimps avail themselves of the opportunity, false charges are raised against his captain, his hard earned purse is emptied, health lost, and the poor sailor, is left a victim to destitution and vice. The Committee should feel it one of their chief duties to urge the Magistrates to the exercise of the power vested in them to correct the vices of the crimping system; to which the speaker attributed the cause of the great evil prevailing.

Mr. Strettell also produced an Act passed in 1835. V. IV: William IV. "to consolidate and amend the merchant seamen of the United Kingdom and for forming and maintaining a register of the men in that service," which Act Mr. Strettell shewed by many appropriate reasons, where in force in every part of the British empire, and concluded by strongly recommending the provisions of it to the attention of the Committee. Loud and much applause.

Mr. McFarlane here observed, that the magistrates had made many, but he regretted to say unsuccessful, attempts to suppress the crimping system, and that they (the magistrates) had great difficulty in interfering with the punch-house-keepers, from the imprudent rule under which a tax is levied upon spirit licenses. That the amount payable per diem by each license was before 5 rupees, but which had now been reduced to 3 rupees per diem. Something ought to be done amending the rule referred to, and Mr. McFarlane believed the evil would in some measure be remedied.

Mr. Strettell disclaimed all intention to impugn the magistrates, but said that the rule was certainly very objectionable.

Mr. J. W. Alexander proposed, that the Most Reverend Dr. R. St. Leger should be elected a member. On the proposal being put to the meeting, it was unanimously carried.

Mr. Dias said, that the meeting were not perhaps cognizant that a great number of Portuguese seamen were constantly navigating to and from Calcutta, and that as they spoke no other than the Portuguese language, their wants could not therefore be supplied by persons unacquainted with that language; he would therefore propose the Rev. Fre Antonio da Santa Maria as a Member, and he felt confident that the Committee would find that gentleman very useful to a number of sailors who will resort to the Home.

Mr. Boaz thought that as there was but one Clergyman of each persuasion elected, that it was objectionable to have two Catholic Members.

At this time, a gentleman, whose name we could not ascertain, remarked, that he objected to the appointment of both Dr. St. Leger and the Reverend Gentleman last proposed, as he thought the institution ought to be purely Protestant.

The meeting were unanimous in displaying their dissent from the above remark, by cries of "illiberal" and hisses, which at once set it aside and the business proceeded.

The Hon'ble Chairman here addressed the meeting, stating that he could not allow the last remark to pass without a notice of disapprobation. He was honored with the seat awarded to him, but that he should not have occupied it, did he think that the establishment of the Institution was to be exclusive, or that the assembly would have been so illiberal as to exclude particular sects or religions from the benefits of a public and benevolent Institution, he therefore hoped that there were none in the room who did not fully agree in entertaining the sentiments he had just expressed. Great applause.

The Hon'ble Chairman then put Mr. Dias's proposition to the Meeting, but it was lost by a majority of 23 to 19.

Captain J. H. Johnston then proposed the Reverend Fre Antonio da Santa Maria as an honorary Member of the Committee.

Mr. Dias in seconding the proposal, again urged the Committee to bear in mind the extreme necessity of combining in the Committee a member who would be very useful in answering the wants of a great number of the inmates of the Sailors' Home.

Mr. Strettell said, he would strongly recommend the proposition, as he was aware that the Catholic clergymen had great sway over Portuguese seamen, both in their common and spiritual affairs. He computed that the number of Portuguese inmates would be about 1.

The motion was, however, lost by a majority.

It was then proposed to add Doctor. Duncan Stewart to the Committee, he having had great experience in the Howrah Seamen's Hospital, which proposition was carried.

Proposed by D. McFarlane, Esq., and seconded by W. Bruce, Esquire.

"That the Committee be empowered to form sub-committees, or a sub-committee to conduct details." Carried unanimously.

Proposed by J. R. Bagshaw, Esq., and seconded by Captain Vint.

"That it be recommended to the Committee, that they endeavour to engraft upon their plan a system that may improve the state of the native lascars." Carried unanimously.

Moved by Alexander Colvin, Esq., and carried by unanimous acclamation.

"That the thanks of the meeting be given to Sir. J. P. Grant for his able conduct in the chair."

After which the meeting dispersed. The Debate was one of the most interesting we have been at lately. Every one present seemed to join hand and heart in the proposed establishment, and if this feeling animates the public of Calcutta, "A SAILORS' HOME" will neither lack assistance nor friends.—Hurkaru, March 20.

SUPREME COURT.

FIRST SESSION, 1837.

FEBRUARY 24, 1837.

(Before Sir E. Ryan, Knight.)

THE KING v. DABEE SING—CHARGE MURDER OF RAM JEEBUN SING.

Names of the Petit Jurymen.

Foreman, C. Porteous.

C. Cornelius,	J. G. Parker,
J. H. Madge,	W. Barrett,
W. Carberry,	W. Byrn,
J. Marcarlo,	D. McDonald,
G. H. Hollingberry,	and
J. McKellar,	J. Rostan.

Mr. H. Holroyd, the Clerk of the Crown, read the indictment.

Dabee Sing, you stand charged with the murder of Ram Jeebun Sing, a durwan in the employ of Baboo Mudub Dutt. The indictment charges you, that you, at the hour of half past 3 o'clock in the morning of the 9th of January, 1837, did, in the house of Baboo Mudub Dutt, in Colootollah Street, in the Town of Calcutta, with a drawn sword, inflict several wounds on the neck of Ram Jeebun Sing, from the effects of which wounds he died on that day; and the Coroner's Jury have likewise, given their verdict of wilful murder against you, on the 16th day of January last:—what say you, are you guilty of this crime or not.

The prisoner pleaded not guilty.

Ram Deol Sing, sworn.—I am a durwan in the employ of Baboo Mudub Dutt, and I was so in Jan. last. I knew the prisoner at the bar. He, together with Ram Jeebun Sing, the deceased, Sustee, a witness in this case, and me, were employed as durwans of Baboo Madub Dutt's female homestead, at Colootollah Street in the town of Calcutta, in January last. Baboo Madub Dutt had 4 durwans. The prisoner was engaged before me, but I served with him 3 or 4 months. The prisoner was of the Chattri caste. Ram Jeebun was, and Sustee and I are, of the Rewany caste. I recollect the night of Ram Jeebun Sing's death. Dabee Sing got leave on that day, from Mudub Baboo, to go to Kalse Ghaut, to worship the goddess. He went at about 6 or 7 o'clock in the morning, and returned at about 11 o'clock at night. After his return home, he said to Sustee and me, on our enquiring of him what had delayed him so long "I went to Barrackpore with an intention to purchase some clothes there, but I have been unable to procure any; however, I have left 3 rupees with a friend there, to get them for me. As I suspected that the Baboo would not grant me permission to go to Barrackpore, I named Kally Ghaut to him, because I knew that he would not refuse me the request to visit the goddess." When this conversation was over, I said to Sustee, "it is late now, do you keep watch, whilst I go and sleep." He said, "very well, do so, I then went to sleep, and when I lay down, the prisoner and Sustee were both awake. Prisoner was sitting in a shed, at the outer door of the Baboo's compound, where we all used to dwell. We slept on 3 platforms, Sustee on one, Ram Jeebun Sing on another, and the prisoner and I on the third. When the prisoner returned, Ram Jeebun Sing was asleep, but whilst the prisoner Sustee and I were conversing in the shed, a Bhramin who had lost his clothes, came enquiring for them there. At his request, Sustee awoke Ram Jeebun, who in reply to the Bhramin's inquiry, said I know nothing regarding your clothes; after this he retired to sleep again, and the Bhramin left us. When the prisoner returned, there was nothing in his hands; for if there had been any thing, I should have perceived it, as there was a lamp burning in the shed at the time. Whilst I was asleep, the prisoner wounded me on the head with a drawn sword. The blow awoke me and I started up in fright and preterbation. On opening my eyes, I perceived the prisoner standing with a drawn sword in his hands and before I could get up on my legs, he struck me again, on the back part of my head, with it, and lifted it up a third time to strike me; in doing so, the back part of the sword struck against a transverse bamboo in the hut, and then alighted on my neck. (Here the deponent showed his wounds to the Court.) Seeing this I, in fear and agitation, seized both his hands, and called out to Sustee to come to my rescue. Hearing my outcry Sustee came, and was followed shortly after by Peeroo tyce, who came running from the stables. They laid hold on him, and pulled him out in the compound, and Peeroo wrenched the sword from his grasp and held him, whilst Sustee gave information of this assault on me to Mudub Baboo. In the meanwhile Bhawany chokeydar came and took hold of the prisoner and shortly after, the alarm having reached the thana, the naib thanadar arrived with 3 or 4 chowkeydars. After this Baboo Madub arrived, and made enquiries regarding the disturbance in his house, and called me near him, with an intention to examine my wounds. On this the prisoner said in irony to the Baboo, what is the use of looking at this salah? he and Sustee have escaped—if you wish to look at any one, then look at Jeebun salah there in the shed, whom I have slain—see how he is." Afterwards the naib thanadar and chokeydar took me to the hospital; but previous to my going there, I saw Jeebun Sing, lying wounded on the neck on the platform where he had slept. I saw him from outside the shed, as I did not go into it to examine him. No quarrel had happened on that day, either with me and the prisoner, nor with him and Ram Jeebun Sing, as far as I am aware of the occurrences of that day. I heard no conversation between them about a materany. I never saw the deceased after my departure for the hospital, but I heard that his brother burnt his corpse. These are my clothes hacked by the sword, and covered with blood, (pointing to a bundle which he brought with him.)

The prisoner declined questioning this witness.

Sustee Durwan, sworn.—I am a durwan in the employ of Baboo Madub Dutt, and was so in January last. The prisoner and Ram Jeebun, were likewise employed there during that month. The Baboo's house is in Colootollah Street, in the town of Calcutta. I recollect the night of Ram Jeebun Sing's death. The prisoner was absent during the day previous, by permission from the Baboo to go to Kalsee Ghat; he returned at about 11 o'clock at night. It was my watch on that night from 12 o'clock till 3 o'clock a. m. Shortly after our conversation was over, and Ramdial Sing had retired to rest, the prisoner said to me, "Father I do not feel sleepy, so I will keep watch in your stead, do you retire to rest." I replied it is my watch, and I will not go to sleep till it is over. When my watch had ended, I went to wake Ramdial Sing, whose turn come next to keep watch; but the prisoner said, "Do not awake him, I will keep watch in his stead;" consequently I did not awake Ramdial Sing, but resigning the watch to the prisoner, I went to asleep. When the prisoner returned at 11 o'clock p. m., Jeebun Sing was sleeping in the shed and Ramdial shortly after went to sleep likewise. Prisoner had nothing in his hands at the time. At about $\frac{1}{2}$ past 3 o'clock in the morning I heard Ramdial bawling out, "He has wounded me!" "He has killed me!" Hearing this "I started from my sleep ran towards him, and saw the prisoner" in the act of making a "blow at him with a drawn sword, which he held in his hand. I saw him strike Ramdial with it, before I could arrive to prevent the blow. I saw this by the light of a lamp that was burning in the shed at the time. He then lifted the sword up again, with an intention to wound Ramdial, but before he could effect his purpose, Ramdial and I closed with him and held his hands. By this time Peeroo syce came running from the stables and grasped the prisoner by the waist, and we forced the sword from his hand. Peeroo then desired me to take away the sword, and give intimation of this assault to the Baboo. I did so, and the Baboo came out, and asked the prisoner, "Why have you wounded Ramdial?" The prisoner made no reply to this question. The Baboo then said, bring a rope and bind the prisoner. Whilst they were binding him, he said these two salahs Ramdial and Sustee have escaped, but Ram Jeebun salah I have slain. By this time Bhowany chowkydar came, and took the prisoner into custody. He was followed by the naib thanadar, and 3 or 4 chowkydars, who, by the Baboo's orders, carried the prisoner to the thana, and Ramdial to the hospital. Jeebun Sing's brother took his corpse and burnt it. After the prisoner had said that he had killed Ram Jeebun Sing, Peeroo syce said to me, "bring a light, and let us see if Jeebun Sing is really killed, as the prisoner says." I then brought a light and we went towards the platform where Ram Jeebun had slept that night. When we arrived there I lifted up his coverlet, and we saw his body, all bathed in blood, lying on the platform, with his head hanging over the pillow, dismembered from his neck and attached to it only by a slight ligature. We went there by the prisoner's intimation, and saw the corpse in his presence. The wound was a sword wound, and it had cut the neck from ear to ear. There was a lamp burning in the shed when I got up and seized the prisoner. It was this light that I took up from its stand, by the desire of Peeroo syce, and went with it towards Ram Jeebun's body. I made no inquiries regarding Ram Jeebun before, because I did not suspect that any harm had befallen him, but I imagined that he was sleeping all the time. It was the statement the prisoner gave us regarding him, that excited our suspicions, and induced us to inspect his corpse. I knew of no quarrel between either Ramdial and the prisoner, or between him and Ram Jeebun, I cannot conjecture the motives which could have induced him to commit this rash act. I had but lately returned from my family, whom I had gone to see on leave from the Baboo. It was during my absence that the prisoner entered the Baboo's service, and I never was so intimate with him as to be entrusted with his private affairs. In fact I never enquired after them.

I never saw him either eat, drink or smoke any thing of an intoxicating nature. He was not drunk at the time, but quite sensible of the act he had committed. The sword I gave to the Naib Thanadar. I believe he has it. I could identify it again if I were to see it.

Comul Sing, Naib of the Colootollah Thanna, sworn.—Produces a sword. This sword I received on the morning of the 9th of January last, at the house of Baboo Madub Dutt, from the hands of Sustee durwan, at about 4 o'clock: I then saw the corpse of another durwan there, whom the prisoner had slain.

To a question by the prisoner.—When I apprehended you, you said in my presence to Madub Baboo, "what is the use of seeing the wounds of Ramdial salah, he and Sustee have escaped; if you wish to see what I have done go and see Ram Jeebun salah, whom I have slain:" you likewise, in the way, whilst I was taking you to the thana, said, I am sorry that I did not succeed in killing Ramdial and Sustee likewise. These statements I made both at the Coroner's inquest, and at the Police; if you say I speak false now, and contradictory from those statements, refer to them, and satisfy yourself on this point.

The Judge said that there was no necessity for this, as what the prisoner had said under either a threat or promise, could not be taken as evidence against him; in fact, he did not wish to hear it.

Sustee's examination continued.—(Looks at the sword.) This is the sword I gave to the thanadar, on the night of the murder. None of Madub Baboo's durwans had any swords. I never saw any sword in the prisoner's possession, till I saw him assaulting Ramdial with this one. I know not when, or from where, he got this,—he can best tell that.

The prisoner declines questioning this witness, adding, "if I killed Ram Jeebun Sing, would I not have run away whilst Sustee and Ramdial slept, instead of staying there to be caught and tried for my life for the offence."

Peron Ostler, sworn.—I am an ostler in the employ of Baboo Madub Dutt, whose house is in Colootollah Street. I know the prisoner at the bar, and I likewise knew Jeebun Sing, whom he has killed; the latter had been in Madub Baboo's employ for a very considerable period. I recollect the night of Ram Jeebun Sing's death. I had the previous evening received orders from the Baboo, to get the horses ready early in the morning, as the Baboo intended to go and see the race; I therefore got up at 3 o'clock in the morning, and was so rubbing the horses. At about half past 3 o'clock a. m. I heard Ramdeal bawling from the shed, "I am killed!"—"I am wounded!" Hearing this I ran to their shed, and on going into it, I perceived that Ramdeal had hold of the hands of Dabee Sing, who held a drawn sword in his right hand. Sustee had hold of the hilt of the sword with one hand; and grasped Dabee Sing's body with the other; they were all struggling on a platform in the shed. Seeing this, I dropped the curry comb which was in my hand, seized Dabee Sing by the waist, and giving him a severe jerk, the sword fell from his grasp. Sustee snatched it up, and both he and Ramdeal, ran out of the shed, for fear of their lives, Sustee taking the sword with him, whilst I stood clinging to the prisoner. I then said, "Dabee Sing, what is all this uproar about." He made no reply. I then gradually pulled him out, into the compound, where Ramdeal was crying out, "Oh God! oh God! my skin is hanging over my neck, from the wound on my head." I then desired Sustee to bring a light, and when he brought one, I perceived that Ramdeal's clothes were drenched with blood, which was still trickling from his wounds. Seeing this, I said to Sustee, "go and call a chowkeydar, and give information of this to the Baboo, for this a serious matter. While Sustee had gone to call the Baboo, Bhowanny chowkeydar came and held the prisoner by his hands. By this time the Baboo shook the inner gate of the compound, and I told Sustee to open it. The Baboo stood within the gate, and said, "what is all this disturbance about?—why have you awoke me at this time of the night?" I replied, "Dabee Sing has been attempting to murder Ramdeal, whom he has wounded severely on the head and neck." The Baboo then called Ramdeal to him and seeing him covered with blood, said, "take him to the hospital and bring a rope from the stables to bind the assaulter." Hearing this, Sustee took up a rope used for drawing water from the mouth of a well close by and we began to bind the prisoner. Whilst we were so doing, the Baboo asked him, "you have wounded Ramdeal?" The prisoner made no reply to this question. After he was bound, the Baboo said, "bring him here;" and when we took him before the Baboo, the Baboo said to him, "you have nothing to fear; if you truly tell us why you have committed this assault, no harm will befall you?" The prisoner then said, "Ramdeal, although he has had a narrow escape, is still dangerously wounded; heaven knows whether he will survive or not. Sustee has escaped. What is the use of inspecting Ramdeal's wounds? if you wish to see what I have done, go and see Ram Jeebun salah, who is lying dead there on the platform, in the shed; him at least I have slain." This information made me suspect that some harm had happened to Ram Jeebun Sing, more so as I had repeatedly called out to him, and got no reply from him. I then said to Sustee, get a light, and let us go and see what Dabee Sing has done to Ram Jeebun. Sustee then took up the lamp that was burning in the shed, and we both went to the platform, where Ram Jeebun used to sleep. When we got there, Sustee shook him, and called out, "Ram Jeebun," but getting no reply, he lifted up his coverlet, and then we saw that his head had been dismembered by a stroke of the sword from the neck, and it was hanging over the pillow attached by a slight integument to the neck. He was dead and cold. The prisoner was close by all this time, in the custody of the chowkydars. Seeing this, I said to the Baboo, "It is true what Dabee Sing has told you respecting Ram Jeebun; he has killed him, come and see." Hearing this the Baboo came near the door of the shed, and just gave a peep from a distance—he was too horrified to go into the shed. After this the chowkydars took the prisoner to the thana, and Ramdeal was taken to the hospital. The prisoner did not confess that he had murdered Ram Jeebun, or wounded Ramdeal, till after the Baboo had told him to speak the truth, and no harm would happen to him for it. I neither know, nor can I conjecture, the motives which induced the prisoner to kill Ram Jeebun and wound Ramdeal. I never heard, nor do I know of any quarrel between them; they are Hindoos and I am a Musselman. They are employed at the outer door as durwans. Their shed is some distance from the stables where I am employed, how should I then know any thing of their private affairs? I have enough to do to mind my own business, without prying into their affairs. I never heard that the man ever was subject to fits of madness, or that he either eat, drank or smoked any thing intoxicating on the night of the murder. He was quite sober and sensible.

Bhowany Sing, chowkeydar, sworn.—I am a chowkeydar of the Colootollah thana. At about 4 o'clock on the morning of the 9th of January last, I heard that a murder had been committed at the house of Baboo Madub Dutt, at Colootollah, and in consequence of this information I went there. On my arrival at the house, I perceived Sustee durwan, and Peeroo syce, holding the prisoner, whilst Ramdeal was bleeding and crying, "he has taken the skin off my head." On my arrival, Sustee left the prisoner, and went to give information to the Baboo, whilst Peeroo and I held him. Whilst in my grasp, he said to me, "what is the necessity of compulsion? I have killed one durwan, and as soon as I can kill the other two, I shall voluntarily accompany you to the thana." In the mean time the Baboo came and inquired of the prisoner his motives for what he had done, adding, "speak the truth, and no one will harm you." Hearing this the prisoner said, "Ram Deal and Sustee salahs have escaped, but go and see Ram Jeebun salah whom I have slain; there he lies on the platform, in the shed." After this I accompanied Peeroo and Sustee to see Ram Jeebun's corpse. As I had ears to hear the information given, and eyes to see what was doing, and as much curiosity as the rest, I went to see the body as well as the rest. Had I not a right as well as they to see it? Being connected with the Police, it is my duty to inquire into these matters and to report on them. I did not accompany the prisoner to the thana—the naib thanadard took him there. I went with Ram Deal to the hospital at the Chandneychoke. I had no other conversation with the prisoner.

The prisoner declines questioning this witness.

Baboo Madub Dutt, sworn.—I reside at Colootollah Street, in the Town of Calcutta, and am a merchant by profession. I remember Monday morning the 9th of Jan. 1837; the death of Ram Jeebun occurred at about half past 3 o'clock of that morning. Ram Jeebun, deceased, Dabee Sing, the prisoner at the bar, and Ramdeal and Sustee, were all as durwans in my service on that day. At about half past 3 o'clock a. m., whilst I was sleeping in my bed in the inner apartments, I heard Sustee durwan knocking at the door, and calling to me to come out, as a serious assault or murder had been committed by the durwans. Hearing this, I got out of bed and came to the gate and desired Sustee to open the door, and on his opening it, I came and stood at the door, and inquired what was the matter. Sustee said, "come and see; Dabee Sing has wounded Ramdeal so severely with a sword on the head, that he is not likely to survive it:—he is bleeding profusely, and is covered with blood." On this I ordered Ramdeal to come near me, and seeing that he was severely wounded on the head and neck, I ordered him to be taken to the native hospital, and asked Dabee Sing, who was in the custody of Peeroo syce, and Bhowanny chowkeydar, what had induced him to do so, and ordered the chowkeydar to bind him and bring him near me, in order to examine him. He made no reply to my question. After he was bound and brought to me, I said to him, "fear nothing and speak the truth, no harm will happen to you in so doing." I said this to get information and ascertain how the matter stood from him. He replied, "where is the utility of examining Ramdeul sahib's wounds? he and Sustee have escaped; go and see Ram Jeebun sahib; he I have killed; there he lies dead on the platform in the shed.

The judge said, he did not wish to hear this reply, it being extorted from the prisoner under a promise of security. The witness continued to say:—When a light was brought, which was ordered by me in consequence of this information of the prisoner, I saw from a distance the corpse of Ram Jeebun. I did not go into the shed, but Sustee and Peeroo did, and they said that he was dead; previous to this I supposed that he was sleeping in the shed. The first intelligence I had of his murder was from the prisoner himself. My reason for saying that Ram Jeebun was dead, although I did not go into the shed, was because I saw from outside that his throat was cut through and through with the wound, and I never knew a man to live after decapitation; besides, the persons in the shed said he was dead.

After the murderer was apprehended, he said to me, "I am of the respectable Chutree or Princely caste; although I am poor, I have not lost my respectability; the other durwans, who are of the low Rewanny bearer caste, have accused me of having an intercourse with a maternity: this is a stigma on my caste, and if their aspersions are credited I will be rejected from my caste. It is this that has actuated me to kill them. I am not afraid of death, I am only sorry that I could not kill the three before I was apprehended." I heard this statement confirmed by Ramdeul, who deposed to this effect before Captain Birch, the Superintendent of the Police, when we were all examined there. I have no other information, whereby I can assign any inducement for the commission of this crime. The prisoner was peaceable and quiet enough whilst in my service, with this exception, that he used to be very abusive to, and make a great uproar with, persons who happened in passing the lane to make urine against my walls. His noise sometimes disturbed me when sitting above reading or writing, and I then ordered him to remain quiet. He never, to the best of my knowledge, ever eat, drank or smoked any thing of an intoxicating nature, and was as intelligent as most people of his sphere of life. What has a merchant to do with swords or swordsmen? I had prohibited all my servants from wearing or keeping swords in their possession, and never saw one with any of them till the night of the murder—when or from whence it came I cannot tell.

Ramdeul recalled.—I did state to Captain Birch at the Police, that I suspected the prisoner's motives for the commission of this murder, but it escaped me when questioned here to-day, and this is the reason why I forgot to mention it before. It is this:—One day in Pous last, the prisoner had a quarrel with us on this account. The prisoner in opposition to the Baboo's orders, which are not to permit any one to go into the female or inner apartments, took some sweetmeats in there. Seeing this we all forbade him and told him not to do so again, for if the Baboo should ever come to the knowledge of this, he, as well as we three, would all lose our situations, and that it was very wrong of him to go there against the Baboo's orders. On this he abused us, and wanted to pick a quarrel with us; but as he is a Chutree and we are Boodras, we held our tongues and let him vent his rage in abuse, and thus the quarrel ended. It is this, I suppose, that has induced him to endeavour to murder us all. Who the sweetmeats were intended for I cannot tell, for I never heard any thing further on the subject. As the Baboo questioned me on that subject, I revealed it to him before Captain Birch.

The prisoner declined questioning this witness. He said the Baboo and the other witnesses, who are his menials and hirelings, are all giving false evidence at his instigation. The Baboo for some cause or other owes me a grudge and they have all conspired to tax me with this murder and swear away my life, and thus get rid of me and gratify their revenge.

Robert H. Bain, sworn.—I am the Police Surgeon. I examined the body of a person named Ram Jeebun Sing, on the 9th of Jan. last, at about 10 o'clock A.M., in a small hut in Colootollah-street, in the town Calcutta. The premises I heard, were Madub Baboo's, but I cannot swear to this. The deceased appeared to be an upcountry man, of the Brijobasse caste. Blowanny chowkeydar pointed out the corpse to me. The man was dead. I found the head almost severed from the neck. The wound was very extensive: it was from below the tip of the right ear across the neck, down to the left shoulder blade; the windpipe, the gullet, the spinal column, and all the larger blood vessels, were all completely discovered by the wound. The head was merely attached by a piece of a slight integument to the neck, and this wound, I believe, and am quite certain was the cause of the deceased's death. I have no doubt about it. The wound must have been either inflicted by a sword or a large knife, or some other very large and sharp instrument. Looks at the sword and says, an instrument like this would inflict such a wound if used for such a purpose. I saw the body at about 11 o'clock on the 9th of January, 1887. I do not think that one stroke could inflict such a wound; it would require 3 or 4 strokes to lacerate the throat so, and that with a very sharp and powerful instrument. I examined the corpse, on account of an order to do so from the Police.

The prisoner declines questioning this witness.

Blowanny chowkeydar recalled.—I have seen this witness before. I pointed out to him the corpse of Ram Jubun Sing for post mortem examination at Colootollah, at the house of Baboo Madub Dutt, on the same day that I took the prisoner into custody for the murder. It was at about 10 o'clock A.M. that I pointed out the body to him.

Prisoner declines questioning this witness.

This closed the case for the prosecution.

The Judge then intimated to the prisoner, that if he had any thing to urge in his defence, this was the time for him to do so.

The prisoner said "My watch commenced at midnight and was over at 3 o'clock:" when it was over I went and roused Ram Jeebun Sing, whose turn came next, and after awaking him went and laid down on the platform alongside of Ramdeul and slept. At about 4 past 3 o'clock, I was awake by a noise from my sleep. I started up with an intention to see what it was about. Ramdeul starting up at the same time with me, and all of a sudden before I could quit the platform, dashed on me, seized me by the hands, and taxed me with having wounded him. This is all I know of this affair. How could I at that late hour of the night procure a weapon of this kind? and if I had done the act, would I stay there to be apprehended?

We then put in certificates of character. They were read. The first was a receipt for 2,109 bage of sugar, over which he was a chulundar, and signed by Boyd and Co., dated 7th Jan. 1836. The second was a certificate of his services as a chokydar for 3 months, signed by R. Campbell, Apothecary, 4th July, 1831, Agra. The 3d was a like document for 2 months services, and signed by Mr. B. Campbell, Benares, 13th May 1835. They were filed in the case.

The prisoner said he had no witnesses.

After the prisoner had finished his defence, the Judge then addressed the jury. Gentlemen of the jury, the prisoner at the bar, Dabee Sing, stands charged with the wilful murder of Ram Jeebun Sing. The indictment states, that he, on the morning of the 9th January, 1837, at about half past 3 o'clock, A. M., did, at the house of Baboo Madub Dutt, at Colootollah Street, in the town of Calcutta, with malice aforethought, inflict one or more wounds on the neck of a person named Ram Jeebun Sing, from the effects of which wounds, Ram Jeebun Sing died immediately, as it discovered the head asunder from the neck. The crime of murder, gentlemen, is the most heinous offence any person can commit against the laws, and the prisoner's life certainly depends on the verdict which you will give in his case. With the assault he made on Ramdial Sing, a witness in this case, you have nothing further to do, than as it might lead you to suppose, from the circumstances attending it, and from what subsequently occurred, as to whether the prisoner did or did not commit the murder of Ram Jeebun Sing. With his assault on Ram Dial, however uncalled for or aggravated it might have been, as it is not on trial before you, you have nothing further than what I have just pointed out to you to do with it: and here, although you are by law bound to reject as evidence the statement the prisoner made before Madub Babo, after the murder, because it was extorted from him under a promise of security from harm, and the law has provided that no confession of any prisoner, made under a promise of threats, can be evidence against him, because persons in such situations have been known to have accused themselves of crimes which they never committed: still you have even here a fact, as evidence, viz., that he did point out the corpse of the murdered man, and all facts are made evidence by law. That the deceased was wounded on the night in question there is no doubt, from the depositions heard in this case; and that he died from the effects of the wounds he then received, is quite evident, both from the testimony of the medical person who examined the corpse, and has sworn to this fact, as well as from the very circumstances of the nature of the injury he received, which we all know is sufficient to extinguish life in any person. The sole question which remains for you then to decide, is whether it was the prisoner at the bar who did commit this crime, or whether it was committed by some other person, as he says. He has called no evidence to back his statement and it rests on his own ipse dixit. What is most strange is, that unless we suppose it to be the trivial quarrel in Pous last, about the sweetmeats being taken by the prisoner to the zenannah, there does not appear any clue to conjecture the motives that could have led the prisoner to the perpetration of this crime, and a man must be very callous of both his life and that of others, to let so trifling an offence urge him to the crime of murder. This is in case, gentlemen, you suppose that he did the deed, the evidence showing that on that night the deceased, the prisoner, Ramdial and Sustee, two witnesses in this case, all slept in one hut, and that at about half past 3 o'clock in the morning Ramdial was awakened by a furious assault made on him, with a drawn sword, by the prisoner; and on a search being made another man, by the prisoner's directions, was found to be lying murdered, where he pointed him out. Another suspicious circumstance, against him is this, that he voluntarily takes upon himself the extra duty of keeping watch at a time when it was not his turn to do so, and is thus left the only man awake at the time when the crime is committed. There is no evidence to show when the sword was in the prisoner's possession, or how or from whence he got it; but that he had it at the time of this assault in his hands, is quite clear. Then, gentlemen, if we are to credit Dr. Bain's testimony, another strange circumstance is that the noise which must have been made by the sword striking the chopper of the hut, in inflicting so many wounds, as he says must have been given before the head could be dis-jointed from the trunk, that it did not wake any body in the hut, until Ramdial was awakened by the blow inflicted on him. The certificates the prisoner has produced I have had read and filed; they are not strictly evidence and do not affect the evidence in this case. He then minutely recapitulated all the evidence given in this case, commenting hurriedly on it and ended by saying—throughout this evidence, gentlemen, I have not discovered any discrepancy, of a nature to effect the testimony of any of the material witnesses in this case, and if their statements are to be believed, the whole is one straightforward tale of facts; but if you have any doubts, you should not convict the prisoner; for no body ought to be convicted on doubtful testimony. With these remarks I leave you, gentlemen, to give your verdict as you may deem fit, according to your conscience and oath.

The Jury retired for about one hour and 40 minutes, taking the certificates with them, and on their return, gave a verdict against the prisoner of Guilty.

After this verdict was recorded, the prisoner was asked what he had to say, why the sentence of death should not be passed on him. To this he made no reply.

The Judge having then put on the black cap thus pronounced the sentence of death against the prisoner. Dabee Sing, you have, after a very careful and deliberate investigation of your case, been found guilty by the jury of the crime of murder of a fellow-servant named Ram Jeebun Sing, on the 9th of January last at half past 3 o'clock in the morning, at the house of Madub Dutt, your master, in Colootollah, in the city of Calcutta, and it is now my painful duty to pass on you the last awful and dreadful penalty of the law, the sentence of death, which is invariably accorded to the crime of wilful murder; and were it not so, the life of no person would be safe from the malice of wicked and designing men. No person who has heard the evidence in this case, can possibly entertain any doubt of your guilt, and it was accident alone which prevented your guilty purposes of killing the other 3 fellow servants of yours, who have been preserved by the interposition of Providence to manifest your guilt to the world. What motives could have urged you to the commission of this horrid crime, is a mystery to all but yourself and your maker, from whom no secrets are hid. Had you not been convicted of this murder and been tried for the aggravated and unprovoked assault you made on Ram Lal Sing and been convicted of it only, that conviction alone would have entailed on you the sentence of death. There is not even the shadow of palliation for your guilt; what you did, you did with calm reflection. You were, it appears, neither provoked to it by anger nor intoxicated at the time; you did it, with full possession of your senses at the time. The sentence which I must now pass on you is, that you, Dabee Sing, be taken from hence to the place from whence you came, and from thence, on Monday Morning at 6 o'clock A. M., to the place of execution, and there be hung by the neck till you are dead and may God Almighty have mercy on your soul. The prisoner bowed.

After this the Court adjourned till 11 o'clock A. M. to-morrow morning.—Hurkaru, March 1.

Jugut Chunder Deb, with others, stood charged with an assault and felony, committed by him, on the 30th of August 1836, with a knife, on the left arm of the person of Chandu Churn Babur, the prosecutor, at Sham bazar, in the Town of Calcutta, on a bill found against him in the 4th Sessions of 1834.

The prisoner pleaded Not Guilty.

Attorney for the prosecution, Wm. Smith, Esq., Counsel for the prosecution, J. Pearson, and Mr. Leith. Attorney for the defence, Mr. Thompson. Counsel for the defence, C. R. Prinsep, Esq.

Mr. J. Pearson opened the case thus:—Gentlemen of the Jury, the facts of this case are very clear. The prosecutor bought a piece of land and began to build huts; the prisoner and his father came and forbade them, and took away the materials, and then Rajnarain, the father, and prisoner, his son, came with others, and made an assault, and Shamlull, a brijobasee, took a bludgeon with iron wound round it, and inflicted a wound on the head of the prosecutor, who warded it off with his hands: had the blow taken effect, it would have been fatal. These are the facts; the Judge will be more minutely able to detail the law on the case.

Mr. Prinsep requested the witnesses to be ordered out of Court.

Chundu Churn Babu, the prosecutor, sworn.—I am a sircar, in the service of Glasgow, Oswald and Co. I remember that at 8 or 9 o'clock in the morning of the 30th of August, I went to my ground with the builders, to fix posts to build huts: some one gave information to Rajnarain Baboo, and he came out and took away the bilhooks from the builders into his house, on which the builders said, what are we to do now? and I brought other bill hooks. After this Rajnarain Baboo and his son Jugut Chunder, came with some brijobasees, and the prisoner gave me some blows and told his followers to beat and kill me. He said "if you are put to expense for the assault I will pay it;" on this a brijobasee lifted up a bludgeon to strike me on the head; I lifted up my hands to ward off the blow, and was wounded with this bludgeon on the arm. I fell on the ground and became senseless, and some person lifted me up in that state and took me to the hospital. I subsequently saw the bludgeon in the hand of a chowkedar at the Police. My hand was covered with blood and split at the wrist. I then went and told my master of this assault, and he sent me to Capt. Birch, he to Mr. McCann, and he to the native hospital, where Mr. Patton, an assistant, attended me. I attended the hospital daily for 15 or 16 days. First the prisoner struck me and then the brijobasee; after this I do not know more, because I fell senseless to the ground from the blow.

Cross examined.—I was struck on the wrist and I complained at the Police, where nothing was done, and I then came to the Supreme Court. The prisoner did not appear at the Police on the summons nor when a constable went to arrest him; he subsequently appeared. I was continually at the Police before Mr. McFarlan. I was dissatisfied at the Police proceedings and therefore preferred coming here. I was not sworn there. My complaint at the Police was for an assault and wounding. Rajnarain and his son were standing at the door of Goopy Baboo and giving orders, when this assault was committed. They were near the place of assault. I had no agreement about this land, either in writing or verbally. I knew that the land was mortgaged to Rajnarain. I never heard Rajnarain say that the sale of the mortgage to me was a fraudulent one and done to cheat Rajnarain. I never knew that Rajnarain was to purchase the lands, return me my purchase money, and cancel the sale. I learnt from the mortgagee that Rajnarain, to whom the land was mortgaged, wished for the cash; and as such he sold it to me for 600 Rs. I never got the title deeds of the lands. I did tell Raja Gopymohun Deb; I am a poor man, I cannot go to law with you; give me my purchase money and take the lands. On this the Raja said, I will see if I can adjust this affair for you; afterwards he said I cannot effect a compromise, go and pay the purchase money at the attorney's office and build on the lands if you please. He said this in Choit last, at his house, and many persons were there. He is a great man and so are his acquaintances. I am a stranger to great folks. After this I gave the money at an attorney and began to build. I showed my wounded hands to Mr. McCann at the Police, and he said I do not wish to look at it and sent me to the hospital. On the day I was struck I told the magistrate nothing can be done here as to my wounds and I will go to the Supreme Court. I came here to get justice for all my affairs: if I get justice for this complaint, I may then do something further. It does not require any advice for a sensible man to get redress for an assault. I do not think the Police an incompetent tribunal, but the Supreme Court is a better. I thought it was requisite to institute primary proceedings there. I went to serve the warrant of the Police. I never went to the defendant's zenana nor did I see any one go there. Perry, the constable, told me to go in and once pulled me into the house; but I ran out from fright, it being the house of a Raja. I do not know whether it was the female or male apartments; it is the main entrance to the house. Mr. Perry wanted me to go upstairs but I refused. This was six or eight days after I received the blow. When the blow was hit Rajnarain was standing at the door and Jugut went away.

Re-examined.—There were many brijobasees there and they all had bludgeons in their hands. (Shows his hands). The blow rendered the hand useless for about 20 days.

W. Patton, apothecary, sworn.—I am an assistant at the Chandny chok native hospital. The last witness was sent to me by the Police authorities on the 30th of August last, with a wound on his hand, to be examined and cured. He attended the hospital for 14 days. When he came had a contused wound occasioned by a blunt instrument; the skin was broken and the wound was $\frac{1}{4}$ of an inch in depth and $1\frac{1}{2}$ inch long. The wound was not dangerous, nor a very severe one. It was a slight wound and healed in 14 days. The man could not use his hands for 3 or 4 days. I applied adhesive plaster to it and bandaged it up. It was not a wound that could do a very serious injury.

The opposite party decline questioning this witness.

Paunchoo, chokedar, sworn.—I am a chokeydar of Sham-poker thana, and I was so in Aug. last. I recollect an affray there in Bhador last, between Rajoo Baboo and Chundey Baboo. At 8 or 9 o'clock A. M. I was going to the bazar and saw it near a washer's house. Seeing it I went to the spot and saw Rajoo Baboo and Chundey Baboo and the prisoner there. There were about 200 or 300 brijobasees and others with sticks in their hands, and Rajnarain said, "kill him, kill him, and I will pay all the expenses." On this an up country man took up a bludgeon and aimed a blow on the prosecutor's head and split his hand. I ran and gave information to the naib and we came altogether to the place of the affray and caught the man who had struck the blow, and the rest ran away. Chundeychurn followed me to the thana. It was a bamboo stick bound round with sharp iron rings about one inch thick.

The prisoner and his father were standing at a confectioner's ordering and encouraging the assailants. I heard Rajnarain give the orders and not the prisoner. The thana was not far distant from the place of affray. When Chundy reached the thana he was covered with blood and fell at the thana not in the way. He showed his hands at the Police to Mr. McCan and all the men there.

Cross-examined.—I took the man who struck him to the police and he was taken to the phatuck, and the division Magistrate, on hearing that the matter was taken to the Supreme Court, released the man on bail. Chundy complained at the police against Rajnarain and this prisoner. I do not know if Chundy abandoned the complaint or not. I left the stick at the police in Mr. Humberly's possession: it was a common stick.

Re-examined.—These sticks are used by up country men and are used by them when they are employed in riots. I do not know what has become of this stick. Rajnarain gave the order to strike and not the prisoner. I did not hear him. Chundychurn did not return the blow. Chundychurn had men with him, but they had no sticks. I did not see them strike the brijobasees, though they were quarrelling; I only saw this blow struck, after which I ran off to the thana.

Goluck, tauntee, sworn.—I am a weaver by trade. I live at Shampooker. I know the place of where the affray occurred, my house is quite near. I was sitting at my shop, and I saw Juggit Baboo and his father take away 4 bill-hooks from the goramees. They went into their house and came back with a rabble, abusing and saying "beat the salaha." There were brijobasees with sticks in their hands, and one of them struck Chundey with one. The prisoner first struck the prosecutor, and then the prisoner and his father ordered the brijobasees to beat Chundey Baboo and the blow was struck. The blow was aimed at the head, but it was warded off by the arm. It was an iron bound bludgeon. The blow split the arm at the wrist. Chundy on receiving the blow fell, and others then began to beat him and I ran away. I subsequently saw the bludgeon at the police in the possession of a chokeedar; what became of it I do not know.

Cross-examined.—Chundy had bought a piece of ground on which Rajnarain had a mortgage. I do not know of any thing further about it. The men were ordered to beat them off the ground. I have no other name but Goluck, but I am some times called Holloodar. Goluck Doss is my name. I never have been to the petty court under any name there.

Re-examined.—My name is Goluck Doss, and tauntee means a weaver, which is my profession.

Chundy Churn Bose, sworn.—I live at Shampootty near the prosecutor's residence. I know of a quarrel there in Bhador last. I was there on that day at 8 o'clock a.m., at a confectioner's shop, and I saw four guramees at work on a piece of ground and perceived Rajoo Baboo come with four or five persons and take away their bill-hooks, and he told the workmen "if any of you come here to work I will have you beaten to death." On this they told Chundy how are we to work without billhooks? he replied, "I will fetch others and consult Raja Gopeemohun Deb, by whose permission I am building." On their recommencing the work, Rajoo Baboo and the prisoner came with a rabble of brijobasees and told them "beat the prosecutor and we will pay the expences," and Juggit struck two or three blows at the prosecutor: after this a durwan aimed a blow at the head of the prosecutor, who warded it off with his hands, and the prosecutor on receiving the blow cried bapras and fell seeslawa to the ground, and then a crowd began beating him. The stick I saw subsequently at the police office.

Cross-examined.—The prosecutor's men did not return the assault. The prisoner likewise said "strike and I will pay." Rajoo and Juggit told the prosecutor "you had better take the money and give up the ground." Whether he consented to it I do not know. All that Chundychurn said was, that "the prisoner and his father will neither give me the money nor let me take possession of the ground." Chundy went to the Raja who sent some men and forbade the men to make a riot. The defendants brought about 12 or 14 men; the spectators amounted to about 700 men. I am a dulla at the Sea Custom house. I do not know Rada Madub sircar who is a witness here. I have no fixed situation now. It was quite accidentally that I saw the riot.

Re-examined.—The 12 or 14 men who joined in the affray, were Rajoo Baboo's men.

This closed the case for the prosecution. The judge wished to see the indictment.

The prisoner's counsel argued that the case could not proceed as the indictment charged the prisoner with cutting with a knife or a sharp instrument, neither of which appears to have been the case, as made apparent by the evidence of the prosecutor's own witnesses, and as such he moved the Court that the case be dismissed for want of agreement between the indictment and the evidence adduced in the case of the plaintiff, without going to the jury or defendant entering on his defence.

Mr. Pearson, in reply to these objections, quoted 2 cases tried at the Old Bailey. The first was, No. 78, of King on the prosecution of Richard Chantry vs. Hywood, for Larceny and cutting and wounding B. Chambers: the indicting mentioned a sharp cutting instrument, but it was proved in evidence, that the prisoner had only struck the person with a piece of iron used in forcing open locks: nevertheless, the man was convicted, and when the judge who tried the case referred it on the score of this objection to the general meeting of the judges, they upheld the conviction. There was another similar case, King vs. Atwood, in which the prisoner was charged with wounding with a cutting instrument. It came out in evidence that he struck the prosecutrix with the claw-end of a hammer on the head and body. The prisoner was convicted, and the case referred to the general meeting of the judges and the verdict upheld.

The Chief Justice replied, that it is admitted that there is no necessity for the indictment to specify (not even in cases of murder) the instrument, and even if stated in the indictment it is not incumbent to prove it, so that the case may proceed.

Mr. Prinscp waived the objection with the exception of that part which states if death had ensued, it would have made the offence capital. The Judge said he reserved his opinion on that point for his charge to the jury.

The Prisoner in his defence said, that he was not present at the quarrel; and then commented on the conduct of the prosecutor in withdrawing the case from the police; said it was not proved that he had any weapon in my hand, and put in certificates of character. These certificates were read to the jury.

Ghoroochurn Roy, the defendant's witness, examined.—I was not in the court this morning. I am a sircar of Raja Gopy Mohun Bahadoor. I know the ground about which a dispute occurred between Rajnarain Baboo and Chundychurn; it is near the house of Rajoo Baboo. Chundychurn went once to the Raja and said Rajoo will not give me any rest about the ground, and asked him to adjust it. Rajoo Moodoo Baboo, the seller of the ground, and Chundy Baboo, were one day sitting together, when they sent for a stamp paper. Rajoo Baboo said to Chundychurn, "I have nothing to do with you, I know Moodoo only in this affair." Moodoo said, "I have borrowed 100 rs. from you, take it." Rajoo Baboo said, "you owe me 125 rs. why shall I take 100 rs.," and he told Moodoo, I wish to buy the ground, why did you then sell it to Chundy?" and he said to Chundy, "why did you, without asking me, buy it of him?" Chundy made no reply. This was before the affray occurred.

Cross-examined.—There was no writing on that day. The dispute about the 25 rupees lasted the whole of that day; what occurred afterwards I do not know.

Ramjoy, bricklayer, sworn.—I live at Goopce Mohun Baboo's garden, near the place where this affray occurred. I was returning home one morning from some business, and I saw Rajnarain and Chundy Churn planting posts. Rajoo Baboo's men said, we will not let you plant the posts. On this a struggle ensued, and Chundy fell into a trench dug for a wall, and in the fall his hand was cut by a tile; and Chundychurn Bose beat Baboo Rajoo's men. The brijobasees who were not Rajnarain Baboo's men, then began to beat Chundy. They were only spectators and Chundychurn went and complained to the thana and the thana men came and arrested many men, beat them and carried them into custody. I did not see the prisoner there. After the chokedars took away the brijobasees, the prisoner came out and said "let them beat the men we will go to law!" The father came to see the tamasha of his men being beaten to death. The brijobasees were not Rajnarain's men, there was only one gardener of Rajoo Baboo's there. He was the person beaten to death; he is not a witness here. I have only spoken truth. The brijobasees with bludgeons in their hands were beaten to death by the Bongaalees without any cause, and taken to the Police. The molly was so very severely beaten, that I do not know whether he is dead or alive.

Mr. McFarlan, sworn.—I am the Chief Magistrate. A complaint was made on the 30th of August. It was a case of an affray brought from the thana to me. Chundy's deposition was taken. The substance is in a book before me. The book states, it was on oath, and it is customary to swear plaintiff, and I take the deposition myself; but I cannot positively say whether he was sworn or not. I do not think the prisoner ever came before me. Mr. Smith was for the prosecutor, and Mr. Thompson for the defence and I was prepared to go on with the case on the 21st September, when Mr. Smith, after consulting with Mr. Thompson, said, he would rather not go on with the case in the Police and would take it to the Supreme Court. I replied that it is a misdemeanour case; you can either go on with it here or withdraw it to the Sessions. Mr. Smith then withdrew it from the Police and there was an end of the case at the office, and the 3 or 4 brijobasees were released on bail.

Mr. Prinsep wished to have the examination read.

Mr. McFarlan reads the deposition of Chundychurn. I was beaten on this morning. A brijobasee of Baboo Rajnarain beat me on the hand and others beat me on the head and other parts of my body. It was about a piece of ground near Sheebo Baboo's ground. It was 5 cottahs and 5 chittacks. I had bought it of Moodoo Baboo for 500 rupees, and as it was mortgaged to Rajnarain Baboo for 100 rupees I applied to Rajoo Baboo for the title deeds, which he refused to give me. I then applied to him for them through my attorney, sending him the amount due to him on the mortgage, viz. 100 rupees, but he did not reply to it.

Rajnarain wishes to keep the ground to himself and to give me back my purchase money, and he will not permit me to build any thing on it. This day he, together with the brijobasees, came on this ground and took away the billhooks from my workman, and on my remonstrating with him he abused and assaulted me himself and gave orders to his brijobasees to assault me likewise: Shamlo then struck me with a bludgeon on the hand and cut me on the arm near the wrist, and the others inflicted blows on my forehead and other parts of my body.

Mr. McFarlan's examination continued.—I do not know what became of the stick; I did not take any particular notice of it. It was merely a preliminary proceeding: there was only one warrant issued against Rajnarain. Perry the constable said, that he could not apprehend the defendant who had escaped. The bails are liable for the brijobasees. I do not recollect their names.

This closed the defence.

The Judge.—The prisoner at the bar is indicted for a capital felony, for cutting with an intent to kill or do some grievous injury to the prosecutor at Shambazar, on the 30th of August last. The first count charges him as a principal, and the second count for being accessory and aiding it. And although you may be led to suppose, you are only trying him for a simple assault, it is for a felony; and though the man may not be sentenced capitally, he is liable to be transported for the offence if convicted. The judge then said that if he gave the order he would be equally guilty as the person who committed the crime and if death had ensued, it would have been murder; if the instrument was of that nature that a blow with it would cause death it is then felony, not otherwise; but if the affray was mutual, then it would, even if death ensued, be only manslaughter. Then the judge detailed the evidence, commenting minutely on it and after going through it he told the jury that if they had made up their minds that the prisoner gave the order, they could not, but find him guilty of this charge; but if they entertained any doubt to give him the benefit of it: he ended by saying, that the bricklayer's evidence was in contradiction to all the others. The jury, without retiring from their seats, gave in 5 minutes a verdict of not guilty, and the prisoner was forthwith released.

After this the Judge inquired whether there were any more prisoners, and being informed by Mr. King that there was one D. DeMonte, against whom a true bill had been found, he was brought forward and discharged by proclamation.

In closing the Sessions the Judge remarked, that this last case of Jugget Chunder Deb had come on very irregularly before him, with many exaggerations: there was nothing in it beyond a misdemeanour and a simple assault, and it might in all respects have been disposed of more fittingly at the police than at the Supreme Court.—Bengal Hurkaru, March 2.

SECOND TERM,—MARCH 1, 1937.

This being the first day of term the Court sat and took motions of course; we understand there will be a great deal of business.

The Advocate-General mentioned the case of Roots versus Cockerell, and said he was prepared to move to set aside the verdict, under the liberty given him by the Court, on Saturday next; but that, as he was very much occupied, he should prefer it being allowed to stand over. No objection was made to this arrangement.

WOOLLEN VERSUS BARNES.

In this case a motion was made to assign judgment for the nominal damages with costs given at the trial, and that the Prothonotary should have liberty to add the taxed costs to the judgement: the whole to be paid by the defendants.

It appeared by the rule of Court on this subject, the Stat. Rules on the plea side, that when costs are awarded they are to be taxed and added to the debt or damages before judgment is signed; but if the costs are not taxed within a year after judgment given, the record is to be completed without costs and signed by the Prothonotary.

It appeared in this case, that the Attorney for the plaintiff had presented his bill for taxation eleven months after the trial, and that it had not been taxed within the year; so that the rule of Court was dead against him, and his motion refused.

27 We mention this case for the benefit of young practitioners: the costs thus lost are about two thousand rupees. In the instance in question, the delay did not arise out of any laches on the part of the Attorney; there was a question, we believe, as to whether the signing the judgment would not prejudice the equitable rights of the plaintiff against the defendants, and the case is considered one of great hardship upon the Attorney for the plaintiff.

HOLROYD versus ———.

This was a motion by the Advocate-General for an order, that the Coroner should make a return to the writ issued out in this case.

It appeared, that the writ issued in the name of Mr. Thos. Holroyd as the Assignee, who succeeded Mr. Mackintyre as plaintiff in the action; the writ was executed by him as Sheriff, and the defendant had entered an appearance. Mr. Holroyd, as Sheriff, now refused to return his own writ, and the application was made in consequence for the Coroner to do it.

Chief Justice.—The defendant has waived the objection to the Sheriff's executing his own writ, by putting in an appearance, and you have a right to your return by the Sheriff; if you refuse to return your own writ, you can rule the Sheriff (yourself) to return it!!! (laughter.) There were a great variety of other motions of no public interest. —Harkuru, March 2.

MARCH 2, 1837.

CLESTINA SMITH, versus DEBHARRY LOIL.

Mr. Clarke applied for a commission to swear the defendant to an answer, the defendant residing at some place in the Mofussil. The learned Counsel said, that a commission for this purpose had issued, but that the persons appointed Commissioners being Civil Servants, were absent on their circuits, &c.

The Advocate-General shewed cause.

By the Court 6 weeks further time was granted to execute the commission on payment of costs.

GOPEY MOHUN DEB versus THE EAST INDIA COMPANY.

Mr. Clarke moved for complainant, on notice under the new Rules, that publication do pass.

The Advocate-General shewed cause, and stated that the case has been 8 or 9 years in court, and that he had always experienced the greatest accommodation from the gentleman who formerly conducted the case; matters had gone on smoothly and quietly hitherto, but now that his friends had the conduct of the cause, they were all of a sudden in a prodigious hurry. The learned Counsel then took some technical objection to Mr. Clarke's grounds, and stated that equity and justice alike demanded that he should have time allowed him; that his interrogatories were now at this time filed, and that he was ready to examine his witnesses, and if Mr. Clarke's motion were granted, the case would come on, on the evidence only of the complainant.

Mr. Clarke in support of his rule stated, that the delay on the part of the Company had been vexatious in the extreme; that they had filed pleas for want of parties, long ago, which had on argument been overruled; that, however, as the case was of such immense consequence, Mr. Tutton who then conducted the case, had thought it advisable to add 38 defendants to the bill; that so far back as April 1836, the complainant had ruled the defendants to file interrogatories; that therefore the cause had been at issue nearly 4 years but that the defendants from that time hitherto had done nothing; that during all that time, and for years previously, they, the complainants, had been subject to abatements of the suit, in consequence of the deaths of some one or other of the numerous defendants, and that to use an expression of Lord Eldon, "this corporation (the East India Company) appeared to avail themselves of their enormous wealth for the purposes of procrastinating litigation."

By the Court. Time was given to the Advocate-General, to the 1st of June to pass publication on his rule; he undertaking to file interrogatories in the original cause, and to dismiss his interrogatories in the Cross Cause, by which means to speed the suit, and not to delay it any longer, the Advocate-General to pay the Costs of the application.

The Equity Board was then called, and the court was occupied for the rest of the day in hearing an argument on Demurrer in the case of Seboosondory Dusee versus Joymoney Dusee.

The Advocate-General, Mr. Prinsep, Mr. Leith, and Mr. Grant, for Demurrer.

Mr. Clarke, Mr. Osborne, Mr. Nott, in support of the Bill. Demurrer allowed.—Harkuru, March 3.

MARCH 3, 1837.

The Judges took their seats a little after eleven o'clock, and were occupied for two hours and a half in trying an ejectment case of little interest.

At two o'clock, the important case of Dwarkanauth Tagore vs. the Assignees of Ferguson & Co. was called on: a number of gentlemen from the public offices and mercantile establishments had been in attendance as witnesses from the morning; but the court understanding that there was a probability of the case lasting beyond four o'clock, directed that it should be heard on Tuesday, when the witnesses will have to attend again.—Harkuru, March 4.

MARCH, 6, 1837.

Mr. Justice Grant informed the bar, that indisposition would probably prevent the Chief Justice taking his seat on the bench for the next two or three days. The motion in Roots v. Cockerell, and the cross-motion in the same case, were postponed until Thursday next, when, it is expected, Sir Edward Ryan will be able to resume his seat. The court intimated they would take the injunction in Dos, &c., Major Cape v. Assignees of Cruttenden and Co in due course, and go on with the common law board on Tuesday.—Englishman, March 7.

FORUNNOOMAR TAGORE vs. LEADIMOHUN TAGORE, &c.

This was an argument on demurrer to the plaintiff's bill for want of Equity.

For Demurrer.—The Advocate-General and Mr. Clarke.

Against it.—Mr. Prinsep and Mr. Leith.

The argument lasted till past 4 o'clock. The Court took time to consider.

MARCH 7, 1837.

The Chief Justice still continues slightly indisposed; but we understand that the learned Judge will resume his duties on Thursday next.

The Court took motions. Mr. Grant moved for a Commission to three Indigo Planters to swear an attesting witness to a warrant of attorney.

Mr. Justice Grant. It is not usual to appoint persons as Commissioners, who are not in official situations, or about whom the Court has not some certain information. —Commission refused.—Ibid, March 8.

BISUMMER SEAL V. RUMDHONE BONNERJEE.

Mr. Justice Grant delivered the decision of the Court in this case. This was a motion for the appointment of a receiver on behalf of a second mortgagee. Were this an English mortgage, the Court apprehended there could be no doubt that a receiver would be appointed and were of opinion that, under the circumstances of this case, and particularly to prevent collusion between husband and wife to the detriment of the second mortgagee, a receiver ought to be allowed. The Court were further of opinion that the second mortgagee is entitled to receive interest from the period of the commencement of the law; that the words "when I shall command the means" must be construed into "when I shall receive the rents," and that, therefore, when the receiver gets in the rents, the interest must be paid thereout. The Court reserved the rights of the prior mortgagee on clearing contempt.

GOLAUBCHUNDER PODAR V COWRY DOSS.

The Advocate-General put in affidavits to show that the defendant was possessed of property in houses, lands, jewels, &c., to a considerable amount in value, and that he had made over this property by a fictitious sale of mortgage or conveyance of some sort for the purpose of appearing in this court in forma pauperis. Rule nisi — Englishman.

MARCH 7, 1837.

DWARKANATH TAGORE V. ASSIGNEES OF FERGUSSON AND CO.

Mr. Osborne opened the pleadings.

Mr. Advocate General stated the case for the plaintiff. The court were aware that there formerly existed in this town certain societies formed for the purpose of insuring the lives of persons and more particularly for the purpose of insuring the lives of persons in debt to the agency houses, and that these societies were chiefly composed of the agents themselves. One of these, the Oriental, is the subject of the present enquiry. It was the practice of these societies to lend money to the different firms on the security of the firm's promissory note. The firm of Fergusson and Co. were holders of a great number of policies on which they paid the premiums, amongst others a policy for Rs-24,000 on the life of the Hon. Captain Sinclair; a policy on the life of Mr. McKnight for Rs-60,000 and one on the life of Mr. James Smith for Rs-60,000. The note on which Fergusson and Co. borrowed the money was payable to the secretaries of the Oriental, or order, and it was endorsed over by the then secretaries, Mackintosh and Co., to Dwarkanauth Tagore. These were preliminary matters of which it was necessary the Court should be informed to come at the gist of the present case. After the failure of Fergusson and Co., it was thought expedient to carry on the factories, and money being required for this purpose, the assignee applied to the Society for the payment of policies on lapsed lives. Dwarkanauth Tagore, to whom the promissory note for the lakh of rupees borrowed from the society by Fergusson and Co. had been endorsed, opposed the claim, and it was agreed between him and the assignees to submit a special case for the decision of this court. Dwarkanauth Tagore, agreeing to pay over the money in the mean time to the assignees, who also agreed that this act of his should not be prejudicial to his right. Two years have elapsed since the date of this agreement, but no case had been submitted for the decision of the court, and the action is now brought to recover back the amount of the policies paid under this agreement. The learned counsel understood that there would be set up two grounds of defence; one a set-off, but as far as he was instructed he knew not of the existence of any debt due to the assignees by the plaintiff. The second ground was that the plaintiff had prevented the defendants from bringing their suit. Prevented them forsooth! The learned counsel thought that a court of law was open to all who choose to come into it.

Mr. Thomas Hyde Gardner, examined by Mr. Clarke — Witness is in the employ of defendants, and was formerly in the employ of Fergusson and Co. Knows the Oriental Life Insurance Society, and the firm of R. C. Jenkins and Co. Before the failure of Mackintosh and Co., they were secretaries to the Oriental, subsequently Mr. R. C. Jenkins; was the secretary. Proves Mr. Macnaghten's signature to exhibit A.; the body of exhibit was written by witness from a draft written by Mr. Macnaghten. Interlineations in exhibit are Mr. Macnaghten's. Proves the signature of Mr. Macnaghten and Mr. W. F. Fergusson to B. and C. and D. Proves signatures to various other exhibits, including the note given by the firm of Fergusson and Co. to the Oriental, and the endorsement of the secretaries at the time to plaintiff. Mr. Jenkins was secretary to the Oriental before his firm was established, afterwards the firm became secretary.

Cross-examined by Mr. Prinsep.—Policies in the Oriental were not held by the firm, but by the individual members of Fergusson and Co. The share-holders in the Oriental are not now the same as they were before the failure. It is now called the New Oriental. I do not know if there has been a new deed. I have never conversed with plaintiff on the subject. I drew A. out from a draft by Mr. Turtton, he was then acting as mutual counsel,—acting for both parties. Proves the signatures of Mr. A. F. Smith and Mr. Low to endorsements of premiums paid. Mr. Smith and Mr. Low were clerks in the house of Fergusson and Co. After the failure of the different agencies houses, I understand the Oriental vested in Dwarkanauth alone. I do not know that he bought up the insolvent's shares and formed a new society. I do not know if he purchased Fergusson and Co.'s shares.

Mr. Henry Holroyd deposed to several documents. Witness was cross-examined by Mr. Prinsep as to the formation of a new Oriental Life Insurance Office, but knew nothing of the society as far as his own knowledge went.

Mr. Gardner was recalled and deposed that there was an agreement between plaintiff and defendants, that the payment of the policies should not prejudice plaintiff's claim of the promissory note.

Mr. T. J. Phillips, examined by the Advocate-General, proved Mr. Calder's hand writing on exhibit G. (the endorsement.)

Cross-examined by Mr. Sandes.—Witness did not know plaintiff was sole proprietor of the Oriental after the failure of the agency houses?

This was the case for the plaintiff.

Mr. Prinsep spoke to a nonsuit, on the ground of a variance in the agreement as set forth in the declaration and the agreement as proved. Secondly no consideration proved to have been given by plaintiff for the note.

But the court thought the grounds were not sufficient to stop the case.

Mr. Prinsep took two grounds for the defence. First that the time in which it was agreed that a special case should be submitted for the decision of the court was suffered to elapse by the plaintiff; and secondly, that plaintiff's only claim to the promissory note endorsed by Mackintosh and Co. was as sole member of the Oriental Life Assurance Society, and therefore the note was liable to the sett off for the amount of the lapsed policies.

Mr. J. G. Garden, examined by Mr. Sandes. Witness was a member of the firm of Mackintosh and Co. who, acted as secretaries to the Oriental till January 1833, the date of their insolvency. Does not recollect the circumstances of the endorsement of the note, to whom it was endorsed, or when it was endorsed. It is in Mr. Calder's handwriting. Knows the note was held by the firm as agents to the Oriental, for a loan to Ferguson and Co. for one lakh of rupees, under the authority of the proprietors. The note went into the hands of the succeeding secretary, as part of the assets of the society. I know it was not delivered over to any one previous to our insolvency. It may have been endorsed before our failure. I infer it was given over to the succeeding secretary. There was a new partnership formed under the style of "the New Oriental, &c." Mr. Turton and Dwarkanath Tagore were members. I have heard plaintiff say he was the last partner in the former Oriental. I was present when the formation of the new Society was discussed. It was agreed that the new Society should be liable for the policies of the old Society for a consideration. All remaining assets of the old Society should belong to Dwarkanath Tagore as the remaining partner of the former firm. I cannot say if Ferguson and Co.'s note remained in the hands of Mr. R. C. Jenkins or of Dwarkanath Tagore, but it was considered part of the assets of the society. Witness attended the Advocate-General's chamber about September 1836, for the purpose of attending a discussion regarding the plaintiff's claim against the late firm of Ferguson and Co. A paper purporting to be a promise by Mr. Macnaghten to refund was produced. Plaintiff, Mr. Macnaghten and Mr. Jenkins were present. I cannot say if Mr. Carr was there. I wrote a memorandum of what passed. Mr. Jenkins also wrote a memorandum. I saw my memorandum last in Mr. Macnaghten's hands; he was then in the room where we met.

Cross-examined by the Advocate-General. The note bears Mackintosh and Co.'s endorsement. It could not have been endorsed after we applied to the Insolvent Court, thought it might have been after we had stopped payment. When we stopped payment, Ferguson and Co. were solvent members of the Oriental.

In reply to the Court. I cannot say that plaintiff was the last surviving member of the Oriental at the time of failure.

In reply to the Advocate-General. Mr. Bruce, Mr. Allan, Mr. Hurry were members of the Oriental at the time we stopped payment.

In reply to Mr. Sandes. Plaintiff informed me that he purchased the remaining members' shares.

Mr. W. F. Ferguson was called, but the Advocate-General objected to his evidence. If the estate of Ferguson and Co. pays sixteen annas in the rupee, witnesses will have a direct interest in the note which is the subject of the present trial.

Mr. J. P. McKilligan, examined by Mr. Prinsep. Plaintiff was a member of the old society and of the new society. Witness remained in the employ of the assignees of Ferguson and Co. till some time in 1836. Remembers the formation of the "New Oriental;" attended one meeting before it was formed, Dwarkanath Tagore was present. He took very little part in the proceedings the state of the society was discussed but he had no distinct recollection of what was said.

Mr. T. Sandes examined by Mr. Prinsep. The witness detailed various meetings with Mr. Judge, when it was intended to bring this forward as a special case. A special case was drawn and sent to counsel on the 27th of April, received back on the 18th of May, some alterations made on the 29th of May, and sent to Mr. Judge, with whom it remained till the 3d of March following. This is the special case. There were two of them, the latter was kept from July 1835 till March 1836. I have Mr. Judge's letters. [Correspondence put in.]

At the conclusion of the defence, the court, without calling on the Advocate-General, gave a verdict against the defendant.—Englishman, March 8

MARCH 8, 1837.

Dwarkanath Tagore vs. Ellis Elliot Macnaghten and Others.

This action, of which we gave a short notice yesterday, was brought by the plaintiff against the Assignees of Messrs. Ferguson and Company, on the following agreement:—

BABOO DWARKANATH TAGORE.

Sir,—If you will consent to Messrs. R. C. Jenkins and Co., as Secretaries to the Oriental Insurance Society, paying to us rs. 24,000, the amount of the policy No. 575, on the life of the Hon'ble Captain P. C. Sinclair, without prejudice to your claim, we hereby agree to refund to you that amount (rs. 24,000) as money had and received to your account, in case the suit which we are now about to begin in the Supreme Court, to try the right of the proprietors of the office to insist upon retaining the same against the defendants of the late firm of Messrs. Ferguson and Co., shall be determined against us, or in case we shall not obtain a decision of the Court in two years from this date; but in such latter case our refunding the amount now received, is not to be considered as affecting, any right to recover in the suit. In the event of our having to refund the amount we consent to pay to you interest at six per cent.

We are, Sir, your most obedient servants,

E. MACNAGHTEN, for self and Co. Assignees of Messrs. Ferguson and Co.'s Estate.

Calcutta, July 4, 1834.

BABOO DWARKANATH TAGORE.

Sir,—With reference to our letter of the 4th of July last, we beg to say, that we consider the arrangement agreed to in it as binding upon us to the extent of the claim in respect to the policies on the lives of James Macnaght and James Smith.

We are, Sir, your most obedient Servants,

E. MACNAGHTEN, for self and Co. Assignees of Messrs. Ferguson and Co.'s Estate.

Calcutta, August 23, 1834.

The policies on the lives of James Macnaght and James Smith were for 60,000 rupees each.

The damages were laid at 200,000 rupees.

The defendants pleaded a set off, and that the plaintiff by various offers and negotiations, had delayed and prevented the defendants from getting a decision in the Court within the two years specified in the agreement,

The plaintiff proved the payment of the money to the defendants in pursuance of the agreement.

The defendants failed wholly in proving their right to set off any debt against the plaintiff, and failed also in proving that the plaintiff delayed them by offers or negotiations, or in any wise hindered them from obtaining a decision as to the right to the money in the Supreme Court, within the two years specified.

The Court gives its verdict somewhat to this effect :—

Mr. Advocate-General ; we don't think it necessary to trouble you to reply.

As to the set off, the debt was due by the plaintiff, if due at all, in conjunction with the other partners of the old and new Oriental. As to the delay in obtaining a decision in this Court, on the subject, we don't think it was such as to support the plea ; the defendants, if dissatisfied with the course things were taking, and with the difficulties which presented themselves as to settling the question, and the terms on which it was to be tried in this Court, had nothing to do, but to give the plaintiff notice, that they would proceed with their remedy in Court. They have not done so, the period agreed upon by them for refunding has elapsed, the conditions of their agreement have not been performed, and the plaintiff must have a verdict, and by this decision the defendants are put in no worse position, than when they obtained the money, — nothing therefore happens in consequence, not perfectly consistent with justice. Verdict for plaintiff, for 75,000 Rs. with interest, &c.

The Chief Justice still continues indisposed.

Mr. J. Grant and J. Malkin sat to-day, and disposed off six or eight cases in the plea Sitting Board.

To-morrow being Equity day, the Court will hear arguments, &c.—Hurkaru, March 9.

MARCH 9, 1837.

We understand that the Chief Justice came this-day to Chambers, but the learned Judge did not appear in Court. Mr. J. Grant and Mr. J. Malkin sat and took contested motions.

MUTTY CHUND versus BABOO JANOEKY DOSS.

Mr. Prinsep applied in this case to have Mr. Dickens, the Registrar, appointed to act as Master in this case, and to take the account between the parties in place of Mr. Dobbs, the present Master, that gentleman having acted all along as Counsel in the cause. Mr. Prinsep addressed the Court at great length ; in the course of his argument the learned Counsel contended, that the Court could appoint a person to act as Master, in the event of any gentleman filling the office of Master being compelled to leave India on account of sickness ; upon which we understood Mr. Justice Malkin to state, that no person who was an officer of Court could go out of the jurisdiction, without ceasing ipso facto to be an officer of the Court.*

Mr. Justice Grant.—I had always heard from learned persons, in a position to make the statement, that a Counsel become Judge, has always a leaning against his own clients, and that from the fact in the event of the case being enveloped in any degree of doubt or difficulty, that his original bias of mind acquired as Counsel, might turn the scale against those parties not his clients when Counsel.

The learned Judge then proceeded to refuse the motion, and stated that he thought it necessary to designate it as an exceedingly indiscreet motion. We understood him to say also, that a Judge who refuses to entertain a cause in which he has acted as Counsel, does so from mere matter of feeling on his part ; where the case could be decided without him, and no injustice, or denial of justice, would happen to the parties, in consequence of his refusal to act, it would be as well perhaps for him to refuse to act ; but that he, Mr. Justice Grant, felt assured that the refraining from acting in the case above stated, was enjoined neither by the principles of morality nor of law. In old times, when Judges were removed from party motives, and replaced when better times succeeded, the persons so removed descended again into the ranks of the bar, practised, and on their re-appointment entertained, and decided in the various causes without any such objections occurring or being started. Mr. Prinsep's application was rejected.†

GOOROODOSS MOSENDAR v. RAMNARAIN DATT.

Mr. Marnell, moved in this case, for substitution of service of process of the Court, by leaving the process at the house of the defendant. The affidavit stated, that enquiry had been made at the house, and the defendant had been known to live there, but had since absconded, and gone, the deponents did not know where.

This application was refused,

Mr. Justice Grant observing, that the affidavit was insufficient ; that substitution of service, was only permitted, when strict search had been made, and when the circumstances detailed in the affidavit, led the Court to believe, that the defendants purposely, and contumaciously kept out of the way.

THOMAS HOLROYD, ASSIGNEE OF CRUTTENDEN AND CO. v. THOMAS CAPE, JAMES MACKILLOP, AND MACKILLOP AND CO.

The Advocate-General, with whom were Mr. Clarke and Mr. Leith, moved in this case, to stay the proceedings of the defendant, Cape, the plaintiff in an action of ejectment, from proceeding further in his action at law until the decree could be had, in the above equity suit. The application was for a special injunction supported by affidavit. The bill of the complainants, the applicants in the present motion, prayed for a discovery, relief, and the writ of injunction now moved for. The Advocate-General, Mr. Clarke, and Mr. Leith, addressed the Court at considerable length, and detailed the facts on which the application was founded. The bill also charged fraud in Cape, and the other defendants, and prayed a discovery upon oath, in order to enable the defendant in the action at law to make good his defence.

* According to this doctrine, the present Chief Justice has ceased to be Chief Justice. If the returns have been made of salary received by the Chief Justice, and the other Justices, as the salaries of officers of Court. If it have been decided in Parliament, that Judges are officers of Court. Query, did not the present Chief Justice resign his office, or virtually cease to be Chief Justice, when he left India for the Cape—the Cape being out of the Jurisdiction ?!!!

Printer's Devil ?

† We have been favoured by a learned correspondent with the following observations upon the above motion of Mr. Prinsep : in Enchiridion fut un Pape, et avait comme grand Fœt, et dixit Cardinalibus suis ; judicate me, et dixerunt non possumus judicare te quia Papae's et caput ecclesiae judicate te ipsum, et judicare it se cremari, et crematus fuit, et après fut un Saint." The English of which is, we believe, that when the learned do justice on themselves they become Sainted in the other world, and lauded in this.

The facts, as we gathered them from the learned Counsel in the progress of their several addresses to the Court, were shortly these.

In the year 1820, or 1821, Mackillop and Co. lent to a Mr. Taylor, the sum of three lakhs of rupees with which Taylor purchased the premises in Loll Bazar, now occupied by Jenkins and Low, two adjoining premises, and the house in Tank Square, now occupied by the Bengal Club. Taylor then deposits with Mackillop and Co. the title deeds of this property so purchased, and draws a bill upon Major Cape, his father-in-law, for 30,000 pounds sterling, and then departs for Europe, leaving in the hands of the Firm of Cruttenden and Mackillop, a power of attorney to execute a mortgage to Cape of the premises in the event of Major Cape paying the Bill for £30,000, and requiring from Taylor security for re-payment. Major Cape was the father-in-law of Taylor. On the 18th of February 1822, James Mackillop of the House of Cruttenden and Co. writes to his correspondents, Palmer, Mackillop and Co., to advise Major Cape of the whole transaction. Major Cape pays the £30,000, and allows the title deeds of the property to remain in the hands of Cruttenden, Mackillop and Co. until 1827, in the mean time Taylor returns to Calcutta and having occasion for money, borrows of Mackillop and Co. the sum of four lakhs of rupees, stating to the firm that he had given to Major Cape his father-in-law, other security in England for the £30,000 he had lent to Taylor, in payment of the first loan of 3 lakhs, the purchase money of the properties in Loll Bazar and Tank Square, Cruttenden and Co. lent the four lakhs to Taylor, taking as a security a mortgage in fee, of these premises; but as they then considered themselves as attorneys for Major Cape, under the power given them by Taylor, in 1822, they, until the story of Taylor was corroborated by Major Cape, took as farther security for the second loan, a quantity of indigo belonging to Taylor. The firm, therefore, considered themselves as mortgagees in fee of this property in question, and in 1825, they received a letter from Cape, in which he stated that he discharged them from executing as Taylor's attorneys, a mortgage on his account, and admitted that Taylor had given him other security, confirming the statement of Taylor in this matter, in all points. Under these circumstances, Cruttenden and Co. considered themselves as sole mortgagees in fee of this property in Calcutta, that is of the premises in Loll Bazar and in Tank Square, and Mr. Holroyd, as their assignee, now files his bill for discovery, relief and injunction to stay the defendant Cape, from proceeding in his action of ejectment at law, for the recovery of these very premises. The title set up by Major Cape, being a mortgage of these premises, effected to him in England previously to 1824, the period when the claim of Cruttenden and Co. arose, in virtue of the mortgage to them by Taylor, as a security, for the 4 lakhs lent to Mr. Taylor by that house, the complainant, Mr. Holroyd, makes his affidavit that he cannot make a good defence to the action at law, unless Cape puts in his answer, and makes a full discovery of all the facts in connection with the transactions of the loan of the £30,000, and his alleged security and mortgage for repayment of the same by Taylor.—Cases were cited to show that under the circumstances Mr. Holroyd was entitled to an injunction, and that the affidavit of facts founded on the bill, disclosed sufficient equities to induce the Court to restrain the defendant Cape from proceeding in his action at law, for the recovery of the premises mortgaged in 1824 to Cruttenden and Co.

Mr. Grant for the defendant Cape contended, at great length, that there was no ground disclosed by complainant to entitle him to discovery, or relief in equity, and that the facts disclosed, on the affidavit of

Mr. Leighton, were insufficient. The learned Counsel, wanted to put in affidavits contradictory of the complainant's affidavits, and explanatory of the facts. The affidavits of Mr. Grant were rejected by the Court, on the authority of Jones P. 8—Vezey 46, and of another case in 19 Vezey P. 83. Mr. Grant contended that the defendants in the action at law, could get any evidence they might want, under a commission, directed to England, to examine the witnesses who were resident there in the absence of which the complainant in this suit partly founded his application.

The Advocate-General in reply, as we understood, stated that Mr. Mackillop, was a necessary party to the mortgage in 1824, and therefore a necessary party to this bill, also Mr. Cullen, and that therefore Mr. Holroyd could not examine them under a commission, they being interested in the event of the suit, and that therefore the present bill, and proceedings, were necessary to enable him to make his defence. The learned Advocate continued his address at very considerable length. The Court rose at a quarter to 6 o'clock! and took time to consider of the application.—Hurkaru, March 10.

12TH MARCH, 1837.

JOY DEPAUL BYRACK, VERSUS RAMONAUTH BYSACK.

The Chief Justice delivered the judgment of the Court in this case. The decision was supposed to involve and decide the important question of the claim to 5 per cent. commission on estates of Hindoo executors. The case came on, and was argued on exceptions to the Master's report; two reports had been made by two ecclesiastical Registrars, as to the practice on the point, in the three Courts at Bombay, Madras, and Calcutta; and great delays had arisen, in consequence of the difficulty in obtaining these reports. It appeared, however, after all, that the point argued at the bar, turned on the 6th exception; and that had been argued as if it went only to the separate estate of the complainant, when in point of fact, the point was argued on both sides, as if the joint and separate estate were included in the exception: all that could be determined at present, was therefore, that the exception must be dismissed, and the point as to the right of Hindoo Executors to commission, will, we presume, be determined when the cause shall come to decree.

JONOKY DOSS, VERSUS HONGWAUN DOSS.

In this case, issues were directed on the first and second exceptions.

IN THE GOODS OF CAPTAIN OAKLEY, DECEASED.

The Advocate-General moved for administration, or probate, we did not catch which, to Messrs. Cokerell and Co., the constituted attorneys of the Executors or administrators in England. The question here was whether the powers of attorneys to Messrs. Cokerell were only executed. They bore the notorial seal of some London notary, and were attested under the new Act of the 5th and 6th, William the 4th, c. 62, for dispensing with oaths before Justices of the peace, Lord Mayors, Public Notaries, &c., and substituting solemn declarations in lieu of them. The Court took time to consider of the sufficiency of the power of attorney.

MARCH 13, 1837.

IN THE GOODS OF CAPTAIN D'O'LY, OF THE ARTILLERY, DECEASED.

Mr. Prinsep moved for a probate to be granted to John Currie, Esq., of the Howrah Docks, in the goods of Captain D'O'ly, of the artillery. The learned counsel stated, that he had heard and believed, that Captain D'Oyly had been wrecked in Torrie's Straits, in the bark Charles Eaton, on the 15th of August, 1834, and that the whole crew and passengers of the vessel, excepting Capt. D'Oyly's son, and another lad named Ireland, had been murdered by savages; and that the insurance on the vessel had been paid. Captain D'Oyly, on his departure in the Charles Eaton, requested his will under direction to John Currie, Esq., to be opened and acted upon, only in the event of his not returning from his voyage, or certain intelligence being received of his death. The John Currie mentioned in the will, was the person who now applied for a probate. Probate granted.

ROOTS versus COCKERELL.

The Advocate-General moved, under the liberty reserved to him, to set aside the verdict and enter a nonsuit.

The Chief Justice granted a rule nisi, and said, that the point made by plaintiff, upon which the rule was granted, was that the plaintiff had no exclusive right of possession upon which he could maintain his action of trespass.

ROOTS versus COCKERELL.

Mr. Prinsep moved in the same case, for a new trial, on the ground that there was misdirection, and that more damages were proved in evidence, than were gained by the plaintiff.

The Chief Justice, granted a rule to shew cause, first on the ground of misdirection as to the indigo; and, secondly, for insufficiency of damages; and directed both rules to be brought before the Court together.

We will give a full report when the case comes on for argument, which will be in four days.—riturkaru, March 14.

ROOTS v. COCKERELL AND OTHERS.

The Advocate-General, by permission of the court, moved for a rule to set aside the verdict and enter up a nonsuit. He briefly laid before the court the grounds on which he moved. Their lordships would remember at the trial his learned friend, Mr. Prinsep, endeavoured to show that two particular letters, part of the correspondence between Cockerell and Co. and Mr. Roots, constituted a lease, whereas he, the learned counsel, contended, that the plaintiff was at the factory only as a servant of Cockerell and Co. or of Mr. Cockerell, the administrator of Rose deceased. If he remembered correctly, the court concurred in neither of the views taken by himself or his learned friend, but put the rights of Roots on something which he derived from his wife,—that Mrs. Roots had an interest in the property, by virtue of which interest the plaintiff had sufficient authority to maintain his action of trespass. Now if the plaintiff had this right one would have thought that he would have been aware of it. He, the learned counsel, was not about to say that counsel were able to judge of the particular rights of parties to a cause as well as the court who tried it, but he conceived that neither the court or counsel were so good a judge of what Roots thought was his situation as was Roots himself. That Roots never imagined that he derived any right to possession in virtue of Mrs. Roots's interest, may be gathered from the opening address of his learned friend, in which no claim was attempted to be set up on that ground, but in which he relied solely on a lease. That Mr. Roots did not look on the letters as constituting a lease appeared from the evidence, for what witness said any thing as to a lease? A person named Clarke, deposed that in the letter written on the 1st of September, it was stated that the relative position of plaintiff and defendant were to be those of agent and constituent. On the letter being put into his hand, indeed, he acknowledged that it did not contain anything that could authorize the assertion; and that he must have first heard it from Roots himself. Now it often happened that parties themselves knew their relative situations very accurately, when lookers on were much puzzled to make them out. Their lordships had heard of a comedy wherein the servant and master were continually changing places, where Archer was sometimes the master and sometimes servant of Aimwell, and Aimwell sometimes the master and sometimes the servant of Archer, and the audience might be often puzzled to know which was the master and which the servant, but Aimwell and Archer knew their relative positions right well, and neither of them was at any time the master or servant of the other for they were friends: now what thought the parties here of their relative situations? On the former occasion he had troubled the court with much of the correspondence that passed between the plaintiff and defendants referring to Mr. Roots's position previous and subsequent to the time when the alleged agreement was made. It was not necessary to refer to the whole of that correspondence now, for it was quite clear if Roots had possession in right of his wife at all, he must have had possession in virtue of that right from the day that he married her, and therefore, a letter of one date was as good as that of any other for his purpose. [Here the learned counsel referred to the plaintiff's letter of the 14th July, which after noticing several circumstances relative to his domestic circumstances, asked on what footing he was to consider himself at the factory.] In answer to which Mr. Cockerell, who had never dreamt of the right of Mrs. Roots, says, "you must consider yourself as principal manager." In another letter dated 15th August 1834, their lordships would find what was the lady's opinion regarding her own right. It contained an admission that Mr. Cockerell had a right to turn the plaintiff out of the factory if he thought proper to use it. If then Mr. Roots had any right it was evident that he was profoundly ignorant of it. He would not trouble the court with any more extracts. It appeared clearly to him that Roots had rested his claim to possession on the two letters, of 1st and 8th September, and he would like to know what there is in them upon which any court could decree a specific performance? Another point on which his learned friend laid much stress at the trial, was the arrest by Cockerell and Co. of the plaintiff, and with reference to this much had been said regarding the oppressive conduct of the firm. This was neither the time nor the place to refute the assertion of oppressive conduct,—another time would be granted him, and that too at no distant period, when unless he erred greatly in the expectation which he had of the manner on which his learned friend would treat these matters when he came to shew the cause, he would have as good an opportunity as he could wish to enlarge upon and reply to all that his learned friend's zeal, urged upon the matter of oppression. But perhaps on this occasion their lordships would forgive him if he departed for a moment from the rule which he had laid down for himself to follow,—that of keeping strictly to the point of law. The court would remember that it was in evidence that Roots had sold indigo seed to the amount of some thousand rupees, which Cockerell and Co. had sent him to sow upon the lands of the factory, and that it was for the price of this seed, which Roots had unwarrantably appropriated to himself, that Cockerell and Co. arrested him on his bond. The court would remember that it had been proved a sum of Rs. 4,500 was due from Mrs. Rose to Cockerell and Co. Now when Roots married her that debt became his debt; and here he asked, if Cockerell and Co.'s object had been to oppress the plaintiff, what would have been more easy than for them then to have added this debt to the other, and by this means to have kept him in confinement? But it is said he was to possession in right of his wife! Let us see whether this lady had the right or not, because he took it for granted, that Mr. Roots had acquired no right but that formerly held by his wife.

Mr. Justice Grant.—You say a sum of Rs. 4,500 was due from Mrs. Roots to Cockerell and Co. How do we know that?

Mr. Advocate-General.—My lords, we were told over and over again of it at the trial. My friend, indeed, argued that nothing could be due from Mrs. Roots if she were only a servant, but he did not deny that she had misapplied money sent by the firm for the purposes of the factory; and I imagine that a servant who appropriates to her own use money entrusted to her for her master's use, incurs a debt to him by such misappropriation. Now as to any rights which she might have to the property, I say they were contingent on the payment of the debt and on her share of the residue being allotted to her. But this is not sufficient to enable her to maintain an action for trespass, and if not sufficient for her, it is not sufficient for another who claims through her. At the trial I was asked by one of your lordships, what motive there was to induce Roots to live more as a servant at the factory. To this I answer now, as indeed I ought to have answered then, that Root having married the widow of Rose, had a contingent interest in the factory on payment of the debts for which it is first of all liable, and thus had an interest in having the debts paid out of the profits of the factory. As to Mrs. Roots's right, is the property real or personal? I presume it is either one or the other. It can hardly be considered a chattel real; but be that as it may, it has nothing to do with her right except when accompanied by possession. Admitting that it is a chattel real, her right would have been to one-third, subject to the payment of debts. That would have been her dower after dower assigned, subject to the payment of debts I think, but of that there may exist a doubt; however the dower must have been assigned.

Chief Justice.—You see, Mr. Advocate, you mistake the grounds on which the court gave judgment. I said Mrs. Roots's interest came to the plaintiff to a certain extent,—that he had possession by an agreement with Cockerell, and that under all the circumstances of the agreement he was enabled to maintain his exclusive possession.

Mr. Advocate-General.—Agreement! I can find no agreement my lords.

Chief Justice.—But that was the question we had to consider.

Mr. Grant.—I have a note of what fell from your lordship when giving the decision of the court. Your lordship—

Chief Justice.—I have a very full note of what I said Mr. Grant. [And here his lordship referred to and read it.]

Mr. Justice Malkin concurred entirely with the note by the Chief Justice.

Mr. Advocate General.—The evidence was that Roots was to remain at the factory as manager.

Mr. Justice Grant.—Not so, Mr. Advocate-General. There was evidence of an agreement between the two parties, and as security Roots gave a bond. The plaintiff was, for a valuable consideration, in possession of the property under a contract from Cockerell and Co.

Mr. Advocate-General.—Then, my lords, it must have been a lease, but, certainly I understood the court to find that there was no lease. And if there was no lease, I do not see how he could maintain an action for trespass. I will trouble the court with a passage from an authority—a text book it is true,—and one which some have called an elemental book,—but of which a great judge once said to me, “if upon any point you read Blackstone, and follow up his references you will not go wrong.” The learned counsel then read the following from Blackstone's Commentaries, vol. 3, c. 9, of Trespass:—

“Trespass signifies no more than an entry on another man's ground without a lawful authority, and doing some damage however inconsiderable to his real property. For the right of meum and teum or property in lands being ever established, it follows as a necessary consequence that this right must be exclusive—that is that the owner may retain to himself the sole use and occupation of his soil. Every entry therefore thereon, without the owner's leave and especially if contrary to his express order is a trespass, or transgression. One must have a property either absolute or temporary in the soil, and actual possession by entry to be able to maintain an action of trespass.”

Now if there did exist an agreement for a year, it is clear that it did not exclude Mr. Cockerell from entering on his own soil, for it is not pretended that Roots had exclusive possession. Your lordships will remember that when Mr. Lethbridge was sent up to the factory to look at the state of the lands and to inspect the books, Roots produced the latter immediately and never questioned the defendant's right to examine them, or to go upon the lands for the purpose of reporting on the state in which they were. That Roots had not exclusive possession I think I need not argue. The evidence is directly the contrary. Now, the learned counsel put it to the sense of the court, whether Mr. Cockerell ever invested the plaintiff with such a power as might exclude himself. Their lordships would remember, as far as Mrs. Roots's rights went, the lady desired Mr. Cockerell to take possession and to permit her to carry the factory on. All her letters, all the correspondence of Roots, appear to consider the writers as the mere servants of Cockerell and Co.—that they stood in the character of servants, and the only question is whether they were servants removal at pleasure. My argument is that if Roots had possession at all he had it only as a servant; but whatever possession he had, it is quite evident he never had exclusive possession, and quite certain that without exclusive possession he cannot maintain this action of trespass.

The Chief Justice, after consulting with the other judges, said, under all the circumstances of the case, we are disposed to grant this rule.

Roots v. Cockerell and others.

Mr. Prinsep moved for a new trial, on the ground (not a very common one in this court, said the learned counsel) of a misdirection of the judge. The Chief Justice in giving the decision of the court had stated that there were no special damages laid whereas in fact the Indigo was laid, and which after deducting the share of the native who held one third of the factory would leave to the plaintiff Rs. 10,000.

Chief Justice.—You may take your rule.

Mr. Prinsep.—But, my lords, we have another ground. Since the trial of this cause the plaintiff, being informed that an account current filed in your lordship's court by Mr. Cockerell as administrator to the estate of Rose deceased, contained items important to his case, he has inspected the mortgage deed, executed by Rose and his wife, which was put in as an exhibit by the defendants at the trial, and on examination of the account current he has found that in March 1833 the mortgage and interest were fully paid to Cockerell and Co. by Mr. Cockerell as administrator of Rose deceased. Now when the mortgage had been put in as evidence, and it turned out to have been paid in full, the learned counsel could not but think that it must have weighed in the same interest with Joymoney Dossee, the complainant.

Chief Justice.—Take your rule and let both motions come on at the same time.

MARCH 14, 1837.

CRIMINAL INFORMATION.

Mr. Advocate-General moved for a rule nisi calling on Charles Thackeray, Esq., barrister at law, to shew cause why a criminal information should not be filed against him, for writing two letters addressed to Mr. W. D. Shaw, one of the attorneys of the court, with an intention to provoke him, Mr. W. D. Shaw, to commit a breach of the peace. The learned counsel put in an affidavit sworn by Mr. Shaw, which set forth, in substance, that he was employed by a party to recover an amount of Rs. 300 due by Mr. Thackeray, on a promissory note drawn several years ago; that deponent sent the usual letter of demand, in reply to which Mr. Thackeray denounced the deponent's conduct as unbecoming the character of a gentleman and disgraceful to the legal profession, stating amongst other things, that if deponent so attempted to impose on a member of the bar, who is acquainted with the bearings of legal questions, there could but be little doubt as to his general practice when the ignorant and unwary were his clients, &c., &c., &c.

The Court, after reading the affidavit and the letters appended thereto, made the order nisi, expressing a hope that the friends of the parties would endeavour to effect a reconciliation, and prevent the necessity of further proceedings in this matter.

Mr. Advocate-General said, that one of the members of the bar had used his best endeavours in order to induce the party to withdraw the letters which formed the ground of this application, and thus supersede the necessity of this proceeding. He regretted much that gentleman's efforts had been ineffectual.

The Court remarked that possibly when the party was aware of this application, and the grounds on which it was made, he would be disposed to listen to the suggestions of his friends.—Englishman, March 15.

MARCH 15, 1837.

JOYMONEY DOSSEE V. SEEBOOSONDERY DOSSEE, and others.

This cause came on, on further directions upon the finding of certain issues which had been directed by the Court.

The question argued, and which occupied the court from the time of sitting up to past 5 o'clock, was whether Collycoomar Mullick could, according to Hindoo Law, be adopted by Joymoney, in pursuance of a direction given to her to that effect by her deceased husband, the Rajah Sibchunder Roy.

The points put forward against the adoption on the part of the defendant Seeboosondery Dossee, the other and younger widow of the Rajah, were: 1st, that Collycoomar being an only son, could not, according to Hindoo law, be given, or received in adoption.

And 2ndly, that he could not be given in adoption, because the ceremony of Tonsoc had been performed on him by his own father. The case was argued by Mr. Clarke, Mr. Osborne, and Mr. Nott for the defendant Seeboosondery.

By the Advocate-General.—Mr. Prinsep, Mr. Leith, and Mr. Grant for Joymoney.

And by Mr. Cochrane, for the defendants Collycoomar, and his mother Hurroosondery Dossee, who were in the same interest with Joymoney Dossee, the complainant.

The Court took time to consider.

MARCH 16, 1837.

IN EQUITY.

RADAMODUS BONNERGEE versus OMACHURN BONNERGEE.

Mr. Advocate General moves for Omachurn Bonnergee, the complainant, for an injunction to stay proceedings in an action at law, in which the defendant in Equity was plaintiff and the present complainant's defendant at law, and for a receiver.

Mr. Prinsep for Radamadub Bonnergee, consented to the injunction, and to the appointment of a receiver, the complainant undertaking to speed the account.

versus WOMERCHUNDER PAUL CROWDRY.

Mr. Prinsep obtained an order nisi against defendant for a contempt of court in resisting and tearing its process, when attempted to be served on him.

Order nisi granted.

ECCLESIASTICAL SIDE.

IN THE GOODS OF JULIA GREGORIE, DECEASED.

Mr. Advocate-General moved for administration with the will annexed to the Ecclesiastical Registrar. The question was whether the acts of the Testatrix amounted to a revocation of the will in question. It appeared by the affidavit of one Turner, that the Testatrix gave him instructions to have another will prepared, and then intimated her intention to, and was about to destroy the will, on which probate was now sought, but was prevented by Turner, who wanted it, as a guide to him, in describing in the new will the real property to be devised; the testatrix then restored the will to him, but ordered him to destroy it when he had done with it, and Turner believed he had destroyed the will which now turns up. The new will was never executed.

The Court directed Counsel to search for precedents as the case was new.

PLEA SIDE.

JOHN WALLACE ALEXANDER, ASSIGNER OF NAT. ALEXANDER, ESQ., LATE SHERIFF, versus RAMNARAIN MOOKERJEE AND OTHERS.

Mr. Prinsep moved for a new trial.

The question was, whether the assignee of a Sheriff, can bring his action against the person who acted as his banyan during the shrevality.

The plaintiff was nonsuited, on the ground that at the trial he failed in proving that the money sought to be recovered was in the hands of the banyan, and received by him, as fees and poundage.

A new trial was now proved for a new trial on technical grounds, on the ground that the Sheriff, though insolvent, should have brought the action in his own person. Rule refused.—Hurkurn, March 17.

MARCH 17, 1837.

IN EQUITY.

GOVERDHONE DOSS V. BULRAM DOSS AND JUGENNATH DOSS.

This cause came on, on further directions, on the finding of certain issues directed by the Court in favour of the defendants.

The Court dismissed the bill, each party paying his own costs.

For complainant Mr. Prinsep and Mr. Leith.

For defendant the Advocate-General and Mr. Clarke.

SARASWATTY SANKARASOONDARY DOSSETT, WIDOW OF JUGOOL-MOHOR BISWAS v. KISHUNUNDO BISWAS.

This was a suit by the widow, the complainant, for maintenance against her step-son the defendant, and for 36½ gold-mohurs lent by her to her step-son, the defendant, the said sum of gold-mohurs belonging to the widow as stridhun. The cause came on, on bill answer and evidence on both sides.

After hearing Mr. Advocate-General and Mr. Osborne, for the complainant, and Mr. Clarke and Mr. Nott, for the defendant,

The Court recommended a reference to Mr. Dickens to determine, what sum by way of maintenance the widow was entitled to, and as to the loan of the gold-mohurs to the defendant.

ASSIGNEES OF FERGUSON AND CO. v. ADAM MAXWELL.

This was an appeal from the decision of the judge of Cawnpore, Mr. Robert Neave, to this Court, being the first and the last appeal, under the section of the Act of Parliament, now repealed by the Black Act. The Court heard Mr. Advocate-General and Mr. Prinsep for the appellants; Mr. Clarke, Mr. Leith and Mr. Grant for the respondents.

The argument lasted all day. We will give a report to-morrow.—Ibid, March 18.

The case of the Assignees of Ferguson and Co. vs. Adam Maxwell, which was argued in the Supreme Court on Friday last, and of which we promised a report, is of interest in so far only as it is the first and the last of those appeals, under the Section of the Act of Parliament, now repealed by the Black Act. The facts of the case are shortly these:—In October 1832, a Mr. Adam Maxwell, an East Indian, and who could therefore hold lands in this country, being possessed of four indigo factories, assigned them over to Messrs. Burnett and Co. by deed, the conditions of which were amongst other things, that Burnett and Co. should pay Maxwell blank rupees a year, so long as he remained in India, and two thousand pounds sterling per annum, so long as he should reside in England, whether he, at the time of entering into the agreement, contemplated proceeding. In 1827 Burnett and Company failed, and were unable to pay; and according to the terms of the agreement, it was contended by the Advocate-General that Maxwell ought to have resumed possession of the villages. But on the failure of Burnett and Co., Ferguson and Co., to whom they were largely indebted, took possession of the factories, and villages, and paid on account of Government jumma 30,000 Rs. Maxwell on his return from England brought his action in the Zillah Court for a specific sum of 64,000 Rs., and interest; and by the decree of the Court he was declared entitled to the specific sum of 64,000 Rs. and 30,000 Rs. interest, making a sum of 94,000. Against this decree the appeal is made, and it was contended by the counsel for the appellants—1st, that Maxwell had no remedy at law; that he should not have brought his action for a specific sum, but should have asked for account, of what had come to the hand of Ferguson and Co. during their management; and also that he should have allowed a set off, of all sums paid and expended by them on the property, and amongst other sums that of 30,000 Rs. paid by them for Government revenue arrears, without which payment Maxwell's interest in the property would have been lost. It was also contended, that the decree was bad, inasmuch as the Judge had awarded Maxwell a specific sum without having any proof before him to warrant his decision on this point.

Mr. Clarke for the respondent first took a preliminary objection to this effect, that all the proceedings of the Court below had not been translated, and that subsequently the Court of Appeal was called on to reverse proceedings not before them.

The Chief Justice said, that if Mr. Clark persisted in his objection, the case must stand over, and that he might insist upon the transaction of any of the papers, and that appellant must pay the costs of the day. But that if when the case came on again, it should appear that the papers translated were not material, then Mr. Clarke's client, would have to pay all the expenses consequent upon the delay.

Mr. Clarke abandoned his objection, and then argued his case, at great length, and with much ability. We understood him to contend, that the objection to the decree, on the ground of want of evidence on the facts decided, was cured, by the admissions of the appellants on their own pleas, and that an account was unnecessary, for Ferguson and Co.'s claim and right in the premises, was merely that of their debtors Burnett and Co., whereas Maxwell claimed upon an agreement, which was binding on Burnett and Co. had they been in possession, and which therefore was binding on Ferguson and Co. Had Burnett and Co. been in possession, he could have sued them for the specific sum of 64,000 Rs. with interest, he could therefore equally sue those who stood in their shoes.

The Court reversed the decree, stating that the Zillah Court might perhaps be right in its decision, only it did not appear upon what evidence or facts the decree was founded. We understood the Court of Appeal to observe, that the alleged admissions in the appellants' pleas, did not go the length contended by the Counsel for the respondents and that it was absolutely necessary to send the case back to the Zillah Court, in order that an account might be taken of what was due and owing to and by the parties in the cause.—Hurkur, March 20.

MARCH 20, 1837.

The Court sat at eleven and took contested motions. Up to the time we left, about 3 o'clock, no motion of any general or public interest was heard with the exception of an application made by Mr. Leith, for a certiorari to remove the proceedings of the Commissioners of the Petty Court, on the ground that one of these Sotons, had given a judgment in favor of a plaintiff, against a defendant, who was responsible to said plaintiff, neither in law, equity, nor in good conscience, the defendant being only a servant in the employ of a certain firm, against which firm, and not against the defendant, the right of action, if any, could be by any one, but a Petty Court Commissioner, be held to exist.—Ibid.

MARCH 21, 1837.

MILLS v. MATHESON AND CO.

This was an action on the money counts, to recover from the defendants as agents of the plaintiff with whom he had an account, the sum of 2,500 rupees.

Mr. Barwell opened the pleadings.

The Advocate-General stated the case. Mr. Robert Lyall was Executor of the plaintiff's father, who by his will left his son a considerable sum of money. The son opened an account with the firm, and had received from them all the money he was entitled to under the will, excepting the sum of 2,500 rupees. The defendants refused to pay him this sum, on the ground that the Executors of a Captain Webster, had some claim against plaintiff's father's estate; and they being agents only of the plaintiff, retained this money to meet this claim when it should be substantiated.

Mr. Wight, of Mackenzie, Lyall and Co.'s, proved the plaintiff's case.

Mr. Prinsep, with whom was Mr. Clarke and Mr. Leith for defendants, stated, that Mills, the father, was executor of Webster, and Mr. David Andrews, was his co-executor: Mr. David Andrews was also executor, with Mr. Robert Lyall, of the estate of old Mr. Mills. There appeared in the accounts of Webster's estate, signed by old Mills, a sum of 10,000 rupees in Company's paper, and an agreement was set up, by which the plaintiff, on receiving the sum due to him on account of his father's estate, agreed that Robert Lyall, or Lyall, Matheson and Co., should retain 15,000 rs. in their hands for 12 months, to meet any payments or demands which should be made against the estate of old Mills; and the case of the defendants was, that a demand was made against the estate of old Mills for 10,000 rupees, one-fourth of which the plaintiff was liable for, he having a right as legatee to one-fourth of his father's estate, and that this demand was made by Mr. David Andrews, the executor of Webster.

The case on the part of the defendants broke down, and the Chief Justice stated there must be a verdict for the plaintiff. The only defence was in the covenant opened by M. Prinsep, and the conditions precedent constituting the important portions of that covenant are wholly unproved. The Court stated that if all the conditions could be proved, Robert Lyall, the Executor, might have an ulterior remedy by bill in Equity.

Verdict for plaintiff for 2,500 rupees with interest from 1st May, 1836.—Ibid, March 22.

NOBINCUNDER GOSAYN v. ISSERCHUNDER GOSAYN and others.

Mr. Advocate-General and Mr. Prinsep for plaintiffs.

Mr. Clarke and Mr. Leith for defendants.

This was an action of trespass, and for carrying away the plaintiff's goods. The plaintiff was the adopted son of a Gossayn, a sort of religious professor and teacher. The Gossayn died leaving a widow, to whom he gave a direction to adopt. She did adopt the plaintiff, and subsequently took him to Dacca, and other places, to introduce him to his father's disciples, who were very numerous; whilst absent, the defendants broke open and entered the house in Calcutta, which was in the possession of the plaintiff, and which descended to him, in virtue of his adoption, and took and carried away sundry jewels, and other property belonging to the plaintiff.

The case set up for the defence was, that the present plaintiff was never in point of fact adopted; and that the defendants acted under a power of attorney from the widow, as her mooktears, and that therefore this was no trespass.

The Court, however, believed the case of the plaintiff, and gave their verdict accordingly for plaintiff.

WALLIS versus TOOMAN.

This was an action for goods sold and delivered.

The Advocate General and Mr. Barwell for Plaintiff, stated plaintiff was a tailor, and the action was brought for clothes supplied to defendant.

Verdict for plaintiff, damages 609 Rs.

JACKSON versus GOLLAUM GOUS.

This was an action by Dr. Jackson, the owner of the Durrumtollah Bazaar, against the defendant, a beef butcher, for breach of contract.

The defendant, about two years ago, left the Teratta Bazaar, and went to sell meat at the Durrumtollah Market, receiving, as the consideration for his deserting the cause of Moothoornauth Mullick, and going over to the Jackson faction, the sum of 500 Rs., made payable at the end of 3 years without interest: the condition being that he should occupy a meat stall in the Durrumtollah market, and sell meat there, paying 4 pice daily for the rent of his stall.

The defendant went back to the Teratta Bazaar shortly after entering into this agreement, and Doctor Jackson in consequence has brought his action against him about every 6 months.

The present action is the Fifth!

Mr. Clarke and Mr. Leith for the persecution.

Mr. Advocate-General for the defendant, who stated that it was supposed that Moothoornauth Mullick paid the defendant's expenses in these actions. Such was not the case, in proof of which, the costs of the 4 preceding actions, and of this last, had completely ruined the poor man, and that from his present circumstances this would certainly be the last action. The learned counsel took two or three very ingenious points for poor Gollam Ghouse.

Chief Justice. There must be a verdict for the plaintiff with damages: the damages are the interest on the 500 Rs. and the 4 pice a day from November last. As to costs—this is the 5th action, it certainly is the defendant's fault that he has not fulfilled his contract, but the plaintiff can now obtain little or no benefit from the fulfilment of this contract, inasmuch as the period terminates in November next; but the costs of all these actions must amount to much more than the 500 Rs. he originally received, and though the verdict must be for the plaintiff, yet, all circumstances considered, we think he is not entitled to have his costs from the defendant: each party, therefore, must pay his own costs.—Hurkaru, March 23.

MARCH 22, 1837.

HURRISCHUNDER SAHA versus GEORGE GORDON Mc-PHERSON.

The Advocate-General applied on behalf of the Defendants to postpone this trial until the last day of the Sittings, on account of the absence of the witnesses. The Court granted the order, on condition of giving judgment as of the term.

The Advocate-General stated, that it had been suggested to him, that the Plaintiff was out of time, to get judgment, as Term ended on Tuesday and the Court would not sit on Friday.

The Chief Justice, We stated yesterday, that the Court would take Common Law to-day, in order to give parties their judgments; if you did not put off the Trial, the plaintiff might have judgment to-day.

Mr. Clarke said he was not engaged in this cause; but for the sake of uniform practice, he must remind the Court, that it was only ex-parte causes, or where both sides consented that the Court took cases out of their turn, on Mondays or Thursdays. If a party was not prepared on those days, the cause was never struck out.

The Chief Justice. We would not strike out a cause on those days on which we do not generally try, but we would try it, if the plaintiff was prepared.

Mr. Clarke. But not if the defendant was not prepared. He ought not to be required to bring his witnesses on Equity days. Indeed in practice the Taxing Master did not allow the Attornies their Common Law attendances on those days, nor would any experienced Attorney take out a subpoena for them. He pressed upon the Court to state what the future practice should be, as it was of great consequence to the suitors and the production.

The Chief Justice. It is very important that the practice should be settled, and so settled as to save judgment of the Term. Let the Prothonotary take a minute that for the future, when the last day for giving judgment of the Term falls on a Thursday or Monday, the Court will take Common Law Cases on those days, and the Attornies must be prepared with their witnesses.

Mr. Clarke said, he only wished to have the practice settled and known; the alteration he considered would be very beneficial.—Hurkaru, March 24.

MARCH 25, 1837.

The court disposed of two or three cases in the Plea side, of no public interest, and then proceeded with the Equity Board, in which also it disposed of two or three cases of no interest to any one, but the parties concerned. In the course of the morning

Mr. Clarke, moved on behalf of Messrs. Bruce, Shand and Co, for an attachment against Mr. Thomas Fergusson, for a contempt of court, in not complying with an award, the submission to which had been made a rule of court. By the terms of the award it was enjoined on Mr. Fergusson to pay the firm 60,000 rupees in a given time, and that Messrs. Bruce, Shand and Co. should be accountable to him for a large claim or dependency on insurance policies yet unrealized. Mr. Fergusson, it appears, disputes the propriety and justice of the award, and refuses to comply with it. The rule nisi for the attachment was granted, with liberty to shew cause in vacation, but as of the term.

MARCH 27, 1837.

NEWTON versus NEWTON.

This was a libel, and suit in the Ecclesiastical side of the Court, promoted at the instance of Mrs. Newton against Colonel Newton, her husband, for a divorce à mensu et thoro and for alimony.

The libel charged adultery with one of her ayahs against Col. Newton, and several acts of cruelty, neglect, &c. This was denied by the impugnant Colonel Newton.

The Court, after reading the evidence on both sides, and hearing Mr. Grant, in the absence of Mr. Clarke, who was counsel for the promonent; and Mr. Advocate-General and Mr. Prinsep, for the impugnant, decreed a divorce à mensu et thoro, and gave 300 Rs. a month alimony, together with all the costs of the suit against the impugnant Colonel Newton.

In the case of Bruce, Shand and Co. versus F. Fergusson, which was to come on for argument to-morrow, Mr. Fergusson having to shew cause why an attachment should not go against him for refusing to comply with the terms imposed on him by an award, the submission to which had, as usual, been made a rule of Court.

Mr. Leith intimated in reply to an observation from the Bench, that the matter was settled, the parties having come to an understanding.—Hurkaru, March 28.

MARCH 29, 1837.

ROOTS versus COCKERELL.

The Advocate-General and Mr. Grant shewed cause against Mr. Prinsep's motion for a new trial, on the ground of misdirection, that is, that the Judges had misdirected themselves, and had not given any damages for that indignity, which had at the trial been proved to have been seized by Cockerell and Co. Surprise was another ground, i.e. that the plaintiff was taken aback by the production of the mortgage at the trial. Affidavits of Mr. Cockerell, Mr. Smith, his accountant and confidential Clerk, and of, we believe, Mr. Martip, were read. These affidavits will probably be published, as they contain a sort of counter-statement, and attempted justification of the conduct of the house.

It was contended for Cockerell and Co., that if the mortgage by Rose had been paid off, which is, we believe, the fact, still they, Cockerell and Co., had a right to hold the mortgage over the head of Roots, as a security for any future advances made by them on account of the cultivation, and it was then attempted to be shewn, that by the cultivation account, Roots was largely indebted to Cockerell and Co.

Mr. Prinsep, in support of his rule, ridiculed the notion as farcical and preposterous, that Cockerell and Co. should hold this paid off mortgage by Rose to them, as a security for advances of cultivation made to Roots long after the payment of the mortgage money,—Roots being no party to the mortgage, and there being in law not the slightest pretence to connect him with the mortgage transaction. The learned Counsel then proceeded to argue the only point in the case, which was that evidence was given of a great loss by Roots, in consequence of the seizure of the in-ligo by Cockerell and Co., and yet the Court had been guilty of a misdirection in stating that they gave no damages for the in-ligo, but damages only for the two trespasses; and he stated further, that he was now, on behalf of Roots, ready to refer the whole matter, to any person whatever as arbitrator.

The Court took time.—Hurkaru, March 30.

MARCH 28, 1837.

ROOTS versus COCKERELL AND CO.

Mr. Prinsep shewed cause against the rule nisi for a new trial and contended, that the possession of Roots was an exclusive possession for a year, and that he therefore had a good right of action against the defendants. The learned Counsel's address, was in substance an argument, directed to the same points which occupied him at the trial.

The Advocate-General, with whom was Mr. Grant, contended in support of the rule, that from the evidence it was clear that Roots had not an exclusive possession, and that there was no lease to him from defendant; and 2ndly, that if he had, he was by the terms of the alleged lease only a tenant at will, or rather a servant at will, (this was the expression) and therefore notice to quit terminated the tenancy; and that the defendants had perfect right on misbehaviour of the servant, to put an end to the tenancy. The learned Counsel then contended that upon the evidence it clearly appeared that the tenancy had been put an end to by Messrs. Cockerell and Co., and that therefore the plaintiff had no right of action against Cockerell and Co. for trespass.

This was, we believe, what will be found to be in substance all that was urged on either side, and was in point of fact, a mere point of law, and has nothing to do with what is generally considered the hardship of the case.

The Advocate-General and Mr. Grant, argued the cause for their nonsuit, from about half past twelve to the rising of the Court. We understood both the learned Counsel to state, that they laboured at their two points, and took the deep interest exhibited by them both in this case, from a sense of the grand object, which it was to all persons in a mercantile capacity, to have every suspicion attaching to the propriety of their conduct removed.

The Court intimated that they would hear Mr. Prinsep's motion for a new trial in the same case, on the ground of a misdirection; and would then give their decision.

Mr. Prinsep's motion will come on to-morrow.

JOYMONY DOSSEE V. SEEBOOBONDERY DOSSEE.

The Court gave their decree in favour of complainant.—Hurkaru, March 29.

ROOTS V. COCKERELL AND CO.

Mr. Prinsep moved to make the rule absolute.

Mr. Advocate-General shewed cause. He would do all in his power to detain the court for the shortest time that the necessity of the case required. The motion of his friend Mr. Prinsep, had two grounds; first, a misdirection of the judge, and secondly, that the damages were inadequate. In the first place it will not be difficult to shew that these two grounds resolve themselves into one, for as to what his friend had set up, that he had become acquainted with the existence of a paper which shewed the mortgage was discharged, that would have little weight when it was placed beyond all doubt that the mortgage was not discharged but continued. How then was this application supported? On the affidavit of Roots, who is himself the plaintiff in the case; not that he is unworthy of belief on that account, but let us see how far he is deserving of credit for the affidavit he has sworn. He swears that he has since the trial inspected the account filed by Mr. Cockerell in January, whereas the account was not filed till July; he swears that the mortgage was executed in June, whereas the circumstance which has produced the impression did not occur till January. Not that these errors are of much importance as regards the present application, but it is well to shew the court how negligently this case has been conducted, and how recklessly an ignorant and unlettered man has been permitted to swear. Next he swears that all sum due on the said mortgage were fully paid by Mr. Cockerell on the 1st of March 1833, then follows the item, extracted from Mr. Cockerell's account as administrator—"cash paid Messrs. Cockerell and Co., amount of Mr. Rose's account with them closed this day, Rs. 15,171," Roots being up to the time of trial ignorant of the existence of this document. Ignorant we dare say he was: no man ever suspected that Roots is acquainted with the rule of their lordships' court, which requires that administrators file their accounts within a particular time, but the question is, as to this very extraordinary surprise; are Roots's counsel and attorney as ignorant of what the court requires as is Roots himself? For, the Advocate-General insisted, whatsoever may be known to counsel is also known to the client. Allowing his friend, however, all that he could obtain from the most extraordinary ground of surprise ever mentioned in this court, he would proceed at once to Roots's affidavit, and here he had no difficulty in asserting that their lordships would find nothing in the world which could induce them to believe that the mortgage was ever paid off. That the account of Rose was closed would be admitted, but then, was there not another account opened? and of which even Roots might have satisfied himself, for in the administrator's account appeared this item, "to balance of sketch rendered Rs. 7,630,"—sufficient, one would think, to induce him to believe there was something still due.

The learned counsel here alluded to an affidavit sworn by Mr. Martin, of the firm of Cockerell and Co., and by Mr. J. S. Smith, book-keeper to that firm, which set forth:—that it has always been the practice of the firm of Cockerell and Co., as it is with houses of agency in general, to keep with the several indigo planters two separate accounts, one of which is termed the "cultivation account," the other "private account;" that the cultivation account contains all disbursements on account of the indigo factories, during what is termed the indigo season, and receipts on account of the indigo manufactured whenever the same may be sold; and that whenever the balance of the account of such season's cultivation can be ascertained, such cultivation account is closed and the balance thereof transferred to the credit or debit, as the case may be, of the private account of the indigo planter. That all mortgages taken by the firm are always and without exception, considered and treated by them and the parties granting the same as security for both accounts; that the aforesaid was the mode in which the firm kept their accounts with Rose. That Rose died during the indigo season of 1831-2; that the indigo made by him during that season was sold for Sa. Rs. 20,339, and the same placed to the credit of an account opened on the 1st of January 1833, under the title of "R. H. Cockerell, administrator of the estate of John Rose deceased." That the amount due to the firm on the cultivation account of Rose on the 23d January 1833, was sicca rupees 14,521, which was then transferred to Rose's personal account, and the cultivation was closed. That the personal account was made up on the 1st of March 1833, when there appeared to be a balance against Rose deceased of Sa. Rs. 15,171, which balance was then transferred to the account of "R. H. Cockerell, administrator of Rose deceased." That the personal account of Rose was then closed, and the accounts relating to the Mysathul factory afterwards kept in the name of "R. H. Cockerell, administrator of Rose deceased." That there are no accounts in the books of the firm under the head of Maria Roots or plaintiff, the firm having always considered the factory to have been carried on since January 1833, for behoof of R. H. Cockerell, administrator of Rose deceased, under the management of Maria Roots and plaintiff respectively. Further, that in March 1833, the firm were under advances to the factory for the indigo season 1832-3 to the amount of Sa. Rs. 7,800, which sum they had paid on account of the cultivation of the factory, and that amount was due to the firm exclusive of the sum of Sa. Rs. 15,170 paid by R. H. Cockerell to the firm as the balance of the personal account of Rose deceased. That the sum last mentioned was not paid as the balance due on all sums secured by the mortgage, nor were all sums so secured then, or ever, nor have they now been fully paid to the firm by Mr. R. H. Cockerell, as administrator, as erroneously stated in the affidavit of the plaintiff. That the mortgage deed remained as a continuing security, as well for the sum of Sa. Rs. 7,800 actually due on the cultivation account for 1832-3, as for all sum thereafter to accrue on such cultivation account, as for all sums thereafter due on the cultivation accounts for succeeding seasons so long as the factory might be carried on by the administrator of Rose with funds supplied by the firm of Cockerell and Co. That at no period from the 4th of January 1832 to the time of the sale of the factory in December 1835 was Rose in his life time, or his administrator since his death, or the factory, out of debt to the firm; but that there has always been debt against them, for which debt the mortgage was a continuing security. That the money laid out by the firm for the factory for the season 1834-5, during a portion of which year plaintiff was manager, amounted to Sa. Rs. 17,915, and that the receipts on the same account during the same season, amounted to Sa. Rs. 15,316, leaving a balance to the debit of actual outlay on that season's account, of Sa. Rs. 2,598, exclusive of interest, commission, and agency charges, making altogether Sa. Rs. 5,406. "And this deponent, Joseph Samuel Smith, for himself further saith, that the said Richard Howe Cockerell, as the administrator of the estate of the said John Rose, (and who took out administration to the said estate at the request of Maria Rose, now Maria Roots, the widow of the said John Rose), was, on obtaining such administration, desirous of disposing of the share of the said John Rose in the said Mysathul Indigo Factory and of winding up the affairs of the estate of the said deceased, but that she

the said Maria Rose, in the presence of this deponent entreated the said Richard Howe Cockerell not to do so, as indigo factories were then much depreciated in value and that a loss would accrue to the estate if it was then sold; and she also requested the said Richard Howe Cockerell to consent to carry on the cultivation of the said factory as administrator and to allow her to manage it for him, as she, the said Maria Rose, had no other means of supporting herself, and the carrying on the cultivation of indigo, was the only means by which the estate could pay the debts due by it; and this deponent saith that the said Richard Howe Cockerell thereupon complied with such the request of the said Maria Rose, and the sums which were required for the cultivation of the said factory were paid from time to time, as they were so required, by the said firm of Cockerell and Company and from their funds. And these deponents, William Martin and Joseph Samuel Smith, for themselves further say, that the said Richard Howe Cockerell has at different times, since the time he so obtained administration as aforesaid, expressed his wish to sell and dispose of the share of the said John Rose, deceased, in the said factory, and to wind up the estate, but that he has at the repeated request of the said Maria Rose, continued to carry on the same, and to allow her to have the management thereof for him. And these deponents further say, that they have been advised, and believe, that if the said Richard Howe Cockerell had, as he was desirous of doing, sold off and disposed of the said indigo factory on his so obtaining administration as aforesaid, the said firm of Cockerell and Company, who were then, as these deponents believe, the only judgment creditors of the said John Rose, deceased, would have been paid in full their said debt, but by consenting at the request of the said Maria Rose, to carry on the said factory and to pay other debts due by the said estate to a large amount, and by one Pertaub Sing having afterwards obtained a judgment against the said Richard Howe Cockerell as administrator, as aforesaid, and upon which he issued out execution, the debt of the said Messieurs Cockerell and Company became postponed: and these deponents further say that the estate of the said John Rose now is indebted to the said Richard Howe Cockerell as such administrator, as aforesaid, in the sum of Company" Rupees eleven thousand, two hundred, and forty-five eleven annas, and three pie. And these deponents further say that the said Maria Rose during the time she continued in the management of the said factory, that is to say from the month of January 1833, up to her marriage with the said plaintiff as hereinafter mentioned, drew her support and maintenance from the money supplied from time to time by the said firm of Cockerell and Company, in order to carry on the cultivation of the said factory. And these deponents say they have been informed, and believed, that the said Maria Rose some time in the month of June 1834, married the said plaintiff George Roots, and that the said plaintiff and the said Maria Rose, then Maria Roots, from that period up to the time of the said plaintiff ceasing to have the management of the said factory in the month of March 1835, continued to draw their support and maintenance in the same manner from the money supplied from time to time by the said firm of Cockerell and Company, in order to carry on the cultivation of the said factory. And these deponents further say, that on or about the twenty-seventh day of August 1834, and shortly after such marriage, the said Maria Roots arrived in Calcutta and called on the solicitors of the said firm of Cockerell and Company, Messieurs Collier and Bird, and represented that she had been forced to leave the said factory by the ill-treatment of the said plaintiff, and that she had proceeded to Calcutta expressly for the purpose of obtaining a legal separation from her said husband. And these deponents say, that they have been informed, and believed, that from the above mentioned date of twenty-seventh day of August to the seventeenth day of September following, the said Mrs. Roots had frequent interviews with the solicitors of the said Messieurs Cockerell and Co.; was persuaded by them, and to which she reluctantly agreed, to return to her said husband at Bhogwanolah. And these deponents further say, that from the situation in which the said Richard Howe Cockerell as such administrator as aforesaid, and the said firm of Cockerell and Company found themselves placed, owing to these quarrels between the said George Roots and his said wife Maria Roots, and from the accusations which they mutually made against each other, and from the amount of property which the said firm of Cockerell and Company had under the management of the said plaintiff, and from the circumstance of the said plaintiff being personally unknown to them or to the said Richard Howe Cockerell, the said firm of Cockerell and Company took the best security they could from the said plaintiff for their protection, and required a bond and warrant of attorney of the said George Roots, in addition to an insurance on his life, which he offered them. And these deponents further say, that the said plaintiff was afterwards considered by the said firm of Cockerell and Company, as a servant managing the factory for the said administrator Richard Howe Cockerell, and never by an act of his or any communication to them gave them any reason to consider that he looked on himself in any other light until his application to the magistrate of Berhampore in May 1835, to be reinstated in the said factory. And these deponents further say, that the said bond and warrant of attorney and insurance on the life of the said plaintiff so given and granted by the said plaintiff to the said firm of Cockerell and Company, was given by the said plaintiff under the circumstances before stated, and in consequence of the necessity that existed of having some legal check upon him, the said plaintiff as such manager as aforesaid, and for saving the said firm of Cockerell and Company harmless against the mismanagement of the said plaintiff or the misappropriation by him of the money supplied for carrying on the factory. And these deponents further say that the said firm of Cockerell and Company never considered the plaintiff as responsible for the money supplied by them for carrying on the said factory any further than as regarded its due appropriation. And these deponents say that the said plaintiff, whilst he was in the management of the said factory as aforesaid, and without the knowledge of any of the members of the said firm of Cockerell and Company, disposed of about three hundred maunds of indigo seed, which had been supplied for the purposes of the said factory by the said firm of Cockerell and Company, and appropriated the proceeds thereof to his own use, and the said plaintiff (as these deponents were informed and believe,) substituted in lieu of the said last mentioned seed, seed that was old and of a very inferior quality and caused the same to be sown on the lands belonging to the said factory, which lands or the greater part thereof were, as these deponents have been informed and believe, obliged to be resown. And these deponents say that the said firm of Cockerell and Company on being informed thereof, caused the said plaintiff to be arrested on the judgment entered upon his aforesaid bond and warrant of attorney for the price of value of the said indigo seed so sold, and converted by the plaintiff to his own use as aforesaid, and also for the then balance of his the said plaintiff's account with the said firm of Cockerell and Company, amounting together to sicca rupees three thousand five hundred and forty-seven, eleven annas, and seven pie, and which said account consisted of items wholly independent of money supplied on account of the said factory. And these deponents say that the said firm of Cockerell and Company were obliged, in consequence of the lateness of the season, and the then scarcity of indigo seed, to purchase other seed to replace that which had been so sold and disposed of by the said plaintiff, at the rate of sicca rupees twenty per maund, being sicca rupees eleven per maund beyond what they had paid for the seed so sold by the said plaintiff, and that no part of such excess of price has ever been paid by the said plaintiff. And these deponents further say that the cultivation of the said factory was much retarded and injured by the delay which took place in the procuring a fresh supply of indigo seed, to replace that which had been so sold, and disposed by the plaintiff as aforesaid. And these deponents further say, they verily believe that not only the said plaintiff, but also the said Maria Roots, greatly mismanaged the said factory, and misappropriated the monies which had been from time to time supplied by the said firm of Cockerell and Company for the purpose of the cultivation thereof, for these deponents say that since the said factory has been in the hands of its present proprietor, Mr. Thomas Clarke, it has been worked at a considerable advantage, and has produced a greater quantity of indigo, than it produced at any period to the said administrator, Richard Howe Cockerell, under the management of the said Maria Roots, or the said plaintiff. And these deponents further say, that the share of the said late John Rose in the said Mysathul indigo factory, and also of the Bedoul factory, was sold and disposed of by the said Richard Howe Cockerell as such administrator as aforesaid, by and with the concurrence of the said firm of Cockerell and Company, as such mortgagees as aforesaid through Messrs Moore, Hickey and Company of Calcutta, auctioneers, on the seventeenth day of December, 1835, to Mr. Thomas Clarke, who paid for the same the sum of sicca rupees nineteen thousand, two hundred, and fifty, which was the highest sum that could be got for the same, and which said sum (less the sum of sicca rupees four hundred and thirty five eight annas and six pie, being the amount of the auctioneers' commission and charges thereon,) has been carried to the credit of the account of the estate of the said John Rose, and the said factory has been duly conveyed to the said Thomas Clarke by deeds of lease and release, dated on the twenty-first and twenty-second days of March, 1836. And these deponents further say, that they, these deponents and the members of the said firm of Cockerell and Co., were informed, and which information these deponents believed and still believe to be true, that it was the express intention of the said plaintiff, had he not been prevented from so doing by the said deponents hereto, forcibly to seize and carry away the whole of the indigo which had been manufactured at the aforesaid factory for the season 1834-5, the cultivation and manufacture of which had been altogether made by and with the monies supplied by the said firm of Cockerell and Company, and to dispose of the same, and to convert the proceeds thereof to his own use. And these deponents further say, that there is now due, and owing to the said Richard Howe Cockerell as such administrator by the estate of the said John Rose, deceased, after giving credit to the same for the aforesaid sum of sicca rupees nineteen thousand, two hundred and fifty, the proceeds of the sale of the said indigo factory, (less the auctioneers' charges as aforesaid,) the sum of Company's rupees eleven thousand, two hundred, and forty-five, eleven annas and three pie, and that there are not, to the best of these deponents' belief, any further or other available assets belonging to the said estate. And these deponents further say that the said Robert Speir, one of the defendant's, is now residing in some part of Great Britain, and that the said Richard Howe Cockerell is absent from Calcutta, but is shortly expected to return thereto, and that on such his return it is as these deponents believe, the intention of the said Richard Howe Cockerell to file a continued account current in the estate of the said John Rose, and so the said plaintiff has been informed through his said attorney, Mr. Joseph Spencer Judge, by the said firm of Cockerell and Company. And these deponents further say, that in addition to the said aforesaid sum of Company's rupees eleven thousand, two hundred and forty-five, eleven annas and three pie, so due, and owing to the said Richard Howe Cockerell, as such administrator as aforesaid, there is due, and owing to the said firm of Cockerell and Company, or to the said Richard Howe Cockerell by the said plaintiff, on account of such second purchase of indigo seed for the purpose of the said factory at an increased price and other payments on his account, the sum of sicca rupees three thousand and five hundred, or thereabouts, independent of the sum or at least Sicca Rupees four thousand and eight hundred stated by the said plaintiff in his letters to the said firm of Cockerell and Company, and the said Richard Howe Cockerell as improperly taken by his wife, Maria Roots, from the sums paid by the said firm of Cockerell and Company on account of the cultivation of the said factory, and by her misappropriated. And these deponents have hereto annexed true copies of three accounts in the books of Messieurs Cockerell and Company, marked with the letters A, B and C, whereby the truth of their statement as to the said mortgage debt not having been satisfied by the said payment of Sicca rupees fifteen thousand, one hundred and seventy-one and ten annas by the said Richard Howe Cockerell as administrator as aforesaid will fully appear.

The Advocate-General was followed by Mr. Grant, who was proceeding to enter minutely into the state of the accounts between the administrator of Rose, deceased, and Cockerell and Co., but was stopped by the Chief Justice. His Lordship said the court were clearly of opinion, that there was a balance due to Cockerell and Co.

Mr. Prinsep for the rule absolute, took two grounds, the misdirection of the judge in not giving any damages for the indigo, and the surprise in having a mortgage set up which had been entered as a cancelled mortgage. He insisted that the administrator having once paid off the mortgage could not again set it up, but that it had been brought forward merely to throw dust in the eyes of the court. One of their lordships had stated that the plaintiff could not recover on the indigo, because it was to go to Cockerell and Co., under the contract, but that firm, having refused to continue their advances, compelled the plaintiff to look to other quarters, and thus put an end to the contract. The indigo sold for Rs. 20,000, deducting from which the native proprietors' share, and the charges, would leave Rs. 10,000, to which the plaintiff was clearly entitled. The learned counsel concluded by offering to refer the matter to arbitration and to abide by the decision of a competent officer.

The court said they would take time to consider.—Englishman.

INSOLVENT COURT.

On the rising of the Court, the Chief Justice proceeded to the Insolvent Court where, after hearing Mr. Clarke and Mr. Leith for the Assignees of the Insolvent firms, and the Advocate-General and Mr. Prinsep for the Bank, he ordered the Bank to be admitted to receive dividends from each of the three estates namely, Fergusson and Co., Crutenden, Mackillop and Co. and Mackintosh and Co.

—upon the whole of its claim consisting of the balance (nearly six lakhs of rupees) of the transaction of the 27 Bills for which those firms made themselves jointly responsible with Alexander and Co. striking off from the claim only about 8,000 rupees for costs, which the Bank agreed to abandon.—Calcutta Courier, March 1.

March 11, 1837.

The court sat at twelve o'clock this day. John Peter Venerosity was heard on his petition and declared entitled to the benefit of the Act.

In the matter of Cruttenden and Company. Mr. Advocates-General declined to examine Captain Warlow, and the application came on for argument. Mr. Leith applied to postpone the argument, on the ground that three affidavits had just been sworn, office copies of which had not been delivered to counsel before this morning. The Advocate-General and Mr. Clarke opposed the application to postpone the argument, and Mr. Justice Malkin decided to go on. An affidavit sworn by Captain Warlow was then put in, which the officer of the court was proceeding to read, when he was interrupted by the Advocate-General and Mr. Clarke, who contended that the affidavit ought not to be received, Captain Warlow appearing in court under extraordinary circumstances. The officer of the court was then referred to the affidavit of Mr. H. J. Leighton, in which it was sworn that Captain Warlow had purchased up the claims of nineteen creditors* of the estate of Cruttenden and Co., the total amount of which exceeded Rs. 2,60,000. This gentlemen, the learned counsel argued, stood in a situation in which a court of law or equity would not receive his affidavit. Captain Warlow was deeply interested in the decision of the court by which, if unfavourable to the application of the retired partners, whose claims are in amount equal to one tenth of the claims on the schedule, his profits and the debts purchased would be increased ten per cent. But Mr. Justice Malkin decided that it should be read, and it was read accordingly. The affidavit entered minutely into the affairs of Cruttenden and Co. as they appeared on the books at various periods, and concluded by setting forth the deponent's belief that the late firm was insolvent on the 1st January, 1835. At three o'clock our reporter left the court at which hour the argument had every appearance of continuing for several days. — Oriental Observer, March 11.

We subjoin one of Captain Warlow's affidavits, and will publish the others to-morrow:—

Thomas Warlow, of writers' Buildings, in the Town of Calcutta, a Captain of Engineers in the service of the East India Company on the Bengal Establishment, maketh oath and saith, that he, this deponent, is a creditor of the above named Insolvents to the amount of sicca rupees 38,000 and upwards, and that he hath also been constituted the agent of certain other creditors of the said Insolvents, whose claims inclusive of his, this deponent's, amount to about 12½ lakhs of rupees, to oppose the claims of the retired partners of the said Insolvents to participate in the dividends payable by the present assignee, T. Holroyd, Esq. And this deponent further saith that he hath personally investigated certain books of account belonging to the said Insolvents, and that the accounts therein written of the retired partners of the said Insolvent firm of C. M. and Co., and also of the said Insolvents, are very far from being clear and satisfactory; and in consequence of the alleged destruction of the valuation balance sheets, no means are afforded of ascertaining how the different credits to their respective names are made up; and whether there were bona fide profits to be divided, or whether a fair valuation was made of the alleged assets of the house at the respective times of the said retired partners and also to the said Insolvents entering

* We may mention, as within our knowledge, that these claims were purchased up in 1834 as a mere speculation. The enquiries instituted in 1836, and now continued, were suggested, as we are credibly informed, entirely by Mr. Hargrave Wyborn's letter and exposes. — En. Or. Observer.

and quitting the said firm. And this deponent further saith that in the year 1822 on the formation of the co-partnership between G. Cruttenden, G. Mackillop, J. Cullen, and D. Bryce, that the account current to the said G. Cruttenden on 1st May 1822, exhibits a balance of upwards of 12,000 rupees due by him to the said firm, and that the said G. Mackillop had only to his credit a sum of 19,000, or thereabout and that J. Cullen and D. Bryce were respectively indebted to the said firm. And this deponent further saith that the sum annually divided by the said partners was never an ascertained profit, but a sum more or less fictitious, being in part composed of difference of interest on bad and doubtful debts. And this deponent further saith, that on the several occasions hereinafter mentioned, this sum of profit and loss was valued by the partners in their own settlements at a far less value than the sum denoted by the books; and that in the settlement of 1822, the value of the profit and loss, for 8 months, was sicca rupees 2,10,000, and the sum of profit and loss actually divided between the new partnership and reserved fund for the remaining 4 months of that year, namely from 1st January to 30th April 1822, amounted to sicca rupees 4,58,000 or thereabouts. And this deponent further saith that in the settlement of 1827, the 6-16 proportion of profit and loss, for that year, was valued at sicca rupees 1,02,000: whereas the sum actually credited to the reserved fund as 6-16ths of the profit and loss of the mercantile years 1826-27 was 2,02,000 or thereabouts. And this deponent further saith, that in the account of D. Bryce of the mercantile year 1826-27, a transfer is made from the sum at his credit to the amount of 1,40,000 or thereabouts, to the credit of J. Mackillop, for which, this deponent verily believes, no value was ever received, and at which time there were no actual profits ascertained. And this deponent further saith, that he has examined the accounts of T. Hutton and R. Browne, and that the sum brought into the firm of Messrs. C.M. and Co., on 1st May, 1827, by the said T. Hutton was sicca rupees 1,30,399 0 1, and by the said R. Browne, 1,36,180 3 11; and that on 1st Jan. 1830, a transfer was made to each from the account of G. Mackillop of the sum of 90,000 rupees to meet the loss, on his 6-12 share of the concern by bad debts that existed prior to the year 1827, and not included in the settlement of that year, and which sum this deponent has no hesitation in saying should have been credited to the reserved fund to meet such bad debts, and not to the account of parties who had no interest in the concern at that time. And this deponent further saith, that, by inspection of the said books, that he finds it has been the practice of the firm of C. M. and Co., to advertise the retirement of a partner in the public papers in India, at the same time that information is sent to the creditors in India, viz. on or about the 1st May of the same year. And this deponent further saith, that in the public papers of this place an advertisement appeared under date 2nd May, 1831, notifying the retirement of G. Mackillop from the said firm, but that no such advertisement appears in the public papers of the retirement of Thomas Hutton, either in May, 1831, or 1832, or 1833, and that he, this deponent, therefore firmly believes that no such advertisement was ever published. And this deponent further saith, that in the letter book, to constituents in India, certain letters, under date 1st May, 1833, notify the retirement of Mr. Hutton, which said letters though bearing that date, are, to this deponent's knowledge, not received by many of the constituents for 2 or 3 months after, as they are detained till the several accounts current are made up; and this deponent hath been informed and which information he verily believes to be true, that prior of the receipt of such notification an act of bankruptcy had been committed by the said firm by refusing to make payments to divers creditors. And this deponent further saith, that in the first week of January, 1833, he then being in England, did address a letter to the firm of C. M. and Co., directing a certain portion of his funds then in their hands, to be paid to a friend of this deponent's, then about to sail for India, who was also furnished with a full power of attorney to receive the said funds and to grant receipts and discharges for the same, but which money the said firm positively refused to pay to such party.

IN THE MATTER OF CRUTTENDEN AND CO.

Affidavit regarding the state of the house in 1835.

Thomas Warlow, of Tank Square, in the Town of Calcutta, a Captain of Engineers in the Service of the East India Company, on their Bengal Establishment, maketh oath, and saith, that he is a creditor of the above named Insolvents to the amount of Sa. Rs. 38,000 and upwards, and that he is also the agent of certain other creditors of the said Insolvents of the amount of 12 lacs of sicca rupees or thereabouts, for the purpose of opposing the claims of James Mackillop, George Mackillop, the Executors of David Bryce deceased, and Thomas Hutton, to participate in the dividends which now are, or hereafter may be, payable from the Estate of the said Insolvents. And this deponent further saith, that the abovenamed James Cullen, in and by his affidavit of 30th November last past, swore that since the 1st day of January 1822, and up to and including the 31st December 1833 out of the amount standing to the credit of the said James Mackillop in the books of the firm of Messrs. Cruttenden, Mackillop and Co. the sum of Sa. Rs. 3,34,000 and upwards was drawn and paid to the said James Mackillop, or was appropriated to his use by his orders, whereas this deponent saith that the statement hereunto annexed and marked with the letter A, contains a true and correct extract from the books of the said insolvents of the sums therein debited to the said James Mackillop, from the said 1st January, 1822, to the said 31st December, 1833; and the said exhibit A. shews that a sum of Sicca Rupees 8,88,000 or thereabouts was drawn and paid out of the amount standing to the credit of the said James Mackillop in the said books. And this deponent further saith that he hath carefully examined the balance sheet of the said late firm of C. M. and Co. of the 1st May, 1825, and that the list of alleged assets of the said firm therein set forth, shews a sum of Sicca Rupees 160,03,597 : 10 : 10, to meet a like sum on the opposite side of the said balance sheet, acknowledged to be due by the said firm on certain accounts therein specified; including that of the fund, called the reserved fund, and the accounts of the then partners of the said firm as by the said books, reference being thereunto had, will fully appear. And this deponent saith that the Schedules hereunto annexed, and marked with the letters B and C, contain certain items from the said list of alleged assets; which items, amounting altogether in the aggregate to the sum of Sa. Rs. 99,46,151 : 3 : 6; this deponent after a long and minute inspection of the said books of the said firm is convinced were on the 1st May, 1825, bad and doubtful debts. And this deponent saith that of the items so challenged, several were afterwards admitted by the said insolvents to be bad, and were written off to the said account entitled the reserved fund, and that the items so written off, amount, to the best of this deponent's belief, to the sum of sicca rupees 63,37,828 : 12 : 11, the particulars whereof appear in the said annexed Schedule marked B. And this deponent further saith, that of the items so challenged by this deponent as aforesaid, there are many, which on the said 1st May, 1825, appear to have been considered bad or doubtful debts, from the fact, that they either bore no interest at all in the said books at that time, or else, they bore interest only at the rate of 6 per cent, per annum. And this deponent hath annexed hereunto a schedule of such debts marked with the letter E, amounting in the whole to the sum of sicca rupees 41,90,737 : 5 : 2 or thereabouts. And this deponent further saith, that of the items so challenged by this deponent, as aforesaid, there are many which appear on the final Schedule filed by the said insolvents in this Honorable Court as debts then due to the said estate, on which the parties had never made any payment since the said 1st May, 1825, and on which no sums have been realised from that time hitherto; with the exception of some few accounts, which have been partially recovered by insurance kept up since the said 1st May, 1825, at the expence of the said firm until its insolvency; and, at the expence of the estate of the said Insolvents thereafter. And this deponent further saith, that the said annexed schedule marked with the letter C. exhibits to the best of this deponent's belief, a list of the said last mentioned debts amounting on the said 1st May, 1825, to the sum of sicca rupees 18,86,052 : 13 : 5, and the said schedule also exhibits a list of the amounts to which such debts had respectively increased, at the date of the said final schedule of the said insolvents; amounting in the whole to Sa. Rs. 41,75,189 15-9. And this deponent further saith, that on the said 1st day of May, 1825, the amount appearing on the other side of the said balance sheet, due to the account entitled the reserved fund, and to the several accounts of George Mackillop, David Bryce, James Cullen, and James Mackillop, being all the then partners of the said firm of C. M. and Co. amounted to sicca rupees 49,75,661 : 9 : 7, as by their said books, reference being thereunto had, will fully appear. And this deponent saith, that after a careful examination and investigation of the said books, he, this deponent, is clearly satisfied, and can with safety swear, that in his opinion the said firm, on the said 1st May, 1825, had not sufficient funds to meet the several demands then fairly due, and payable by it; and that if the said alleged assets of the said firm which this deponent has hereinbefore challenged, were properly examined into, and such as were then bad, were struck off, and such as were overvalued, had a proper value put on them, and such as were insured at the expence of the said firm, were valued at the rate at which the respective insurances would at that time have sold for, it would appear that the said firm was on the said 1st May, 1825, in insolvent circumstances.

Sworn to, on 20th February, 1837.

Englishman, March 14.]

Thomas Warlow, of Tank Square, in the Town of Calcutta, a Captain of Engineers, in the service of the East India Company, on their Bengal Establishment, maketh oath, and saith, that he hath carefully inspected files of the Hurkaru and John Bull newspapers of this presidency for the year 1831, and finds in the said newspapers respectively, an advertisement under date 2d May, 1831, notifying the retirement of George Mackillop, from the late firm of Messrs. Cruttenden, Mackillop and Co. And this deponent further saith, that he hath carefully examined the lists of alleged assets of the late firm of Messrs. C., M. and Co. appearing on the balance sheet of their books on 1st May, 1831, which shews a sum of alleged assets amounting to sicca rupees 212,83,911 : 4, to meet a like sum therein acknowledged to be due by the said firm on different accounts, including therein the account entitled the reserved fund, and the accounts of the then partners of the said firm. And this deponent saith that in the said alleged assets, a number of items appear which after a long and minute investigation this deponent verily believes to be bad or doubtful debts, or overvalued property, of which items, this deponent has hitherto annexed lists or schedules, marked with the letters A. and C. amounting to the sum of sicca rupees 160,01,365 :

1 : 0. And this deponent further saith that of the said items so particularized, several have been since admitted by the partners of the said firm to be bad, by having been written off to the debit of said reserved fund : and this deponent has annexed a list of such items so written off in the said schedule A., and this deponent further saith that the amount by the said balance sheet admitted to be due on account of the said reserved fund and on the respective accounts of James Cullen, Robert Browne, Thomas Hutton, and George Mackillop the then partners of the said firm, was in the aggregate sicca rupees 63,64,26½ : 1 : 11, or thereabouts—the particulars of which appear in the said schedule A. And this deponent further saith, that if, in addition to the said items struck off as before mentioned, other bad debts and Indigo debts appearing in the said schedules A. and C. were struck off, and the over valuation set in the indigo factories, and other property therein mentioned were deducted from the amount of alleged assets in the said balance sheet of 1st May, 1831, there would, as this deponent verily believes, at that time, be found a deficiency to a large amount in the assets of the said firm, to meet the engagements therein acknowledged to be due ; and this to a much greater amount than the said accounts of the said reserved fund, and the said partners would cover. And this deponent further saith, that many of the items in the said schedule A. and C. above mentioned, consist of book debts due from a period long prior to 1831, on which no payments have been received by the said firm for many years, and that many of such debts had been allowed to increase annually in amount for a long time by addition of charges for commission and insurance, on account of none of which charges, had any payments been received by the said firm for a long series of years. And this deponent saith that many of such items remain now unpaid, and that the only sums, which since the said period of 1st May, 1831, have been realized in respect of the same period until the failure of the said firm, had been kept up at the expense of the said firm, and have been since kept up at the expence of the creditors of the said firm. And this deponent further saith, that he has ascertained from the present assignee of the said estate, that, in no case in which he thought it for the interest of the creditors to discontinue an insurance, has he been able to sell the policy. And this deponent verily believes that the value of such policies at the said period of 1st May, 1831, was very small, and much less than the amount of the sums in the said list of alleged assets set forth, in respect of which, such insurance had been effected. And this deponent further saith, that many of the said items in the said schedules A. and C. consist of debts due by parties who had then been dead for many years, and on which no payments had been received for many years, and on which no payments are likely to be recovered at any time hereafter, except from insurance on some few of them ; all which insurances were kept up as aforesaid at the expence of the said estate. And this deponent further saith, that by way of evidence of the charge he has brought against the manner in which such list of alleged assets on the said 1st May, 1831, has been made out, he has in a schedule hereunto annexed and marked with the letter E, made an abstract of five accounts, which appear as assets in the said list of 1st May, 1831, one of which accounts relates to a certain property known by the name of " Premises in the Cossitollah," valued in the said list at a sum of Sa. Rs. 1,45,589 : 5 : 11, which property was on 1st May, 1825, valued in the books of the said firm at the sum of Sa. Rs. 1,01,128 : 14 : 3 only ; and this deponent saith that the increased valuation of the same property in 1831, is not made in consequence of the real value thereof in the said interim, but merely by adding to the original value, interest and other charges on the said property, this deponent saith that in the said interim, the sum of Sa. Rs.

1613 only, appear to have been credited to that accounts, as by the books of the said firm reference being thereunto had, will appear, and this deponent further saith that he has ascertained, that the sale of this property has realised the sum of Rs. 33,000 only. And this deponent further saith that to the best of his belief every item in the said schedules A. and C. relating to property belonging to the said firm of C. M. and Co. was valued much higher than its value was, at the said period of 1st May, 1831, and that such values have been affixed to the same respectively, not pursuant to any actual estimate of what the same were then worth, but, merely by adding to the prices for which the same were bought, all subsequent charges of interest, &c. And this deponent further saith that by way of further evidence of his said charges, he has in the said schedule E, abstracted the account of one E. Muston, which appears on the said list of alleged assets on 1st May, 1831, as amounting to Sa. Rs. 1,10,940 : 3 : 2. And this deponent saith that he hath been informed, and verily believes, that the whole of the said E. Muston's property was sold by the Sheriff of Calcutta in the mercantile year 1828-29 ; and this deponent saith that after such sale, the balance of the said account amounting to Sa. Rs. 94,291 : 10 : 10 was continued on the books of the said firm as an available asset, and has since accumulated by the addition of interest until on the final schedule of the said insolvents, it appears as an available asset to the amount of Sa. Rs. 1,30,156 : 15 : 8. And this deponent further saith, that since the said sheriff's sale, nothing has been received on the said account either by the said insolvents, or their assignees, as by their books, reference being thereunto had, will fully appear. And this deponent by way of further evidence of his said charge, saith, that in the said schedule E, he has abstracted the account of another item which appears in the said list of alleged assets of 1st May, 1831, namely, the account of an indigo property known by the name of the " Arroah concern," which this deponent saith was purchased at the said E. Muston's sale in the year 1828-29, for the sum of Sa. Rs. 20,162, and this deponent saith that the interest and other charges debited in the said books to the said concern between the time of its being so purchased for 20,162, in 1828-29, and its being put on the said list of alleged assets in 1831, and no estimated difference of its actual value at the latter period, has swelled the amount at which it appears as an available asset on 1st May, 1831, to the sum of Sa. Rs. 1,09,468 : 12 : 2, and this deponent saith that he verily believes that every item relating to the nominal value of every indigo factory which appears in the said schedules A. and C. has been increased in like manner, and that so it would appear were the same properly examined. And this deponent as further evidence of his said charge, hath, in the said schedule E., abstracted the account of one Vickers Jacob, who this deponent saith was on 1st May, 1827, indebted to the said firm in the sum of Sa. Rs. 75,676 : 11 : 6, as by the books of the said firm reference being thereunto had, will appear, and this deponent saith that the said Vickers Jacob was shortly thereafter debited in the books of the said firm with the moiety of an indigo factory at the price of one lakh of rupees. And this deponent saith that the said debt by the accumulation of interest and other charges amounted on 1st May, 1831, and is there stated as an available asset for sicca rupees 2,84,423 : 4 : 8, which sum this deponent has been informed and verily believes, is much more than would at that time ever be expected to be realized from the said Vickers Jacob, and this deponent saith that he verily believes the said debt was at that time of no value whatever, beyond what the moiety, of the said factory would then have sold for. And this deponent further saith, that he verily believes there are in the said schedules A. and C. many items of the same sort, and so it would appear if the same were properly examined into. And this deponent as further evidence of his said charges, has in the said schedule E. abstracted another account appearing on the said list of alleged assets on 1st May, 1831, namely, the account of one J. W. Bateman; who this deponent has been informed, and believes, had a lease of $\frac{1}{2}$ share of an indigo concern, known by the name of the Jungypore concern, at the annual rent of sicca rupees 7,054; and this deponent saith that the balance due by the said J. W. Bateman, on 1st May, 1825, amounted to the sum of sicca rupees 72,472 : 4 : 11, and this deponent saith that the balance due by the said J. W. Bateman on 1st May, 1831, amounted to, and is there treated as an available asset for the sum of Sa. Rs. 3,35,296 : 11 : 8, as by the books of the said firm will appear; and this deponent verily believes the same was at that time of little, or no more value than the lease of his said share in the said factory would then have been sold for. And this deponent saith there is a debt due by one J. Lamb, another lessee of $\frac{1}{2}$ share of the same indigo concern, of which is there stated as an available asset to the amount of sicca rupees 3,21,994 : 9 : 11, which debt this deponent saith has increased in the same way as that of the said J. W. Bateman, and which this deponent verily believes to have been of little or no more value than the said J. W. Bateman's and that so, if the same were properly examined into, it would appear. And this deponent further saith, that $\frac{1}{2}$ of the above mentioned Jungypore Indigo Concern was taken by the said late firm in Dec. 1830, in part payment of a debt due from one James Wilkinson, for the sum of 1,52,000 and that the balance due to them by the said James Wilkinson, after crediting him with such purchase money amounted on the said 1st May, 1831, to sicca rupees 1,25,097 : 11 : 11 which date appears in the said schedule A. as an available asset to that amount, 1 lakh of which was afterwards admitted by the partners of the said firm to be bad, and written off to the reserved fund, and no part of the balance of which has ever been since received by the said partners or by their assignees. and this deponent also saith that, many of the sums opposite the said indigo and other properties specified in schedule C. do not truly represent the value of such properties respectively, but are made up of prime cost and charges and interest and all subsequent losses sustained upon such properties, and that so, if the same were properly examined into, it would appear. And this deponent further saith that the price at which many of the said indigo factories were bought, are not $\frac{1}{2}$ the amount placed against them, as their value in such schedules. And this deponent further saith there are on the said schedules A and C, many items on account of debts due by mercantile houses, that had failed long before the period of 1st May 1831, and that such debts were at that time, as this deponent verily believes, wholly bad and irrecoverable. And this deponent further states, that there are many items in the said schedules A and C on account of debts which appear on the final schedule of the said insolvents; as available assets to the amount of 26 lakhs or thereabouts, of which debts, the assignees have not been able as yet to realise a single anna, and which this deponent verily believes to be wholly bad and irrecoverable, and to have been equally so on the said 1st of May, 1831. And the deponent further saith, that he hath made application to the said insolvents' assignee for papers submitted to the committee of mercantile men and others in the months of February, 1833, and finds that such papers are not in the assignee's office, but this deponent saith he hath obtained from the office of chief clerk, and annexed hereto, marked with the letter B, an office copy of the report of the committee of mercantile men selected by the creditors of the said firm under an order of this Honorable Court, in February, 1836, by which it appears that there were on the final schedule of the said insolvents of 1834, book debts that were over valued or bad to the amount of Sa. Rs. 23 lakhs, which this deponent saith are in most part included in the said annexed list of alleged assets of 1831, with the exception of the amount of interest accrued on them respectively, from that period until the date of such final schedule. And this deponent further saith, that in the said annexed report, that there are indigo planters' debts on account, independent of the value of their factories, to the amount of 16 lakhs, that were over valued or bad to that amount, which are in most part included in the said annexed list of alleged assets of 1831, with the exception of interest and other charges added since, and also that there are indigo factories on which there are over valuations of about 28 lakhs of rupees, which this deponent verily believes to have existed to a great extent in 1831. And this deponent lastly saith, that he hath no hesitation in swearing, to the best of his opinion and belief, that the said firm of Crutenden, Mackillop and Company was an insolvent estate in the year 1831, and that so, on due examination of the items in the said schedules A and C particularised, it would fully appear.

Sworn, 20th February, 1837.

[Englishman, March 15.]

In the Insolvent Court on Saturday, the 11th instant, the argument in the case of the claims of the retired partners of Crutenden, Mackillop and Co. having been gone into, Mr. Leith took a preliminary objection to the form of the applications for the rule nisi, and contended that the retired partners who were alive ought not to have made their applications, in the manner in which they had done, namely, through their agent (Mr. Cullen, who alone swore to the debts, and that only as to his belief. That only Corporations and Companies were allowed to prove by an agent, and even in that excepted case the agent must prove his authority satisfactorily to the court, and that Mr. Cullen had not proved any authority, or put in as part of his grounds any power of attorney from the retired partners authorising him to make these applications. That as to Mr. Cullen's application to David Bryce deceased, it was made as executor, and that it had been decided in courts of bankruptcy at home that a bankrupt cannot prove as executor, against his own bankrupt estate, without a special order first obtained for that purpose. That the same reason upon which these decisions were made would equally apply to the bankrupt or insolvent claiming to be paid out of their estate as agent or trustee. As to George Mackillop's claim, on whose behalf Mr. Cullen applied and petitioned to have the alleged debt paid over, it appeared by Mr. C.'s own affidavit in support of the application, that G. Mackillop had signed the debt to a Mr. Learmouth previously to the insolvency, and that the latter did not join in making the application, which according to authorities at home, he ought to have done, while Mr. Cullen shewed no authority from either to claim against the insolvent estate or to give a receipt or discharge to the assignee for dividends supposing any to be due. That Mr. Cullen appeared a mere volunteer in these several applications, and that for any thing that was before the court, another party or other parties might start up with authority from the principals, who might say that they never authorized Mr. C. to act, therefore, the learned counsel urged, that without the authority of Mr. C. being proved to the court's satisfaction, no order could be made in the several petitions.

The learned counsel then addressed the court on the merits, and went most minutely through the voluminous affidavits and evidence before the court, and argued at great length to shew that the firm of Crutenden, Mackillop and Co. were insolvent in 1825, the date of Mr. James Macillop's being advertised out, and also in 1831 at the date of Mr. Mackillop's being advertised out, and the partners of the house must have known it at the times of their respective retirements. The learned Counsel also insisted that the nature of the original transactions which had been called dissolution of the co-partnership at the different periods, which long preceded those advertisements, and the relative situations of the parties to those transactions, and the provisions and consent from the creditors of the deeds themselves, shewed that they were not made bona fide, or the arrangements final, but only an alleged settlement of accounts, a fictitious balance of profits struck, and the amount of that balance credited to the retiring partner in the books of the firm, and that Mr. Hutton was never advertised out at all. The speech of the learned gentleman lasted three hours and a half.

Mr. Grant was heard on the same side at considerable length on Saturday last, and contended that the non-delivery to the assignee of the balance sheets made on the retirement of the partners, and which Russomoye Dutt in his evidence swore were kept for the private use of the partners separate from the books of the firm, threw suspicion on the firm, and that the retirement of the partners now claiming was a fraud upon the creditors.

Mr. Advocate-General and Mr. Clarke then addressed the court, in support of the petitions, and argued that the dissolutions of partnership were made in good faith, that the best evidence of it was that the retiring partner allowed the sums standing to their credit to remain in the house—that the house was in solvent circumstance at the times of their retirement, but if otherwise, that the dissolutions of partnership were made in good faith, and not fraudulently that they were binding on the creditors; and that the present claimants had as much right to claim dividend from the insolvent estate of the new partnership, as any other of their creditors. For the latter position several cases were cited by the learned counsel, the names of which we did not catch. As to the preliminary objections taken by the opposite counsel, they were not taken in sufficient time. The argument continued until four o'clock, when the court rose, Mr. Justice Milkin expressing his intention to give judgment in the case on the next court day.—Englishman.

IN THE MATTER OF JAMES CULLEN AND ROBERT BROWNE.

The application in the matter was, as most of our readers know, a claim from the retired partners of the late firm of Cruttenden and Co. to be paid a dividend on the admitted debts due to them from the estate. The claim of James Mackillop, is for dividends on 4,98,000 rupees; that of Mr. G. Mackillop, for 3,38,750 rupees; that of Mr. Cullen, as Executor of Mr. Bryce, 1,20,306 rupees.

Mr. Cullen is the constituted attorney of these retired partners, in whom the legal estate of the real property of the insolvent estate vests; they at the time they retired from business having left powers with Mr. Cullen to execute such deeds as might be necessary; but the legal estate remaining in them although they resigned all beneficial interest therein, in consideration of their several accounts with the firm being credited with the sums abovementioned on their retiring, and which sums they left in the house; the assignee of the estate now refuses further payment of dividends on these sums, and Mr. Cullen, who alone, under his powers, can convey the legal estate to the assignee, Mr. Holroyd, to enable him to sell, in order to realize the property, and pay dividends, now under legal advice, refuses to convey any further portion of the real property to the assignee, as that functionary refuses any further payments of dividend to the retired partners.

Captain Warlow comes in as a creditor of the estate and contends, that Mr. Cullen ought to be made to convey, and that not only are the alleged retired partners not entitled to dividends on the sums credited to them, but that in fact they are liable to the other creditors, inasmuch as the house was insolvent when they went out.

The Court has time taken to consider. There are plenty of affidavits on both sides, and counsel have talked an immensity. We shall give the substance of the affidavits and the points at issue between the parties, when the Court shall deliver its decision.—Hurkaru, March 20.

COURT OF REQUESTS.

We understand that the Government of Bengal have determined, that a rule of some 4 years standing in the Petty Court, shall forthwith be abolished, that the practice as existing previously to the passing of the rule in question, shall be resumed. The rule alluded to, is the requiring from the plaintiff a deposit in the shape of costs, previously to hearing the case. It is now determined that the plaintiff shall in future be called upon, only to give security for the payment of costs, in the event of the defendant's not paying them. This will open the court to a very considerable number of poor suitors, whose hands are now tied up from the mere want of funds, and consequently the utility of this institution will be greatly increased. We are told upon the best authority, that previously to the introduction of the rule, 4 years back, calling upon plaintiffs to deposit costs, the number of cases disposed of in a year, amounted to 40,000, and that since the promulgation of the obnoxious rule, this number has very considerably decreased, and that the diminution is wholly and solely attributable to the rule. It is also contemplated, indeed, we believe settled, that the Commissioners shall be empowered to try cases up to a thousand rupees. This will of course greatly enhance the importance of the decisions of this tribunal, and it would be but well, we think, to take some steps to secure to the public a due and efficient administration by the Commissioners of these increased powers. A knowledge of law is absolutely essential in some of the Commissioners. Although a Court of Conscience, still the consciences of the Commissioners may be informed, enlightened, and directed properly by a knowledge of the principles and practice of the law, just as are guided and regulated the decisions of Courts of Equity by the principles of law. The utility of this Court may or may not be increased by giving it jurisdiction in cases up to a thousand rupees, but it is certain that the difficulties with which the Commissioners will have themselves to contend, will be greatly enhanced. Those claiming or resisting to the amount in question, will probably seek professional assistance, and the questions will then come to the notice of the Commissioners, perplexed with the ingenuity and learning of the professional advisers,—disputes on points of law, discussions on points of evidence, will be daily presented for the decisions of the Commissioners. Now we do not say that the present Commissioners are not very learned and duly qualified to administer the law of conscience, but when they shall be embarrassed with the law of evidence, and with law generally, it would be just as well that they should have some one capable of giving them assistance and information on these points. We understand, indeed, that it is the opinion openly expressed of the very able Commissioner now about to resign, that some Barrister of competent standing should be appointed Chief Commissioner, with a salary of two thousand rupees; and the suggestion is one, we think, well deserving the attention of Government. They would find some difficulty in getting any such person duly qualified to assume the office, as it would, under the circumstances, throw him out of practice in the Supreme Court, it being in our opinion an absolute requisite, and sine qua non, that any person undertaking such an office, shall give up to it his whole time and attention.—Hurkaru, March 9.

COURT OF THE SESSION JUDGE OF THE 24-PERGUNNAHS.

MARCH 3, 1837.

RAILYGUNGE TANK CASE.

This day having been fixed for the decision of the above case, which had been transferred by the Government under Act 7, of 1835, from the Court of the Commissioner of the 18th Division to that of the Session Judge, Mr. Bignell appeared to support Mr. Pattle's petition of appeal against the order of the Magistrate of the 24-Pergunnahs, dated 14th October last. As this petition, which was filed in English, accompanied by a Persian durkhast, contains the whole substance of the appeal, we give it at length.

To H. M. PIGOU, Esq.,

Commissioner of Circuit for the 18th or Jessore Division.

The petition of James Pattle, a senior merchant in the service of the Hon'ble Company.

Sheweth,—That on the 12th day of October, 1836, a summons, signed "J. H. Patton, Magistrate and justice of the peace," was served upon your petitioner, requiring him to appear either personally or by an authorized agent, on the 14th of the said month, before the said Magistrate and justice of the peace, to answer a charge of having directly and indirectly interdicted access to a tank situated at Ballygunge; such conduct being in contempt of the authority of the said Magistrate, and in violation of an award of Court.

That your petitioner being much occupied in the discharge of his official duties as senior member of the Sudder Board of Revenue, could not, without inconvenience to the public service, attend in person before the Magistrate, and he therefore appointed Moonshe Sudler Odeen Ahmed, as his mookhtar, to appear in his behalf.

That the said mookhtar did accordingly attend before the Magistrate and Justice of the Peace on the 14th day of October, when it appeared, that the charge against your petitioner was made by Mr. Francis Kirchoffer, a British subject, and the nature of such charge, as stated by the Magistrate, was that your petitioner had, in disobedience of the orders of the court, forcibly not given water to the people, the carriers and drinkers of water, from a certain tank situate at Ballygunge, in the jurisdiction of Tajeerhaut, and had shut the door of the said tank with a lock.

That the Magistrate on the said 14th day of October, passed an order, declaring your petitioner to have been guilty of a contempt of court, and directing that a fine of two hundred rupees to Government should be taken from the mookhtar of your petitioner, who had appeared and answered the suit as your petitioner in person, and if the fine were not paid within twenty-four hours, the Nazir should make his report, when suitable orders would be issued. That your petitioner, in consequence of such order, paid the said sum of two hundred rupees to the proper officer of the court.

That although the summons to your petitioner was signed by Mr. Patton as Magistrate and Justice of the Peace, yet the rubikaree of the 14th October, purports to be a proceeding in the Magistrate's Court, and was signed by Mr. Patton as Magistrate only.

That your petitioner being aggrieved by the said order of the Magistrate, immediately presented a petition of appeal to your court, but being subsequently advised that you had no jurisdiction in the case, and that your petitioner as a British subject could obtain redress only in the Supreme Court, he requested permission to withdraw the said petition of appeal, which was returned to him on the 26th of October.

That on the 14th day of November, your petitioner obtained an order from the Supreme Court, calling upon the Magistrate and Justice of the Peace to shew cause, on the 18th day of that month, why a writ of certiorari should not be issued out of the said court commanding him to send or return to the said court the rubikaree, or order or conviction above mentioned. That the period allowed for shewing cause against this order was, by consent, and at the request of Mr. Patton's counsel, enlarged from time to time until the 30th day of November.

That on the date last mentioned, the Advocate General appeared on behalf of the Government, and prolixed a certain affidavit sworn by Mr. Patton on the 28th of November, in which Mr. Patton, among other things, deposed as follows—"And this deponent further saith, that such last mentioned proceedings before this deponent were had, as is usual and customary, in Zillah Criminal courts in the like instances at the prosecution of the Company, and that the said charge or complaint was not investigated by and determined on by this deponent in pursuance of the one hundred and fifth section of a certain act of Parliament passed in the fifty-third year of the reign of his late majesty George the third, chapter one hundred and fifty-five, as is alleged in the affidavit of the said James Pattle, sworn the tenth, and re-sworn the eleventh, day of November instant, but that this deponent investigated the said matter and passed the said sentence of fine under certain Regulations of the Bengal Government."

That in consequence of Mr. Patton's having sworn that he determined the complaint against your petitioner under certain Regulations of the Bengal Government, not named, and not under the act of Parliament above quoted, the majority of the judges of the Supreme Court decided that they had no power to issue the writ of certiorari, and the rule nisi obtain by your petitioner on the 14th November, was accordingly discharged.

That your petitioner in his affidavit sworn the 10th, and re-sworn (in consequence of a clerical error) on the 11th day of November, deposed, among other things as follows—"And this deponent further saith, he, this deponent, is a British subject, and that he has been informed and believes, that the said charge or complaint was investigated by and determined on by the said James Hardwicke Patton in pursuance of the 105th section of a certain act of Parliament, passed in the 53rd year of the reign of His late Majesty George the third, chapter 155, whereby authority is given to the Magistrate of the Zillah or District, in which certain offences therein mentioned may be committed, to have cognizance thereof but by which said act of Parliament a writ of certiorari is given to remove such convictions, and all proceedings relative to the same, to His Majesty's Supreme Court." That your petitioner, at the time of making such affidavit was aware, as appears from other parts of the said affidavit, that if the Magistrate had determined on the said charge in pursuance of the said act of Parliament, he had exceeded his authority, the complaint against your petitioner not being within the scope of the said act; but your petitioner was also aware, that the Regulations of the Bengal Government gave no power to the Magistrate to determine on such a charge (even if it had been made by a native of India and complaining of an injury accompanied with force) against a British subject, and that it could only be investigated by Mr. Patton either under the provisions of the 33d George the third or under the those of the 53d George 3d. That your petitioner having been served with Mr. Patton's summons attested as Justice of the Peace, submitted to his jurisdiction, for your petitioner could not anticipate that a civil servant holding so responsible an office, would entrap him into an admission of jurisdiction, or that if he acted under a mistaken notion of the powers vested in him, whether by act of Parliament or by the Government, that he would afterwards, to screen his illegal order from correction, and to deprive your petitioner of redress, swear by affidavit that he had acted without any reference to any law belonging to the case.

That the Magistrate has not thought it derogatory to the dignity of his office, or opposed to the principles of justice, to appear in the Supreme Court as a partizan in a case decided by himself, and has taken the most active measures to prevent his proceeding being reviewed or any redress being afforded for the wrong he has himself committed by swearing that he decided on the charge under certain Regulations (not named) of the Bengal Government, and that he has stopped the issue of the writ of certiorari, and that he has left to your petitioner no remedy in the Supreme Court, except such as may be obtained by filing a criminal prosecution. He has, to use the language of Mr. Justice Grant, sworn, that he has proceeded not according to law, and has made that this excuse for eluding the Court's jurisdiction—he has pleaded his own wrong as the extenuation of his own illegal acts.

That, under these unparalleled circumstances, your petitioner again applies for redress to your Court, grounding his application on the Magistrate's affidavit before the Supreme Court, that he convicted your petitioner and levied the fine under the Regulations of the Bengal Government. That your petitioner is informed and believes, that there are in fact no Regulations of the Bengal Government under which the Magistrate has any power to try such a charge, when preferred against a British subject, and that unless Mr. Patton acted under the 53d George 3d, which he has sworn he did not, he acted without any legal authority at all: but inasmuch as a majority of the Supreme Court have held the magistrate's affidavit (unless proved to be false upon an indictment for perjury) to be conclusive in regard to their power to call for his proceedings, your petitioner again prefers his petition of appeal to you, that you may admit it, or formally reject it, as you may or may not find certain regulations of the Bengal Government under which the magistrate convicted your petitioner, and caused a fine of two hundred rupees to be levied from him. That assuming the possible existence of such regulations, (however unknown to your petitioner) there can be no doubt that an appeal will lie to you, the Commissioner, against any sentence of the Magistrate passed under their authority; and your petitioner therefore prays, that you will be pleased to call for the record of the case, together with all the proceedings had before the magistrate, and after an investigation of the whole, either quash the conviction and order the return of the fine to your petitioner, as having been levied under an order which was issued in a suit that the magistrate had no power to try, founded upon evidence he was not competent to receive, and passed in direct opposition to the merits of the case, or declare your reasons for finding that you have no jurisdiction in the same.

That in support of this prayer, your petitioner alleges the following reasons:—

1st. The Magistrate was not competent, under the regulations of the Bengal Government, to investigate and decide upon the charge preferred against your petitioner, a British subject, by a British subject.

2nd. The summons attested by Mr. Patton as Justice of the Peace, describes the alleged offence of your petitioner as a contempt of the Magistrate's authority and a violation of an award of Court,—the charge, as set forth in the magistrate's conviction or rubikaree of 14th October, is, that the same alleged offence was in disobedience of the orders of his and your Court. Your petitioner does not conceive it necessary to enter into any argument upon the abstract question of whether there be in all Courts an inherent power of punishing for contempt. It is sufficient to say, that Mr. Patton has solemnly sworn he acted under certain regulations of the Bengal Government, and that those regulations have defined and limited the exercise of any such power. Sec. 2, Reg. XI. of 1795, empowers the zillah Magistrates to punish by fine any person who may resist any process or order of their Courts, provided he be a party amenable to the authority. Clause 2, Sec. 5, Reg. XII. of 1825 enacts that "all persons amenable to the authority of the established criminal Courts, who may be guilty of contempt of Court in any of such Courts," shall be liable to a fine not exceeding 200 rupees; but Sec. 2, Reg. II, 1796, expressly declares, that European British subjects are not amenable to the authority of the Magistrates and other criminal Courts, but only to the Supreme Court of Judicature at Calcutta. It is then clear, that the Magistrate could not have acted in this case either under Reg. XI. of 1796, or Reg. XII. of 1825; it is for him to shew any other regulation of the Bengal Government under which he convicted your petitioner.

3rdly. The alleged offence of your petitioner is stated to have been a contempt of Court under the regulations of the Bengal Government, whereas the act said to have been committed by him can by no possibility be considered a contempt of Court under those regulations; for Sec. 21, Reg. IV. of 1793 explains a contempt of Court to be a contempt committed in open Court, or an undue arrogation of the authority of the Court, or an illegal exertion of judicial authority by a party in his own cause. If then it were true that your petitioner had put a lock upon the door of the Ballygunge tank, how could such a proceeding be a contempt of Court under the regulations of the Bengal Government?

4thly. Upon the face of the Magistrate's rubikaree it clearly appears, that there was no contempt of, or disobedience to, any order of Court on the part of your petitioner. There is not one iota of evidence from the beginning to the end of the proceedings, shewing that your petitioner ever saw or heard of any order prohibiting him from any act in respect to the tank. The Magistrate, indeed, swears, in his affidavit, that in his judgment your petitioner must have been cognizant of an order passed in the case of one Mohun Sing, to which case your petitioner was no party. But your petitioner submits that there is no regulation of the Bengal Government under which a person can be convicted and punished merely on account of a suspicion the Magistrate may arbitrarily entertain.

5th. The Magistrate's rubikaree is dated the 14th October, and yet a part of the grounds of his decision was a kifayat or report of the omiah of the thannah, made on and bearing date the 15th day of the said month; and neither your petitioner nor his mookhtar ever saw, or heard of, or were in any way made acquainted with, the existence of such report, nor does it appear to have been verified by the oath of any persons; on the contrary, it is manifestly an exaggerated statement couched in servile and adulatory language, which of itself ought to make it incredible, instead of forming the ground-work of a judicial proceeding.

6th. It appears from a rubikaree of your Court, dated 29th October, that the depositions of certain witnesses which formed a part of the grounds of the Magistrate's conviction, had never been signed by such witnesses, and your petitioner submits that the receiving such depositions as evidence was in direct opposition to the provisions of Clause 15, Reg. IX. 1793.

7th. The evidence in the case clearly proved that your petitioner was not the person who caused the door of the tank to be locked.—Govindpersaud Bose, the proprietor of the tank, having appeared before the Magistrate and declared that the lock was put upon the tank by his directions, and in pursuance of an order of Mr. Barlow, the former Magistrate, dated 6th February, 1833, which declared him to be the proprietor of the tank and at liberty to do any thing he pleased with it, which said order was produced by the said Govindpersaud before the Magistrate, who, however, thought fit to inflict upon the said Govindpersaud a fine of two hundred rupees, commutable to six months' imprisonment, for having so locked the door of the tank. Now your petitioner begs to observe, that it must be clear to you that justice at least demanded that Govindpersaud should have been required to justify the confession he had made, and only in failure of doing so to abide by the consequences; and that, therefore, neither reason or justice or law could warrant, in the absence of all other evidence and all opportunity for justification, the orders passed by Mr. Patton. This case of Govindpersaud Bose is now pending in appeal in your Court, and your petitioner only refers to it to shew that the Magistrate actually fined another party for having confessed that he did that act, the commission of which is alleged to have been an offence on the part of your petitioner. The Magistrate, indeed, states, that he believes Govindpersaud asserted that he locked the door of the tank, merely with a view to assist your petitioner in his case; but there is not one word of evidence produced to support this most unauthorized surmise. While, on the contrary, there is the positive testimony of Govindpersaud that he did direct the door to be locked; and Mr. Barlow's order of 6th February, 1833, passed under Reg. XV., 1824, has never been appealed against, and cannot now be legally altered except by a regular suit in a civil Court, and it is therefore conclusive in favor of Govindpersaud's right to do that which he has voluntarily declared he has done.

8th. The following fact your petitioner hopes, will not fail to shew to you in their true light the features of the present case, viz. The plaintiff, Mr. Kirchoffer, has tanks close to him, from which he and his people can always with convenience take water, but to gratify the vindictiveness arising from a previous quarrel with your petitioner's servants, in which the latter were successful on appeal before you, he gets up this complaint, supporting it by most incredible evidence. Your petitioner requests you will consider with what probability it has been urged by this litigious individual that great injury has been sustained by a vast number of people from the door to this tank being shut, whilst ever since Mr. Barlow's order, dated 6th February 1833, the tank has been frequently locked up, and the door shut, without any complaint having been ever preferred by any one except Mr. Kirchoffer.

Your petitioner respectfully solicits your early decision on this appeal, as unless he can obtain from your Court the redress he considers to be due to him, it is his intention to solicit the interference of the Government.

(Signed) JAMES PATTLE.

By his constituted Attorney.

Calcutta, Dec. 10, 1836.

M. A. BIGNELL.

The above petition, and the whole of the papers in the case, English as well as Persian, having been read, Mr. Bignell said that he would not trouble the Court by repeating the arguments urged in his petition of appeal, but there were one or two additional observations he would wish to make. The letters of Mr. Patton, addressed to the Secretary to the Bengal Government, and dated 7th and 19th November, (copies of which had been obtained after the appeal was presented) he would not comment upon, as they were not essential to the decision of the case; but they were singular documents, and exhibited a strange confusion of ideas; how Mr. Patton could suppose that "a summoning jurisdiction" in one capacity, was to enable him to pass sentence in another and a very different capacity, upon the party so summoned, it was not easy to understand. Mr. Patton's affidavit was also curiously inconsistent with the concluding paragraph of the first of these letters. In his affidavit he had sworn as follows:—

"And this deponent further saith, that the such last mentioned proceedings before this deponent, were had, as is usual and customary in zillah criminal Courts, at the prosecution of the Company, and that the said charge or complaint was not investigated by and determined on by this deponent in pursuance of the 105th Section of a certain Act of Parliament, passed in the 53d year of the reign of his late Majesty George the Third, Chapter 155, as is alleged in the affidavit of the said James Pattle, sworn to the 10th and re-sworn the 11th day of November instant; but that this deponent investigated the said matter, and passed the said sentence of fine, under certain regulations of the Bengal Government. And this deponent further saith, that in proof of this deponent not having acted in pursuance of the said 105th Section of the said Act of Parliament, he has not transmitted copies of conviction and other proceedings relative thereto, to the Government, nor the amount of the fine so levied as aforesaid to the Clerk of the Crown of this Hon'ble Court; nor was the subject matter of the said charge in the judgment of this deponent within the scope or meaning of the said Act of Parliament."

Now in his letter to Government of the 7th November Mr. Patten wrote:—"The defendant James Pattle, was convicted by me under the Acts of Parliament, and Regulations of the Government in such cases made and provided, copy of which conviction shall hereafter be transmitted if necessary. But the Magistrate's letter to the Commissioner, of the 10th January, required more particular notice, as he there stated under what regulations he had acted. These were clause 5, sect. 26, reg. 20 of 1817 and sect. 19, reg. 9 of 1807. The last of these regulations had nothing whatever to do with the present matter; it empowered the Magistrate to pass sentence of imprisonment and corporal punishment not exceeding thirty rattans, or of imprisonment and fine, in certain cases not expressly provided for in former regulations; but it, of course, gave him no power over persons expressly exempted from his jurisdiction by former regulations, nor had it the slightest reference to contempts of Court or resistance of process. Clause 5, sec. 26, reg. 20 of 1817 (which had escaped Mr. Bignell's attention at the time he drew the petition of appeal) was perhaps somewhat loosely weighed; but there could be no possible doubt as to its meaning. The legislature of the day had no power to render British subjects amenable to the criminal Courts of the Company; nothing could do that, except an Act of Parliament. This of itself would be sufficient to shew that the Magistrate had no jurisdiction under the regulation he quoted; but in point of fact, the words of the section would not allow of Mr. Patton's construction. Although the 5th clause says generally, that "in all instances of resistance to the process of a Magistrate," certain punishments may be inflicted, yet that clause could not be read alone and separate from the context. Clause 2, of the same section, declared that the subsequent clauses were enacted in modification of the provisions contained in Secs. 2 and 4. Reg. XI. of 1796; and the 3rd clause began, not "If any person convicted of resisting the process of a Magistrate, but, if the person convicted"—clearly referring to the person specified in regulation XI. of 1796, who was there declared to be "a person amenable to the authority of the zillah and city Magistrates." The argument of the petition of appeal remained therefore unshaken upon this point, which was by far the most important one in the case. But even supposing for the sake of argument, that Mr. Patton had jurisdiction over Mr. Pattie under the regulations, what offence had been committed? There was no evidence of any interference as to the tank on the part of Mr. Pattie, except the depositions of some of Mr. Kirchhoff's own servants. These depositions, even if true, were inadmissible in evidence, as shewn in the 6th reason of the petition of appeal; but the testimony was altogether worthless. Could Mr. Pattie have declared to these men that he had rented the tank? The fact was notoriously the reverse, and besides, Govind Persaud had declared that he was the person who ordered the lock to be affixed. Then again, if Mr. Pattie had shut up the tank, still there was no proof that he was cognizant of any order of Court prohibiting him from doing so, and there could therefore, have been no contempt or disobedience on his part. Lastly, even if Mr. Pattie had caused the tank to be locked, and had known of the order in Mohun Sing's case, still he (Mr. Bignell) would contend that the order was a nullity, and that disobedience to it could not be a punishable offence. It was an order passed by the Magistrate under regt. 15 of 1824, and it had been ruled by the Sudder Nizamut Adawlut in their circular letter of the 17th of December 1830, that that regulation did not empower Magistrates to try any case, in which each of the parties had not "a permanent interest in the land, or other property, of which the possession was disputed." Now Mohun Sing had no kind of permanent interest in the tank; the Magistrate's order was, therefore, clearly null and void, as having been passed by an incompetent authority; and how can disobedience to it (supposing such disobedience to have taken place) be a crime in the eye of the law? When the regulations speak of resistance to the process or order of a Magistrate, they must be taken to mean, resistance to some legal process or order. The two last observations applied to the case of Govindpersaud Bose, the proprietor of the tank: he acknowledged that he had caused the tank to be locked, and added that he had done so under the authority of Mr. Barlow's order in 1833, and there was nothing in the world to shew that he had ever heard of the subsequent irregular and illegal proceedings in the case of Mohun Sing, by which an important question of right was endeavoured to be decided in the absence of the only person really interested in it.

The presiding Judge (Mr. E. Barwell) observed, that he should perhaps save some trouble Mr. Bignell, by stating at once that he considered his objections to the jurisdiction to be fatal to the Magistrate's proceedings. Mr. Patton had sworn that he had convicted and fined Mr. Pattie under the authority of the Regulation of Government, and he (Mr. Barwell) was bound to say that there was, in his opinion, no Regulation under which the Magistrate had any power to pass such a sentence against a British subject. he must, therefore, quash the Magistrate's proceedings, and order the fine that had been levied to be returned to Mr. Pattie. At the same time he must add, that it was upon the law, and not the merits of the case, that he decided in favor of the appellant. If the witnesses were to be believed, and he saw no reason to discredit them, Mr. Pattie had taken an active part in shutting up the tank, and preventing people having access to it. It was true there was no direct evidence that Mr. Pattie was acquainted with the orders in Mohun Sing's case, but as this man was his own servant, there was the strongest possible presumption that he was acquainted with them. He (Mr. Barwell) admitted the validity of Mr. Bignell's objection to the proceedings in that case, as having been improperly held by the criminal authorities under Reg. 15 of 1824, but he could not consider this a sufficient justification of a resistance to the orders passed. For the reason, however that he had already stated, he should pass his orders that the magistrate's order of the 14th Oct. last be set aside and the fine be returned to the appellant, Mr. James Pattie. As to Govindpersaud Bose, he saw no reason to interfere with the order of the Court below.

The following are the three letters of the Magistrate referred to by Mr. Bignell.

Copies—No. 413.

To R. D. MANGLES, Esq.

Secy. to the Govt. of Bengal, Judicial Department.

SIR,—I beg leave to forward copy of a notice, personally served on me, on Saturday night last, by an individual calling himself Smally.

2. I request you will do me the favour of submitting the document for the consideration of the Right Honourable the Governor of Bengal, with a request, that I may be permitted to place myself in immediate communication with the law officers of the Government, and that they be instructed to afford me their counsel and advice on the occasion.

3. With reference to the shortness of the period allowed in the notice, I beg respectfully to solicit his Lordship's early orders on the subject.

4. The defendant James Pattie, was convicted by me under the Acts of Parliament, and Regulations of the Government, in such cases made and provided; copy of which conviction shall hereafter be transmitted, if necessary.

I am, &c.

No. 424.

To R. D. MANGLES, Esq.

Secy. to the Govt. of Bengal, Judicial Department.

SIR,—Apprehensive lest an inference foreign to my purpose, and at variance with the true state of the case might be drawn from that part of the concluding paragraph of my letter of the 7th instant, which refers to "Acts of Parliament," I beg leave herewith specifically to declare, that my allusion to them, in connection with the conviction of the defendant James Pattle, related solely to the powers with which they vest me as a Justice of the Peace, in which capacity alone, I have a summoning jurisdiction over British subjects, to bring them before me for all unlawful acts done by them, of what nature soever.

Although a moment's reflection will point out the absurdity of the assumption that the conviction in question was made under the joint provisions of authorities, essentially and constitutionally incompatible with each other, yet that construction, with all its palpable inconcurrences, might with ingenuity be put on the reading of the context: it is to guard against this misapprehension, that I now address you, in doing which I would be distinctly understood to disclaim the sanction of any authority for my judgment in the matter under view, than that of the Regulation of the Government.

I remain, &c.

Zillah, 24-Perghs., the 19th Nov., 1836.

(No. 7.)

TO H. M. PIGOU, ESQUIRE.

Commissioner of Circuit, 18th Division, Allipore.

SIR,—I have to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 9th instant, with its enclosure, and to state in reply, that the only observation I have to make with reference to the case under consideration, is, that I passed judgment therein in virtue of discretionary power vested in a Magistrate by Clause V. Sect. XXVI. Regulation XX. 1817, and Sect. XIX. Regulation IX. 1807, and under the sanction of that inherent power constitutionally possessed by every court of record in existence to enforce its awards and uphold its authority, without which law is a dead letter and the tribunals of justice a vain and empty pageant.

2d.—As connected with the subject, I transmit for the purpose of being appended to the rest of the papers, the depositions of sundry residents of Ballygunge, taken by me in further prosecution of the enquiry relative to the propriety of the tank in which the present matter has originated. The testimony is entitled to consideration and weight, owing to the extreme respectability of the deposing parties and their long sojourn in the immediate neighbourhood in which the tank is situated.

I am, Sir, your most obt. servt.,

ZILLAH 24 PERGUNNAHS—FOUZDARY.

ALLIPORE, TUESDAY, MARCH 7, 1836.

Before J. H. Patton, Esq., Magistrate.

Several petitions were this day received on stamps but chiefly from poor and indigent natives connected with petty assaults and affairs, none of any interest. Several little cases were also gone into, and in the course of business, the following communication was received by the Magistrate, from the judge of 24-Pergunnahs.

TO J. H. PATTON, ESQ.

Magistrate of Zillah 24-Pergunnahs.

Sessions Court.

SIR,—The accompanying copies of my proceedings of yesterday's date, and of a letter this day, addressed by me to the Registrar of the Sudder Nizamut Adawlut, relative to the case in which you imposed a fine of 200 rupees upon Mr. James Pattle for resistance of process, are transmitted for your information.

I am, Sir, your most obedient Servant,

E. R. BANWELL, Sessions Judge.

Zillah 24-Perghs. Sessions Judge's Court, March 4, 1837.

TO J. F. M. REID, ESQ.,

Registrar to the Court of Nizamut Adawlut, Fort Wm. Sessions Department.

SIR,—In conformity with the orders of the Court of Sudder Nizamut Adawlut, communicated in your letter No. 66, under date 17th January last, to the Commissioner of Circuit for the 18th Division, I have the honor to re-submit for the consideration, and further orders of the Court, and of Government, the papers connected with the case in which Mr. Patton the magistrate of the 24-Pergunnahs fined Mr. James Pattle, the senior member of the Sudder Board of Revenue, residing at Ballygunge, the sum of 200 Rs. for resistance of process, — copies of my own proceedings, held under yesterday's date on that case, the appeal in which, was transferred to me from the Commissioner's Court agreeably to the recent orders of Government, and the provisions of Act VII. of 1835, for adjudication.

2d. In proceeding to an investigation of this case, I have endeavoured, as much as possible, to dismiss from my mind every impression connected with the reputation which it cannot be denied Mr. Pattle so generally bears among the majority of our service, as a man of despotic, unjust, and arbitrary temper; neither did I conceive that reference should be had to the high official situation held by that gentleman, a consideration of which, in my opinion, would have materially tended to aggravate an offence for which any other individual unacquainted with the Laws and Regulations of the country, or unaware of the mischievous effects likely to ensue, from an open resistance to the authority of the magistrate of a district, might have pleaded the excuse of ignorance.

3d. I entered, therefore, upon the enquiry with, I hope, as much impartiality as I should have done, had the appellant been any other British-born subject, residing in the interior of the country, or beyond the confines of the Mahabutta Ditch; and the principal points to which I conceived it right to direct my attention, were, first the validity of the proofs afforded in evidence of the fact of resistance of process, or contempt of the magistrate's authority on the part of Mr. Pattle; and secondly, how far the magistrate was borne out by the Regulations under which he acted, and which are stated, in a letter addressed by him to the Commissioner, dated 10th January last, to have been Regulation XX, of 1817, Clause V, Section XXVI, and Regulation IX, of 1807, Section XIX, in imposing the penalty awarded by him as a punishment for the breach of his orders relative to the matter in dispute.

4th. In regard to the first point, the annexed English translations of the depositions of credible and respectable witnesses, delivered on oath before the magistrate of the Pergunnahs, the originals of which are with the record of the case, will, I think, satisfy the superior court, that Mr. Pattle not only himself evinced the most indecorous defiance of the orders of the Magistrate issued on just and reasonable grounds for throwing open the tank, which has been the object of contention to the community of Ballygunge, but that he has been the cause of similar resistance of authority in others, who, but for his support and encouragement, would never have dared to be guilty of such contempt towards any European functionary vested with magisterial powers.

5th.—On the second point, therefore, I am of opinion that Mr. Patton was justified by every principle of equity and justice, as well as by virtue of that inherent power, which he states to be constitutionally possessed by every Court of Record in existence, to enforce its awards, and uphold its authority, in imposing the penalty levied from the offending party; but that the sentence has been nullified by an unfortunate defect in the existing laws, which provide no rules empowering a Magistrate in the Company's service to inflict punishment on a British subject for any offence, similar to that with which the appellant in this case stands convicted. Neither clause V., section XXVI., Regulation XX., of 1817, nor the previous enactments modified by that rule, nor any Regulations subsequently promulgated, can, in my opinion, be considered applicable to such cases; while on the other hand, the provisions of Regulation II., of 1796, and Regulation XV., of 1806, clearly exempt British-born subjects from the operation of the Regulations above quoted.

6th.—I have therefore been most reluctantly compelled to direct the remission of the fine imposed by the magistrate of the 24-Pergunnahs upon Mr. Pattle, while confirming that inflicted upon the native proprietor of the tank in dispute, Gobind Persaud Bose, for having allowed himself, under the pernicious influence of the former individual, to be drawn into a direct contravention of the Magistrate's orders.

7.—It will remain with the superior Court and with the Government, to apply such remedy as they may deem proper to a state of things most assuredly, as observed by the Secretary to Government, in the Judicial Department, in his letter to the Court, under date 6th December last, involving questions of the utmost general interest and importance.

8th.—Copies of this address, and of my proceedings of yesterday's date, have been furnished to Mr. Patton.

I have, &c.

We give the translations of the depositions referred to in the above letter, having had them among our notes, which we made in the progress of this long pending suit.

TRANSLATION NO 1.—Kurree Bux Bheestie, in the employ of Mr. Kirchoffer, deposed. That according to the orders of the Magistrate, the deponent went to the tank and having placed his bag on the bank, was about to fill it with water, when this deponent saw Mr. Pattle's bheestie, who had come to the tank for the same purpose. The deponent finding the water near him very muddy, asked Mr. Pattle's bheestie where he, the deponent should fill his bag from, and was requested by Mr. Pattle's man to take water from the side near which he was standing; this deponent accordingly went to that side, and while filling water Mohun Singh, a durwan in the employ of Mr. Pattle, desired his master's bheestie to retire from the tank, and kept this deponent a prisoner in the tank. This deponent requested that the thana should be informed of his having been detained. After a little time, Khodayar Khan jemadar came to the tank and desired Mohun Singh to release this deponent; after which this deponent informed his own employer of what had happened, and Mr. Kirchoffer desired his kitmutghar and durwan, to accompany this deponent to the tank. While this deponent was filling his bag with water from it, Mr. Pattle came to the tank, and informed this deponent, that the tank belonged to him, Mr. Pattle, and that he would not consent to any person's having access to it for water, and this deponent has seen a padlock on the door of the tank in question.

No. 2.—Sobrathee Kitmutgar, in the employ of Mr. Kirchoffer, deposed. That in obedience to his master's orders, he accompanied Curum Bux bheestie, and his master's durwan, to the tank. On arriving at it, Mohun Singh, in the employ of Mr. Pattle, informed this deponent and his companions, that if they dipped a finger into the water, he Mohun Singh, would confine this deponent and his companions. During this time Mr. Pattle came to the tank, and having heard the above conversation, desired a lock to be put on the door of the tank, and said that he, Mr. Pattle, would not allow access to it for water; and this deponent further saith that the lock is yet on the door.

No. 3.—Bisonath Durwan, in the employ of Mr. Kirchoffer, deposed. That in obedience to his master's orders, this deponent accompanied the kitmutgar, and bheestie to the tank, and that while the bheestie was filling his bag with water, Mr. Pattle, came to the tank and ordered that the bheestie should be allowed to take but one bag of water, and that the door of the tank, should be locked up as the tank belonging to him, Mr. Pattle, and as he would not allow access to it for water. This deponent further said, that after the occasion above alluded to, his master's bheestie did not go again to the tank.

No. 4.—Khodayar Khan, Jemadar of the Thontollah Phouree, deposed.—That Mr. Pattle said, that he had bought the tank from Gobind Baboo for a hundred rupees, and that he would not allow any person to take water from it, and that the deponent reported the above to the thana. Having seen the tank door locked outside, this deponent went and informed the said Mr. Pattle of it, and that the ryuts were prevented from supplying themselves with water. SUDDER BOARD OF REVENUE.

CONSULTATION, — MONDAY, FEBRUARY 20, 1837.

SETTLEMENTS OF ESTATES — ZILLAH BACKERGUNGE.

Mr. Secretary Mangles on the 7th instant, communicated the orders of the Right Hon'ble the Governor-General, regarding four settlements in the abovementioned district.

The classes were treated as if they were proprietors, that is to say, the classes amongst whom the profits arising from the limitation of the Government demand were distributed, were in the above four settlements peculiarly numerous, and formed a long chain of holders one under another. The share of the actual rent of the land given up by Government as proprietary profit, was "much larger than that authorized by law or custom," by rent being understood either the money actually paid by cultivators who had no other claim but of farmers under the lowest of the chain of holders, or that which such farmers would have paid, had the land been offered to them, instead of being, as a part of these lands would appear to be, cultivated by one of the chain of holders himself, at a low rate of payment to his immediate superior.

The Board were not satisfied that the whole of the extraordinary amount of profit allowed, was rendered necessary by the circumstances which alone ever can be legitimately taken into consideration in limiting the demand of Revenue; and they objected to the principle on which that profit had been made to depend on the greater or lesser number of subordinate holders in the chain of assumptive proprietors; at the same time, they explained that they wished for no arbitrary interference with existing customs; but that they thought, when no party had any legal rights, all having reclaimed the land without authority or stipulation, it was peculiarly the duty of the officers of Government to be very cautious in allowing no greater extension to a pernicious system than they found in actual existence.

The very general information before them did not appear to warrant either the taking of so unusually small a portion of the rent as the Government assessment, or the admission of so unusual a number of distinct classes of rent holders. They accordingly informed Mr. Dampier, first, that the jumma must be assessed solely with reference to the nature and situation of the lands, and to the original expence and difficulty of reclaiming them; and that the profit to the reclaimers must in all cases be equally granted, whether the original cultivator had retained his interests entire in his own hands, or sublet them to others to any extent. Secondly, they distinctly directed him to make a special report upon the claim of each individual in the claim of assumptive tenants, pointing out in what manner, and to what extent, the person with whom he had engaged, had earned a right of engagement. And thirdly, they ordered that in cases where the engager had originally let out any part of his interests to others, the net profit should be proportionally divided between the several parties without diminishing the Government Revenue in order to make up to any party the difference between an entire estate, and a part only of an estate.

Instead of obeying the Board's instructions, Mr. Dampier, in his letter dated the 27th of November 1833, did little more than describe generally the origin and character of the tenures of the Talookdars, whether Puteet Abadee, Ousat, or Gauteedars, land or Hawaldars, Neem Hawaldars, and Kersah ryuts according to the result of his enquiries in the Soonderbuns.

Mr. Mangles observed, that with reference to the first point noticed, Mr. Dampier contents himself with endeavouring to shew that the Jumma assessed is not too low, from a comparison with the rate per Beegah overhead in these settlements, with that in the settlement of Puteet Abadee Talooks in the 24-Pergunnahs, and with the stipulated rate payable by Soonderbun grantees after the expiration of 23 years from the grant, and with regard to this point, the Board observed that "as the Revenue of Government did not suffer, there could be no objection to the assessment as far as the interests of Government are concerned."

But the Right Hon'ble the Governor of Bengal could not feel satisfied on this point without more specific information. The late Commissioner had by no means met the objections of the Board to the principle on which the assessments had been made. That principle and the effects of it are thus described in another letter from Mr. Dampier to the Board, dated the 22d of September 1833, in which he, in remarking on the Standard of assessment which had been assumed for the lands reclaimed from the Soonderbuns in this very same district, says: — "The first step taken in each of these Jumma Bundeeds is to ascertain the produce of the soil as regards the staple crops of the district (rice) and that being found and the rates of the lower classes in consequence decided upon, the distribution of profits in the shape of rent to the superior classes is easily made; and the rate of Government revenue depends is much on the number of these 'intermediate classes,' as on the produce of the staple crops of the talook."

The comparison of rates distributed by Mr. Dampier himself, is very disadvantageous to these settlements. The ultimate jumma of land granted in the Soonderbuns will be nearly double the jumma of these lands, although the situation of such grants in the forest bordering on the 24-Pergunnahs is understood to be very inferior to that of the lands reclaimed from the Backergunge jungle, and although it is necessary to induce persons to clear those grants, which are now a dense forest, whereas we have these lands already cleared, to our hands, and in high cultivation. Mr. Dampier said that the rate of his jumma per beegah of 1,600 square yards, over all the Backergunge settlements from 4a. 0p. to 4a. 10p. but in these four cases the kaneer being taken to equal 8a. 2c. 12cn. of a Bengal beegah, the jumma averages no more than 3a. 5½p.

From the manner in which the jumma-bundeeds have been prepared, it is impossible to ascertain with certainty to what sum the deductions allowed to the various classes of holders amount in the aggregate: for no column shows the actual rent of the land. All that appears is the amount paid by one class to its intermediate superior. Thus, whilst a ryut's rate of rent is set down at, say rupees 6 per kaneer, for the land immediately paid for by him, the rates of rent set down for the Neem Hawaldars, Hawaldars, and Ousat Talookdars, for such land as is immediately paid for by them, are no more than say rupees 4-rupees 2, 12-and rupees 2 respectively. It is obvious that the aggregate of no one set of these payments constitutes the rent of an estate, and that all the difference between the last specified rates, and the rate paid by the ryuts is a part of the proprietary profit arising out of the limitation of the Government demand. Yet although the rents of the whole of the lands pass through the hands of one or more of the last mentioned classes, no part of the profit so given up to them appears upon the proceedings, nor can the amount thereof be accurately extracted from them because the true value of the soil immediately cultivated by them is not stated.

In about Tuktaboonea, for instance, the talookdars who engage for the revenue receive rupees 2,036: according to the usual process in settling lands in well peopled districts, an engaging proprietor of an estate yielding rent to the above amount, would be allowed about five per cent for village expenses, rupees 105, and a further proprietary profit of twenty per cent on the jumma, rupees 330; the jumma thus calculated would be rupees 1,651. Here, his jumma has been assessed at only rupees 1,444, leaving him an extraordinary profit of nearly half as much again as the regulation allowance. If the true rent of the lands were only rupees 2,086 as above stated, the Governor of Bengal would by no means wish it to be understood that he would object to this extraordinary profit for a Sunderbun estate. It must not, however, be forgotten, that the safety of a settlement depends as much on the moderation of the rates of rent on which it is leased, as on the profit left to the engaging party; and it is hoped that he rents are moderately assumed in this settlement, since the highest rate is rupees 6 per kanee, whereas formerly it is said rupees 12 per kanee used to be exacted.

But besides the above deduction of rupees 642 left to the talookdars, the net profits of the Ouset talookdar, the Hawaladar, and the Neem Hawaladars have to be taken into calculation. There are 5d. 13k. 10g. 0c. 1k. of land cultivated, and of these the Ouset talookdar holds 14d. 3k. 13gs. 3c. 1k. at the rate of rupees 2 per kanee, which he pays to the talookdar for land for which it appears that the ryots are glad to pay rupees 6. By this process a further deduction of about rupees 911 is made or half as much again as the whole profit of the engaging party. This sum is distributed by the Ouset talookdar and the Hawaladars and Neem Hawaladars below him: the remaining 37d. 9k. 12g. 1c. 1k. of land are held by Hawaladars directly of the talookdar, at a rent of no more than rupees 2-12 per kanee; whereby it is probable that a further deduction of about rupees 1,955 has been made, which is distributed between the Hawaladars paying directly to the talookdar, and the Neem Hawaladars under them. It thus appears that out of assets (it is hoped) moderately assumed at rupees 5,585, the proprietary classes have been allowed a profit of rupees 3,508 the jumma being no more than one-fourth part of the true rental.

An alienation of the public dues so extensive, (involving, it would seem, if the principle upon which these settlements have been made be admitted, a corresponding sacrifice of revenue throughout the large tracts of country reclaimed from the Backergunge forests since the date of the permanent settlement,) cannot of course, be sanctioned upon the faith of vague and general assertions that such an assessment as Mr. Dampier has proposed, is as much as the lands will bear.

With reference to the second point of the Board's instructions to Mr. Dampier, his Lordship remarks that that gentleman made no attempt to carry that part of his orders into effect, neither has he given any reason for not having done so. The general observations of the late Commissioner, cannot answer the purpose of the report on the special claims of certain specified individuals which was called for from him.

With reference to the third point in the Board's orders, His Lordship directed Mr. Mangles to observe, that the principle therein declared seems to be identical with the fundamental axiom of the land tax of India, as laid down in the Preamble to regulation XLIV. of 1793; on the other, the principle on which the late Commissioner in the Sunderbuns proceeded, is not only injurious to the interests of the revenue, but must operate unfairly towards individuals, and is, in the abstract, highly impolitic as an agricultural measure. Supposing two individuals to have been engaged in reclaiming two equal parcels of land, one of whom had employed his own capital throughout and retained the whole profits immediately in his own hands, and the other had either made over to others holding of him a portion of his profits for valuable considerations or else, being unable to cultivate entirely with his own capital, had called in small capitalists to assist him, on consideration of holding under him and of sharing the profits with him: by the principles which have been acted upon in these settlements, a much higher jumma would be assessed upon the first parcel of land than upon the second, to the unfair loss of the first speculators, the discouragement of the best method of improvement, and the fostering of a very bad system of sub-tenancy.

In the very case which has been remarked upon, in this letter, one portion of the same estate pays about nine annas a kanee more jumma to Government than the other portion, merely because of the difference in the methods by which the body of improvers have chosen to carry on their work in two parts of the same property.

In the foregoing arguments the principle upon which these (and it is believed many other) settlements have been formed by the late Commissioner and his assistants, along the line of country on the skirts of Backergunge, Sunderbuns, has alone been discussed; but there are manifestly other weighty considerations which must be taken into account before these settlements can be finally disposed of.

The point at issue,—viz., how the right of the state to "a certain proportion of the annual produce of every beegah of land, demandable according to the local custom, in money or kind," is to be reconciled with the just or equitable claims of the parties among whom, as it appears from the settlement proceedings before His Lordship, so large a portion of the net rent of the land is divided, to the necessary defeasance of the state right of the above referred to, is rendered one of much importance to the Government by the great extent and value of the lands which having been reclaimed from the Backergunge Sunderbuns since the date of the permanent settlement, have already been, or will probably shortly be, adjudged liable to assessment. On the other hand, it is clear that if the numerous gradations of tenures existing in the four estates of which the settlements are now before His Lordship extend throughout the tract in question, the import and well being of a large and useful class of the agricultural community in Zillah Backergunge, must depend upon the manner in which the question under consideration is dealt with. For if the position taken up by Mr. Dampier, be to any considerable extent correct, it is obvious that the rule laid down by the Board for the guidance of the late Commissioner, stated under the third head, could not be carried into practical effect, without intruding deeply upon the means hitherto (apparently) enjoyed by the different grades of middlemen. Further, as a consideration affecting both parties, but more especially the Government, it may reasonably be apprehended that any very strict assertion of the abstract right of Government, to the detriment of the class, or classes by whom the existing clearings of the Sunderbun Forest have been made, would tend to discourage enterprise, and mischievously to retard, if not altogether to prevent, further operations of a like nature.

Upon every ground, therefore, further and more definite information is indispensable, before orders can be passed which must either involve a very considerable relinquishment of those dues, to which, under an essential principle of the Indian land-tax, the state is unquestionably entitled of strict right; or hazard, to say the least, the infliction of much suffering, and perhaps of wrong, upon a very useful and apparently industrious and deserving class of agriculturists. For it must not be forgotten that though these persons have cultivated without license, the waste lands appertaining to the state, they were permitted to enjoy what was originally usurped without disturbance, or even demand of revenue on the part of Government, during a long term of years, and that their habits of life must have been formed in a great measure, upon their hitherto untaxed income.

The points (in addition to the question specified under the second head, in paragraph 6 of these orders to which a clear reply is indispensable) upon which the Governor has requested that fuller and more complete information may be obtained and reported, are as follow :

Firstly. These numerous tenures interposed between the actual cultivation of the soil and the highest party to whom rent is paid, exist throughout the newly reclaimed lands declared liable to assessment, or which are considered obnoxious thereto, in Zillah Backergunge ; and have all the middlemen, or the generality, practically contributed in money, time, or labor to the clearing of the jungle ?

Secondly. What is the difference taken in clearings situated in different quarters of the district, between fair rent, i. e. that paid by a cultivator without any but leasehold, or contract rights, and the receipts of the parties considered by Mr. Dampier to be entitled to enter into immediate engagements for the revenue with Government ?

Thirdly. About what dates have the clearings in question been severally made ?

Fourthly. Is the clearing of the jungle now advancing, and if so, by what classes of persons and under what system is it now being conducted ?

Fifthly. Have all the parties whom Mr. Dampier has constituted sudder malgoozars, done more than merely grant pottahs for the cultivation of the Government waste ; have they all bonâ fide expended capital, or otherwise contributed effectual assistance towards the clearing of the jungle ?

The sixth point which his lordship desires to have cleared up is this :—He is doubtful, from Mr. Dampier's settlement proceedings, whether the whole of the Government revenue has not been taken from the share of the rent heretofore enjoyed by the party whom he has constituted the sudder malgoozar ; at any rate it is clear that a smaller proportion of the rent received has been left in his hands than in those of the middlemen beneath him in the scale, and if all have contributed their quota towards the sudder jumma, it is no where shewn how the rent was previously divided. It is essential that this matter should be explained, for if any modification of the strict revenue principle stated in the opening paragraphs of this letter can be admitted, it would appear to his lordship that it cannot be necessary to grant to any tenant in the scale a larger share of the rent than may be an adequate compensation for the actual risks and responsibilities of his situation. But in one of the settlements now before him, the Governor remarks, that whilst only 8 annas out of rs. 2-8 per kane, which he receives, are left to the sudder malgoozar on the scale, and rupees 2 per kane to the person below the farmer : the reason for such differences should be clearly stated.

The Governor is not aware of any reason why land (and such there appears to be) held in nij jote by any of the middlemen, or let to ryots by any of those persons superior to the grade immediately above the ryots, should not, in the first instance, pay the ryotwara rate of rent ; and in the second, the rate paid by the lowest grade of middlemen to their immediate superior, at present under Mr. Dampier's jumma-bundees, it seems that the parties in question pay at one rate, to wit that calculated upon their receipts from the privileged class immediately below them in the series, for all land, whether underlet to that privileged class, or disposed of in the more profitable manner above referred to. This point must also be investigated and reported on.

Finally, his lordship is very desirous that it should be ascertained whether the claims of some at least, of the middlemen in the estates could not be advantageously got rid of with their ready consent, by assigning to those parties on favorable terms, new grants of the waste in the vicinity of their existing tenures. Such an arrangement would, if practicable, be very desirable ; and with a view to effecting it, or at any rate, to the regular parcelling out, upon formal pottahs of the Backergunge Soondurbuns, (which appear to be much more valuable than those of the Twenty-four Pergunnahs and Jessore) and to thus avoiding future uncertainty and litigation, as well as embarrassing prescriptive claims, like those above treated on, the Board are requested to report whether measures ought not be taken early in the ensuing season for ascertaining by scientific survey what lands have been brought into cultivation beyond those accounted for in Mr. Dampier's settlements and for plotting out the forest into definite and convenient lots for the tenders of parties desirous to become grantees. The terms of the grants, unless the Board think that they should correspond exactly with those prescribed for the Twenty-four Pergunnahs, may be discussed at the same time. It would not, however, with reference to the superior value of the Backergunge Soondurbuns, appear to the Governor to be necessary, or consistent with the orders of the Honorable Court, to grant tenures in perpetuity. Grants for fifty years, on terms similar in principle to those sanctioned for Assam, would probably hold out sufficient encouragement to enterprise.

In their reply to this requisition, the Board are required to state for what period the first settlements ought, in their judgment, to be made with the parties, who, without pottahs from the public authorities, have brought land on the skirts of the Sunderbuns in Backergunge or elsewhere into cultivation. The orders of the Hon'ble Court above alluded to, as well as general policy, preclude a perpetual settlement ; and it appears from a part of Mr. Dampier's letter of the 27th of November 1833, that he has not led the parties concerned to expect any such annuity.

The Governor feels that the subject matter of those orders is of great importance, and that after the long delay which circumstances have induced, prompt and effectual measures are absolutely necessary to carry them into effect in such a manner as to enable him to dispose of the Backergunge Sunderbun settlements in a satisfactory manner, and at an early date. In order to these ends, and as Mr. Slakespeare, the Commissioner in the Sunderbuns, upon which the duty would, in ordinary course, devolve, is understood to be fully engaged in enquiries connected with the Puteetabody Mehals (granted by Mr. Hinckell) in Zillah Jessore, His Lordship has been pleased to assign the task of carrying their requisition into effect to Mr. Staniforth, the Collector of Backergunge, an officer who has evinced much ability and patience of investigation in the conduct of revenue settlements in another quarter. The Board are desired to instruct him accordingly, directing him to commence at once upon whatever preliminary enquiries may be practicable whilst he retains charge of his present offices, selecting as the scene of his local investigations three or four of the resumed Talooks in different quarters of the district, which may be considered fair specimens of the whole. He will be directed (from Mr. Mangles's office, to make over charge of his offices to Mr. Houston, as soon as that officer shall have concluded the business for which he has been specially deputed at the requisition of Mr. Maddock, to Zillah Backergunge. In consideration of the extraneous duty thus imposed upon Mr. Staniforth, His Lordship is pleased to assign to him a deputation allowances of rupees 10 per diem for all time actually spent in the Mofussil in carrying on the present investigation.

If any points have gone unnoticed in these orders, on which the Board may desire information in regard to settlements under remark, they will, of course, issue their instructions in regard to them to Mr. Staniforth, and embody them with his replies, in their report.

In concluding, his Lordship trusts that effectual measures have been taken for the regular realization of the amount of the several assessments formed in Backergunge by Mr. Dampier and his assistants, from the date of their conclusion respectively.

The Board, in obedience to the above instructions, have began their enquiries through Mr. Staniforth, and the Commissioners of the Sunderbuns and Jessore, affording each of them a copy of Government orders.—Hark., March 8.

CHITTAGONG LANDS.

We noticed some time since at considerable length a petition from the zameendars of Chittagong to Government against the survey and measurement of their estates, with the reply thereto. The Board have now before them a full and able report from Mr. Collector Harvey, which has been forwarded with the full approval and concurrence of the Commissioner. From this, it appears, that in zillah Chittagong, the foundation of the assessment is the record of a measurement of the cultivated and part of the uncultivated lands of the district made in 1725, after Chittagong fell under the British rule. In the chittahs of this measurement, the quantity of land in each estate is distinctly specified. The turruf estates (that is subsequently decennial settled estates,) are recorded by name; the quantity of land, the number of dags of the chittahs and quantity of land in each dag, with the length and breadth of each dag appertaining to each estate distinctly laid down with land marks (such as tanks, &c.) noting from what point the measurement began, are generally recorded. Similar information is given of the lands measured, as lakraj, much of which is recorded on the face of the chittahs, as hajut trijnees (or pending investigation; much as "bozumuddee," and much as, "sumuddee," without record of the nature or term of the grant, whether as a life or hereditary tenure. Add to which numerous portions of many turruf estates are generally recorded in each chitta, which also contains patches of lakraj tenures. Each chitta containing the quantity of land measured by one ameen in one day, and the number of chittahs in each village, varies according to its size. In the assessment of 1769, various lands recorded in the chittahs as malgoozaree were not brought forward on the Jumma bundee papers, some being illegally transformed into rent free tenures and others collusively kept back. In consequence of this the total land measured under each estate, as per chitta, does not correspond with the total of land assessed in each Jumma bundee, and transfers of land intermediately occurring have caused the lands measured in one name to be assessed under another. The Jumma bundee records the quantity of land measured in each estate, as also the total hasillah land measured. From the full quantity, the waste land, as specified, is deducted, and then certain portions under the designations of neezjote, khamnehereo, and Puttahdaree, as well as any parts held rent free, the assessment being fixed on the remainder. Numerous additions and deductions arising from fraud, from sub-divisions, and from transfer occurred between 1767 and the decennial settlement which we recorded in the kurcha of the estates which purports to be a record of the whole land assessed as appertaining to each estate to which the zameendar is entitled, while to the state belongs the revenue of all land found in his possession, and not included in that kurcha. But it is to be noted that although the jumma kurchas include only the cultivated land assessed under each estate after deducting the items of waste, of Neezjote of Khamabaree and of Puttahdaree, which form on an average about 30 per cent. of the land recorded in the chittahs as belonging to each estate, still the Commissioner and Collector have held these items to belong to each estate under the terms of the decennial settlement, and they have been given up to the zameendars with scruple. It appears then that there are numerous talooks subordinate to each turruf estate, and that much of the land now assessed and unrecorded, is in possession of the subordinate talookdars, from whom, as the zameendars draw no revenue, they are not properly speaking in possession of those lands. The decay and mutilation of the land marks and destruction of records consequent on a series of years, places the officer of Government, especially unassisted by the occupants of lands in much doubt, at the same time that the known existence of these land marks may be laid hold of by the litigious to draw the revenue authorities into litigation. The best apparent means, therefore, of determining the lands of each estate, is, that each zameendar select the land possessed by him of the talookdars subordinate to him, which should be recorded accordingly, and the rest recorded as liable to assessment without reference to the days of the chittahs of 1765, but only to the holdings recorded therein. To induce the zameendars to pursue this course, the authorities have directed the deputy collectors to waive to each zameendar so acting, and who shall enter into engagements for the excess of land in his possession, the assessment on 2 kanees of cultivated land per dhroon on the quantity of land recorded as appertaining to his estate, as for the kurchas, or in other words to grant him an additional 12½ per cent. beyond what he was entitled to render by his decennial engagement. And further, as a provision against the litigious disposition of the disaffected, the Deputy Collectors have been desired to note carefully in the present measurement, the land marks laid down in the chittahs of 1765, wherever discoverable. The zameendars are well aware of the broad principle of justice on which the present measurement is undertaken, and it is remarkable that they have urged no complaints whatever against the rates of assessment, which goes far to prove that they have in that respect received every liberal consideration, and in no instance, among numerous abusive petitions, has any ground of objection against any individual of the Deputy Collectors employed been stated except a want of knowledge of Bengalee, of which the Collector has every reason to believe them all possessing a competent knowledge. The Board submit this report to Government with a repetition of their confidence in the judgment and ability of Mr. Collector Harvey; and an expression of satisfaction, that the Government will be convinced, on a review of the case, not only that the rights of the landholders have been carefully observed, while pending the claims of the state, but that measures have been taken to avoid the possibility of infringing on those rights, while every indulgence has been and still continues shewn to parties found in possession of lands justly liable to assessment.—Englishman.

CONSULTATION.—MARCH 7, 1837.

LEASING OF CHUR LANDS—TIPPERAH.

Mr. Dampier, Commissioner of Chittagong, on the 1st of February last, transmitted a statement of Churs, to be leased out for a series of years, as proposed by Mr. Deputy Collector Allen. The terms appeared to the Commissioner to be sufficiently advantageous, and the retention of such detached increments under khass management, was sufficiently obvious. The Commissioner also stated, that he would direct the Deputy Collector carefully to register the securities, and therewith transmit the decrees, declaring the lands liable to assessment. The Collectors of the Chur Durrcea Dowlut, will be entitled to malikana, at ten per cent. per annum.

The Board informed the Commissioner of their approval of the farming arrangements, as follows:—

CHARGE AGAINST MR. R. WALKER, LATE COLLECTOR OF MYMENSING.

The Special Commissioners appointed under regulation XVII. of 1813, at Mymensing, in acknowledging the receipt of the Board's letter of the 21st June, 1833, with its enclosures, calling on them for a report on the case of Raj Kissen Roy, late Sherishtadar of the Collector's office at Mymensing, and requiring from Mr. Walker, a particular explanation of his conduct in the same case, also desiring them to state, why they overlooked the Collector's extraordinary conduct in the case noticed, and why they did not deem it necessary to call upon him for an explanation, &c.; before they entered on the subject of the two points above noticed, begged leave to state for the information of the Sudder Board of Revenue, with reference to the 3d point, that previously to the receipt by them of Raj Kissen Roy's petition forwarded by them, they had no intimation or even hint from any quarter, nor did it occur to them that there was any thing wrong or suspicious in Mr. Walker's conduct in relation to his roobukaries dated the 24th of February, 1832, the 24th of March, 1832, and the 5th of May, 1832, the truth of the contents of which were then unquestioned before them. Indeed Mr. Walker's proposition for the removal from office of Raj Kissen Roy, founded on these very roobukaries, had been sanctioned by the local Commissioner, Mr. H. J. Middleton, thereby taking the cognizance of the matter in a manner out of their hands, for they had seen the propriety in the cause of these investigations of avoiding interference with the proceedings of the Revenue authorities in cases more properly appertaining to their province than to those of the Special Commissioners either decided by, or pending before them, as much as possible; and besides, Rajkissen Roy, if dissatisfied with the decision of the local Commissioner, had it in his power to appeal to the Sudder Board of Revenue: under these circumstances, and entertaining such views of their duty, they, the Special Commissioners, did not apply that degree of scrutiny to the proceedings in question, which they otherwise would have exercised, pressed as they were at the time with the investigation of numerous charges of a much more serious nature. The result, however, of the present enquiry, has established, that there were grounds for making it, and has had the effect of materially altering the opinion expressed by them with respect to those roobukaries in their report dated the 30th of May last.

They now proceed to the report required on Rajkissen Roy's case. That individual was removed from Office on 3 grounds; 1st, for having falsely circulated reports that Mr. Walker was largely indebted to him, and for having under those pretences extorted sums of money from the Omlah of the Collector's Office: 2d, for having made a verbal application for 15 days leave of absence, and instead of presenting an arzee to the Collector to that effect, surreptitiously giving in one, in which the period of absence solicited was indefinite and in which it was requested that his nephew Gobind Chunder, might be appointed to act for him and in a fraudulent manner procuring a written order to the purport of the prayer of the said arzee; and 3d, that his affairs were found in so deranged and confused a state, that it would require "dufters" to describe it;—Rajkissen Roy never was called upon for a reply to those charges, and no proceedings appear to have been held with the view of substantiating them in a regular manner. Mr. Walker, in his letter to their address of the 11th of July 1833, writes that from the "late investigation that had taken place, it would appear by the evidence of several witnesses, that the supposed extortion was in fact a voluntary donation from some of the Omlah to the late Sherishtadar, on the occasion of the demise of his grandmother, and which it would appear is a custom prevalent amongst Hindons; and with reference to the misrepresentation, it was in the first place, as clearly appeared in their roobukarry, to be hearsay." Mr. Walker on the 18th of July, 1833, states, that he (Poonet Lal, now absent from this place) was one of the informants against the late Sherishtadar, but he could not name any of the others. It thus appeared that with respect to the 1st charge Mr. Walker had not the means of proving the alleged misrepresentations, and that he was then satisfied from what appeared in evidence before the Special Commissioners (the substance of which was correctly stated by him) that Rajkissen Roy, had not been guilty of extortion. With regard to the 2d charge further than the assertion of Mr. Walker, there is no proof and from the reply given by that gentleman to one of their queries, it would appear that he would not prove it; and with reference to the 3d charge, they were wholly unable to discover the grounds on which Mr. Walker had recorded in his roobukarry of the 5th of May 1832 that the Office of the late Sherishtadar was found to be in such a deranged and confused state, that it would require "dufters" and indeed would be a waste of time to describe it.

Such were the conclusions they drew as to the merits of Rajkissen Roy's case, founded on the correspondence and other papers which accompanied this report, and the Special Commissioners were further of opinion, that the late Sherishtadar, had by no means been fairly dealt with by Mr. Walker in the course of it, because, prior to Rajkissen Roy's departure from that place on the 23d of February 1832, no regular enquiry in the matter was instituted, nor was that person then or ever afterwards called upon to defend himself from the charges which had been preferred against him, nor indeed allowed any proper opportunity to do so. Mr. Walker pleaded in excuse, that he could not enter on an enquiry in the absence of Raj Kissen Roy, and that individual having "absconded" from the place and failing to return to his duty during a period of several months, it only remained for him to submit a report for his removal from office to the Commissioner of revenue and circuit. Mr. Walker admitted that Rajkissen Roy, was at that station from about the 6th to the 23d of February, but he has altogether failed to explain why nothing was done during the period of a complete fortnight, although particularly called on by them to do so; and after the departure of the late Sherishtadar, it surely was the collector's duty on the discovery of the additional case of fraud, to recall him by perwanah, communicating to him at the same time, the contents of his roobukarry of the 24th of February, and thus after taken his answer, to proceed regularly in the investigation of the case. So far from this course having been adopted, Rajkissen Roy, was never made acquainted with what he had been accused of, whilst his case was pending, and obstacles were even thrown in the way of his obtaining copies of the roobukaries relating to him which he at last succeeded in obtaining, after great delay, on the Commissioner calling on the Collector, for an explanation of his conduct.

The Sudder Board, it was presumed, would perceive from the accompanying copies of the special Commissioner's letters to Mr. Walker, addressed on the 18th and the 20th of July 1833, the point in that gentleman's conduct, which appeared to them particularly to require explanation and they now proceeded to record their observations on the replies furnished by him in his letters dated the 18th and the 22d of the same month.

In their opinion the discrepancy noticed by them, had not been explained by Mr. Walker in the least.

That the contents of the roobukarries in Rajkissen Roy's case were not communicated to him, appeared to be virtually admitted by Mr. Walker, and the truth of their remark, that copies were not furnished to the late Sherishtadar until the Commissioner had interfered on his behalf, is not denied.

Mr. Walker's belief that Gobinchunder was the writer of the order passed on the urzee dated the 21st of February, corresponds with the information they had obtained. That person was then in attendance at their Board as Rajkissen Roy's inookter. Mr. Walker did not state "in whose presence the application for leave was made and the above order written.

There was no direct answer to the question asked as to the date of Rajkissen Roy's return from leave to be found in Mr. Walker's letter, but in the 10th paragraph he said it was "about the 6th of February." "No explanation whatever" was given why an enquiry was not instituted in the interval between the 6th of February and the 23d of that month.

They, the Commissioners, observed at this place, that Rajkissen Roy's obtaining leave of absence for an indefinite period and Gobind Chunder's being authorized to act for him, are regularly entered in the diary or "roze namcha" of the Collector's office, but it did not appear, that the said Gobind Chunder performed the Sherishtadar's duty. A copy of the Perwannah said to have been granted to that person was not found in the proper book.

The special Commissioners understood Mr. Walker's reply to their 8th paragraph to be quite unsatisfactory and inconsistent with the contents of his 8th paragraph because it should be inferred from the part of his letter last quoted, that Rajkissen Roy's case being urgent, it was his object to start, after obtaining leave, with as little delay as possible, yet in the 11th paragraph it is stated, that "although leave had been granted to Rajkissen Roy, it was understood that he was not to quit the station for a day or two to come."

The Commissioners thought that a distinct order should have been passed in the Roobukarry of the 24th of February as to the person or persons by whom the enquiry directed should have been made. As to the case of Radhanath Mookerjee, it was separately treated in Mr. Walker's roobukarry of the 24th of March, and the single case of Issurchund (in which they were not able to discover sufficient cause for implicating Rajkissen Roy) was certainly on inadequate foundation, for the very strong language used in the roobukarry of the 5th of May. Mr. Walker admitted that no written report on the subject to his recollection, was made nor could he furnish any particulars of the irregularities which formed one of the main grounds for his recommending Raj Kissen Roy's removal from office.

The Commissioners referred the Sudder Board to the papers mentioned in their letter dated the 20th of July. It would be perceived from them, that Mr. Walker did not furnish the Commissioners with the explanation called for from him, and from the unsatisfactory nature of his reply to their question as to the result of the enquiry ordered by that officer, they could not but suspect that no proper notice of the misconduct of his Omlah in withholding the copies after preparation was taken by him.

Taking into consideration all the circumstances of this case, particularly that Mr. Walker had finally made up his mind to recommend Rajkissen Roy's removal from office on the 5th of May, they did not think the reasons assigned by him for not reporting the matter to the Commissioner till the 21st of September following, to have been sufficient.

The facts were as stated in their 3d paragraph, and even supposing the communication of the 9th of September to have been of a purely private "and unofficial nature" as asserted, still Mr. Walker was not justified in concealing from the Commissioner the receipt by him, of the original urzee to his address, relating to his case forwarded on the 18th of April, and which was then with the Nutees.

The Peshkar and the 2 Mohafiz dafters have wholly denied that they received any instructions to make the enquiry ordered in the Roobukarry of the 24th of February, and their statements were supported by the facts that no written orders on the subject were addressed to them, and that no report was prepared, which Mr. Walker admits. Moreover, had the omlah above mentioned received verbal orders on the subject from the Collector, or had it been understood that they were to execute them, why did not that officer insist on their being carried into effect between the 24th of February and the 5th of May without having received any report whatever? The custom as to orders for Kyfcuts being passed without specification of the individuals by whom they are to be prepared, adverted to in Mr. Walker's letter, applied to petitions and not generally to roobukarries. That the Commissioners had ascertained this by reference to the records of the Collector's Office. For the above reasons they did not think that Mr. Walker had exculpated himself from the interpretation of having recorded in an official proceeding, matter most materially affecting the character and interests of his ministerial officer, without having any grounds for so doing.

Their opinion, in short, was that the misconduct attributed to Rajkissen Roy had not been established so as to warrant his dismissal. They thought, however, that he should not be restored to office until he most satisfactorily explained the transaction of the drafts stated in their report of the 30th of May last, most particularly the 52d paragraph.

Without respect to Mr. Walker, the special Commissioners declared, that in their judgment his conduct in the case of Rajkissen Roy, was quite unjustifiable; and they added, that it left on their minds an impression, with respect to his official character in general, by no means favorable.—Hurkuru, March 11.

The Sudder Board, on the 20th of September 1833, addressed Government on the subject, stating that as Government were already aware that Mr. Goad had altogether failed to substantiate the numerous charges which he brought forward, and Mr. Goad had shewn himself to be utterly unqualified to execute the task which he undertook, and it was evident that the Special Commissioners were right in their conclusion that he was not the author, or at least not the unassisted author of the earlier letters to which his signature was affixed, and which (whatever their other faults and deficiencies) were in many respects, powerfully written, his latter conduct had been feeble and puerile in the extreme.

The consequence of this entire failure on the part of the accuser had been, that all, or almost all, the charges which had been investigated by the Special Commissioners, had, when not successfully rebutted by Mr. Collector Walker, fallen to the ground for want of proof,—and that circumstance should certainly have been allowed its full weight in favour of that officer's integrity, after concluding the investigation of Mr. Goad's allegations, for they proved to be nothing better. The Special Commissioners entertained the same sentiments as regards "the absence of all proof of guilt" as those above expressed, though they certainly went further than the Sudder Board were prepared to follow them in the conclusion which they built upon the premises.

For the Sudder Board observed, in the course of a careful examination of the voluminous papers that accompanied the Special Commissioners' report, more than one suspicious circumstance which those officers had either overlooked, or but slightly glanced at. These circumstances were all connected with Rajkissen Roy Chowdry, a person appointed by Mr. Walker to the Sherishtadarship of the collectorate, and subsequently dismissed, principally on the grounds that he had circulated rumours that the Collector was deeply indebted to him, and that he had extorted two months' salary from each of the native omahs as stated in the roobukaries, severally held by the Collector on the 24th of Feb. and 24th of March 1832.

These proceedings, even when regarded irrespectively, appeared to the Sudder Board to afford indication that there was more beneath the surface, relative to the nature of the connection subsisting between Mr. Collector Walker, and his sherishtadar, than was intended to meet the eye, and this suspicion was increased both by the contents of the petition to Government by Raj Kissen Roy the sherishtadar above named, and forwarded to the Board from his office, and by the circumstances of certain remittances from Mymensing in the form of drafts drawn by the Collector upon the General Treasury, which his Lordship in Council would find commented upon in paragraphs 48 to 54 of the Special Commissioners' Report of the 30th May last.

The Board accordingly referred the circumstances of Raj Kissen Roy's dismissal from office, and Mr. Walker's roobukaries above cited, which they had insufficiently investigated for the reconsideration of the Special Commissioners. Their report with its enclosures, under date the 25th of July last, accompanied. His Lordship in Council would remark, that the impression produced upon the minds of those officers by the result of that supplementary investigation, was very different from that under which they drew up their former report. Their letter of the 25th of July, concludes with the following expressions.

"With respect to Mr. Walker we have now to declare, that, in our judgment, his conduct in the case of Raj Kissen Roy was quite unjustifiable, and we must add that it has left on our minds an impression, with respect to his official character in general, by no means favourable." The Board deemed it necessary to add that Mr. Walker's letter of the 11th of August 1833, to the address of the Board, in which he attempted to justify the three roobukaries above referred to, and to account for neglect to investigate the charges which he placed on record against Raj Kissen Roy on the 24th February, when that person was in attendance on the preceding day, and had obtained further leave of absence, is not only wholly unsatisfactory, but wholly dangerous and discreditable in the extreme.

The Sudder Board on their part followed up the enquiry by summoning Raj Kissen Roy who was a resident of Calcutta and taking his deposition with reference more especially to the drafts above alluded to, on four of which, to the amount in the aggregate of rupees 10,000, his name is endorsed. There is a fifth draft (No. 109 of 1831-32) for rupees 2,000, on which Mr. John Hughes's name appears after a most protracted correspondence, and after vainly employing the influence of the Chief Magistrate, which that officer kindly exerted in their favor, the Board succeeded in obtaining Mr. Hughes's attendance—a sketch of the statements which he made in reply to their question was submitted.

In the judgment of the Board the whole transaction, from the appointment of Raj Kissen Roy to the Sherishtadarship to the granting almost simultaneously to many drafts upon the General Treasury; four of which were traced to Raj Kissen himself, and the fifth to Mr. Hughes, who avowed before the Board that he had acted as Mr. Walker's attorney in pecuniary matters, was one of extreme suspicion. In the first place the Special Commissioners stated as the conclusion which they drew from their enquiries, that Sheopersaud Wastee, who asserts that he handed to Mr. Hughes the five drafts, was not their real proprietor, that he and one Ramdeal Sookul were merely employed as agents for some other person or persons, whose object appears to have been the concealment of the true nature of their transactions; it appeared also, and the Board deemed the fact remarkable, that the records of the Collector's Treasury did not tally with the drafts in regard to the name of the party by whom some of them were purchased. The Board considered this fact remarkable, because all the drafts in question were dated in September and October 1832, long after the record of Mr. Walker's roobukaries above mentioned, by the last of which, the Collector had declared Raj Kissen Roy "unfit to be employed in the public service," and the latter could scarcely, therefore, have retained influence sufficient in the office, from which he had been removed under such circumstances, to induce the parties responsible for the correctness of the books of the Collectorate to make false entries; other obvious reasons must have suggested themselves to his Lordship in Council, as they did to the Board, which concurred to render it improbable in the extreme, that a disgraced and a dismissed native officer, who did not appear to have visited Mymensing, after he quitted that district, in the latter end of February, 1832, should have voluntarily chosen the Collector's treasury as the medium of remitting a sum of money, which could scarcely have been honestly acquired.

It was still evident that the transactions were not of a bonâ fide nature, and that the nominal, was not the real remitter. The drafts were all traced as above-mentioned, into Mr. Hughes's possession, who had avowedly acted on former occasions, as Mr. Walker's attorney, and were made over by him to Rajkissen Roy, who, as it appeared from his own evidence, and Mr. Hughes's statement, was originally recommended to Mr. Collector Walker, for the Sherishtadarship, by the same attorney. To all this it must be added, that notwithstanding the roobukaries above noticed, his alleged gross misconduct was never reported to the Commissioner of the Division, till the 21st of September, 1832, a period most closely corresponding with the date of all the drafts on which the names of Rajkissen Roy, or John Hughes appeared, nor could the Board omit to notice the gross inconsistency between the real facts of Rajkissen's recommendation to Mr. Walker, and of his previous public employment being limited to a seat as a writer in Mr. Bailey's office, and the statement in the commencement of the Collector's roobukary of the 24th of February, 1832, that he was appointed in consideration, not only of the recommendation in his favour, but of "respectability," trust-worthiness, and experience in the business of Bengal.

On the whole, the Board were of opinion, that the facts elicited in regard to Rajkissen Roy's leave of absence in February, 1832, to the charge of corruption adduced against him by the Collector, and never at all followed up, and to the length of time during which the alleged misconduct of the Sherishtadar was kept from the knowledge of the Commissioner, was very discreditable to Mr. Walker's official character; which added to the circumstances connected with the drafts as above detailed, shewed the way to the still graver suspicion, upon strong presumptive evidence, of Mr. Walker's being in debt to his Sherishtadar.

Pending the late general investigation, the correspondence had passed between the office and the Commissioner of Dacca relative to the attachment by Mr. Collector Walker, of one hundred and seventy-four mehal, on the permanent rent roll of the district to enforce the registry of mutations under the provisions grossly misunderstood, of clause 2d section XI. Regulation of III 1238.

The statement enclosed in Mr. Commissioner Middleton's letter of the 26th of June last, did exhibit to his Lordship in council the manner in which the illegal attachment had been carried into effect, the persons employed for that purpose on extravagant salaries having been retained from June, July, August, and October 1831 respectively to December 1832, whilst 2 men only were paid any thing from the Public Treasury, (to the amount of rupees 81) one received Rs 48, total "amount", of collections, or in other words, all that he thought fit to account for. Therest were allowed to remunerate themselves as they could, by the plunder of the estates which they were deputed to attach, whilst the proprietors were compelled, by the compulsory process of the sale Laws to pay the revenue of their Mehals during the whole period of dispossession. Five estates were actually sold for the recovery of such arrears, but through the interference of the Board that part of the mischief had since been remedied.

Mr. Walker's defence of his conduct in this particularly was forwarded under cover of the Commissioner's letter of the 13th ultimo. He expressed surprise that his "acts, whilst acting under the express stipulations of a specific Regulation of Government, had been considered illegal, "since" Lands bearing a Mocurruree Jumma could never be Lakheraj," and stated that no individual could have suffered from those attachments from the circumstances of the Ameens being seldom or ever able to obtain possession, and that no cost "or expence of any kind could accrue to Government in consequence of their never having been paid from the public Treasury, and the revenue of such Mehals having been collected."

This letter in the judgment of the Board, was almost in itself sufficient to demonstrate Mr. Collector Walker's unfitness for responsible employment in the revenue branch of the service, since it not only displayed an extreme ignorance of his duty, of the Laws entrusted to his administration, and of the rights of the people, but bespoke an indifference to those rights and to the plainest principles of equity, which the Board considered still more disqualifying.

Under those impressions and with reference to Mr. Walker's previous removals from the Collectorate of Rajshahye, and the judicial line of the service, the Sudder Board could not recommend that he should be restored to his office at Mymensing, nor could they conscientiously state to his Lordship in Council that they considered him to be a person to whom the interests of the public service could safely or beneficially be confided in any situation of high trust and responsibility.—Hurkaru, March 13, 1837.

CONSULTATION, MONDAY, 13th MARCH, 1837

EAST INDIA SUGAR.

The Governor-General in Council has recently had under his consideration, the provisions contained in cap. 26th, 6th, and 7th, William IV., which, by opening the British markets to East India Sugar, may possibly occasion a great increase in the growth of that valuable product, in the districts subordinate to the Presidency of Fort William in Bengal, and ultimately throughout the British possessions in India, should the advantages of the late Act, as his Lordship in Council anxiously desires, be at no distant period extended.

It consequently appeared to His Lordship in Council to be particularly desirable at the present period, that as regards the cultivation of sugar, one uniform principle of the assessment should be observed, so that the inhabitants of one district may not be subjected to heavier imposts than those of another, and that every reasonable encouragement being afforded to the production of that valuable article, due effect may be given to the intuitions of the British Legislature.

In the opinion of the Governor in Council, the most correct principle of assessing lands appropriated to the growth of sugar, or other rich product, is that prescribed in the dispatch from the Hon'ble the Court of Directors to the Bombay Government, under date the 16th of July 1830, namely that such lands should be subject to the same assessment as land of the same quality and advantage under ordinary crops, but His Lordship in Council is desirous of ascertaining what is the practice followed throughout the Bengal Presidency, what may be the maximum rate of assessing such lands, and, where the rates vary greatly, the causes of the variation.

The above enquiry referred chiefly to the Government demand; His Lordship in Council being desirous of ascertaining the principles on which that demand is regulated in those districts in which lands have fallen under the immediate management of Government, and in others in which temporary settlements only are made with the proprietors or holders of lands, although he would gladly receive all information which can readily be given as to the rates of rent ordinarily prevailing in different districts under the permanent settlement, as regards such cultivation, and the modes in which those rates are adjusted.

Mr. Secretary Mangles conveyed the above queries to the Board, they having been put to him by Mr. Secretary W. H. Macnaughten.

The Board have transmitted copies of the above Government orders to all the Commissioners, requesting they will favor the Board with a communication of their sentiments on the subject, with the least possible delay.—Hurkaru, March 14.

CHARGES AGAINST MR. R. WALKER, LATE COLLECTOR OF MYMENSING.

Substance of a Petition of Rajkissen Rai Chowdrie, late sherishtadar to the Collectorate of Mymensing.

That owing to the machinations of one Poneet Loll, the person whom Mr. Walker appointed as Nazir, that gentleman became prejudiced against the petitioner, and falsely charged the petitioner, in proceedings held on the 24th Feb. 1832, and 24th of March 1832, with certain malpractices connected with the Surburra Karee of Radanath Mookerjee, to which charges the Collector neglected to call on the sherishtadar to answer. That the said sherishtadar, giving as substitute his relation, departed on leave of absence to his home, for the recovery of his health. That subsequently he sent from Calcutta two representations with a medical certificate, of his health not being sufficiently established to admit of his return to duty.

The case, however, really stood thus. The petitioner in February 1832, applied for, and obtained from Mr. Collector Walker, 15 days leave of absence: shortly after Rajkissen Rai had left the station, the Collector received a letter from him stating, that he, the sherishtadar, understood his leave to be unlimited, and had left his relation to act for him. The Collector supposing that he had been deceived, for the sherishtadar obtained leave on the plea of going to Dacca, for 15 days, for medical advice, selected, as acting sherishtadar, an individual named Bhownanychurn Mittra.

Mr. H. Middleton, the then Commissioner of that district, gave it as his opinion, that the petition was incorrect, rect, about the mode in which his representation to this office was disposed of. The Commissioner's order on that document being to the following effect: That the paper having been transmitted to him by the post, and the writer having no representative at Dacca, the consideration of its contents must be postponed till the receipt of the Collector's proceeding upon the subject to which it referred.

On the 15th of January 1834, the Government in acknowledging the receipt of the Board's letter dated the 20th of September last, submitting the result of the investigation of the special Commissioners into the charges preferred by Mr. Good against Mr. R. Walker, (Collector of Mymensing, desired, before passing final orders on that case, that Mr. Walker should be called on distinctly to explain all the circumstances attending the nomination, appointment, and removal of the sherishtadar, and that he should have an opportunity of submitting any explanation, that he thought proper regarding the money transactions connected with the drafts on the General Treasury tracted to the sherishtadar and Mr. Hughes.

For that purpose, copies of the depositions of Raj Kissen Rai, and Mr. Hughes should be furnished to Mr. Walker, as also extract paras: 8 to 10 of the Board's letter of the 20th September, and any other documents, which Mr. Walker may not have seen and which would be necessary to enable him to explain those transactions.

The Board were requested to call for copies of all the correspondence between Mr. Walker and the Local Commissioner, connected with the nomination, appointment, and removal of the sherishtadar, that this case should have been complete and separately taken into consideration, without the necessity of searching through the voluminous records connected with the proceedings of the Special Commissioners.

Mr. Walker's Explanation.

Mr. Walker, in acknowledging the Board's letter of date 28th January, furnished for submission to Government the following explanation:—

With reference to that part of Mr. Secretary Waresen's letter relative to Raj Kissen's appointment, &c. to the situation of sherishtadar at the Collectorate at Mymensing, Mr. Walker stated, that shortly after his own appointment to the district, he was informed the situation of sherishtadar was vacant, and as such, whilst he was in Calcutta, there were several candidates for the vacancy, amongst whom was Raj Kissen Rai; as he was strongly recommended to the Collector by Mr. Hughes as well as other gentlemen high up in the service, he consented to give Raj Kissen the situation, on Mr. Walker joining the district, and there being no one intermediately appointed.

On Mr. Walker's arrival at the station, he found the information he had received in Calcutta to be correct, and although he had arrived at the station and waited to receive charge, a delay of 3 or 4 days took place, and Mr. Bury, then in temporary charge, and when on the very eve of delivering over charge to Mr. Walker, appointed Gopalchund to the vacancy, and in his, Mr. Walker's, presence.

Soon after taking charge of the office, Mr. Walker found Gopal Chund invariably in a state of inability, and although Mr. Walker had been led at first to suppose it originated from sickness, he soon discovered its origin to be intoxication, and that the man had long been an habituated drunkard; so bad was he on one occasion that upon getting a roobukarry, he did not know the top from the bottom, and the Collector was obliged to get Ramneedhes Sein, then Mohafiz Qufter, and who was at the time standing by him, to perform the duty.

How far such a man could be deemed fit or unfit for the situation of Head ministerial officer, or what confidence could be placed in a person labouring under such unfortunate habits, Mr. Walker left for superior judgment and authority to decide.

Mr. Walker did his duty by immediately applying to Mr. Tucker, the local Commissioner, stating to him at the same time, the whole of the circumstances. Mr. Tucker, however, deferred passing any immediate order in the case, but wrote him, stating he would, upon his arrival at the station on Circuit, personally investigate the circumstances.

In May or June following, Mr. Commissioner Tucker, on his arrival at Mymensing, entered into the investigation, and after personally satisfying himself with every local information, immediately reduced Gopal Chunder to his former birth, approving at the same time the nomination of Raj Kissen Rai.

During the time Raj Kissen held the situation of sherishtadar, he, according to Mr. Walker's humble ideas, fully proved himself an efficient officer in as much as he was the cause of bringing to light and subsequently recovering for Government several thousands of rupees interest and penalty, &c. arrears that had occurred near three years prior to either Mr. Walker's own, or Raj Kissen's appointment in the district, and which no other servant of Government for 3 continued years had either found out or paid the slightest attention to.

In the year 1832, during the absence of Raj Kissen on account of the Dusserah holidays, Mr. Walker was informed that Raj Kissen had spread a report at the station that Mr. Walker was in his debt, and he being then absent and in Calcutta, no steps were immediately taken. On his return, however, to the station (6th February) he was questioned by the Collector regarding the reports, when he immediately denied them by stating he never mentioned any thing of the kind, and as the report was a mere hearsay report, the Collector could not with any degree of justice to Raj Kissen hold any investigation, but still could not remove from his mind a suspicion which caused a coolness on the part of the Collector, and it was not improbable that from such coolness Raj Kissen applied for leave of absence on the plea of sickness on the 23d February, and which the Collector granted, little suspecting any trickery. There, however, was an understanding that he was not to leave for a day or two to enable him to deliver over charge, but in consequence of his leaving the station the same day and being informed of this, it brought back to Mr. Walker's mind the suspicion he had on Raj Kissen, regarding the report, it was alleged he had been the author of, and which caused his roobakarree of the 24th of the same month (February). The whole of this explanation, however, would be found in his letter to the Special Commissioners appointed by Government under Regulation XVII of 1813 to try his case, and when they were ordered by the Sudder Board of Revenue to investigate Raj Kissen's case of appeal against the local Commissioner and in Mr. Walker's subsequent appeal and explanation against the Special Commissioners to the Sudder Board themselves.

It was in the Collector's roobakarree of the 24th February, that he first declared Raj Kissen unfit for the situation. Prior to submitting the circumstances, however, for the consideration of the local Commissioner, Raj Kissen; it appeared, had appealed to that officer against the roobakarree in question, submitting at the same time, a sick certificate of his European Doctor, and which was transmitted to the Collector by the local Commissioner himself. Pending his decision on the appeal all further proceedings became for a time suspended in the Collector's office, but finding afterwards Raj Kissen had not proceeded in his appeal, or made any further representation relative to an intended return, Mr. Walker was ultimately compelled for official regularity to bring the circumstance to the Commissioner's notice, who, in September 1832, from information he had already received, and which he stated in his letter to the Board dated 22d July 1833, passed an order for his removal, and which of course was duly carried into effect.

After the petition had been presented by Mr. Good in Mr. Walker's case, and during the special investigation under the provisions of Regulation XXII, of 1813, Mr. Walker became informed, and which he believed to be the case, that the report had been spread by some of Raj Kissen's enemies, and Mr. Walker had not the least doubt, but Poneet Loll had been the instrumental person, as would also appear in his reply to the Special Commissioners, and subsequent appeal to the Sudder Board, on the representation made by Raj Kissen.

It appeared, however, that the papers connected with Raj Kissen's case, had not by some mistake, or oversight, been forwarded to Government with the rest of the papers of his case.—Mr. Walker had to request, they should be forwarded with this explanation, not only as containing a full and detailed explanation of the man's case, but had they been before Government: they would, in all probability, have precluded the necessity of the present correspondence by putting the Government in possession of the whole information required.

With respect to the drafts, Mr. Walker was unable to enter into any explanation beyond what already appears in the papers furnished to him by the Board. By the depositions of Messrs. Hughes and Raj Kissen, it appeared very clearly that the drafts were the property of one Sheopurshad, who sold them to Mr. Hughes on a discount, and that Mr. Hughes made them over to Raj Kissen partly in payment of a debt existing between themselves and the rest to be cashed for Mr. Hughes.

The Board in their report to Government, were pleased to state as "remarkable", that the records of the Collectors' Treasury did not tally with the drafts in regard to the name of the party by whom some of them were purchased." In reply to that part, Mr. Walker begged to state, that neither the Collector, nor the records of his office had any thing to do with purchasers; all drafts being negotiable instruments. The expressions made use of by the Board were therefore irreconcilable; and Mr. Hughes stated before the Board that he purchased them at a discount from a person by name Sheopurshad; he again passed some of the same drafts to his own creditor Raj Kissen, who again went, and got the rest cashed for Mr. Hughes upon his own responsibility: or he might again have gone and sold them in the bazar—in that case they must have obtained 50 purchasers. Yet the records of a Collector's office we supposed totally with all the purchasers in their different transfers.

Again, Mr. Walker observed, that the Board were pleased to state—"other obvious reasons must suggest themselves to his Lordship in Council, as they do the Board, &c., &c., that Raj Kissen who had quitted the district in February 1832, voluntarily chose the Collector's Treasury as a medium for remitting money which could scarcely have been honestly acquired." Raj Kissen never did so at all, as he denied the drafts being his property, but clearly stated before the Board, that he received them from Mr. Hughes as payment of a debt, and who bought them from another person, and which the Board also admitted in their subsequent paragraph.

With reference to the alleged misconduct of the sheristadar not being reported to the Commissioner till September, Mr. Walker observed that the reasons would fully appear both in the present, and in his separate reply to the Special Commissioners appointed under Regulation XXII. of 1813 to try his case, as also in his appeal against their decision to the Sudder Board, and to which Mr. Walker humbly begged the attention of Government.—Hurkaru, March 15.

CONSULTATION,—TUESDAY, MARCH 7, 1837.

POWER OF COLLECTORS IN APPEAL CASES.

Mr. G. F. Shakespeare, Commissioner of the Sunderbuns, on the 12th of February last, addressed Mr. Commissioner Pigou, regarding clause 3, section 4, regulation in 1828, in which it is provided, that in cases appealed to the Special Commissioner it shall be competent to that authority to stay execution of the Collector's decree, and to cause the attachment of the land decreed to be suspended, or withdrawn on due security being tendered by the applicant for the payment of the revenue which may ultimately be assessed on the land.

Mr. Shakespeare wished to be informed, whether the rule could be constructed as precluding a Collector or Officer invested with the powers of a Collector from measuring and forming a settlement of decreed land for which an appellant may have furnished security, and obtained its release from attachment during the time that the land so held released, and the appeal for it, is still pending, or if such rule is only to be understood as preventing the attachment of land for which security may have been furnished, till the result of the appeals made can be ascertained.

Mr. Shakespeare was led to ask Mr. Pigou's opinion in regard to the meaning of the above clause of the enactment, as in his own mind he has doubts as to what may be signified by the words "to stay execution of the Collector's Decree", and after a reference to the records of his office he was unable to discover one instance where previous to the decision of the Special Commissioner, decreed land held by an appellant on security had been settled, yet the purport of the clause in question appeared to him to be somewhat vague, and its provisions did not in express terms prohibit, what Mr. Shakespeare was desirous of effecting during the present season, namely, the formation and settlement of these Estates named Kumarcule, Zeeldangu and Beestopore, the attachment of which appeals having been preferred and security provided, has been suspended. Mr. Shakespeare was therefore anxious to learn, the feasibility or otherwise under the existing laws of forming settlements of land circumstanced as those above mentioned.

Mr. Pigou submitted the query to the Board with his opinion, that with a Mehal circumstanced as those above described, a Collector has no power of interference until the decree in favor of Government shall have been upheld in the appeal.

The Board fully concurred with Mr. Pigou and have informed him accordingly.—Hurkaru, March 16.

CHARGES AGAINST MR. R. WALKER, CONCLUDED.

The Government observed that the Special Commissioners appointed to conduct the enquiry regarding Mr. Walker, recorded in the first instance, the following opinion on his case generally in their report of the 30th May 1833.

"The Board having required from Government the decided expression of their opinion with respect of Mr. Walker, Government declared that in their judgment, in the absence of all proof of guilty, he is, on every principle of justice, entitled to a general verdict of acquittal, and to restoration to office."

The result of their further investigation of Mr. Walker's proceedings in the case of Rajkissen Rai, the late sherishtader of the Mymensing collectorship, was, however, thus stated in the concluding part of their subsequent report of the 25th of July, 1833.

"With respect to Mr. Walker, we have now to declare, that in our judgment his conduct in the case of Rajkissen Rai was quite unjustifiable, and we must add that it has left on our minds, an impression with respect to his official character in general by no means favorable."

In their address of the 20th of September last, the Board had detailed at length the sentiments formed by them on a review of the circumstances attending the nomination, appointment and removal of the individual referred to, and of those connected with the suspicious character of several drafts drawn from the Mymensing Collectorship on the General Treasury, and traced to that person and to Mr. Hughes, by whom Rajkissen Rai was originally recommended to Mr. Walker's patronage, and who avows himself to have acted on several occasions as Mr. Walker's attorney. Copies of those parts of the Board's address, had been communicated to Mr. Walker, and a full opportunity had been afforded him of laying any facts for consideration by which the unfavorable impressions expressed in them, could be removed. The Government entirely concurs in the opinion intimated by the Board in the letter from Mr. Mangles, under acknowledgment, the explanations which have been offered by Mr. Walker on these points, are quite insufficient and unsatisfactory.

The Board desired to signify their final concurrence recorded in the general remarks by them on this part of the investigation in para. 11, of the letter of September 21, 1833.

"On the whole, the Board are of opinion that the facts should, in regard to Rajkissen Rai's leave of absence in February 1832, to the charge of corruption adduced against him by the Collector, and never at all followed up, and to the length of time during which the alleged misconduct of the sherishtadar was kept from the knowledge of the Commissioner, are very discreditable to Mr. Walker's official character, which, with the circumstances connected with the drafts as above detailed, lay open Mr. Walker to the still greater suspicion, upon strong presumptive evidence, of having been indebted to his sherishtadar."

Under these circumstances, and with advertence to the observations in paras. 12 to 16 of the letter of September 20, the Government consider it proper to resolve that Mr. Walker be finally removed from the Collectorship of Mymensing, and placed from the date of his suspension from that office on the allowances of a Civil Servant out of employ, until the pleasure of the Hon'ble the Court of Directors (to whom a separate report of the case will immediately be made) can be ascertained, with regard to his future disposal.

The Board informed Government that no proceedings were held subsequent to the examination of Rajkissen Rai in the month of July 1833, and that Rajkissen did not then hold any office under Government.

MEMORANDUM.

Rajkissen Rai attended on the 11th of February 1837 at the Board, and being asked if he was able to give any information on the subject of the draft transactions alluded to by the Hon'ble Court in their despatch of the 23d March 1836, paragraph 37, declared that he was unable to give any information on the subject beyond what he had already furnished in his deposition before the Board of July 12th 1833, forwarded to Government with Mr. Mangles's letter; but that he was willing, if called upon, to explain fully the nature of his own pecuniary transactions with Mr. Hughes, with which Mr. Walker had and has no concern. — Hurkaru, March 17.

Mr. C. Tucker had the usual oath administered to him this day, after which he took his seat as a Member of the Board.

CONSULTATION.—TUESDAY, MARCH 7, 1837.

ANNEXATION OF THE JYNTEAH TERRITORY TO SYLHET.

Mr. Secretary Mangles informed to the Sudder Board on the 28th ultimo, that the sanction of Government had been solicited to the annexation of the Jynteah Territory to Sylhet, and directed that immediate measures should be taken for placing the survey, &c., of that Territory under the general control of Mr. Collector Mytton.

Orders will also hereafter be communicated to the Board in regard to investiture of Lieutenant Thuillier with the powers of a Deputy Collector under Regulation IX: of 1833.

The Commissioner of Dacca has been instructed accordingly. — Hurkaru, March 18.

OPINION OF THE SENIOR MEMBER.

The statement annexed, prepared by the Revenue Accountant of hal and bukya demands and collections of Bengal, Bahar and Orissa, from 1820-21 to 1835-36, and also collections from lands liable to assessment, but not registered on the rent-roll of those years, seems to me so extraordinary, and to exhibit so very unfavorable a result for the last eight years, that is, since the revenue Commissioners were established, that considering it in connection with other important evidences of admitted failure in the revenue administration during the same period, I am apprehensive I might be justly accused of a great dereliction of my duty, were I not to attempt to obtain some explanation in detail of the causes of the very manifest deterioration exhibited in this statement. It shews, that the hal demand or jumma has been in the permanently settled provinces, merely stationary since 1828-1829, since their has been no increase worth noticing. Explanation is, nevertheless, necessary to shew, how it happens that the new estates added to the rent-roll by the recent activity given to the process of lakheraj resumption, has not produced a more perceptible effect on the general land revenue demand. There is, it is true, a separate head for collections from lands not on the rent-roll, and most of the resumptions will have appeared probably on this list; but even here no increase is to be found. On the contrary, the separate in head of these collections shews a total sum realized during the years 1827-1828 and 1828-1829, considerably in excess of the collections during the three last years (realized or estimated,) of this portion of the statement.

With reference, therefore, to this unexpected result, I propose, that the revenue accountant be called upon to furnish so much analysis of heads, Nos. 1 and 7, as shall enable the board to see. First, how much of the hal demand or jumma of 1828-1829 is identical with that of 1834-1835, that is, of the same demand, and levied from the same estates, during the two periods. Secondly, how much has been, wholly through estates been forthcoming to be delivered over into possession, it has been necessary to abandon the revenue demand. Thirdly, how much has been absolutely remitted in perpetuity by authority of Government, on account of deluvian or other similar causes. Fourthly, what further losses of jumma have occurred, and from what causes. Again, of jumma placed afresh on the rent-roll; that is of the portion of that of 1834-1835, which is new, and was not on the books in 1828-1829? First, what amount is ascribable to lapsed farms or jagheers, which have fallen under assessment in ordinary course. Secondly, what amount has been derived from the assessment of new lands brought on the rent-roll, either by the resumption of lakheraj or through the occupation of alluvial or jungle lands, under the provisions of Reg. III., of 1828.

2. The office of the revenue accountant at the presidency ought to have such registers of the land revenue of the different districts and of mutations in the jumma in particular, as should enable him to prepare the above explanatory statements without much additional trouble. But if it be more convenient for him to make them up for other years than those above indicated, I have no objection, as my desire is to have before the board some distinct exhibition of the decrease of hal demand or jumma on one side, of its growth where it has increased on the other. I would wish to have it for the whole of the permanently-settled territory, but if that be not attainable in consequence of the labor of preparation, the Board must then be content with a few districts to be selected by the accountant, with reference to the variations, apparent extreme cases being of course preferred.

3. With respect to the annually increasing unrealized balance, it appears, that the current collections upon the same hal demand or jumma, are between thirty and forty lakhs less than heretofore; and, although the bukya collections have increased necessarily with the balance overdue, the increase does not quite correspond with the amount of balance; so much so, otherwise, that in the total sum annually realized, there is a deficit of no less than ten lakhs in the collections of 1834-35, contrasted with those of 1827-28. This is not ascribable to any failure of crops or temporary or local causes, for, in the years 1834-35, all circumstances were favorable, and, still more so, in 1835-36. In the year preceeding, viz: 1833-34, when there was a partial failure, the deficit was more remarkable, being upwards of nineteen lakhs.

The statement annexed, sufficiently shews, that the revenue is not so punctually paid or so regularly realized under the system of commissioners and collectors, having judicial and police duties, as well as fiscal to perform, as it was under the system in force, prior 1829-30. The outstanding balances of the hal demand amounted at the close of 1828-29 only to 35,19,603, whilst at the close of 1834-35, the outstanding balances of the hal demand for that year amounted to 75,88,520, being 40,68,917 in excess of the balances outstanding at the close of 1828-29.

Excess of Balances of 1828-29.

4. With the view of having this singular defalcation in the receipts, I would wish the revenue accountant to be called upon to furnish an analysis of the 127,68,000, alleged bukya demand, shewing how much is of the year last past, and how much of old standing, that is, of 1,2,3,4, or 5 years, and is still unrecovered. I presume, that no interest demand is included in this statement. If there be, its amount should be separately and distinctly exhibited, for its forming any part of it, will make the deficit of collections still more extraordinary, for, of course, the amount, if not in it, ought to correspond with the bukya demand. I should much like also to see in the analyzed statement of balances a separate head of those due upon estates, that have been sold in liquidation of arrears of revenue, shewing the amount unrealized by the rate proceeds on the one hand, and the amount due from the purchaser since the sale. This information, however, I fear, the accountant will not be able to supply for us, and without sending a special officer to make the enquiry, it would be hopeless to call for it from the commissioners or the district collectors. This statement must ultimately form the subject of a reference to the Government for we have more than we are here called upon to explain the ill success of late years in the realization of the revenue, but, it appears to me, we should be premature in addressing Government, until we sought for, and obtained all the information that can be procured through our accountant.

5. I solicit the third member's consideration of this question and his assistance in perfecting the enquiry, which are to me of great importance, and therefore needing to be made with as much attention to accuracy and perfection, as may be consistent with other obligations of duty. I hope the apprehensions I entertain of the imperfections of our system of revenue accounts, generally may prove to be ill founded.

(Signed) J. PATTLE.

P. S. The Board have sent a copy of the Senior Member's minute to the Accountant of the Revenue Department, requesting him to furnish the required information at his earliest convenience.

CONSULTATION,—TUESDAY, MARCH 14, 1837.

INTEREST ON ARREARS OF REVENUE, ASSAM—DISCONTINUED.

Mr. Secretary Mangles, on the 7th instant, informed the Board (in reply to their letter of 6th ultimo,) that on the grounds urged by them, and by the local authorities, and with reference to the circumstance that the Land Revenue of Assam has been progressively increasing, the Right Hon'ble the Governor of Bengal has been pleased to authorize discontinuance in that province, except in cases of wilful default, of the demand of interest upon arrears of Revenue.

And as it appeared desirable that the Revenue officers should be empowered to inflict a penalty upon wilful default, the Board have been requested to direct the attention of the Commissioner to Section VI. Regulation X. of 1818, desiring that Law should be acted upon at the discretion of the local authorities, whenever the payment of the public due is fraudulently withheld.

The Board have furnished the Commissioner of Assam with a copy of the above orders, calling his attention to the 2d paragraph in regard to the law to be exercised for the future.—Hurkaru, 21.

CONSULTATION, — TUESDAY, MARCH 14, 1837.]

CONSOLIDATION OF MIDNAPORE WITH HIDGEELEE.

Mr. Secretary Mangles, on the 28th ultimo, forwarded a Resolution passed by His Lordship uniting Midnapore and Hidgelee as one district, and entrusting the magistracy and collectorship to separate officers. The Commissioner of the Cuttack division has been requested to take the necessary measures for carrying the plan into effect, and Mr. A. F. Donnelly has been appointed to be Collector of Midnapore and Hidgelee.

RESOLUTION.

The vacation by Mr. Samsforth of the office of magistrate and collector of Midnapore, affords the Governor of Bengal an opportunity for placing the Police and the Revenue administration of that district, and of the adjacent jurisdiction of Hidgelee, upon a new, and as His Lordship trusts, an improved footing.

Up to the date of Mr. William Alexander's recent departure for England, the Police and Revenue of Midnapore and Hidgelee have been administered (since the abolition of the separate magistracy and collectorship of the latter district) by the officers specified in the much disorder; and as regards Hidgelee, though the Governor believes that the present officiating Magistrate and Collector, Mr. Gilmore, is entitled to much credit for his strenuous exertions to re-organize both the departments under his charge, much remains to be done in that quarter also, before the effects of visitations of the nature above alluded to can be repaired.

On a full consideration of all the circumstances of the case, after consulting the local officers, and, personally, the members of the Sudder Board, His Lordship has come to the conclusion that the plan which holds out the best prospects of present efficiency and permanent improvement, is this, to wit, the junction of Midnapore and Hidgelee as one district, the Magistracy and the Collectorship being entrusted to separate officers, the hands of the Collector being strengthened, if necessary, by the appointment of an additional Deputy Collector under Regulation IX. of 1833, to be ordinarily employed in Hidgelee, should the magistrate require assistance. In consequence of the remoteness of the southern and south-eastern thannahs from Midnapore, the Governor will be prepared to consider whether it would not be expedient to entrust the immediate management of the executive agents of the Police in that direction to an officer of superior rank to the darogahs, whose proceedings he would superintend, reporting himself to the Magistrate, a scheme of administration proposed for discussion in the printed Circular requisition of the 29th of September last. It may be added that the abolition of the Joint Magistracy and Deputy

Collectorate of Hidgelee will but slightly effect the inhabitants of that district, in regard to the difficulty of resort to the chief local authority in either department, as owing to its unhealthiness that officer has been necessarily permitted to reside, during the greater part of the year at Midnapore; and under the present plan, the magistrate having the Police alone to attend to, will be required to visit the more distant thannahs every cold season:

Collector of Midnapore and Hidgelee,
rupees.....	23,000*
Magistrate of Do. do.	15,000†

The aggregate of the new arrangement will be rupees 38,000, or rupees 12,000, less than that hitherto incurred as noted opposite to paragraph 2, of this Resolution; which saving will abundantly suffice to provide the subordinate officers referred to in the foregoing paragraph, should their employment be found to be indispensable to the efficiency of either department.

Total 38,000

† Ditto ditto between rupees 12,000 and Rs 18,000, the salaries of the lower and higher grades of Magistrates respectively.

The objection to the junction of Hidgelee with Midnapore, urged by Mr. Commissioner Ricketts in the passage quoted on the *margin from his letter of the 10th inst., has been entirely obviated by the recent appointment of Mr. J. H. Crawford as special Deputy Collector to investigate the titles of parties claiming to hold lands free of assessment in the united districts, with a particular provision for his residence during a portion of each year in Hidgelee.

In order to relieve both the Collector and the Magistrate of Midnapore, but especially the former officer, his Lordship has been pleased to resolve that Mahabatt Mahals Bogtue, Kumardachore, and Shakabundee, be separated from that zillah and attached to Ballasore to the Sudder station of which district, they are understood to be much nearer than to Midnapore.

Ordered, that Mr. A. F. Donnelly be appointed Collector of Midnapore and Hidgelee with the salary of the lower grade viz. rupees 21,000 per annum, and that Mr. M. S. Gilmore be appointed Magistrate of the same jurisdiction on the salary of the lower grades, viz. rupees 12,000 per annum — Hurkaru, March 22.

ASSESSMENT OF ASSETS ON SALT — CUTTACK.

The Board of Revenue, on the 12th of December last, forwarded a letter from the Commissioner of Cuttack to the Board of Customs, relative to an arrangement the Commissioner proposed to make for the more efficient collection of the revenue on lands occupied by the salt department. The Commissioner stated, that the average revenue paid for the last ten years, had been rupees 30,204, which being correct, the arrangement now proposed would in the Commissioner's opinion, be worth 10,000 rupees per annum to the state.

It further stated, that the case was about being submitted to Government, but that the Board were undecided as to the propriety of recommending the Commissioner's propositions for adoption in an unqualified form. The Board were of opinion that it would afford greater facility for the collection of this land revenue, if the payment were made by transfer from the salt to the revenue department, so as to give the zemindar credit to his land revenue account for the amount of one half the sum payable for his salt allowance at the rate suggested of two annas per maund. On the practicability of the latter arrangements as well as on the expediency of the proposal generally, the Sudder Board requested to be favored with the Board of Customs' opinion.

The Board of Customs felt some diffidence in forming their opinion, and as certain of the questions placed before them by the Sudder Board were intimately connected with land revenue management. They believed, however, that at present no deduction whatever is made from the $1\frac{1}{2}$ annas per maund, allowed to the Cuttack zemindars, and paid by the customs department for all salt produced in their zemindaries, and delivered to Government, and that the asset alluded to has not been subjected to any assessment in the land revenue department. The Board could do no more than conjecture why the zemindars were ready to relinquish a third of the compensation received from the salt department; it was sufficient for the present purpose, that they were thus ready, but it occurred to the Board, that if this amount be taken from them, the effect will be a proportionate reduction at the time of settlement in the land revenue since a case is now before the Customs Board, in which the Zemindars of Cuttack declare that they are greatly, almost mainly, dependent upon the $1\frac{1}{2}$ annas per maund received from the salt department for the means of meeting the claims of Government for land revenue.

There was another point which concerned the interests of the Customs department, that the arrangement proposed by the Commissioner would entail an additional charge upon the Cuttack manufacture of about 10,000 rupees per annum in exchange for which no advantage appears to be contemplated. That though true that the charge of 10,000 rupees would be nominal, so far as the general expenditure of the presidency is concerned, yet the Board of Customs did not clearly comprehend why a charge should appear against the salt department which would derive no benefit from the arrangement. It seemed to them to be precisely the same to the zemindar (although the zemindars appear to have originated the scheme now in contemplation) whether he relinquishes one-third of the $1\frac{1}{2}$ annas per maund now granted, or one-half the 2 annas per maund, which he appears prepared to give up. The difference to the state would be, that in the first case $1\frac{1}{2}$ annas will be clear gain to the land revenue without any additional charge upon salt. In the second case, while the clear gain to the land revenue will be only half an anna, the salt revenue has an increased charge debited to it of half an anna per maund more than the present cost of salt in Cuttack.

The Commissioner stated; first, "That the long agitated question of the liability of salt Revenue to Land Tax will be finally settled." The Board of Customs thought it would be equally settled, as the Zemindar is prepared to admit the liability of the asset to assessment, by taking a real third of what the zemindar now receives, as by taking a nominal half as proposed.

Second. "That no embarrassment can ever be occasioned by the Zemindars at a settlement being concluded, making exorbitant demands on the salt office." The Board of Customs did not exactly follow the argument. It appeared to them that the zemindar will make his future settlement (as far as the manufacture is concerned) with reference to the clear net sum he is himself able to obtain for each maund of salt, and not with reference to that portion of the sum which is to be claimed from him as land revenue upon the asset; as for instance, if a zemindar finds it his interest and has the power to drive a bargain with the salt office, and in his own mind fixes the profit he should receive per maund of salt at four annas, (which would be exorbitant) he would of course, under the arrangement contemplated by the Commissioner, demand eight annas, half of which would be a land tax, and the whole be chargeable to the salt department. The same rule would, no doubt, hold if the third only was taken by the land revenue, after being paid by the salt officer. The only remedy in either case would be not to make salt on those lands, for which too high a rate was demanded. The Board of Customs wished to shew that fixing a nominal rate of two annas per maund payable by the salt department (one anna resumable for land revenue) affords no greater protection against exorbitant demands, if the agencies were obliged to submit to such a demand, than if the salt department paid one anna and a half per maund, half an anna being resumable for land revenue.

Third. "That a fair increased price for the use of their (the zemindars' land is granted: if the Commissioner adverts to zemindars who now receive the one anna and a half per maund, it is not obvious how any increased price is granted. They will in either case be left in possession of one anna for each maund of salt manufactured in their zemindaries; and regarding the last proposition of the Commissioner, which was "that one half of what may be paid is secured to the revenues of the state," the Board of Customs, still adverting to the zemindars who are willing to receive under the proposed arrangement two annas per maund; the gain to the state is, to the extent of 50 per cent. and such gain would be altogether nominal.

The Board of Customs concluded by observing, that in the event of Government ultimately approving of the Cuttack zemindars being awarded 2 annas instead of $1\frac{1}{2}$ annas per maund on the salt manufactured, (one anna being resumable as land revenue,) that the payment be made by transfer from the salt to the revenue department, as in numerous other instances, giving the zemindar, as contemplated, credit in his land revenue account for a moiety of the salt allowance. It appeared also that the proposal of a nominal 2 annas instead of $1\frac{1}{2}$ per maund, with the condition of paying what they have never yet paid, viz. a land tax upon their salt receipts, originated with the zemindars, and that the object which could influence them thus to come forward, is the temptation, which few of the improvidentatives of this presidency can resist of obtaining the use of a sum of ready money beyond what they have hitherto received, although perfectly aware that they will be ultimately held accountable for a moiety of the amount by Government; whether the Cuttack zemindars were or were not moved by this consideration usually so influential, will be put to the test when they are apprized that the adjustment will be made in account between the salt and land revenue department.

The Sudder Board will, we believe, pass their final orders in this case in a few days.—Hurkaru, March 29.

GOVERNOR-GENERAL'S AGENT HAZAREEBAUG—STATE BAUGMONDIE.

We give this report in full, having published the proceedings of the Board in this case at great length, as far as it had then proceeded.

To CAPTAIN T. WILKINSON,

Governor-General's Agent, Kishenpore.

Sir,—I have read in the public prints a notice of the Proceedings of the Sudder Board of Revenue, dated the 7th instant, which induces me to address you without loss of time respecting the affairs of Purgunnah Bag moondee.

From the date of the Agency being established, viz the 15th January 1834, the general account of the Purgunnah may be traced as follows.

At this point I pause to remark that the balance here shown (Sa. Rs. 3,995) accrued long previous to my appointment, so far, therefore, I trust, I shall be considered blameless.

I received charge of this office on the 6th of August 1835, and found that during the four months of 1242 B. S. then elapsed, only Sa. Rs. 38 had been collected, but I will admit my responsibility for the whole of that year.

The account now proceeds.

which will be less than I found it by Co's Rs. 850, and it is needless to add that every effort will be used to effect its entire liquidation.

On the foregoing statement I leave you (who are intimately acquainted with the district and its capabilities) to decide how far I have been negligent or am blameable in this particular instance.

I proceed to another point on which I have some (not perhaps very powerful) defence to offer. I allude to my having accepted the security of Sagurnarain Sing, without its having had your sanction. I deeply regret that mistake: how far it was excusable, you shall judge.

I am again forced to refer to periods anterior to my own appointment.

On the 26th of September 1834, the Jhulda Rajah being considered insufficient, the Ranee farmer was warned by the then assistant to provide other security. But she was not at the same time prohibited from making collections; so far to the contrary, that when a Suzawal was deputed on the 2d December 1834, he was instructed to assist the Ranee. The Seezawal was also called upon to give security, but it was never furnished.

On the 25th March 1835, the Ranee gave notice that Sagurnarain Sing would become her security. The Assistant (not the former Officer) ordered the personal attendance of Sagurnarain Sing, who did not however attend.

On the 27th July 1835, the assistant (a third Officer) directed inquiry to be made, respecting the competency of the proposed security.

On the 6th of August 1835, I received charge of this Division, and on the 23d of September following I (being then unused to Civil business and unaware of the objection to Jungle Estates, or of my own incompetency to approve in any case) confirmed the security on its being reported valid. I also permitted the Ranee to continue the exercise of her farming powers; it had (as remarked above) never been suspended; and through mere ignorance I omitted to report my proceedings to you. For this latter omission I am much concerned, as it precluded your having cognizance of a transaction, that (as I am now aware) you could not have approved, and has partially involved you in an affair where I alone am to blame.

I beg pardon for the length of the foregoing exculpation, but to a public servant, public character is all important, and on the present occasion it would be affectation to say that unmentioned blame gives me no pain. I may toil for years in obscurity and gain no reward so public as in this instance my reproach has been. I fondly believe that I have not deserved censure so severe, but I am not so sanguine as to hope that the Sudder Board will qualify, or retract it.

It may be advisable to annex in this place some further details, to place you in complete possession of the affairs of Bugmoondee up to the present date.

Immediately on the demise of Sagurnarain Sing, I placed the pergunnah under sequestration, and made strenuous efforts to procure a competent Suyawal, but without success. The only eligible person who offered was one Gopal Mookerjee, a native of the place. He could not give sufficient security, though himself wealthy. (The reason appears to be, that the operation of the resumption laws in the neighbouring zillahs, renders the landholders unwilling to subject their tenures to any scrutiny, and he declined to place even rupees 3,000 in deposit, on that condition being offered to him.)

Failing to procure a Suyawal, I proceeded to Bugmoondee in December last, for the purpose of collecting the rents. I found that prior to the sequestration a considerable portion, about Sa. Rs. 1,108, had been taken up by the Ranee's Dewan Chenebas Putnaile, who asserted, that he had done so with the Ranees's permission, partly to meet your demand in April last, and partly for the Ranees's house expenses. This the Ranees denied; but as her Moshairah had not been drawn for above a year, it was manifest that at last some part of the amount had probably been expended for her use. So I made Chenebas give up his accounts, and as they involved details of miscellaneous household expenditure for several years, I committed them for examination to a responsible Panchayet. A few days afterwards, by a strange fatality, Chenebas died. On hearing of that event I instantly directed his property to be sequestered pending the settlement of his accounts. There is not, I think, any probability of loss as the property of Chenebas and the Moshaira of the Ranees are accountable, more especially the latter, because the accounts of the Dewan seem to have been unchecked from the year 1237 B. S. until now, and the Ranees is fairly responsible for her own neglect.

In conclusion, I beg to remark, that having carefully inspected the accounts of the Mofussil Jumma in Purgannah Bagmoondie, I am confidently of opinion, that the farming Jumma has been fixed too high, that the estate does not in fact yield so much, and that the farming Jumma should not exceed Rs. 4,800, or say Co.'s Rs. 5,100. This I look upon as the principle source of the arrears, and I would be glad for the people's sake that you should take that subject into consideration.

Over assessment is a confessed evil, and it has the minor effect of rendering difficult farming arrangements, which are always more in the prospect of gain. Bagmoondie holds forth no such prospect, while the climate is considered so unwholesome that persons who have actually lodged securities for Suyawalships, decline taking employment in that quarter.

I have, &c.

(Signed) J. HANNINGTON, Asst. Govr. Genl. Agent
Manbhooon Division, Assistant's
Office, the 24th February 1837.

(True copy.)

(Signed) J. WILKINSON, A. G. G.

Mr. Wilkinson, the Governor-General's agent, forwarded to the Board a second communication from his assistant, Lieutenant Hannington, for their information.

Lieutenant Hannington stated that the Mofussil rental of Purgannah Bagmoondie, was understood by the Board to be about Rs. 4,870, and inferred to be greater because the Ranees could not otherwise have afforded to take the farm at a rent of Rs. 5,501, besides paying up outstanding balances. With much deference to the Board, Lieutenant Hannington could not from those premises draw the same conclusion. To him it seemed probable, that under the advice of interested individuals, desirous to open for themselves sources of speculation, and in the natural feeling of pride that would render her averse to the intrusion of strangers, the Ranees closed with the offered terms, ignorant or careless whether it were possible to fulfil them. In a former letter of his, Lieutenant Hannington stated his belief that the proceeds of the Estate are not much above Rs. 4,800, in proof of which he would forward copies of papers on which his opinion was founded. He was tolerably assured of their correctness, for the Purgannah is too small to admit of any serious concealment. If it really yields Rs. 5,500, that sum includes every species of undue exaction, and it did not appear to have been ever paid into the Government

The Board in their letter, took exception to the circumstance of Captain Wilkinson's having credited as collections the maintenance allowance of the minor. It was not incumbent upon him, Lieutenant Hannington observed, to notice the exception further than as being his own practice in all the farms under his charge and that by desire of the farmers themselves, who prefer it to the more regular method of paying in, and receiving it back. The prohibition of this custom would materially enhance the difficulty of making collections.

Lieutenant Hannington has directed the issue of notices inviting farming tenders; but does not expect an offer at the present rent; but in the meantime holds the estate under his personal management, which he finds to be the most expert and effective mode. Should it be found necessary or desirable to continue this system for any length of time, he did not object to being held responsible, so far as Rs. 4,800 per annum; but could not undertake to collect the greater sum (Rs. 5,501) without respectfully stating his conviction that its realization is impossible: he therefore desired Captain Wilkinson's strict examination into the rent roll, and requested his instructions thereupon; for if no farmer comes forward it will be expedient to make ryotwarre arrangements at the commencement of the ensuing year, 1244 B. S., and if the full farming jumma of rupees 5,501 be insisted upon, the authorities could only obtain it by new engagements with the tenantry.

In concluding, Lieutenant Hannington reverted to his error in having accepted the security of Sangurnam Singh, and omitting to report the same. For this he had already expressed his regret, and in the censure of the Board he felt himself severely punished. He has endeavoured to shew that it did not altogether proceed from laxity or deficient judgment. It was needless to repeat what he had before urged, but he trusted that Captain Wilkinson, and through him the Board, would acquit him of negligence, though he should be considered to have acted without due caution.

The Board, in acknowledging the receipt of the above communication stated, that Lieutenant Hannington has succeeded in shewing that a great portion of the arrears alluded to is of a period antecedent to his administration. He has also shewn that his exertions to make collections have been more successful than those of his predecessors; the prospective balance (by estimate) being less by rupees 850 than the balance due at the time he took charge.

In explanation of the balances generally, the Board observed that Lieutenant Hannington declares his belief that the farming jumma has been fixed too high, and he states his reasons for this opinion for the Agent's consideration and orders. He evidently wrote from a full conviction of the correctness of his views and the Board will therefore be glad to receive the Agent's opinion and suggestion on the subject. Should it appear on careful investigation that the jumma is really too high, the yearly balances will be in a great measure accounted for.

With respect to Lieutenant Hannington's second letter, the Board did not entirely follow the argument by which that officer supported the expediency of crediting a farmer of a ward estate, with the ellorhain payable to the minor and his family. In cases of rare occurrence, when the farmer is a near relative, or guardian of the minor, such a measure might be extenuated though even then hardly, the Board thought, with success. But where the farmer is a stranger to the minor or ward and in no degree connected with him, or his interests, the Board could not see how such a step could operate safely for the interests of the parties concerned. But it was possible that the Board misconceived Lieutenant Hannington on this point, and have requested further explanation.

Collections.	1239 B. S.	Rs. 3,104	treasury, his own collections during the past two 1241 "	1,508	former precedent to which

	1242 "	5,498	he could refer, fell at present

The Board have observed with satisfaction the clear, candid and judicious manner in which Lieutenant Hannington has met, and in a considerable degree answered their objections to his proceedings. They derived from this exhibition of his capacity for public business great confidence in his exertions to remedy whatever may be wrong in the management of the Pergunnah under consideration.—Hurkaru, March 30.

MISCELLANEOUS.

CALCUTTA.

CRICKET.—On the 25th of February a very spirited cricket match was played on the Parade Ground at Barrackpore, between eight members of the Calcutta-Club, aided by three other gentlemen, and eleven of the Barrackpore officers. The match was not concluded. The Calcutta folks scored in two innings 232, and the officers 159 with two wickets down in their second innings.

IMPROPER ENTRIES OF ESTATES ON RENT ROLLS—BHAUGULPORE.—The Sudder Board have transmitted to the Accountant of the Revenue Department, a statement forwarded by the Commissioner of Bhagulpoore, in which it appears, that no less than 26 estates have been improperly brought on the rent roll of the district of Bhagulpoore. The object of the Board is to ascertain the accuracy of the statement furnished by the Collector, and also, if any checks and of what kind exist, in the Accountant's Office, to prevent the irregular abstraction from or insertion in the towjees of a district of estates bearing a sudder jumma, and whether Collectors can and do at their pleasure, increase or decrease the number of estates and sudder jummas in their towjees.

OSBORNE V. STOCQUELER.—In consequence of an offensive paragraph in the Oriental Observer of the 25th ultimo, of which Mr. Stocqueler admitted himself to be the author to Mr. Osborne, that gentleman sent his friend Mr. Barwell, the Barrister, to demand satisfaction. This was declined by Mr. Stocqueler, on the ground that he had not exceeded that license which the freedom of criticism allowed; but having also resorted to language, in regard to Mr. Osborne, which Mr. Barwell considered in-culting to himself, as bearing the message of his friend, that gentleman, after informing Mr. Stocqueler that he must be prepared for personal chastisement from Mr. Osborne, sent his own friend, Mr. Maurice Fitzgerald Sandes, to demand satisfaction for the insult to himself. This was also refused, and it appears that Mr. Stocqueler immediately applied to the Chief Magistrate for protection. Mr. Osborne was arrested near the Englishman Office with a horsewhip in his hand, but having pledged his honor to Mr. McFarlan that the matter should stop there and that he would appear at the Police Office, he was set at liberty. Messrs. Osborne, Barwell and Sandes, have since been bound over to keep the peace.

ORIENTAL SEMINARY.—The seventh annual examination of the pupils of the Oriental Seminary, took place at the Town Hall on the 24th ultimo. Several gentlemen, both European and native, were present on the occasion. The examination commenced a little after eleven o'clock, and continued till a late hour in the evening. The mode of reading English poetry and the quickness with which the pupils answered questions connected with their respective studies, generally speaking, was creditable both to themselves and their teachers. Recitations intervened in the course of the examination of the several classes, and the deliveries were good. At the conclusion of the examination, a number of prize books, furnished by Bahoo Gourmohun Andy, the proprietor of the institution, were distributed amongst the successful candidates.

ARTILLERY REVIEW AT DUM-DUM.—The review at Dum-Dum on the 27th ultimo, was a very brilliant spectacle, the whole of the manoeuvres being performed in the most beautiful manner imaginable. Brigadier Penny, commanding the Barrackpore Infantry Brigade, and at this time temporarily in command of the Presidency Division, was the reviewing officer, Lord Auckland attending, not in his capacity of Governor of the Garrison of Fort William (of which the troops at Dum-Dum and Barrackpore form a part) but on horse-back as a simple spectator, to enjoy the pleasure of witnessing a spectacle somewhat out of the common routine of inspections and reviews. After the horse and foot had marched round, His Lordship and Miss Eden, mounted one of the state elephants, the better to see the practice and manoeuvring. After the practice, the interest of which was a good deal injured early in the evening, by the very first shell fired chocking wilfully to ignite the mine and blow up the flag staff, the Government House party and Staff, adjourned to the quarters of the Commandant of Artillery, Brigadier Faithfull, to dress and refresh, after the two or three hours exposure to smoke and dust, on an unusually warm evening; thence, at 8 o'clock to the Mess House, where a large party of guests was assembled in the Library and a grand dinner of 150 covers laid out under the Governor-General's Durbar tents. The dinner was followed by a brilliant display of fireworks and these by a ball, which lasted till long past midnight. Both the roads leading to Dum-Dum, were covered with foot passengers and vehicles of all descriptions, enveloped in an unceasing cloud of dust. Nothing could be more beautiful than the whole sight. The Horse Artillery, as usual, attracted the largest share of attention, and it was impossible not to admire the high order of the whole, and in particular the fine condition of the horses.

MR. DYCE SOMBRE.—A writ was executed at a late hour on the 25th ultimo, upon Mr. Dyce Sombre, at the suit of his father Colonel Dyce, for some twenty lakhs of rupees and upwards; but notwithstanding the largeness of the amount and the inconvenient time at which the arrest took place, Mr. Sombre was enabled to put in bail, having then at the Treasury Company's paper to the amount of nearly forty lakhs of rupees.

MEETING OF THE CHAMBER OF COMMERCE.—There was a meeting at the Chamber of Commerce on the 7th instant. A resolution by Mr. Syers, advocating the introduction of a Bank, for discounts, not to engage in foreign-exchange operations, was negatived by a considerable majority; and another resolution for the formation of a committee, to report upon the bearings of such an institution as the India Bank, was carried, with instructions to prepare the same in the course of a week, for the decision of the Chamber. The tone of the meeting was more decidedly averse to the India Bank, than the first one.

BOTANICAL LECTURES.—Dr. Wallich has, for some time past, been giving a series of Botanical Lectures at the Medical College.

THE LORD BISHOP OF CALCUTTA.—The Lord Bishop of Calcutta, returned to the Presidency on the 15th instant.

KYAN'S PATENT FOR PRESERVING TIMBER, &c.—Captain Sime, has expressed his readiness to undertake the seasoning, for house-builders and others, of timber or canvass, with Kyan's specific, by which seasoning they will be rendered invulnerable to white-ants or mildew. Captain Sime has vats prepared at Howrah for the purpose.

FRAUD.—A rich baboo of this city, celebrated for his amorous disposition, has recently had two successful frauds practised on him, by which he has been made to pay rather dearly for his partiality for the sex. In one instance a fair one of surprising beauty, called on the baboo and induced him to send home with her, several silver trays filled with sweetmeats, with which she decamped. In the other case, a woman, no better than she should be, passed herself off in the dark, as a respectable widow with whom the amorous baboo had fallen deeply in love; and while she was conversing with the baboo in a private apartment, her accomplice made off with all the silver and gold paraphernalia of the baboo's boigcannah. These losses, have worked such a change to the baboo's disposition, that he says that he would defy Venus herself now to delude him with her fascinations.

THE PSEUDO RAJAH OF BURDWAN.—The supporters of the pretender to the guddee of Burdwan, are again bestirring themselves actively in his behalf. One of these gentry, under the anonymous signature of JUSTITIA, has been stating in the Hurkaru, that the person representing himself to be Partaub Chund of Burdwan, is the actual simon peur, and not a pretender. But of course no credence can be given to the assertion of an anonymous writer.

THE SERAMPORE MISSION.—The Serampore Mission, once the terror of many good people, is now in a tottering condition. Several of its missionaries in different parts of the country, have been discharged for want of means to support them; and the European missionaries in Serampore, have returned to England with their families, with the exception of Dr. Marshman.

MR. CHINNERY.—Mr. Henry Chinnery, the East Indian, who was sent home with presents from the Nawab of Moorshedabad, to the King of England, has returned in the Colombo, and brings with him some valuable presents from His Majesty to the Nawab.

THE UNCOVENANTED SERVICE WIDOWS' FUND.—It is stated that about a hundred and fifty members of the uncovenanted service, having signified their willingness to become subscribers to the proposed Uncovenanted Assistants' Widows' Pension Fund, measures are about being taken to bring the plan into operation by the 1st of May next.

MILITARY ORPHAN SOCIETY.—The papers have been teeming with discussions respecting the expulsion of Mr. McQueen from the office of Secretary to the Military Orphan Society. The Managers of the institution have published an explanation in exculpation of Mr. McQueen's conduct respecting Miss Polhill; but the question of excluding the Secretary has not yet been decided, though the general feeling of the Army, as far as it has been manifested, is against him.

BANK OF INDIA.—A numerously attended meeting of the Chamber of Commerce took place on the 20th instant, for the purpose of considering the report of a Committee, appointed to draw up the resolutions, respecting the establishment of the proposed "Indian Bank" based on those submitted by Messrs. Harding and Hurry.

The Committee prepared at some length the reasons, which were opposed to an institution embracing, in their opinion, objects unconnected with legitimate banking and involving, if not aiming at, privileges and functions of a monopolising and dangerous tendency.

Mr. Spier moved, seconded by Mr. Montefiori Joseph, that the Report be received and approved; upon which an amendment was moved by Mr. Bruce, seconded by Mr. W. F. Ferguson, that it be rejected.

On a shew of hands the amendment was lost, and Mr. Spier's Resolution was carried.

STEAM TUG ASSOCIATION MEETING.—The first annual meeting of the Steam Tug Association, took place at the office of Messrs. Carr, Tagore and Co. on the 20th instant. The last half year's profits, amounted to fifteen and a half per centum on the subscribed capital; but it was determined to make a dividend of only seven per cent. or seventy Company's rupees per share, and to apply the rest towards procuring one or more new boats to supply the increasing demands of the shipping in this port, and also to enable the Association, with its increased means of meeting the demand, to effect an object it has from the first desired to accomplish, namely, to lower the rates charged for tugging vessels.

The following are the resolutions adopted by the meeting:

1st.—That the report and accounts be approved and recorded accordingly.

2d.—That the arrangement regarding Capts. Peat and Boothby be approved and that Capt. Peat be invited to qualify himself by taking 10 shares in the association.

3d.—That a dividend be declared of 70 Co.'s rs. per share, and that the access of earnings be carried to credit of a reserved fund for the purpose of increasing the number of tugging boats.

4th.—That an application be made to Government to ascertain if they will part with the Irrawaddy upon a fair valuation.

5th.—That the Committee and Secretaries for the past year be re-elected.

6th.—That the thanks of the Meeting be voted to the chair.

UNION BANK. A meeting of the directors of the Union Bank, was held on the 21st instant, at which it was determined to call a general meeting for the purpose of augmenting the capital stock of the Bank by 600 additional shares of 1,000 Co.'s Rs. each besides filling up original bank shares of 2,700 Co.'s Rs. to Co.'s Rs. 3,000 and the supplementary shares of 900 to 1,000 Co.'s Rs., which will give, in the whole, an addition to the capital stock of about eight lakhs of rupees. All the shares are to be equalized, or rather split into shares of 1,000 each, with a vote attached. •

PALAMO COAL FIELDS.—It is said that Government have deputed Mr. Hornfray to examine the coal fields of the Palamo district, in conjunction with Captain Sage, and to report upon the best means of communicating with them.

GOVERNMENT ECONOMY.—A general order has been issued by the head uncovenanted assistant in the Accountant-General's office, to all the writers and duffooties under him, to deposit in certain chests purchased for the purpose, every description of waste papers including covers on letters received, that when they have accumulated to a large quantity, they might be sold off to the highest bidder and the proceeds handed over to the Sub-treasurer for the benefit of the East India Company.

MADILLE LEMERY.—The public is, it appears, about to lose Madille Léméry. She returns to the Mauritius, to a better engagement than she left to come here. Her friends will, of course, rejoice in the cause of her departure, though they must lament the fact itself.

FIRE.—A fire broke out at Shaum Bazar on the night of the 4th instant, in the house of one Ramtonoo, and destroyed about a dozen or sixteen huts.

On the night of the 10th instant, between the hours of ten and eleven, some twenty or twenty-two houses, both tiled and straw, were destroyed by fire, at Jackson's Ghaut, just opposite that splendid newly built building, the screw house of Baboo Moteelaal Seal. It is stated to have broken out in the shop of a Moody, while he was cooking his victuals. Property to a considerable amount, consisting of tar, oil, planks, &c., were consumed.

About two o'clock on the afternoon of the 12th instant, a dreadful fire happened in Nimtullah Street, within the Hautcolah Division. It broke out in the shop of one Buddun, and the wind being somewhat high at the time, a large cluster of houses, both tiled and straw, about seventy or eighty in number, together with the movables of the inmates, the latter having gone to work, were consumed. The engines attended by the fire sergeant, as also two of the town sergeants, O'Brien and Garvey, arrived, when more than half the houses were consumed.

A very great conflagration occurred on the 21st instant. It commenced at Jora Talao and was extinguished at Jaun Bazaar, after doing very much damage.

About a quarter to four in the afternoon of the 22nd instant, was experienced a very plentiful shower of hail, which lasted about twenty minutes. The weather had been rather cloudy in the morning, but for about ten minutes before the hail was showered down, a bright sun was shining, and the sky was perfectly clear, with the exception of a small opaque cloud, which sailed slowly across the sun's disk. All of a sudden, preceded by a few drops of rain, the hail came pattering down on all sides, with a rapidity seldom equalled, and in a few minutes the ground, was literally rendered white by the hail that had been strewed upon it. Several of the crystals of ice, were nearly of the size of pigeons' eggs and of a solid globular formation. The descent of considerably larger masses of hail has been witnessed in Calcutta, but never a more plentiful shower in so short a time.

THE MURDERERS OF RADHA BEBER.—Some weeks since, notice was taken of a murder of a Hindoo courtizan, named Radha Beber, in Churruck-Dangah. The servants of the deceased having disappeared simultaneously with the event, strong suspicions were entertained against them, and these suspicions appear now to be in manner confirmed by the circumstance of one of them being apprehended and brought down to Calcutta; by one of the many burkundauzes who had been sent in several directions, with a part of the gold ornaments and cash in his possession. The case is now in the hands of the Chief Magistrate.

MURDER.—Jhubu Khan, Foondhun Khan, Mohim Sheik, Dhonaee Moosulman, Gol Mahommed and Kadeem, were tried before E. R. Barwell, Esq., for the wilful murder of Gour Sirdar. The Court found the prisoners Foondhun Khan, and Mohim Sheik, guilty of the wilful murder of the deceased Gour Sirdar on violent presumption, the prisoner Jhubu Khan, of giving aiders for the commission of the crime, and the prisoners Dhonaee Moosulman, Gol Mahommed, and Kadeem, of being accomplices in the same, on full legal proof; and declared them liable to discretionary punishment by akoolut proportioned to their different degrees of guilt. The case has been referred for the final orders of the Nizamut authorities.

ATTEMPT TO MURDER.—A woman of the name of Jaun Beber, residing in the house of Khyroo coachman, at Short's Bazar, was about 3 o'clock on the morning of the 16th instant, wounded with a knife in the throat by her husband, who was led to the commission of the act, by jealousy. The Police of the division is looking out for the man. The woman's wound was examined by Mr. O'Brien of the Native Hospital, who pronounced her to be out of danger.

YELLOW DYE.—Dr. Burt, of Berhampore, has lately discovered a valuable yellow dye in the leaves of the teak tree. The dye is obtained by boiling the leaves for upwards of an hour in an earthen or copper vessel; but steeping in cold water will also extract it. Dr. Burt has yet only tried the dye on silk cloth, using mordants of alum and acetate of iron; the former produces a bright yellow, the latter an olive green; both fixed permanent colors, which can be varied from the most delicate straw to the brightest yellow and olive green. Some idea of the quantity of dye contained in the leaves may be formed from boiling 4 ounces of the dried leaves slowly in 3 or 4 quarts of water; when the liquor is strained there will be a sufficient quantity to dye several square yards of silk cloth.

CHRISTIAN THE SWINDLER.—One of the two individuals named Christian, generally spoken of as "the Russian spies," has been sent to jail, pending a further examination into the charge laid against him by Mr. Walker, for obtaining large sums of money under false pretences.

EXECUTION AT TALLYGUNGEE.—Ramnarain Poorkyte, convicted of the murder of Ramdhone Doss, was executed at 7 o'clock A. M. of the 17th instant, on the other side of the bridge leading to Tallygunge. Ramnarain's fellow prisoner and accomplice, Roopchand Mundul, has been sentenced to imprisonment, with labor in irons, for life.

AN EXTRAORDINARY THEFT.—A few days ago a vander of scents entered a sweet-meat seller's shop in Collootollah-street with the ostensible intention of selling some itter. While the shop-keeper was alone in his shop, the scent vander presented a phial of itter, which being rejected, he showed another, which on being smelt served to render the shopkeeper perfectly senseless. The man then made away with all his brass chattels and sweetmeats, together with some rupees and pice, and has made his escape.

DARING ROBBERY.—A daring robbery was committed on the premises of Baboo Rajendra Mullick, at Chorbagan, on the night of the 3d instant, and property, consisting chiefly of gold and silver ornaments, to a considerable amount, carried away. Some of the offenders have been apprehended by the police, with a portion of the stolen property in their possession.

HIGHWAY ROBBERY.—On the 19th instant, about nine o'clock, as a Baboo of the name of Hurroonath Roy, residing at Ariadu, in the Bariackpore road, was returning home from Calcutta in a palanquin carriage, he was attacked by four Europeans near Rajah Cullian Sing's garden, Chitpore. The Baboo was pulled out of the carriage and told that unless he gave up every thing he had about him, he would be shot dead: One of the men had a pistol at the time in his hand, which he held to the head of the Baboo. The Baboo had nothing to give them, as he had been in town merely on a visit to the family of the late Rajah Gopee Mohun. Every bit of clothes he had on his person was forced from him so as to leave him naked, when finding an opportunity he was glad to escape with life. The syce was thrashed, and so was the coachman; the latter was knocked off the coach box, and one of the Europeans got on it, and the rest inside the carriage, and drove away. It is stated that the offenders are private soldiers belonging to the Artillery regiment at Dum-Dum, two of whom were apprehended the same night by the Police constables in town: on one of them was found a pistol, and subsequently the palanquin carriage was recovered.

AFFRAY.—A serious affray occurred on the 16th instant, in the Durrumtollah Bazaar. The shopkeepers, on one of their body being struck by a Mr. Daws, rose en masse, shut the gates of the Bazaar, and commenced a most violent assault on all the Christian gentlemen who had visited the Bazaar; and the assaulted, could not for a long time be rescued from them.

DEFALCATION IN THE POLICE OFFICE.—The Sherishtadar of the Police Office, was brought before the Chief Magistrate on an alleged charge of defalcation in his cash returns to the amount of seventy thousand rupees. Being unable to find bail, he was committed and ordered to be brought up again on the 27th instant for trial.

COUNTERFEIT COIN.—A Brahmin of a notoriously bad character, and two others, were apprehended by the Police on the 4th instant for making counterfeit coin. A number of false rupees were found on the men.

THE COPPER CURRENCY.—The scarcity of copper money in circulation, has induced the shroffs again to extort six pice for exchanging each rupee. A few shops for exchanging money are still kept up by Government; but the pice procurable in them at sixty-four for the rupee, are all defaced—of the same kind which Government brought up some time since at sixty-eight for the rupee,—and will not in consequence pass current in the market. How long are the poor wretches, who earn from three to seven rupees a month, to be subjected to this serious loss, from the inability or unwillingness of Government to relieve them by a plentiful supply of the coin?

Money changers give now only fourteen gundas and three pice for the new rupee, and propose giving during the Dole Jatra and Mohorum festivals, &c., &c., only fourteen gundas and two pice. This is batta with a vengeance.

MQFUSSIL.

AGRA.—The Secretaryship to the Government of Agra, is about to become vacant by the departure of Mr. Bushby to England, in consequence of the regretted indisposition of his family. Messrs. Scott and Thomson, are spoken of as his successors.

New mines of coal have just been discovered at Hazareebaug and Bidjegur, in the south-eastern corner of Mirzapore district. The coal is said to be superior to that of Burdwan, and offers have been made to supply it to Government at five or six maunds per rupee.

MEERUT.—In consequence of defalcations which have occurred in the pay office, the Deputy Paymaster has prosecuted the firm of Hurput Rao and Narian Doss, who were sureties for some Bengally clerks in the Pay Office, for the sum of 9,713 rupees, in the civil Court of Meerut.

CANPORK.—Mr. Adam Maxwell, of the late house of Maxwell, Burnett and Co., and his accomplice, Oomrao Alli, having been tried before the Sessions court of Cawnpore for swindling 11,500 rupees, from the Paishwah at Bithoor, the former has been sentenced to six months imprisonment in the jail of Cawnpore and to pay a fine to Government of 1,000 rupees, or in default, to three months' further imprisonment, and to the latter five months' imprisonment has been awarded.

The small pox is raging at Cawnpore, and several individuals of H. M. 16th foot, have taken the infection.

DELHI.—Major-General the Honorable John Ramsay, Commanding the Meerut Division of the Army, quitted Delhi on the 17th ult. en route to Bareilly, for the purpose of inspecting the troops at that station. From Bareilly, the General will proceed to Moradabad, and thence return to Meerut.

The Pallee Plague has now extended its ravages over nearly the whole of Marwar.

Mr. T. Metcalf and Mr. R. N. C. Hamilton have been appointed a Commission to adjust the affairs and claims connected with the estate of the late Shumshooddeen Khan of Ferozepore.

The Lieutenant-Governor has extended the revised merit-fostering system to the North Western Provinces.

Mr. Clerk, Political Agent at Umbalah, joined the Camp of His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief on the 17th ultimo, and pointed out the utter impossibility of going across the country direct to Hurreek, to meet Runjeet's mission. His Excellency must now proceed by Loodianaah, and as the marriage of New Nehal Sing is positively fixed for the 6th proximo, it is very probable the ceremony will be concluded ere Sir Henry Fane reaches Umritsir!

Serious injury has resulted to the crops from a severe hail storm experienced on the 9th instant. The genial showers which fell a few days previous to it, promised a rich crop and plentiful harvest, but these bright illusions have entirely vanished in the hail storm.

LIEUT. BURNES.—The arrival of Lieut. Burnes and party, in two vessels at Hyderabad, has excited great curiosity on the part of the natives, some of whom main tain that they are come to settle the affairs of Kabul and others that they are proceeding to Iran.

MURDER.—A woman of the name of Aludny, was convicted by the Magistrate, on the 3d instant, of the murder of Puddomony Dossee, a young woman of about thirteen years of age, for the sake of her ornaments. The horrible deed, was perpetrated with a bamboo, with which the murderers beat out the brains of the poor girl. The case has been handed up to the sessions judge.

Mr. John Brodrick, an indigo planter, having proved an assault of an aggravated nature, to have been committed on him and others by Mohindronauth Mitter and others, at the instigation of Moteelal Roy and Sibehunder Roy, Mohindronauth Mitter was sentenced to be imprisoned for six months, and to pay a fine of 100 rupees, and unless paid within seven days, to be kept to hard labour during the imprisonment; and in default of the fine the term of imprisonment to be enlarged to nine months. Orders were then given that the rest of the defendants, including Moteelal Roy and Sibehunder Roy, should be in attendance in the court within five days.

DINAPORE.—A treasure party from the force at this station, in charge of two lakhs of rupees, had lately three picquets killed near Dungaee, by a party of thieves. The alarm, however, having been given, the thieves made off without a further attempt on the money.

POISONING.—On the 1st of March, the darogah of Hurrpaul, forwarded to the court two dead bodies, and four men in a senseless state, apparently natives of the upper provinces. From the examination of the bodies, it appears, that they had been poisoned, and the four men who were insensible having come to their senses, had stated, that they were men in the employ of Gopee Chunder Oswall, of Burra Bazar, Calcutta; that their names were Roopram, Mosooram, Heralaul and Connyelaul; and that they had with them five purses of gold-mohurs and goldingots to the amount of 16,000 Rs. It is supposed, that the modes at whose house they slept, poisoned them, with the intention of robbing their money, and the man has been taken up in consequence.

NATIVE STATES.

RAJPOOTANA.—The Jhodpore Legion arrived at Kankrolee in Meywar, on the 9th January, where Colouel Spiers, Political Agent of Neemuch, joined this corps. From Kankrolee they crossed the hills and after descending the Ghanora Ghaut arrived in seven marches at Burrong in the Sirohee territory, in the neighbourhood of which place the new cantonment for the Jhodpore Legion is marked out. sanguine expectations are entertained of the restoration of peace and good order in this long disturbed country, and the natives are loud in their praises of the wisdom and policy of the British Government in having adopted so humane a measure. The Plague seems to be spreading all over Marwar. It has broken out in several of the villages in the neighbourhood of Burgong. It is a difficult matter to prevent buncas and traders from infected places in Marwar entering the camp, as they invariably conceal the circumstance from a desire to effect the sale of their goods.

SEWDANDUR.—The Ameers of Scind sent a detachment of troops for the protection of their territories in Sewdandur, and while they were encamped on the frontiers, the son of Mahraub Khan, the chief of Bilocheestan, with a view to surprize them, attacked them in the dead of night; but the attempt failed of the desired effect, and the Scindians having been on their guard at the time, a skirmish ensued between the parties, in which and the Scindians succeeded in putting the Bilochees to rout. A number of lives were lost on the occasion.

BOKHARAH.—The chief of Bokharah turning apathetic in regard to the interests of his subjects, and negligent to keep his troops in order, and supply them with military stores, the empire is threatened with much jeopardy. The inhabitants of certain districts have already placed themselves under the Government of Iran; and it is stated that the King of this latter place is ambitious to make himself master of Bolakh, Bokhara and Kerman. But Mirza Hosen Ali, the Governor of Serauz, a relation of His Majesty, does not approve of the measure, it not being consonant to his feeling that the chief of Iran should be hurled from the throne. He is trying, accordingly, to dissuade His Majesty from the purpose in question, and also from retaining in his possession, the district above alluded to.

From recent arrivals from this place, it has been ascertained, that this state is torn asunder by anarchy and misrule of every kind: the cultivator is oppressed by the soldier, and the soldier is in his turn, dissatisfied with the government. The land lies untilld, and all things are in disorder. The inhabitants of many of the frontier towns, disgusted with the supineness of the Bokhara Government, have transferred their allegiance to the Persian Government in the usual style; namely, that of introducing the Persian thannuhs into and expelling those of Bokhara out of their towns.

CANDAHAR.—The reported invasion of Shikarpore by the Sikhs, has alarmed the Mountain Chiefs of Candahar, two of whom, supposing that there is some other ulterior object in view, have assembled a body of 20,000 men with which they propose to watch the movements of the Sikhs, and when they find them fairly in possession of Shikarpore, to return to, and protect their mountain fastnesses.

HYDERABAD.—A report prevails at this place, that two large boats, with a war-ship, containing British troops, have come by way of the sea up the Indus, cast anchor, and disembarked the troops below Hyderabad. This intelligence has struck a great panic into the Scindians who are speculating upon the object of this display, and who begin to be alarmed for themselves, particularly as it is now confidently rumoured that these ships and troops are to be immediately followed by numerous others from Bombay.

LAHORE.—While the Maha Rajah was holding a durbar, a petition from Hurry Sing Nelwa was read, stating that the zemindars of the tribe called Afridy, in the neighbourhood of the fortress of Shaikh Imaun-oollah Hosen, having formed a gang had commenced a regular system of depredations, on itinerant merchants and travellers, who happened to fall into their clutches. To this His Highness was pleased to answer that the petitioner should leave nothing untried to eradicate the evil complained of.

A petition was received from Sirdar Juggut Sing Antari-walla, setting forth that a number of zemindars of Aysee having assembled together, had put the thanadar of the place to death; and that there were fifteen Seikhs among the offenders. His Highness turned to his courtiers and said, that after the marriage of Now Nehal Sing, he would chastize the wicked fellows in such a manner, that they would learn how to behave better in future.

Hakeem Auzeer-oodeen represented, that the Ameers of Scind, who bore the yoke of subjugation to the Nauzim of Hyderabad formerly, having of late rebelled against him, have made themselves masters of that country.

Cauzee Hosen Bux, the vakeel, of Hurry Sing Nelwa, represented that the zemindars of zillah

Koh-Khybur, having turned rebellious, a skirmish ensued between them and his master, in which no less than twenty-five men were slain on each side; when unable to continue further resistance, they took to their heels and effected their escape to the mountains.

His Highness having enquired what the present brought out by General Allard from France consisted of, it was represented that it was composed of one thousand and eight hundred guns and five hundred pistols. His highness ordered the pistols to be distributed amongst the cavalry men.

MADRAS.

MILITARY RETIRING FUND.—The following resolutions for the establishment of a Military Retiring Fund, were adopted at a meeting held at the College Hall on the 11th ultimo :—

1st. Shall a retiring Fund be established for the infantry of the Madras army? Unanimously carried.

2d. Shall it be by bonus, not annuity. Unanimously carried.

3d. Shall the principle of a retiring fund which has been proposed in Bombay form the basis of the Madras Retiring Fund? Carried with one dissenting voice.

4th. Shall a general committee of officers be named to embody the foregoing resolutions, prepare scale of subscriptions and other necessary information for approval of a general meeting to be convened hereafter? Unanimously carried.

5th.—That a Committee of 13 be elected with power to complete their number in case of vacancies.

The following officers are accordingly requested to form the Committee.—Col. Evans, C. B.; Lieut. Cols. Cleaveland and James; Majors Fryer, Bradford and Vivian; Captains Moberly, Dodds, Macdonald and Mackenzie; Lieuts. Snow, Houlderson and Haines.

6th.—That the thanks of the meeting be offered to Capt. Moberly for the public spirit he has evinced and the trouble he has taken in forwarding the object in view—as well as for his consideration in offering accommodation at the Military Fund Office for the meetings of the Committee. Carried unanimously.

7th.—That the proceedings of this meeting be published in the different newspapers of the Presidency. Carried.

8th. That the thanks of the meeting be offered to Colonel Evans, C. B., for his conduct in the chair. Carried unanimously.

GOOMSOOR.—The Goomsoor war is at last at an end, without the capture or giving up of the chief rebel; the force has been broken up and Mr. Russell is on his way to Madras, to resume his seat in the Council Chamber, and was expected to arrive on the 23rd ult. Bolir Singh and another rebel have been hanged. Boliar was hung from the branch of a tree which shadows the graves of the young officers who were killed last year at the Durgaprasad Pass. Two of our detachments are withdrawn and Gully Kullada was soon to follow. A company of the 43d was to go to relieve the detachment at Aska held by the 60th who were to proceed immediately to Vizianagram. A Court-martial was to assemble for the trial of some of the rebels, after which there was to be a general move."

SIR F. ADAM.—It is said Sir F. Adam will proceed to England in the Java.

MR. RUSSELL.—Mr. Russell arrived at Madras on the 23rd of February, and resumed his seat in council on the next day.

MASONIC PROSPECTS.—LORD ELPHINSTONE, who is about to proceed to Madras as Governor, having been raised to the degree of Master Mason in the Lodge of "Friendship" No. 6, has given great earnest of Masonic promise; and will, we are confident, use the means of promulgating our tenets in that extensive scene over which he is called upon to preside. We congratulate the Madras Masons and the community on the appointment of this distinguished nobleman.

CAPT. MACNEILL.—Capt. Macneill, one of the Madras Police Magistrates, has been appointed to be Joint Remount Agent, which situation had become vacant by the death of Captain Hunter, of the Bombay Cavalry, and Capt. Pitt Macdonald will succeed to the Magistrateship.

MADRAS CLUB.—The following office bearers of the Madras Club, were elected at a meeting held on the 1st instant.

Col. Waugh, C. B., President. Mr. M. Donell, Vice President, Members of the Committee—Mr. Pugh; Mr. O. Viveash; Mr. H. Viveash, Capt. Forster, Major Kerr, Mr. Acworth, Mr. Key, Col. Logan, Mr. A. D. Campbell, Major Limond, Captain Underwood, General Doveton, Mr. McTaggart, Capt. Maitland, Captain Shaw, and Mr. Turabull.

GOLCONDA.—The insurrection in Golconda, near Samulcottah, has been suppressed.

LORD ELPHINSTONE AND SIR F. ADAM.—On the 5th instant, the royal yacht Prince Regent, Capt. R. Cogan, from Plymouth the 27th October, Rio Janeiro 12th December, and the Cape of Good Hope 17th January, arrived at Madras, having on board, the Right Hon'ble Lord Elphinstone and Walter Elliot, Esq., Private Secy. The Java, with Sir Frederick Adam on board, sailed the same morning, a few hours before the signal of the yacht was made out. Lord Elphinstone no sooner learned that the Java, having on board Sir Frederick Adam, was scarcely out of sight of the roads, than he directed the Prince Regent to be put to sea again, in order that he might communicated with the Ex-Governor. The Prince Regent accordingly left the roads in pursuit of the Java, communicate with the Governor, and returned the next day, when Lord Elphinstone disembarked.

DACOITY.—Letters from Secunderabad, dated the 3d instant, state, that a most daring attack was made on the house of a native banker at Bolarum, on the night of the 28th ultimo, attended with serious loss of life and property. It appears that the house of the banker, named Surrupook, was attacked about 7 o'clock on the evening of the 28th of February, by a gang of about 50 dacoits who killed the sentry at the gate; a man and a female servant who came before them were also killed, and a relative of the banker wounded. The banker himself took the precaution of not appearing whilst the dacoits plundered him in money and jewels to the amount of about 45,000 rupees; the banker's house was situate in the general bazar, at Bolarum, were His Highness the Nizam's troops are stationed. The dacoits made their escape, as is unfortunately usual with them, without being apprehended.

BOMBAY.

JAHEER OF GOVIND ROW NANA SHAHEH.—The jagheer of Govind Row Nana Shahab, has reverted to the Honorable Company.

DESTRUCTIVE FIRE.—A fire took place at Surat on the 3rd of February, and 500 houses, chiefly huts of poor people, were consumed by the flames.

DESTRUCTION OF VESSELS BY FIRE.—Information from Cochla intimates, that a few days after the launch of the Sham Allen, a large ship intended for the cotton trade to China, a fire broke out near the ship she had left, which destroyed several smaller vessels on the stocks and a considerable quantity of naval stores.

DEATH OF SUEHEEVA PUNT.—The Sueheva Punt of His Highness the Raja of Sattara, died at Bhoré, the seat of his jagheer, about a week or ten days ago. This young man was the adopted son of the late Punt, and had just arrived at an age fit for managing his own affairs. He has left no male issue behind him; but it is said, he was induced to adopt a child the day before he died, which probably will be recognized by the Raja of Sattara on payment of the usual Muzzur. His jagheer yields a revenue of 3 lakhs of rupees every year.

POONAH SANSKRIT COLLEGE.—The Poonah Sanskrit College, is not to be abolished.

ARCHDEACON CARR.—Archdeacon Carr has actually been appointed Bishop of Bombay. The Bishopric is to commence in July 1837.

MEMORIAL AGAINST IDOLATRY.—The minister of the Gospel at Bombay and several of their congregation, have memorialized the Government against countenancing idolatry in any way.

Native report affirms that a committee, consisting of three or four gentlemen, have been deputed in the Southern Marathes Country, to investigate some important charges against the establishment of a public functionary.

MURDER AND EXECUTION.—Two koonbees, who were convicted of the murder of a banyan in a village in the talooka of Jonnier, were hanged on the morning of the 3d instant, before the Poona jail. It seems, that the koonbees owed a sum of money to the banyan, whom they had desired to be present at the time when their grain would be thrashed. The banyan went there unattended, and entangled himself in a quarrel with the koonbees of whom there were four. One of them got hold of him, strangled him with a kumurbund, and interred his body in a neighbouring spot. The traces of the murder were discovered by the assistance of the villagers. One of the perpetrators escaped, but the two other two were seized, convicted and executed under the sanction of the Government.

GOA.

Accounts have just been received of a fourth revolution in Goa, and of a fourth and more formidable dynasty being established. The late Military Governor, who had usurped the Government in Senhor Peres's time, has in his turn been dethroned, arrested and imprisoned, by those very troops who bore him in triumph to the seat of power, in the fort of Agoada, where not long since the victims to his own ambition had suffered; A new Government has been nominated by the troops, consisting of five members, in which number two of the Military Governor's colleagues are included. The dislike would thus appear to have been to the Governor himself and not to his Government. Many officers and others who had declared for the Military Governor have also been arrested, and every exertion is being used to extinguish his party. There are now three distinct parties in the field, each endeavoring to gain the ascendancy, while the inhabitants in general are in a state of the greatest anxiety and alarm,

BURMAH.

MOULMEIN.—Letters from Moulmein mention, that an extensive conflagration in that town, occurred on the 18th ult. It commenced in a small house at midnight and speedily communicated to all the adjacent structures; which being of wood and thatched with straw and bamboos, fed luxuriantly the devouring flames for a space of six hours. The sight is described as having been awfully grand—500 houses, mostly large ones, blazing in the middle of the night, and covering with the volumes of flames three quarters of a mile of ground. The destruction of property has been very great; the whole of these houses were totally destroyed, and the morning dawned upon the blackened ruins which marked near a mile's space of desolation in the town.

SUMATRA.

We stated some time since, that the Dutch had nearly driven the Bonjalites to desperation, and had forced them to evacuate the town of Boonjal and a fly to the mountains. We now learn, that a recent attempt of the Dutch forces under General Clarens, on the mountain fort of Boonjal, had been successfully repelled by the Padries. The whole of the European and native forces before the place, were led up to an assault, after a practicable breach had been effected in the walls; but the enemy within were bent on a resolute resistance. They permitted the Dutch troops to enter through the breach into the fort, when they opened a most destructive fire, and drove them back. The most undaunted exertions on the part of their officers were unavailing to induce the men to renew the attempt—of whom it is reported that a good many were in their flight cut down by their own officers, who themselves fell in numbers under the sabres and shots of the Padries, while standing in the breach and urging and exciting their men to the assault. By the Dutch report there are 150 rank and file, and 11 officers killed in this attack. They retreated on their own position, and General Clarens sent down an officer to explain their situation to Government; from which it may be concluded it was sufficiently perilous.

JAVA.

BATAVIA.—MURDER OF A POLISH OFFICER.—A Polish officer in the Dutch army in Java, was lately shot at Batavia by sentence of a court-martial under the following circumstances. He had represented to his Colonel that the latter was mistaken about something which he had advanced respecting soldier parade. This representation was resented in the most haughty manner, and with expressions of the most brutal insolence, conveyed in gestures as well as language, which excited the Pole to such a degree, that he threw his cap in the Colonel's face. At the court-martial which ensued, he is reported to have said in reply to a suggestion, that "it was possibly accidental," humanely thrown out by one of his brother officers who was sitting in judgment on him, "that it was purposely done to shew his contempt for a man who did not deserve to be respected." He was brought out to be shot in front of the Palace at Batavia, and went through the fatal scene with the greatest firmness, taking a kind leave of his brother officers on the spot where he fell. This butchery, reflects additional disgrace on the Dutch.

PENANG.

Penang journals to the 25th of February, intimate the establishment of a Chamber of Commerce in that island, an account of a daring robbery committed on the Commissariat Treasury by the sepoys appointed to guard it, and the arrival of H. M. Ship Andromache and the steamer Diana at Penang.

SINGAPORE.

DAMAGES TO SHIPPING.—On the 2nd ultimo, the brig Cecilia, Capt. Peter Roy, which sailed for China on the 21st January, put back to Singapore in a leaky state.

Her cargo was discharged, and found to be almost all damaged. The French Bark Polonais put back to Singapore on the 25th of January, having struck on a rock near the Bolabac Shoal and carried away her rudder. The Victory, Capt. Christopher Biden, met with bad weather at sea; sprung a leak, had her cotton wetted, which ignited in consequence and set the ship on fire. She reached Manila with great difficulty, nearly water logged, where she discharged her cargo. The Arctasser returned to Singapore on the 31st of January, having, struck on the 30th on a coral rock of Bintang, in a place where nine fathoms water are marked in the chart.

LOSS OF THE BANNERMAN.—The fate of the Bombay ship John Bannerman, Capt. Wilson, for whose safety fears have for some time past been entertained, is at last put beyond a doubt. The second and third officers, and forty three lascars, belonging to that unfortunate vessel, arrived here by the Cochin Chinese ship Lingfong, from Quin-Hone, bringing accounts, we are sorry to state, of the loss of the Bannerman on the night of the 18th Decr. on the North Shoal of the Paracets in the China Sea. The whole of the crew, with the exception of the chief officer and four lascars reached Quin-Hone in safety in the boats, where they were nearly five weeks, and Capt. Wilson, the fourth officer and the remainder of the crew are hourly expected here in another Cochin Chinese vessel.

CHINA.

Letters and papers have been received from China to the 20th of February.

The opium speculators had again been led to hope, that the trade would ere long be legalized, as it was stated that an edict for its admission for one year, had been received at Canton. The brokers had gone about a great deal since the edict was reported to have appeared and it was said that a real advance had taken place of 15 or 30 dollars a chest,—but sales could only be effected in very small quantities.

The Governor of Canton had petitioned the Emperor, that the English foreigner E. Elliot be permitted to reside at Canton, and that he, the Governor, be permitted to send him a red permit.

Some hopes of the capture of the seacunes who cut off the brig Fairy were entertained, as pieces of gold marked similarly to that which was shipped as her cargo, have been seen in the possession of two or three Manill. men.

PERSIA.

Letters from Bushire of the 9th January mention, that the Shah of Persia had returned to Tehran, leaving his army on the frontiers of Khorrassan. His Majesty is busily occupied in raising fresh troops for his expedition against Heraut and Khiva, which, it is said, he intends to prosecute with vigor in the spring. The British Ambassador had not joined the Shah.

REVIEW OF THE CALCUTTA MARKET.

(From the Bengal Hurkaru Price Current, March 25.)

INDIGO.—We have nothing to report in addition to the last notice respecting this produce. Accounts from the interior are much the same as mentioned in our last.

RAW SILK.—Very little doing at present; and some of the assortments are quoted at a further decline on previous prices.

SILK PIECE GOODS.—A purchase of 250 pieces Radnagore Choppahs for shipment to America is the only transaction reported with the occurrences of the week. We have no change in prices to notice.

COTTON.—The market remains inactive,* and prices without alteration.

SALTPETRE.—The purchases reported during the week are chiefly for shipment to America. The Stock in the market is large, and under the suspended shipment at present to England, the prices are necessarily expected to fall.

SUGAR.—The market continues inactive in respect to demand, and the prices remain as in our last. The few purchases reported are for shipments to Rangoon and Moulmein.

SHELL LAC.—A few purchases are reported for the American market at unaltered prices.

LAC DYE.—A purchase of 350 maunds Mirzapore Dye is the only transaction since our last reported for the English market at our quotation.

TURMERIC.—A purchase of 100 maunds for shipment to England is the only transaction of this produce reported with the occurrences of the week, at our last week's price.

GRAIN. Shipments of Mooghy Rice to the Mauritius and Bourbon are in progress; but we have no change in prices to notice.

OPPIUM.—The market continues dull, and prices are inclined to give way, owing to the latest gloomy accounts from China.

TIN. We quote a further slight improvement on the prices of this metal.

PEPPER.—Has also advanced in price.

MACE AND NUTMEGS.—Without report of transaction, and the former is quoted a shade below last week's price.

ALUM AND CAMPHOR.—Have slightly improved in prices.

CASSIA.—Remains at last week's quotation

CLOVES.—Have been sold below last week's prices.

CUBBS.—Without sale, and remain as last quoted.

MULE TWIST.—Has been in better enquiry than in the past week, but without any change in prices

TURKEY RED AND ORANGE YARNS.—Have slightly declined in prices.

CHINTZES.—The market continues inactive.

A few sales of single, Coler Sets and Neutral Stripes have been effected at last week's prices.

WHITE COTTONS.—The market remains as last reported, viz. inactive, and we have no change in prices to notice.

WOOLLENS.—The market is also inactive, and we have heard of no sales since our last.

COPPER.—The sales during the week show a shade of decline on the prices of Braziers and Tile, and a small improvement on old and South American.

The market as regards demand may be reported as in our last.

IRON.—Without report of sale, and the assortments remain as last quoted STEEL.—A sale of Swedish has been effected at a slight reduction in price.

LEAD.—Without sale, and without alteration in prices.

SPELTER.—Sales have been effected at a shade of decline in price.

TIN PLATES AND QUICKSILVER.—Without transaction, and remain as last quoted.

THEATRICALS.

ZAMPA.

This Opera was presented on Friday evening, 1st, we regretted to observe, but an ill attended house. Of the plot of this pretty composition, we gave a sketch a day or two back the story is in many of its incidents, particularly in the concluding disappearance of Zampa in the arms of the marble Bride, somewhat similar to that of our old friend Don Giovanni, "sent to the Devil somewhat ere his time." It is, however, if not infacciamiento, our very skilfully and agreeably concerted, and the music, which we are told is in the accompaniments very scientific, is just of a character to become exceedingly popular, in any community in which the cultivation of the divine science is, among the masses, but in its infancy. The music of this Opera is, therefore, we think, calculated to become a very popular in this country. It is simple in its character both as to the melodies, and most of the concerted pieces, and although we are told that they are scientific, the accompaniments appear to require no very great degree of skill or musical accomplishments to execute them. There are several airs which are of such simple construction, and at the same time are such pretty melodies, that they require only to be heard to be liked, and at once impress themselves on the memory. The opening air and Cavatina sung by Léméry is very pretty, commencing, à ce bonheur suprême, je n'ose ajouter for this piece of music was correctly and brilliantly executed by the Prima Donna, it was, however, in some parts, capable of bearing more expression than she bestowed upon it. The chorus here although weak, was correct and animated, and Monsieur Bonniol sustained his share of the music creditably. The next pleasing feature in the Opera was the complaint, executed by Madame Léméry—too coldly but withal with considerable effect. The air of the two first stanzas of this piece, is exceedingly moving, the change in the expression of the music in the last stanza, struck us as very fine—

Hélas! sur ce Rivage,
Alice vint mourir,
Et cette froide image
Semble toujours gémir!
Quand la nuit, on l'assure,
Le vent gronde, en fureur,
Ce maigre encre murmure,
Et nomme le Flémureur.

These lines, and fine music composed for them, were very forcibly and effectively sung by Camilla, and the whole piece will, if known, become very generally popular here, as it did immediately on being heard at home. Whether it be original or not, we have our doubts, it is however a very clever plagiarism, if plagiarism it should happen to be. The Trio between Rita, (de Ligny) Dandolo, (Fradin) and Camilla (Léméry) was very good, and the quartet between these three, and Zampa, very fine. In the Scene in which is introduced the chorus of Pirates,

Au plaisir à la folie, Coassacrou tous nos instans, the composer appears to have been most successful. It appeared to us in every respect a magnificent piece of composition; and as far as numbers and strength would admit of it, was done ample justice to by Zampa, (Fleury) Daniel (Welter) and the chorus. The complete (drinking stanzas), were sung with great spirit by Fleury. This gentleman was not in good voice, but he went through the arduous part of Zampa,—and a terrific part it is to undertake,—with great ability his two dresses were models of good taste.

In the second act, the opening song of Zampa, and the duet between Rita (Mad de Ligny) and Daniel (Welter), are the two finest things. The merit, musically speaking, of the composition of the duet, is, we understand, very great, certain are we that it is very pretty. The last scene, between Zampa and Camilla, is also, in a musical point of view, very grand, but has not, we think, those taking qualities, the public considered, which the other pieces we have mentioned present.

The finale to the first act, of which we have already spoken, we should say, the finest morceau in this opera. We have omitted to mention a beautiful prayer (chorus), at the commencement of the second act, and which is sung off the stage, we remember nothing better of its kind. The striking musical beauties of this opera, at least all those of which we took cognizance, we have now pointed out of the scope given by the opera for the exhibition of the acting capabilities, and quibbling of the artistes; than this opera of Zampa, no one they have as yet played, affords greater scope. There was an evident want of rehearsals, notwithstanding which Madame de Ligny, as Rita, well dressed, as she ever is, was vastly amusing. The dialogue assigned to her, to Daniel, and to Dandolo, is exceedingly good, and diverting in the extreme. Daniel, (Welter) acted as well as he sung, and Dandolo (the very facetious Fradin) made another of those hits, which is ever the consequence of the appearance of this accomplished actor, in any part which affords the slightest opening, for the display of comic power, fun, or humour. We have now we believe, noticed the several efforts of all the principal characters in the opera, the Marble Bride excepted. The Lord preserve us from such a bride: there never was so shapeless a block of marble, her drapery looked like a bed-gown. In size, shape and feature she was not unlike Mr Baron Bayley in his Robes on the first day of term, no eye has seen such a scare crow, and it was really pitiable to behold poor Zampi, in his exquisite dress of black velvet and gold, leaping into the lower regions clasped in the arms of this horrible

The scenery, properties, and all that sort of thing, were as bad as bauf could be, but this Opera, with a brace of rehearsals, a lady or two more in the chorus, a little point, and touching up of the scenery,—something like common care in the business, and new dresses for the Pirate Chorus, which were entirely out of character, and of a different age, from the costumes worn by the Principal Characters,—with the very slight care and attention demanded in those accessories, we think Zampa might be given once or twice more, to the great advantage of the artistes. We understand Robert le Diable is in a state of preparation. These two Operas might, if at all carefully gotten up, carry the Artistes through the series, and for the benefit, any thing really good in itself, well and carefully got up, and above all well advertised and duly placarded, is sure to draw a house, at least if we may judge from the results exhibited by the two soirees given by Mrs. Leach at the Town-hall, and by one or two entertainments given since at Chowringhee.—Hartaru, April, 8.

MR HANMER'S NIGHT

The entertainment for this evening was very well selected, and the public in consequence flocked to the Theatre. Mr. Hamerton had one of the best houses of the season. In point of numbers he fell but little short of the Secretary. The first act of the Wreck Ashore was really very well acted, and so good were the situations, so funny the dialogue, and so well sustained were the principal characters, that notwithstanding several most awkward events in the second act, the curtain fell amidst rounds of applause. There were obstinate doors which would not open, guns which would not go off at the proper time, tardy thunder and lightning mà propos. Then there was a very reprehensible sulkiness in some of the drop scenes which would not be persuaded to fall, and an apparent feeling of diffidence in the chairs, tables, and what are called in phrase theatrical, the properties, they would not throughout the second act present themselves to the audience, when and where they ought, and were on all occasions dragged on reluctant, and reluctant. Notwithstanding, however, this spirit of insubordination, so evinced as above, by these naughty properties, the audience retained their good humour unabated. We never remember to have seen a play go off apparently so to the satisfaction of an audience, and the Wreck Ashore, and the Irish Tutor, have positively elicited more applause, than all the other plays of the season hitherto put together. This we must take as a criterion of merit of some sort or other. Either the acting was good or the pieces went well without much acting. Magnus, was an imitation, the part was written for Kieve, a very popular London artist, with a peculiarity of voice and manner, given to no other mortal. The Secretary was, we thought, most happy in his imitations, and the audience appeared to think so too—this part was very successful throughout the play. The same may be said of Jemmy Starling. Both characters were exceedingly well dressed, and as the brunt of the comic business, which is the taking part of the play, fell upon these two, and Nella (Mrs. Chester), it will be readily supposed, that this part of the Drama went off very well. Mrs. Chester acted and sang greatly to the taste of the audience, and was applauded till the Welkin roared again.

The affecting and pathetic portions of the Wreck Ashore were assigned to Miss Francis, Miles Grampus and Walter. Miss Francis wanted power, but she played correctly, Miles was cold we thought, and played as if he did not much like his part, which made the good nature he exhibited in coming forward the more amiable, the part however, was a very efficient part and was correctly enough given. Walter Barnard was in good hands, but another Rehearsal would have done him no harm. Grampus was well personated and dressed and elicited much applause. His acting was good and he introduced the Corsair's song from Lord Byron's poem, which he sung with great taste and effect. This play would, we think, bear another representation under improved management. There was one very pretty scene, a representation of the marshes in Essex, but with this exception the scenery was indifferent, it was in south exceeding poor and beggarly, and the general effect was greatly marred by the want of a little paint. Indeed the unrehearsed stage effects obtruded themselves very disagreeably on the attention and perceptions of the audience. These matters should be looked to by some one. Half the amateur plays, indeed all that we remember this season, have been remarkable for negligence in this most important point. There appears to be no fixed manager, no one to look after the properties, and no one with an imperious sic volo, to order what is called the business, and while this want of method is permitted to last, so long will the amateur plays be obnoxious to such remarks as those we now make. There is, however, one comfort in the reflexion, that of late the artistes have exhibited the same sort of defects. It is quite clear that the establishment at the Theatre wants some one controlling head, and that that head should contain something in the shape of brains.

The Irish Tutor, is a jewel of a farce, and Mr. O'Malley, and the Secretary were exceedingly amusing. The house was in a roar from the drawing up to the dropping of the curtain. Mrs. Chester was encored in the beautiful Irish melody Savourneen Deelish, which she sang with much taste and expression. It is quite clear that this lady's accomplishments are properly appreciated by the public, and the oftener she appears, the greater favourite will she become.

The music in the Wreck Ashore, was very pretty, it was we learn, with the exception of a song by Mrs. Chester, and the glee in the second part, the composition of Mr. Hamerton—it does him great credit. The orchestra, led by Mr. P. Delmar, was in very good order, and they played the overture to William Tell magnificently. Madame Scheroni and Monsieur Welter, sang between the acts of the Wreck Ashore, in their usual style of excellence, but with all deference, this part of the evening's entertainment should have been postponed till the Wreck Ashore was over—it should have been introduced between the two pieces—and not between the two acts of the first piece.—Hurkaru, April 5.

LA DAME BLANCHE

The Artistes presented the subscribers with La Dame Blanche, on Wednesday evening last. We were sorry to observe, that very few persons were present. The music of this opera improves greatly upon acquaintance. It was very well done, and the little audience present appeared to be highly gratified. Monsieur Welter was in splendid voice. The bass part in this production is very fine and was done ample justice to by the able artist we have just named. We have already, on a former occasion, noticed the talent exhibited by the several performers in this opera—not to repeat our selves, we will observe generally that they exerted themselves as much, if not more than on the previous occasion, and their efforts were completely successful. With the conclusion of the series, we shall lose Monsieur Welter, Madlle Lénicy and Monsieur Ladin. Welter and Lénicy return unto the sea from whence they came, with good engagements at the Mauritius. Monsieur Maure, whose place, à prima vista, Monsieur Welter will supply is not, we are informed equal at all to Welter, and it really is a matter of surprise to us that this excellent singer should ever have been allowed to leave the Mauritius. Here it is different. The want of knowledge of the language is the grand stumbling block to the success of the French Company, with society in general—and a previously formed taste for Italian music, in the upper classes has tended to militate against their popularity in that quarter, these difficulties considered, we really think that the artistes have done wonders, in maintaining the position they now fill. Radna has an engagement at Batavia, whither, we understand, he shortly goes, joy and laughter go with him. There will, however, as far as we are at present informed, remain Messrs. Bonnel, Fleury and Charles, and Mesdames de Ligny, Thonon, Fleury, Charles, and Floréal. Whether or not any thing will be undertaken by them, in a dramatic point of view, we know not; but from an advertisement in the Englishman, we should infer, that nothing of the sort is at present contemplated, as Mad. de Ligny, and Mad. Thonon announce it is their intention to enter into business. However, l'un s'empêche pas l'autre, we presume, and mantua making and millinery in the morning, are not incompatible, or incompatible, with vaudeville, and the other amiable and gentle vanities in the evening. French opera in Calcutta is on the eve of dissolution, like unto the beauteous

THE MACHINIST'S NIGHT.

A great deal of care, and labour, and we should think no small portion of cash, expended by Mr. Mansell, the machinist, in getting up the diablerie of the Wood Demon, was, we were sorry to see, rewarded by a house, which, in theatrical phrase, did not seem sufficient to pay itself! The spectacle of the Wood Demon seems invented for the purpose of developing every species of flap, fly, drop, trap, slip, flit, wig, wood, and fly, which the inventory of theatrical technicalities (so rich in euphonious monosyllables) can, by any possibility supply. The brain of Monk Lewis has devised a great assemblage of horrors for it, and a slight infusion of diabolism, several ponderous sentiments, some songs, and a very sufficient tyrant fill up the piece. This is the first regular attempt in India at spectacle on such a grand scale and the ingenuity of the machinist deserves a better recompense. We have heard that Mr. Mansell is an enthusiast in his art, and that his object in getting up this excessively expensive and difficult melodrama was not so much even to repay himself for the outlay incurred, as to show what he could achieve in the mysticisms of stage effect and wondrous transformations. It is a great pity that enthusiasm of any sort should be so poorly rewarded as his has been, and should he endeavour to reject the play in order to reimburse himself we trust the sympathies of the public will work in his favour. So the curious in many coloured fires and the mechanism of trap-doors, the Wood Demon must be deeply interesting. Many of the effects were excessively good, and the difficult and complicated descents in clouds, &c. &c. were managed without check or accident. The music which was, we understand, by Mr. Linton pleased us much,—in particular a gipsy chorus in the first scene.

The acting in such pieces as the Wood Demon is always a matter of secondary consideration and knowledge of stage business is more valuable on these occasions than positive histrionic talent. The performance was very respectable, and, in two instances, above the common. The one was the Secretary, whose play in the low comedy part of a half-witted coxcomb was extremely good. His oration was very amusingly given, and there was a well studied air of manner kept up with happy effect, and good unity of execution throughout the part. The two first acts were much indebted to him for getting them through smoothly. The other unqualified success of the evening was achieved by Mademoiselle Nina Nouveau, who very much surprised us by the intelligence and precision with which she went through the intricate business of a four act melodrama. The grace and expression of this little creature in the character of a dumb boy, were singular in the extreme.

The farce of Blue Devils which preceded the melodrama, brought out the Secretary as Megrim, a whimsical, but ill-imagined character, the doleful pleasantries of which have made the interlude a stock piece for many years. The part requires a considerable degree of power in the performer to make it tell, and a sort of quiet, reserved humor which is not often met with. The personation of it on Wednesday night is, we think, as decided a hit as the Secretary has made on these boards, and the task was no easy one before an audience which has not ordinarily any very ready perception of the fun of slight but homotous merriment. Voice, dress and manner were all in keeping, and the gradual relaxation of the melancholy man under the influence of the tender passion into lugubrious ecstasy very happily and naturally given. When the Secretary will only take the trouble to succeed, his success in comedy is certain. One or two of the other performers were somewhat at a loss for words, but the principal characters, Annette and Megrim were, in spite of what some dramatic critics assert of our performers, perfect.

Mrs. Chester was in excellent voice, and both singing and acting was warmly applauded, bearing us off in our opinion as to her becoming rapidly (and deservedly) a public favorite.—Englishman, April 14.

ZAMPA

On Friday evening, the artistes presented Zampa, to another badly attended house. Philosophy, it is said, consoles people under disappointment, although Shakespeare announces that it is no cure for the tooth-ache, and upon this principle it is, we suppose, that the artistes, drawing upon their philosophy, never appear to greater advantage, than when fortune is niggard of her gifts, and when a perverse public, afraid of the heat, in absolute defiance of the strictures of the Englishman, (and by way of tacit reproach, to the hanging Committee of Managers, who apparently contempt, and too long suspend, the suspension of punkahs) punishes itself by staying away. After this, it is needless to say that the second representation of Zampa was very well given.

The far famed chef d'œuvre of Mayerbeer is announced for Friday. This is the most magnificent of modern Operas. As a musical composition, it is one scene of splendid efforts, from overture to finale. As a lyric drama, it is one of the most interesting ever produced. Reasons of state prevent our going into particulars at present. We believe, but we do not give this as from authority, that this opera will positively electrify all beholders. It made Paris run mad, frightened Bordeaux and Marseilles out of all commercial propriety and made the aristocratic, enlightened, fashionable and fastidious, audience of the King's Theatre, Flammaret, a convert to the beauties and excellencies of the French school, developed in this glorious Opera by the talents of Conti, their husband Damoiseaux, Adolphe Nourit Le Viseur, Mademoiselle Schneider and though not the least, the inimitable Perrot. What effect, it may have wrought at Berlin, Vienna, etc. etc., we are not informed, at Calcutta, we are quite certain, it will do wonders. But, we may not say more at present. It will, we hope, be played frequently as the talented artistes cannot have a better vehicle, for making their adieu to the public here, and we have heard that on one or two of their benefits, this splendid work will be presented.—Hitharu, April 17.

MRS ATKINSON'S BENEFIT

On Monday evening, the entertainment given for the benefit of Mrs. Atkinson, drew what may be called, (the general run of attendances at the Theatre considered) an immense house. We with much pleasure congratulate this accomplished vocalist on her success, and on the very general popularity she has evidently acquired. The amusements of the evening were various, and they went off very successfully. Guy Mannering was very effectively represented, and, strange to say, two of the pieces of music were encored. The same distinguished honour was conferred upon a highland reel danced en costume, by some very accomplished individuals belonging to his Majesty's 26th Regiment. The Pipers created quite a renovation. We have not leisure to say all that we could wish of the several clever personations of the characters in this drama of Guy Mannering—Mrs. Atkinson, Mrs. Chester, Gilbert Glavin, the Domine and and Sebastian were apparently the cream of the entertainment; other parts were very filled, and the whole thing, went off with great spirit, and the exertions made were rewarded with tremendous applause. But a small portion of the usual play-going public was present—and those who did attend, had left behind them much of that fastidiousness, which the constant habit of looking on, at these sort of exhibitions, is apt to generate—and which feeling is very apt point to be misconstrued into disapprobation, when it, in point of fact, ought only to be attributed to weariness, satiety, and the absence of all powers of excitability unless under very peculiar circumstances indeed. As we observed nothing of this fastidiousness on Monday evening, we shall assume that it did not exist, and that, consequently, the degree of attraction presented by Guy Mannering, was of that peculiar nature, that it succeeded in amusing those who, like Lions the fourteenth, under the dynasty of Made. de Maintenon, are on most occasions of this sort, no longer amiable.

Mrs. Chester sang a song about Scotland, which was encored; the same honour was extended to the Chough and Crow; and in both these instances, the compliment to Mrs. Chester in the song, and to herself, Mrs. Atkinson, my Lord Lovel, and the chorus in the Chough, was the greater in as much the music of either piece had certainly not the merit of novelty to recommend it, and to so generally fastidious an audience, but for the fact of their having in this instance left fastidiousness at home, we suspect neither piece of music would, under ordinary circumstances, present much attraction. Between the Opera and the Farce, Madame Schiaroni and Mrs. Atkinson sang some pretty Italian music, which was, we understood, expressly composed for the occasion, by the Minstrel who delighted the audience in the second piece. The story of the wandering Minstrel was, as far we could make it out, very effecting. The opening of the piece presents this interesting individual on a sort of musical pilgrimage through England for the purpose, apparently, of expiating his past offences, and of picking up shillings. His appearance with his clarionet, put us in mind of Goldsmith and his Flageolet; the circumstances of the two illustrious men in this particular phasis of their eventful fortunes, appeared to jump—they were wandering, and both piping and they both appeared to have found some amiable scions of humanity to pay the piper. Jem Bags was peculiar in his costume and somewhat eccentric in his manner, there was that je ne scai quoi sort of grace in all he did and said, that carried one away with him in spite of one's self. Every body laughed—every one sympathised, and yet it would, we suspect, be impossible, if we were put to an analysis of our impressions, to say what it was that wrought upon us, in favour of wandering Jemmy. We give it up, therefore, and shall content ourselves with recording it as our general impression derived from what we saw and heard on Monday evening, that Mr. Jem Bags is a very facetious sort of a fellow, and that we never remember to have seen a better representation of one of that numerous and industrious body of individuals, described in the police reports of the metropolis, as adepts at irregular appropriation.

We think, we may congratulate Mrs. Atkinson, on having had the best house of the season.—Harkara, April 19.

FRENCH OPERA.

The curtain dropped on Friday evening, on the last of the series of French operas. Never do we remember to have heard Lémery to greater advantage, never has she had finer, or to our ear more exquisite music to sing.

The first and second acts of Robert le Diable, have now been presented, and from the rapturous applause with which they were received by a fashionable audience, we augur good things for the fair benefactress. Every piece of music was well given, and kindly received; and when we pledge ourselves,—and all who know this opera, will, we are assured, countenance our assertion—that what is to come, is yet more attractive, and meritorious, than that with which the last audience is now acquainted, we cannot permit ourselves to doubt for a moment, that the next representation of this opera, will attract to it, all those who wish to hear Mayerbeer's master work of composition, and who wish to see the singular adventures of the eccentric chevalier, whose career is the subject of this opera. To us it appeared, on Friday evening, that the artistes were determined to give to Calcutta this, the pride of the Lyric Drama, as well as well could be. The accessories were very carefully attended to; but we will venture to observe, that in the gambling scene, the table had better be placed sideways, and not across the front of the stage. The costumes were magnificent. Lémery was dressed to admiration; but in our estimation, the most successful and the best conceived piece of costume, both in point of dress, and of appearance generally, was that of Welter: he looked all that a Demon could wish to appear—not a gentleman in black, switching his tail,

“As a gentleman switches his cane,” but, a beautiful and gorgeous creature with a mantle of red velvet and gold, which would have tempted Adam himself; phiz Mephistophelian, mystic, mystifying, of about the complexion of a watch spring heated to a white heat, with horrid hair, and evil eye. Not one of your melodramatic Demons, who come on, ushered by clouds which descend to slow music, but an active, busy, everyday life-sort of fiend, with an occasional gleam of hatred passing over his pallid features, of that intensity that when it appeared,

“Hope withering fled, and mercy sighed farewell.”

Bertram (the fiend) had not half so much to sing in the two acts given on Friday, as will fall to his lot on the 1st of May, and from the specimen he has given us, we are prepared to experience unalloyed horror, and consequently ravishing delight from his performance of this role. Bonniol was less magnificently dressed, than we have been in the habit of seeing this part elsewhere; but his costume was chaste and appropriate. He gave the pretty air, beginning with considerable effect. The duet with Lémery was also very effective; and the couplets sung by Fleury as Rimbaud were exceedingly well given.

“Où fortune a ton caprice
Je viens livrer mon destin,”

As we have already said, we never heard Mademoiselle Lémery to such advantage. Madame Nouveau will make her last appearance on the next performance of this opera. We have on a former occasion given to our readers a sketch of the plot, and incidents of this opera. We will merely observe now as to how far the action of the piece progresses at the close of the second act.

Robert having, under the infernal guidance of his fiendish mentor, lost his all, is spirited away by a challenge from the Prince of Grenada, whom he is to meet in single combat in order to decide their respective pretensions to the hand of the Princess (Lémery); the knight of Grenada is a mere fiction,—a demoniacal hallucination conjured up by Bertram in order to get Robert away from Palermo, and so get him more into his fiendish power.

The place of battle is a forest hard by, at a short distance from the city, even such a forest, as the magic arts of the Saracen king of Jerusalem had created, to entrap and alarm the bold Crusaders of Godfrey of Bouillon; ghosts, spirits and demons, make it their midnight haunt, a little after the fashion of the Witches' Sabbath in the German, and the heart of the true believer is frozen with horror; the pastor drives his flock away from it, and the wanderer from afar off, points to it with the finger of warning.

Sorge non lunge alle Cristiane tendè,
Tra solitarie valli, alta foresta,
Foliosissima di piante antiche orrende,
Che spargon d'ogni intorno ombra funesta.
Qui nell'ora che 'l sol più chiaro splende,
E luce incerta e scolorita e mesta;
Quale in nubilo ciel dubbias si vede
Se 'l di alla notte, o s' ella a lui succede.

Ma quando parte il sol, qui tosto adombra
Notte, nube, coligine ed orrore,
Che rassembra infernal, che gli occhi ingombra
D'incertità, ch'empie di tana il core.

Nè qui gregge od ormenti a' paschi, all' ombra
Guida bifolco mai, guida pastore;
Nè v' entra peregrin, se non smarrito;
Ma lunge passa, e la dimostra a dito.

Such is the description of forest, into which, at the close of the second act, the gallant Robert is about to penetrate: his adventures therein and what befalls him afterwards, are yet a sealed book to the public; if it should feel but a tithe of the curiosity, which we are disposed to entertain, albeit we have some floating reminiscences on the matter, the public will assuredly gratify this amiable feeling on the 1st of May next, when the sealed book will be opened by the magic touch of Mousar. Thonou's coup d'archet. We hope, in the mean time, that the livre de souscriptions of Mademoiselle Léméry, will not remain a sealed book to her patrons and admirers, and that they will certify under their respective sign manuals, their appreciation of the varied accomplishments and high qualifications of the Princesse Isabella of Robert le Diable, and Phillis of the Rossignol.—Ibid, April 24.

PUNCH HOUSES.

We understand that the Bench of Magistrates have, after being strongly urged by one of their own body, come to the unanimous determination to put in force the regulation of 1818, whereby it is enacted that no tavern, or punch-house, or house of public entertainment of similar description, shall be opened without a license previously obtained, signed by two of the magistrates. This license is to be granted free of any charge or expense; but it will be given only to parties of known good character, and upon recognizances, the conditions of which are, that the party obtaining the license, will prevent riot, drunkenness and disorder, and give information to the police of any deserters or other bad characters that may harbour in the house for which the license is obtained, and moreover make a daily report in writing of the names and qualities of the inmates of such place of public reception. We are astonished that so salutary an enactment should so long have been allowed to remain in abeyance; the rigid exaction of its provisions will tend to correct many and very serious evils, and go nigh to convert the punch-house and arrack-shop, into the much sought for desideratum—a Sailor's home,—decent, quiet, and regular, instead of continuing to be the scene of his destruction.—Hurkaru, April 4.

THE HINDU BENEVOLENT INSTITUTION.

This Institution is a morning Free School, founded in the month of March 1831, at Shampuker, by Babu Sharadaprasad Basu, with the liberal contribution obtained from Maharajah Kalikrishna Bahadur, C. M. R. A. S., &c.

Babu Sharadaprasad Basu, the proprietor of the School, has always, with the co-operation of some of his friends and colleagues, gratuitously conducted it since May last; but when he was appointed to the Rajshahi Government School, he committed the whole charge of the Institution to my sole care and management, with instructions to take wholesome advice and able assistance for furtherance of that praiseworthy object from the Rev. J. Bateman, M. A., the Domestic Chaplain to the Right Rev. the Lord Bishop of Calcutta, and C. E. Trevelyan, Esq., Deputy Secretary to the Secret and Political Department of the Bengal Government, the Honorary Visitors, and from the Maharajah Kalikrishna Bahadur, the Visitor.

A little while after, although some of the Subscribers have withdrawn their names and suspended their payment, I have, as far as my individual labour extends, superintended and kept it up to this period; which therefore emboldens me to embrace the present opportunity of laying this my short Report for the information of the public and friends to Native improvement, earnestly looking at the same time to crave their generous support to such a laudable undertaking, which not only will tend to meliorate the degraded condition of the Hindu population, and to cultivate the juvenile minds of our countrymen by the bestowal of useful literature; but will enable me to enlarge the establishment and to receive new Scholars, who often apply for admittance.

This School, on the footing it is now, it grieves me to represent, cannot further stand in existence without the monthly allowance of Company's rupees (50) fifty, the most part whereof is supplied by the Rajah.

The Annual Examination is generally attended with the expense of Company's rupees (200) two hundred, or thereabouts, for the purpose of purchasing Prize Books, &c., out of that sum, Babu Sharadaprasad Basu and some of the friends of Education have contributed (100) one hundred rupees, and cash received by Annual Subscription and Donation amounting Company's rupees (735) seven hundred and thirty-five, up to the March last.

I further beg to add, that this School affords instruction to upwards of one hundred students, who are divided into seven classes, under the tuition of five remunerated Instructors, viz., Babu Kaleedass Palit, the Head Teacher, charged with the following books:—History of Greece, No. 6 Reader, Gay's Fables, Natural Philosophy, Goldsmith's Geography, Murray's Grammar, Geometry, Algebra, &c. The second with Babu Dur-gacharan Banerjee and these books:—Brief Survey of History, Clift's Geography, Abridgement of Grammar, Arithmetic, &c. The third with Babu Madhusudan Sircar and these books:—No. 3 Reader, Abridgement of Grammar, Clift's Geography, No. 2 Spelling, Arithmetic, &c. The fourth with Babu Kashinath Ghosh and these books:—No 1 Reader, Elements of Grammar, No 2 Spelling, Arithmetic, &c. The fifth, sixth and seventh with Babu Shreenath Biswas and the book:—Murray's Spelling.

Not to trespass more upon the valuable and useful time of those, before whom this brief but feeble account of our institution is presented, permit me to say, that the yearly examination, with the exhibitions and distribution of Prizes of the above School, was held at the Episcopal Palace on the 6th of April, when the Pupils acquitted themselves very satisfactorily before the most respectable and numerous audience.

KRISHNAHARI BASU,

The 11th April, 1837.

Babu Krishnahari Basu, General Superintendent of the Hindu Benevolent Institution, is certainly entitled to every commendation for his gratuitous zeal and indefatigable labour in the promotion of our School, and I can only say, that his report is worthy of consideration and support.

REPORTS ON THE PLAGUE.

TO W. PANTON, Esq, Sup.-Surg. West. Divi.

SIR,—In compliance with your instructions forwarded to me from Bheelwara, I beg to state that on my route through this part of the country, via Gungapore, I visited the village of Lakola for the purpose of making inquiry into the nature of the sickness said to prevail there. The village of Lakola is about two coss from Gungapore and has a large "tulao" or tank, immediately adjoining. The inhabitants are chiefly Jauts and Bunerahs, and, previous to the late mortality, were stated to amount to between six and seven hundred. The houses are of the meanest description, and a great proportion of them in a ruinous condition. I was informed that upwards of 200 persons had died in the village within the period of three months; but that the disease which had committed these ravages had disappeared fifteen days before the time of my visit. There was evidence to the truth of this statement in the deserted appearance of the place. On traversing along the dirty streets, I passed very few dwellings the doors of which were not secured and plastered with clay—showing that the occupiers were dead or had fled; I was told that the number who had abandoned their homes amounted to about 250, and that they had not returned. The population was reduced to the lowest ebb, and certainly the residents who remained did not amount to above eighty or ninety—if so many. The disease which had been so active, corresponded, so far as I could learn, in every essential particular with that described by Doctor Maclean in his report on the Palee sickness. Fever accompanied by headache, a great degree of prostration of strength, and generally on the third day, swellings on the neck, or in the axilla or groin. A few cases had been observed unmarked by any swellings whatever but among these an equal fatality had occurred. In the greater number of instances death took place on the third day subsequent to the attack; sometimes on the fourth, and the few who survived this period for the most part recovered. The number of these survivors was calculated to be about thirty, I saw only one, and that an unfortunate woman who had lost her husband and children, six in all. In regard to treatment, the villagers had nothing to oppose to a disease so new and formidable, and on its invasion all hope seems to have been abandoned. There had been an importation of "golies" or pills of some description from Oodypore, sent I believe by the Rajah, but their utter inefficacy being seen, their use was speedily given up. The only criterion that could be considered favourable, and to warrant a hope of recovery, was the circumstance of the swellings proceeding to the suppurative stage, which they did in most of the fortunate instances.

Two neighbouring villages were pointed out to me by the Thannadar or headman of Lakola as being still the seat of the disease in question—Korah and Sukhmuneawass. I proceeded to Korah the same evening, and examined the sick of the village or hamlet, two in number—one of them was a rather old man suffering from slight fever and a good deal debilitated. He had been ill seven or eight days and was evidently recovering. A small hard swelling on the right groin was the only suspicious symptom I could discover, and which he said had appeared during the course of the febrile attack: he informed me that three persons had lately died in the house in which he lived, and that their illness had been similar to his except in regard to the swellings which were larger. The other sick person was a young man; he suffered from acute fever with furred tongue, but his case was distinguished by no other unusual symptom. From these equivocal instances it was impossible to conclude that the Lakola and Palee disease had been imported into this place, although, one might be led to suppose that it had, if confidence is due to what the inhabitants related.

My visit to Sukhmunawass was made on the following morning. It is situated about a coss to the eastward of Lakola and is a small and wretched place with a population of about a hundred. I was told that fourteen of the inhabitants had died within the last two months, and that the disease which carried them off was exactly similar to that which had so lately prevailed at Lakola—a good many persons were said still to labour under this disease, and these I accordingly examined, being one male and five females. The man had been ill several days, he had fever but no distinct swellings in any part of his body, his tongue was moist, and whatever had been his complaint he seemed to be doing well; among the women only one of the cases was recent. She was labouring under febrile symptoms, which had commenced three days before; there did not appear to be any very great prostration of strength, but three or four swellings about the size of a walnut had made their appearance on the left side of the neck; immediately under the ear these swellings were hard and painful to the touch and had not been observed on the day before. It was clear that this was an example of the disease, but an instance in which it was characterized by unusual mildness. In the other cases the more active symptoms had abated, but in two of them there remained evidence to shew that the disease had occurred in the usual way: one of the women had a swelling in the axilla which had burst and was discharging pus. In the other instance, there was a considerable swelling of the right groin, but which I was not permitted to examine particularly: another woman had fever, with bloody expectoration, but no swellings; she was old as well as the other alluded to, and her appearance, as well as theirs, indicated a great degree of debility. My conclusion from these cases and the report of the inhabitants, was that the Lakola disease had visited this place but that its violence and activity had in a great degree abated. This abatement we might expect to occur in the natural course of things; the state of the weather would no doubt contribute to it, as well as the alarm of the inhabitants causing them to avoid contact with the sick.

In regard to restrictive measures they seem to be hardly required in a part of the country where the alarm of all is so great. It was with the greatest difficulty that I could procure a guide to shew me the road from Gungapore to Lakola, and I succeeded only by agreeing to the necessary stipulation—which was that he should not be obliged to enter the latter village. I was surrounded “en masse” by the inhabitants of one small village near to Sukhmunawass. I found on inquiry that no sickness had occurred amongst them; they had flocked out merely to learn what measures they should have recourse to, in case sickness did occur, and such as suggested themselves to me, at the moment I endeavoured to explain.

I have, &c.

Asst. Surg. Jodhpoor Legion.

Kankrolee, 11th Jan. 1837.

TO COLONEL ALVES,

Agent, Governor-General and Commissioner of Rajpootana.

SIR,—I have the honour to inform you, that in obedience to your instructions, I proceeded on the afternoon of the 21st instant, into the town of Jalia, to examine into the accuracy of the Native rumour, of the Plague or Murree having been prevalent among the inhabitants for some days previously; I then examined about fifty cases of disease, which in symptoms precisely resembled the description of distemper, that occasioned so great a mortality at Palee on its first breaking out, and subsequently spreading throughout Marwar and Meywar, has carried off numbers of the inhabitants.

2. I have since the 2nd instant been daily occupied, for a period of from three to four hours, in visiting the sick in Jalia, and on each occasion have generally seen the whole of the infected. I have studied a number of cases, from the first attack to the fatal termination in three days: and many patients whose disorder had existed for three or four days previously to my arrival, I have attended subsequently throughout, to the period of recovery or death. From this experience, I have no hesitation in defining the present disease, as the true plague; that is, a very malignant fever of a putrid and contagious nature; characterized chiefly by buboes, and its contagion appearing of a specific nature, and particularly affecting the nervous and glandular systems. The plague of Jalia is distinguishable into three varieties, similar to the plagues of Malta and Egypt, in the mildest form the fever is intermittent, in the severer remittent, and in the severest continued, and accompanied by typhomania towards the termination in death.

3. These cannot, however, be considered distinct species, as the milder often verges towards or is commuted into the more severe, the symptoms changing accordingly. I believe the difference to depend on the patient's greater or less susceptibility to the influence of the contagion when at first attacked. In the worst cases, the buboes appear, coexistaneously with the primary accession of the disorder, and are hard and indolent: in the milder form, buboes are often first perceived; but, when the milder is about to change into the more severe then the glandular affection is sure to accompany the transition. The disease is ushered in by rigors, which are more severe in the worst form, a succeeding burning fever with muttering delirium ensues, the conjunctiva of the eyes is injected or bloodshot of a lake colour, the eye is glassy and like that of a drunken man: the state of the tongue varies; but, it is always foul, white towards the edges, and brownish posteriorly; but in the worst cases the tongue is covered by a tough, thick coating of brownish white sordes, no red point appears, and it is perfectly dry. The pulse varies and is full and strong, and about 110 at the commencement: towards the termination it becomes very rapid, thready and about 140; till at last the fluttering and rapid pulsations are not easily counted: dry skin, most excruciating head-ache, and great thirst accompany the disorder. Absolute prostration of strength, inability to raise even a finger, always accompanies the worst forms: and in one case hemorrhage from the lungs occurred, some hours before dissolution.

4. The plague at Jalia differs from that of Egypt, in appearing to select women and children as its objects, in preference to robust men.

5. The buboes appear irregularly among the inguinal glands, or those of the axilla, the submaxillary, the lymphatics of the thigh or in in the occipital region, behind the head. Where the buboes came to a head, the suppuration proved critical, and on lancing the tumour the patient recovered.

6. To instance the varieties of the disorder and the vacillation from milder to severe, I will shortly glance at two cases. Shabaz Khan, Chuprasee, a stout man, about 28 years old, was attacked by rigors on the morning of the 2d instant; these were succeeded by violent fever and delirium: when I saw him in the evening his skin was burning hot and dry, his pulse 100 and full, his tongue very foul, his eyes blood-shot and glassy; he was muttering deliriously; his strength was completely gone; a large hard bubo was observed among the lymphatics of the left thigh: he had been spontaneously purged many times, each time passing much bile.—I had him lifted and bled him, in the sitting posture, to about fourteen ounces; he became sensible, and sweated freely; I gave him 5 grains of calomel, and 4 grains of opium, (he was an uphamee,) and ordered him to drink freely of imlee sherbet: on the morning of the 3d he was almost free of fever and sitting up on his charpoy: his tongue was cleaner at the edges, he only complained of the bubo; the bubo was leached and a hot poultice of pounded neem leaves and ajwain seed applied; and with the view of restoring the secretions to a healthy state, calomel with opium was given, he continued doing well all the 3d. On the 4th at noon he had more fever; he looked wild and drunken; his tongue was covered with sordes; he soon became delirious, muttering and rolling about; he fell and cut himself severely over the face, but the flow of blood from the wound did him no good; he died in the evening.—This is a case of the worst form. A respectable buneea's son was attacked by quotidian intermittent fever on the 1st of the month; the fever persevered in the form up to the 4th, when it ceased to intermit, the head-ache became excruciating, and complete prostration of strength came on; in the evening I observed a large bubo in the left groin; his tongue became completely furred and dry; he died on the night of the 5th March.—This is a case of transition from the milder to the severe variety.

7. I would, with all deference, recommend the following treatment. On the first attack, the more robust men should be bled from the arm in the sitting posture, to a moderate extent, till perspiration appears on the forehead and the head-ache is diminished, an emetic should then be given; after which, if the patient has not been spontaneously purged, a dose of calomel, followed some hours after by a moderate laxative, should be administered. The weaker men, women, and children should have leeches applied to the temples, in proportion to the ages and severities of head-aches, after which similar treatment of an emetic and mild purge. The patients should be separated from the healthy: their bodies sponged repeatedly with cold-water, and the head kept cool and moist; calomel and antimonials, with camphor and opium, should then be exhibited in regulated divided doses, at intervals, to act on the system and restore the secretions; the buboes should have stimulating poultices applied; acidulated drinks and rice congee may be given ad libitum. So soon as a considerable remission or complete intermission occurs, cinchona bark, quinine, mineral acids, wine and nutritious diet should be freely given, to restore the strength and prevent a relapse. But as these remedies are not procurable for the use of the infected villages, (the villages are without any sufficient supply of the most common native remedies,) a tolerable substitute will be found in the administration to the convalescent of pills of kaikarunja seed made up with camphor and carminatives, and given with decoction of cheereya; at the same time the most nutritious diet being observed.

8. The healthy portion, of the inhabitants of Jalia, were entreated to leave their houses for a time, and encamp round the walls, until the plague should entirely subside; the sick alone to remain, to whom I offered to attend; all filth and dirt was directed to be collected and burnt; all the apparel was ordered to be washed; and the houses to be new "leped" with cow-dung, in the absence of white-wash. The apathy of the Natives has occasioned these instructions to be altogether evaded, or only ineffectually performed. The dirt and filth of the town still remains and the inhabitants' clothes are still unwashed; the old dunghills outside of the town were set fire to; and on the 5th about 200 frightened at the mortality left the town to encamp near the river; but took their sick along with them who will be likely still to spread the disease among the healthy. Up to the 7th March, more than 1,000 having left the town, and have obstinately gone into neighbouring villages, where I fear the contagion will spread, and in some of which it has already appeared. The healthy in Jalia now keep aloof from the sick; so, the disease is mostly confined to houses before infected; but, at any time, when fear is removed, subsequent communication may restore the extension. On this date, 7th March, there are very few new cases: many have died; many have recovered or are convalescing.

9. The houses of those ill of the plague, are many of them half full of cotton lying loose; the sick are covered with quilts: the doors are shut: and the relations sitting close around. All the clothes of the dead, though recommended to be, have not been burnt. These will spread the contagion, as also may the cotton when sent and sold elsewhere.

10. The population of Jalia was rated between four and five thousand. Of those sick of the plague treated by me, five have quite recovered, one of them by only lancing the bubo: about twenty-five others are convalescent and may recover completely; a good many of these have gone out of the town. On the 6th March, (yesterday,) about thirty altogether were badly infected in the town. The disease is extremely fatal. On the evening of the 3d, I counted fifty-nine "cheeras" of recently burned bodies, (and some few had also been buried); eight died from the morning of the 3d to the morning of the 4th March; seven died from the morning of the 4th to the morning of the 5th; and from the morning of the 5th to the morning of the 6th, fifteen died in the town and two out of it: from the morning of the 6th to the morning of the 7th, seven died: making a total of ninety-eight deaths in about eleven days. Two "tailies" or oilmen died of the plague. The daily increase of cases has been hitherto about ten. To-day the 7th, there are fewer.

11. I may now proceed to trace the course of the contagion. About eighteen days since, a Burrat left Budnawr (where the plague has been raging for more than a month) for Jalia. On arriving at Jalia, the party put up at a mahajan's house; in the vicinity of that house, the plague appeared at a Buneea's day or two subsequently; some of the Burrat party became sick on arrival at Jalia, and left it and went to Seonagur, on the 26th February, where they staid two days. On the 28th they left Seonagur and went to Untalee, where two died of the plague on the 4th March; on the 3d March a man died of the plague at Seonagur. The course of the propagation of the contagion to Jalia seems clear enough.

12. The disease is eminently contagious at Jalia. I will instance a few cases. In a Brahmin's family, six members have died, within seven days, all lived and slept altogether. Another Brahmin woman was attacked, she recovered; her son was taken ill during her recovery; then her grand daughter; both the latter are dangerously ill (or dead); they all slept close together in the same room. A buneea constantly nursed his son (twelve years old) in his arms, till the boy died; the father was then attacked, and is likely to die; and many similar cases.

13. In case of the plague attacking a village, I am of opinion, that in order to arrest the progress of the scourge, all the uninfected should be caused to leave their houses, and encamp outside the walls, they being also prohibited from holding intercourse of any kind with other villages, and vice versa the sick should remain in the villages, and be properly attended to by a Bued or Hakeem; as soon as any sick recovered, they should be thoroughly cleansed in person and garments, and sent out of the village also. The dead should be immediately burnt, with all bedding and clothes. The sick of the village should be kept in the cool air, and their bodies occasionally laved or spoiled with cold water; a ha-keem should be sent, provided with a lancet, leeches, calomel, opium, camphor, jumalgota seeds, katkarunja seed, and chereyta; he might pursue the plan above pointed out by me, as to medicinal and dietetic regimen, as well as the other precautions advised, with (I believe) favourable results; and the method is economical and easily practicable.

14. To prevent the plague spreading to Ajmeer or elsewhere, parties of troops or police had better be stationed on all the roads that might give access from infected places; with which, as far as possible, an absolute introduction of intercourse should be observed. The travellers and merchants and merchandise, arrested at the different posts, should be suspected by a responsible person; those who are perfectly healthy should be caused to ablutionise freely, and air and wash every part of their clothing; they then might be permitted to proceed with a certificate. Raw wool and cotton from infected places should be turned back. Piece goods and other articles should be opened and well aired, and if possible exposed to a temperature of 140 degrees, after which the goods might be passed. Letters may be disinfected by exposure to the vapour of burning sulphur and nitre, without any difficulty.

15. The great danger of the plague spreading into our populous provinces is obvious.

16. I believe that the hot winds will greatly abate, if not annihilate, the contagion of the plague; but it may remain in the insidious shape of common fever, as it has been known to do in Egypt, and again break out into its usual virulent form, on the occurrence of a temperature more conducive to its production.

17. At present, the early interference of the strong arm of the Government, may prevent entirely any subsequent danger to be apprehended from the continued presence of this pestilence.

REPORT OF THE DISTRICT CHARITABLE SOCIETY.

The Proceedings of the District Charitable Society, during the past year, present few particular occurrences to be brought to the notice of Subscribers, in the pages of an Annual Report. The system of the Society has long been organized in a way so well adapted to the efficiency of its operations, that those who are charged with the conduct of its details humbly hope that their united endeavors are rightly directed, and that the urgent claims of the poor are sufficiently (as they certainly are warmly and earnestly) cared for and acknowledged.

Towards the close of the Report last published, it was mentioned that a Sub-Committee appointed to revise the Lists of Pensioners in the several Districts had effected considerable good, and that a similar revision should take place annually.

In April last it was suggested that the same Sub-Committee might with advantage consider and report upon the Office Establishments kept up by the Central and District Committees. This was done; and the whole having been carefully inspected, the Sub-Committee reported that in the offices of the central, the St. James's, and the Native Committees, no change appeared to be required, but that in those of the Old Church and Cathedral Committees a little modification of expenditure was desirable. The Old Church Committee subsequently made it satisfactorily appear, that their existing Office Establishment was actually required to do the work of their very large District; but in the Cathedral District the suggestions of the Central Committee are still not finally disposed of.

The Report of the Annual Sub-Committee, which has just closed its inspections, will be inserted at the end of this Report.

The Society have, during the past year, had the satisfaction of successfully recommending a very few persons to situations. It has been before mentioned, and particularly in the last Report, that the Society cannot undertake to procure situations for any one; but it is satisfactory to find that even in a very few instances the industrious poor have been provided with the means of livelihood, either temporary or permanent. The subject is alluded to on the present occasion, not with a view to excite hope, nor to make it appear by any means either that much exertion has been used or that much success has followed, but the rather in order to correct a misapprehension which has prevailed, regarding the persons from among whom servants of various descriptions are obtainable on recommendations from this Society. It is understood to have been to some extent a prevalent opinion, that the sole object of the Society in recommending poor people for employment, is to relieve the Charitable Fund from the burthen of supporting them, without any reference to the fitness or the character of the individuals recommended, who are supposed to be mere beggars, and not likely without the Society's help, to be employed by respectable persons.

It is undoubtedly an object of importance with the Society to diminish any demand upon their funds which may be otherwise honestly satisfied; and accordingly no able-bodied person is retained on the public alms who declines to accept employment. But when it is recollected that character is an essential requisite to admission on the lists, and that a recommendation given by this Society must necessarily certify the goodness of the character of the person recommended, it is hoped little more needs be said to show how erroneous is the impression adverted to. The Society from their organized system of inspection, have the means of ascertaining with considerable precision, the characters and habits of individuals, and no one has been hitherto, nor can never be knowingly recommended for employment, who is not vouched for on a full enquiry into particulars, because no person of known doubtful character is admitted or kept upon the lists.

If the observations which have been made refer only to the fact that persons recommended by this Society do not always prove grateful or good servants, that is a fact as much to be lamented as it is undeniable. Any further recommendation than arises from a knowledge of the poverty of the individual, his private character, and his readiness to earn a livelihood, is frequently not to be obtained from the Society; for it does and will happen that persons obtain relief who have never before been reduced to serve, and who having no Certificates from former employers, can only profess their desire to work industriously for their bread. Ignorant as they are of forms or requisitions of service, and apt to compare their former comfortable circumstances with their present depressed condition, such persons have a strong claim to the compassionate feelings of the public. It is indispensible that the species of benevolence which will take in hand a poor and willing but wholly inexperienced servant, and will overlook many defects for a time for the sake of the distressful condition of the individual, is a charity of the most burdensome and irksome kind. But it is a genuine spirit of beneficence which will thus exercise itself; and the good that might be effected in this manner among the many families known to this Society, is incalculable. The very peculiar relations of one class to another in our Indian communities, and the powerful influence which those relations have on the unregulated minds of the mass of the poor, many of whom are wholly uneducated, and many laboring under unaccustomed poverty, present very serious difficulties, and obstacles in some instances insuperable, to any multiplied or extended effort to do good—and while enlarging upon the subject, the District Charitable Society would not be understood as venturing to dictate to the feelings of any one, or as indulging themselves in remarks on any person or body of persons. Having merely attracted attention to the subject, they leave it to its own free course and natural effect.

It has been found necessary to strike off several Pensioners who have refused to take service or respectable employment, during the past year. These are all females; and how much the Society feel the invidiousness of this part of their duty, the welfare of the Institution at large imperatively calls for this measure, though it is ever most unwillingly resorted to.

During the year the Society have had the advantage of the assistance of the Hon'ble Sir B. H. Malkin and Mr. Cameron, as Vice President. Towards its close, Mr. T. C. Robertson's departure from Calcutta, caused the discontinuance of his valuable services in the same capacity.

The expenditure of the Society in all its Districts has been economical, without curtailing unnecessarily the relief given to the deserving poor. The rate of regular disbursements from the Central to the District Committees has been lessened in some degree, and in consequence the Society have had the means of supplying the increased demands for the Native Committee, the Leper Asylum, and the Work-house under the Superintendence of the Ladies' Committee.

Nine hundred blankets have been distributed to the poor on the Society's Lists during this cold season, in addition to a supply of flannel jackets to the inmates of the Leper Asylum.

The Funds continue to flourish, and as in the last Report the increasing notice and support of the Public was very thankfully acknowledged, so on this occasion also the Society cannot but express a most lively sense of the encouragement and assistance they derive from the means placed at their disposal. With every augmentation of their Funds, and with every fresh year's experience, the Society anxiously feel their responsibility more and more increased:—and under this feeling it is that they renew their earnest request to all who take an interest in the welfare of the poor, that a more active co-operation may be afforded to them at the periodical meetings of all their Committees, than has hitherto been generally considered necessary by supporters of the Society. By no existing Institution would the favor of a minute inspection of their proceedings be more thankfully received than by this Society; and in no Institution is it less desirable or less desired that the administration of its rules and principles should be left continually in the hands of a few, and the same individuals

As a testimony of confidence in those individuals, it is not unsatisfactory; but approbation and confidence won from actual observation of what is done, are greatly more to be prized than when they proceed from a mere belief that all is likely to go on well. The business at the Meetings of the Central Committee, is ordinarily such as occupies no great length of time; and the attendance of gentlemen who support the Institution would be very acceptable, especially on the last Monday in the month.

In the course of five years, from 1831 to 1835 inclusive, this Society has disbursed, chiefly in monthly pensions to the poor of Calcutta, the sum of rupees 2,53,300, as shewn by the printed Annual Reports; giving an average of Rs. 50,460 annually and exhibiting a most gratifying proof of the liberality of Government and the bounty of the Supporters of the Society, among whom the Governor-General has ever been most conspicuous.

It will be seen on reference to the Appendix, that the Society at present maintains about 560 Christian Pensioners, principally Indian Portuguese widows, or orphans, and a few indigent Europeans and East Indians; besides upwards of 440 Hindoos and Mahomedans, blind, lame, or infirm, and all unable to do any thing for their own support:—in addition to which, from fifty to one hundred rupees are distributed monthly in donations of one rupee each to Native paupers, Hindoos and Mahomedans, until they can be brought upon the regular pension.

In the year 1835, the Receipts were sicca rupees 54,592-0-5, and the Disbursements Sa. Rs. 52,008-2-1. The balance in hand on the 1st of January 1836, was Sa. Rs. 13,122-7-4.

During the last year the total receipts have been Company's rupees 57,403-13-10, and the total Disbursements Company's rupees 46,640-0-3, leaving a balance in favor of the Society on the 1st of January 1837, of Company's rupees 15,361-2-0.

The Society have great satisfaction in making it known, that Baboo Dwarkanauth Tagore has, with his accustomed liberality, and in addition to his regular Annual Subscription, just presented 500 rupees as a Donation to the Funds;—and that a Donation of the same amount was received a few days before from the bounty of Mr. —, of Calcutta.

LADIES' COMMITTEE.

The Establishment of a Committee of Ladies in connection with the Society, was noticed in the last Report.

In May last the following representation was made to the Central Committee:

Report.—The Ladies Committee of the District Charitable Society, having been formed in compliance with the Resolutions of the Central Committee, assembled for the first time on the 27th of February 1836.

Several preliminary Meetings having been held to ascertain the capabilities and circumstances of the different pensioners, and to determine on the best mode of conducting their proceedings, at a Meeting held on the 24th of March, the following Resolutions were agreed to by the Committee.

That there should be a Secretary and Deputy Secretary appointed. (In pursuance whereof Lady Malkin and Mrs. Trevelyan were appointed Secretaries.)

That there should be a Meeting of the Committee held on the Third Tuesday of every month.

That the females, whether adult or children, supported by the Funds of the District Charitable Society, by assembled at a room provided for the purpose, to perform needle-work, if competent to do so, under the superintendence of a person engaged for that object, and if unable to work to receive instruction in the same from the same person.

That the Ladies of the Committee may, in all cases where it would be undesirable on account of distance, health, or family circumstances, to require the attendance of particular Pensioners or children, dispense with such attendance and may also direct the Superintendent to furnish work to be done by such persons at their own houses, in cases where this appears expedient.

That the Superintendent of the Work-room be required, in addition to the charge of the working establishment, to give instruction in reading, to read for two hours in the day to such of the children as are unable to read, and also to such of the adults as being unable are willing to be instructed.

That a writer shall be employed; and for the present one was engaged at 10 rupees a month.

On the 1st of April a house, No. 121, Chitpore Road, was hired for 3 months at a Rent of 20 rupees a month for the purpose of assembling the Pensioners, and the Work-house opened on the 6th of April. Mrs. Collins, one of the Pensioners, was chosen to superintend it, on a Salary of 10 Rs. a month, being an increase of 3 Rs. on her former allowance. A considerable number of the Pensioners attend on this occasion: several were ordered to come daily to the Work-room and others were allowed to take work home to whom it seemed expedient to extend this indulgence:—all evinced more or less willingness to be employed. Those who have since attended have done so cheerfully, and the Committee are inclined to hope that their number will increase rather than diminish. Several Ladies of the Committee have taken it in turns to visit the Work-room daily by way of check upon the Superintendent and pensioners at the opening of a New Establishment.

After a good deal of consideration the Committee have determined on submitting the following plan to the Central Committee as a scale of prices for the work done and as a sufficient remuneration to the workers.

1. That the workers receive the rates fixed by the Madras Society, for the work done by them: that the amount of their earnings be computed accordingly, up to the last Saturday in each month, and that two-thirds of the amount be deducted from the allowance to be paid by the Charitable Society for the ensuing month.

2. That the rates of the Madras Society appearing to be low, when compared with those ordinarily paid in Calcutta, the customer shall pay four annas in the rupee above the amount paid to the worker.

3. "That at any time when their is not work enough fully to employ all the workers, it be distributed so as to relieve the funds of the Society as far as possible; so that a person who has done work enough in the early part of a month to relieve the Society from the payment of any allowance for the following month, should not receive any more work that month if there were others competent to the performance who had not yet earned enough to cover their allowances in the same manner.

4. "That the names of any persons who refuse to work or who absent themselves habitually from the Work-room without showing sufficient cause, shall be reported to the Committee, who relieve them; for enquiry as to the reason of their absence or refusal.

"To these propositions, at the earnest recommendation of all the Ladies, a fifth is added; that in case of any deficiency of work occurring, the Central Committee be requested to allow of an application of their funds to a certain extent for the purchase of materials, to be made up by the women into such articles of clothing as shall appear most saleable, for the purpose of preventing any of the Pensioner from remaining unemployed and thus bringing the 3rd proposition into operation. The article thus manufactured to be sold for the benefit of the Society.

"The expenses attending the Establishment of the Work-house, such as procuring a small quantity of necessary furniture, &c. have been kept within the narrowest possible limits, and amount, in all to Rs. 53-15-6.

"The current expenses likewise, the Committee hope, will be considered as small as can well be expected, as they amount to rupees 79-14-2 during the two months in which it has existed, viz. rupees 38-4-8 in April, and rupees 41-9-6 in May.

"The sum earned by the workers since the establishment of the Institution as yet amounts to rupees 46-14-3½, but the Committee have good reason to believe that when the plan of remuneration is once understood, the number of their hands will increase, and that many women who now avail themselves of any excuse they may have for staying away, and others who are ready to make excuses on trivial grounds, will come in, either to employ themselves at the Work-house or to take work home, as they may be permitted.

"They also hope that the experiment of employing this women hitherto supported in idleness, will be considered to have so far succeeded that they may look forward to the continuance and eventual perfecting of a system which shall improve the moral condition, while it relieves the bodily wants of the poor who come within its influence."

On this occasion the Central Committee passed the subjoined Resolution.

"That the warmest thanks of the Society are due to the Ladies forming the Committee for the trouble they have taken, and that the Report now read be approved, but that the rates for the work be fixed by the Ladies' Committee as they may deem proper. The Central Committee, however, do not adopt proposition No. 2 of the Report."

It was further determined to advertize in the public prints that needle work would be taken in at the Society's Work-house. But it was soon found that in an establishment so recently formed the undertakings must at first be of a very moderate kind, and work enough was in general supplied without the aid of continued public advertisement.

In July last the Ladies' Committee submitted an account of their expenditure of the sum of 200 rupees granted to them in March; and an estimate of the rate of their monthly expenditure to be incurred at the Work-house, amounting to 40 rupees per month, to be drawn and accounted for regularly as is customary in the District Committees. A grant of 40 rupees a month was accordingly passed, but the Ladies' Committee have not found occasion to draw that sum in more than three months.

In September the Committee represented that it appeared desirable to entertain a Superintendent able to undertake cutting out, and otherwise well qualified, and that they believe such a person might be procured for a salary of 20 or 30 Rs. a month. An additional grant of 30 Rs. a month was accordingly requested, on an understanding that it was by no means intended or attempted to fix a certain additional burthen on the Society's Funds to the amount now solicited, but that while every exertion would be made to disburse the Society's grants economically, there was reason to hope that ultimately and at no long date, the Work-house would defray its own expenses, or very nearly so, even if it should not be the means of some small saving to the Society. The grant, therefore, was only asked for temporarily to enable the experimental institution of a Work-house to be effectually carried on for some months, till it should be found to answer the purposes of its establishment or its abandonment be proved to be necessary.

This grant was accordingly made for three months, by the end of which time the Committee were requested to report on the state and prospect of the Work-house. Circumstances, however, arose to make it unnecessary or impracticable, to make the contemplated change, and the Committee did not avail themselves of any part of the additional grant.

In December last it was resolved to procure some better place for the Work-house, and a Superintendent of the requisite qualifications having been found, in the person of Mrs. Price, she was entertained from the 1st of January 1837, at the salary of 20 Rs. a month, and the Work-house was removed from the same date from Chitpore Road to No. 140, Dhurrumtollah, towards the rent of which the Society pay 25 rupees a month. Arrangements have also been made to discontinue the expense of the writer; and the stated outlay of 40 Rs. a month, (to which little contingencies, such as the purchase of thread and needles, &c, should be added,) is all that the Society have to provide; that amount being in some part reimbursed to the Fund by the Society's proportion of the earnings of the workers, or, which is the same thing, the pensions being in such proportion reduced.

Under many discouraging circumstances, among which are several instances of the Pensioners either determining not to work at the Committee's house, or declining to take service offered to them elsewhere, and being consequently subjected to the penalty of exclusion from the Society's Lists,—the experiment of a work-house has proved hitherto by no means unsuccessful. The average monthly number of persons attending it up to the 1st of January is 14, of whom 9 are young girls. Their earnings altogether have averaged rupees 22-12-1 a month, and the Society's outlay on this account 38 rupees a month. It is however hoped, that during the present year some progress will be made towards rendering this new institution as extensively beneficial as the sanguine wishes of the Society would desire to see it.

The Committee has undergone some change, and has increased in number, and the Society feel no doubt that to the Ladies who compose it, the supporters of the Society and the public will very confidently entrust the interests of an institution so well calculated to excite their benevolent exertions, and so likely to prosper under their kind and able management.

NATIVE COMMITTEE.

In June 1836, it was represented to the Central Committee, that there were a number of natives apparently real objects of charity, who had been registered for succession when lapses should occur among the permanent Pensioners; but that as these do not often take place, the persons alluded to suffered much distress, which might be considerably alleviated by occasional small donations.

It was accordingly resolved in consideration of the state of the Funds, that in addition to the regular monthly grant of 700 Rs. already made to the Committee, a sum of 500 Rs. should be placed at the disposal of Mr. Phipps, Secretary to the Native Committee, to be drawn for in such portions as he might require for the purpose specified.

This additional grant was paid in sums of 50 rupees a month, for five months, and 100 rupees in two following months, leaving yet a surplus available of 50 Rs.

The relief of the native Poor is a subject of considerable anxiety to the Society. It is quite impossible to obtain any thing like adequate contributions from the Native Gentry of Calcutta; and although the District Charitable Society is established for the relief of all classes and discriptions of poor, yet while so very little aided by the Native benevolence, and so much thwarted in their objects by the inconsiderate conduct of Native Gentlemen which has repeatedly been adverted to in former Reports of the Society it is unavoidably necessary to keep within reasonable limits the assistance given to the native Poor. If all who can afford it would contribute to the Funds of this Society, there should in a very short time be not a single Native Beggar to be found in the street of this Town, nor a Leper unprovided with a comfortable residence. But while circumstances continue as they are, the very dearest objects of the Society are rendered unattainable, and neither can the wants of the poor, nor the charitable intentions of those who support this Society, be adequately attended to or fulfilled.

LEPER ASYLUM.

Considerable expense has been incurred during the past year at the Leper Asylum; but the Society have heartily contributed all that has been laid out on that most interesting Institution.

In May last, Dr. Stuart favored the Central Committee with a very satisfactory report of the result of his exhibition of iodine in three cases of lepers. The account of these cases was at the time generally made known by means of the public prints, and is therefore not inserted here. The Society have observed with much gratification the unwearied and (as far as they can judge) the successful endeavors of Dr. Stuart to ameliorate the sad condition of the poor objects under his charge; and they feel sure that the public will join them in particularly appreciating that Gentleman's exertions, when it is recollected that they are wholly gratuitous and made at not a little personal inconvenience.

With regard to certain mistaken notions which are abroad, the Society take this opportunity to state, that the subject of giving the Patients a small daily gratuity has repeatedly occupied the attention of those Members of the Society under whose particular charge the Asylum has from time to time been placed; and that it is only because the Patients are irresistibly disposed to spend any little money they obtain in fruit and other little luxuries hurtful to them as Lepers, and calculated to obstruct and disappoint the efforts of their medical attendant, that they are not permitted to have the uncontrolled disposal of their daily allowance. Were the Leper Asylum a mere place of residence for its pitiable inmates, it would be a very questionable kindness to put it in their power to purchase little temporary gratifications of their appetite at the expense of much permanent additional suffering. But when it is remembered, that every possible exertion is being made to effect some change for the better in their dreadful disease by medical treatment, especially by the use of such powerful and peculiar remedies as are found to be applicable to their cases, it will perhaps be admitted by all considerate persons, that it would be folly and unkindness indeed to permit the patients in the Leper Asylum to indulge themselves in the way suggested.

And with reference to the Asylum itself, the Society invite all who are interested in the welfare of the poor Leper to visit the Asylum, and to form an opinion from personal inquiry as to the arrangements there made and the system there observed. The Society will ever thankfully receive any suggestions for the improvement of that or any other institution under their charge; only they trust such suggestions will be made after full consideration and inquiry. But as little comparatively can be effected while their means are circumscribed, (with reference, that is, to the great number of Lepers in Calcutta,) and as the peculiar character of the Leper Asylum, as both a charitable Institution and a Hospital at the same time, brings its only to a certain extent within the legitimate objects of this Society; the public attention is earnestly solicited towards some united and effectual plan of providing for the poor objects in question, the most grievously afflicted perhaps of any human beings in the world.

The Society have great pleasure in announcing, that upon a representation by Dr. Stuart, Lord Auckland has been pleased to contribute 80Rs. a month, for six months, (after which period a Report of what may be effected is to be made to His Lordship,) for the express purpose of enabling Dr. Stuart to follow up his experiment of exhibiting Iodine in the cases of Lepers. A plan for erecting Hot-baths at the Asylum, is also now under the consideration of His Lordship.

The past year has been on the whole a very interesting one, though not one in which much has actually been effected. In closing their Annual Report, the Society cannot do better than remind all their supporters, that the ends of their institution cannot be realized by any mere human efforts however diligently applied; and that in whatever good we may effect, we shall then alone feel aright when, looking beyond our mere selves, we recognize the aid and the guidance of that Being, who only can direct and prosper the humble instrumentality of man.

Report of the Sub-Committee of the District Charitable Society, appointed on the 26th December, 1836.

In the performance of the duty delegated to us by the Central Committee of the District Charitable Society, we have the pleasure to report, that we visited the Parishes of St. James, of the Old Church, and of the Cathedral, on separate days, and saw all the persons now receiving relief with a very few exceptions. Some of those few were persons who were known to be bed-ridden, or too ill to leave their houses, and who had been lately visited at their homes by persons connected with the Local Committees. In all cases where the absence was not satisfactorily accounted for in this manner, the allowance has been suspended until those receiving it shall personally appear before the District Committee, and the case be re-investigation by them. We also saw at the Town Hall all the Pensioners on the list of the Central Committee.

2. In the Cathedral District we have recommended the cases of four persons to be referred to the Central Committee, and have suggested the expediency of two widows who are residing at Chundernagore, being transferred on the first opportunity, to the Martine or Western Charity merely on account of their present residence, which is much more convenient for them, but which in strictness excludes them from the limits of our Society. We have also suggested, that one Pensioner (a respectable widow with 6 children,) should have her pension raised from 8 rupees to 16 and that two other Pensioners now receiving, 2-8 and 4 Rupees, a month; but whose case appeared to be similar, should both receive 8 rupees. One case appeared to require to be re-investigated by the Local Committee.

3. In the Old Church District we resolved that the allowance of one blind man raised from 3 to 6 rupees, and that of another person from 4 to 6 rupees, and that one Pensioner should be sent to the Alms-house also that two should be sent to the General Hospital, and that the cases of six should be further inquired into by the Local Committee, chiefly with a view to ascertain by Medical examination, whether their diseases could be cured or relieved by medical or surgical treatment.

4. In the Saint James's District we found a greater number of Native Poor, and the Funds at the disposal of the Committee had been dispensed with such strict economy, that we thought it necessary in the case of eight persons, to direct their allowance to be increased from 2 to 3 rupees, in two others from 3 to 4 rupees, and in one case from 2 to 4 rupees. In one case only we directed a reduction to be made from 3 to 2 rupees a month. Two other cases were recommended to the District Committee for re-consideration, with a view to a small increase of the allowance, and we requested them to institute further enquiry into four others.

5. There cases (Nos. 172, 217 and 191,) we agreed should be referred to the Central Committee with a view to the children of these Pensioners being provided with some honest employment if possible.

6. We have not found a single case among those who are on the list of the Central Committee, in which we could recommend either the withdrawal of the allowance, or any reduction of the amount, and we had great satisfaction in remarking that the arrangements made by the Ladies' Committee for providing work for those females who are able to work with their needle, appear to be attended with great good effect.

7. From the details into which we have entered, the Central Committee will have perceived that we have in two or three instances only seen reason to advise a trifling reduction, while in many we have seen the strongest reasons to recommend an increase. The general examination of all doubtful cases which took place last year, has been attended with a permanent good effect; and the several District Committees appear to have zealously and steadily pursued a course during the past year, which has ensured a careful and judicious distribution of the Charitable Funds placed at their disposal. We have not found one instance of a pension that we could consider objectionable while the whole of our examination has impressed us with a very high opinion of the conscientiousness and judgment which is displayed by those persons who take an active part in managing the distribution of the Funds into whose expenditure we have examined.

8. There is one circumstance which has frequently occurred to us during these reviews of the Calcutta Poor, or seeing many of them attended by fine stout and healthy but idle and ignorant boys, and that is the great want of a place where these lads could be instructed in some trade, by which they might be able to earn their own livelihood when they grew up to manhood. Many of them cannot procure education; the Free School being already full to overflowing, but we refer more to the want of some establishment, where they could acquire habits of industry and some manual skill, instead of growing up as they do now in ignorance and idleness. Mr. Phipps has drawn up a plan of this nature, which appears highly deserving of attention, and whatever alterations might be suggested in the details, we are desirous to bring to the notice of the Central Committee that such a School of Industry is very much required in Calcutta, and would be of great practical benefit if it could be established.

Chairman of the Sub-Committee.

BORING EXPERIMENT IN FORT WILLIAM.

The immediate superintendence of the Boring Experiment having, in consequence of my removal from Fort William, passed into other hands, I think it necessary to acquaint the Society with the progress that has been made since I had the honor to submit to them a note on the subject in June 1842.

At that time a depth of 175 feet had been attained by the borer, which then worked in a coarse sharp sand mixed with pieces of quartz and felspar, and from the little progress made, it was supposed a bed of gravel or shingle had been reached. This supposition, however, proved erroneous; for after some delay the work advanced, until the borer having gained 178½ feet, and the tubes being forced down to 180½ feet, they were observed soon after to have sunk by their own weight, and thenceforward up to the present time they have continued so to sink, maintaining a depth generally a few feet in advance of the auger.

It is remarkable that, although it was frequently tried, it was seldom found practicable to force the tubes down more than an inch or two at a time; yet, shortly after the removal of the pressure, amounting, possibly, to twenty tons, they would sometimes descend six inches or even a foot by their own gravity.

With a trifling variation in the color and fineness of the sand the stratum remained the same, until clay was found at 198½ feet, but this stratum was not more than five feet in thickness; five feet of sand then occurred, and after it another layer of clay. At 212 feet a bed of sand was entered, which has been penetrated to a depth of 131 feet, without reaching its termination.

Long ere this the work would have been carried to the utmost depth for which tubing of the diameter in use has been provided, had it not been for two accidents, each of which was of so serious a character as threatened to put a final stop to the work. The first was occasioned by the separation of a part of the borer containing a valve, when at the bottom of the well; and the second by the auger becoming jammed with a brazen plumb which had been lost in the bore sometime before, in such a way that the application of no force that the rods could sustain sufficed to move the implement in any direction. The force that was applied may be conceived when it is stated that it was sufficient to raise the whole line of tubing bodily in the bore.

Keeping the tubes in the position, the rods, by the application of a screw, were at length forcibly torn from the auger a little below the screw which joined them; after which, as in the former case, the valve worm auger was broken off by the jumper, and the instrument brought up by the catting in the socket.

The success in overcoming these disasters must be mainly attributed to the zeal and perseverance of the sappers employed on the work: in the latter, however, they were guided by the able instructions of Captain J. Thompson, who suggested the measures to be adopted, and supplied from his own stores some of the machinery to carry them into effect.

To guard as far as possible against breaking the rods by the force applied to extract them, Capt. T. connected his screw with the rod-head, through the intervention of a rod of somewhat smaller section which would consequently give way before any injury could happen to the borer.—Ed.

When my superintendence ceased, (10th March,) the tubes had sunk to the depth of 343 feet, and the borer penetrated to 336 feet. The sand still continued to rise in the manner described in my former paper. It varies occasionally in color and substance, and latterly some pieces of felspar and lumps of indurated clay or sand have been picked out of the sand brought up. Specimens accompany this paper.

The supply of English tubing of the requisite character is very nearly exhausted, but an attempt will be made to cast some in Calcutta: if it fails, the experiment must necessarily be suspended until and inasmuch that has been sent home be answered.

Note by the Secretary.

As a postscript to the above Report, I have now to announce a most curious and unexpected discovery, communicated to me this very morning by Colonel Macleod, the Engineer officer, who has succeeded to the charge of the experiment hitherto so successfully conducted by Major Taylor.

On a former occasion the Society was shewn metallic iron reduced from ore extracted from a depth of 150 feet and sharp angular quartz and felspar from 175 feet; but here is something which will excite much more surprise—a fossil bone brought up by the auger from a depth of 350 feet below the surface of Calcutta!

When it is considered how many million chances there were against an auger only a few inches in diameter, impinging upon the precise spot where a bone lay in the understratum,—the risk, too, of such a fragile object being ground to atoms by the tool, or pushed aside, and missed, it may be regarded as the most extraordinary good fortune that the relic should not only have been met with but brought up entangled in the valve of the scoop without the slightest injury! The bone is the fractured lower half of a humerus of some small animal like a dog: it resembles the drawing of the corresponding bone of the hyena in Cuvier, but it is impossible precisely to identify it for want of skeletons for comparison.

The interior is filled with the micaceous sand in which it was unbedded, and scales of the same adhere to the exterior surface, as shewn in the accompanying sketch. The bone is not thoroughly fossilized, for when heated by the blow-pipe it becomes slightly changed and emits a perceptible odour;—but the animal matter left is exceedingly small, and the whole loss on heating a portion to a white heat was only 7 per cent, the greater part being moisture from the hydrate of iron with which it is impregnated. The greater part of the phosphate of lime remains with a proportion of carbonate: the specific gravity is 2.63, just the same as that a fine specimen of polished ferruginous odontopterus from the Himalaya: it requires the heat of an oxygen blow-pipe to fuse a fragment per se on platinum foil.

Of the relative age of this deposit, compared with that of Sivalik and Nerbudda fossils, it is impossible to form any exact conclusions, but it is worth while to recapitulate briefly the conditions under which each are found.

The continuous stratum of lower sand in which our bone was buried at a depth of a hundred and fifty feet, may be regarded as the gradual deposit at the mouth of a primeval river: the excess of mica contained in it would seem to indicate its derivation from a gneiss or schistose source, such, indeed, as the present Himalayan or

Pindyan range might still furnish. It was evidently anterior to the general and extensive alluvial deposits of the yellow kankary clay which entirely cover, or rather form the Gangetic plain, and which the auger in Fort William had passed through before it attained the depth of 100 feet. Now the fossil bones of the Jumna were also found under the kankar clays of the Doab, 150 feet below the surface, so that in this respect the situation of the two is similar enough. The calcareous infiltration which has consolidated the sand and gravel of the Sawnlik and Nerbudda matrix has been wanting here, and perhaps from its greater distance from the hills along the sand here is in a much more comminuted state. Geologically speaking, however, the whole of the fossils may belong to the same period of alluvial deposit—or, in other words, to an indefinitely distant epoch of the present system of quiescent operations in land and flood, whose gradual action has subsequently accumulated the superjacent beds of clay, abounding in minute fresh-water shells, extending for thousands of square miles—and again over them towards the delta of the Ganges, other more recent and extensive beds of blue clays, colored with vegetable debris and containing imbedded pearl and wood, by which they are identified with the existing soil of the Sunderbun forests. The mind is lost in contemplating the immense periods which such a deposit would demand at the hardly visible rate of present accumulation:—yet there are other causes of wonder in the several beds of coarse granitic angular gravel and nodular or pea iron ore which have been traversed by the auger before reaching the fluvial sand beneath. These may indicate the volcanic upheavement and subsequently gradual decay of granitic and ferruginous hills, pending the progressive deposit of the alluvium, concerning which, however, we can know nothing certain, and need not therefore lose ourselves in conjectures. In like manner it might be advanced that the whole of the clayey strata were deposited in fresh water as the saliferous sand and sandstone of upper India has been in salt water—and that the animals whose remains are now brought to light at so many points, were the inhabitants of the borders of a prodigious basin. In the upper beds of blue clay penetrated in digging tanks and canals, bones have occasionally been met with, but unfortunately none have been preserved. The occurrence of the remains of quadrupeds at one or two distant points of the region is sufficient to establish the conclusion that their existence has been coeval with the whole deposit; while the sharp, unworn angles of the fort bone prove, that the animal to which it belonged had lived and died in its immediate neighbourhood.

In the accompanying sketch I have attempted to delineate in full size, Colonel Macleod's fossil bone, which may be designated without hesitation one of the most precious rarities ever deposited in the Museum of the Asiatic Society.

VISITOR

C. Brownlow, Esq.

The proceedings of the last meeting were read and confirmed.

The following gentleman proposed at the last meeting, were duly elected ordinary members by ballot, viz.,

His Excellency Mons. Badier, Governor of Chandernagore.

Captain Carter—W. Jackson, Esq.—D. Pringle, Esq.—A. Grote, Esq.—Dr. Farnall—J. H. Crawford, Esq.—George Taylor, Esq.—J. W. Yule, Esq.—W. Hickey, Esq.—W. T. Fraser, Esq.—T. A. Pitkin, Esq.—R. S. Crawford, Esq.—Kenneth McKenzie, Esq.—T. H. Gardener, Esq.—C. Brownlow, Esq.—A. Harries, Esq.—A. C. Bidwell, Esq.—Dr. Drummond—W. Ainslie, Esq.—the Rev. James Charles—Charles Dearie, Esq.—W. W. Kettlewell, Esq.

The proposal of the Secretary, to elect Colonel Colvin an honorary Member of this society, which produced so much discussion at the last meeting, was again brought forward and the question being put to the vote

(only one member present, Mr. J. W. Masters, objecting) the original motion was carried.

HONORARY MEMBER.

Lieutenant-Colonel John Colvin.

The following gentleman were proposed—viz. Col. D. Macleod, (Engineers) proposed by the Secretary, seconded by C. K. Robinson.

M. M. Manuk, Esq., proposed by the Secretary, seconded by Dr. Wallich.

Major J. A. Moore, (Hyderabad) proposed by the President, seconded by Dr. Wallich.

J. M. Hill, Esq., (Tirhoot) proposed by John Allan, Esq., seconded by W. Storm, Esq.

D. Gibson, Esq., (Malta) proposed by W. Storm, Esq., seconded by John Allan, Esq.

Proposed by H. Walters, Esq., seconded by the Secretary.

J. P. Wise, and G. D. Glass, Esqrs. (Dacca)—James Grant, Esq., C. S.—T. Young, Esq., C. S.—J. W. Alexander, Esq., C. S.—Kazee Mahomed Alee, Principal Sudder Ameen, Tippera.

The President proceeded to business by reading a report of the Committee of Papers, which embraced a parcel connected with the subject of the re-electing members who had failed to pay up their arrears of subscription to the society.

Resolved—That no member who shall hereafter be struck off the list of the Society for the non-payment of arrears of subscription, shall be elected until such arrears of subscription are discharged.

The subject of the motions brought forward by the Revd. Mr. Boaz, at the meeting in February, and which had been reported on by the Committee of Papers last month, and ordered to lay on the table until this morning, was again brought forward.

Mr. Boaz animadverted at length on the style of this report, which he thought couched in terms uncalled for in reference to the nature of the proposition, and objected to such report, as conveying the sentiments of the society at large, and criticized the objections taken to his motion by the committee, and their remarks generally, in a style not very complimentary to the President and Members of the Committee.

Mr. Walters, following on the same side, thought the report an exceedingly ingenious document; and after some further remarks and one of the speakers having been called to order, the President drew attention to the tone of Mr. Boaz's criticism, considering it uncalled for towards gentlemen who had taken the trouble to draw out a report upon the subject.

After much discussion, Mr. Walters proposed an amendment to the 1st proposition, which will appear in the next month's proceedings.

The next point which engaged the attention of the meeting had reference to the award of gold and silver medals annually for the best samples of staple products.

It was accordingly proposed by H. Walters, Esq., seconded by Sir E. Ryan, that a committee be appointed for the arrangement of the details involved, and that the following gentlemen be appointed.—

G. A. Prinsep, Esq.—H. Walters, Esq.—and C. K. Robison, Esq.

The Secretary read a report on a former motion of W. Storm, Esq., on the practicability of improving the cattle and sheep of India, by importing foreign stocks.

Resolved—That the report be laid on the table for the consideration and suggestions of members.

From Mr J. W. Grant, a small specimen of the "Nurma or Chunders" cotton, from a plant of the second year's standing.

From C. R. Bell, a small sample of cotton and seed, as plucked from the plant in the original wild state, growing on the island of Orestonga (one of the South Sea islands) by the 1st Lieut. of H. M.'s Brig Zebra, who presented it to Captain Symers of the Caledonia.

From Mr. R. Homfray, two apricots from his garden at Barripore.

From the same, a dried specimen of what he terms the "Cappilaire" plant.

From the Hon'ble Mr. Melville, a box of seed of the Teak Tree for distribution.

From Major Moore, of Hyderabad, a tin box containing samples of the potatoes grown there, presented by Sir E. Ryan.

From Colonel Beatson, a sample of coffee grown in his garden, and "a complete treatise on the culture of tobacco."

From Mr. R. Lowther, two pint bottles of Sandoway tobacco seed, produced in his garden at Allahabad for distribution.

From the Secretary 10 quart bottles of tobacco seed, part of the produce, of a very small supply sent round in a letter to Dr. Wallich, by Dr. Wight of Madras, and grown in Mr. Bell's Garden.

Dr. Wight does not know the name of this tobacco; but describes it, as very superior. It was sown by Mr. B. when presented to him by Dr. Wallich in October last, and the plants are still in full blossom, averaging four feet in height. The quantity of seed now presented to the society, is not above one-fourth of what they may be expected, when the pods have all ripened. This affords an opportunity to parties to provide themselves amply with fresh tobacco seed of a superior kind.

A plant in full bearing was submitted for the inspection of members.

From Mr. J. J. Darwell, of Boston, dated 19th November, 1836, in accordance with a request from the Secretary, encloses bill of lading for a barrel and a box of American Maize in husk, the first containing the large "Canada kind," the latter containing the "common yellow" kind.

Mr. Darwell promises to send a further supply of two more varieties by the next opportunity and to follow these by regular annual shipments, until this superior corn has taken root in India.

From Mr. D. W. H. Speed.

2 picked samples of maize from Jainpoor seed.

2 Ditto Red Dese, Ditto.

2 Ditto yellow ditto, ditto, all grown at his garden at Allipore.

Memo.—Members and others interested in the progress of this society, are solicited to favour the Secretary with samples of the different products of India, which will be carefully preserved.

From Mr. Vaupell, Secretary to the Bombay Society, dated 28th February, acknowledging the receipt of Mr. Bell's letter of the 22d January, and of the cotton seed therein referred to.

Stating that the Pernambuco cotton seed had proved a failure, but that a plantation of the Egyptian at Ahmednuggur is flourishing.

Forwards a pamphlet issued by the sub Committee, in reference to furthering the objects of the Committee of Agriculture and Trade, recently formed as a distinct Branch of the Royal Asiatic Society of Great Britain.

Mentions his retirement from the office of Secretary to the Bombay Society.

From Capt. R. Jenkins, dated Assam, 12th March, requesting a supply of the New Holland brown corn, and recommending that various experiments be made with the indigenous cottons, which are in his opinion susceptible of very great improvement.

From Mr. C. Lyall, dated 30th March, enclosing extract of a letter to the address of Messrs. Lyall, Matheson and Co., from Mr. A. H. Palmer, of New York, dated 27th October 1836, respecting the manufacture of oil from cotton seed, which had been turned to good account in America, and had attracted the notice of the Pasha of Egypt, who had sent an order to the states to have some oil made and forwarded to his dominions.

From Mr. C. P. Hallowsay, of Singapore, dated 15th February, forwarding a specimen of Pernambuco cotton cultivated in his grounds in that Island.

From Mr. Secretary W. H. Macnaghten, dated 20th February, forwarding by desire of the Governor-General in Council, a paper drawn up by Dr. A. Campbell, on the Agriculture of Nepal.

Memo. This paper has been forwarded to the Press for publication, by directions from the Committee of papers.

* Produced somewhere in the Middle States of the Union.

† Cultivated in the vicinity of Boston.

‡ Not Pernambuco but Peruvian, vide Secretary's letter of 12th August, 1836.

From R. Lowther, Esq., dated 14th March, requesting a further supply of cotton seed to meet fresh applications. Intimates his appointment as Commissioner of Revenue at Allahabad, and offers a continuation of his assistance.

Memo. The Secretary had despatched a supply of cotton seed accordingly.

From Mr. W. Lillie, Secretary to the Madras Society, dated 9th March, acknowledging the receipt of cotton seed forwarded by the Secretary on the "Thetis." Advises having purchased Capt. Dalrymple's Plough for this Society.

States that he had received some potatoes grown at Vellore equal to any reared above the ghats, and encloses a paper on the mode of cultivating them, by Capt. Awdry. Returns thanks for the Patna vegetable seeds furnished through this Society, by Mr. Duhon, which had proved very bad.

From Dr. Davenport, dated Comillah, 23rd March, intimating the formation of a Branch Agricultural Society at that station, and requesting a supply of seeds, &c.

From Mr. H. H. Mathews, of Dearie, dated 26th March, received through Mr. Secretary Pitts, enclosing a list of replies (with reference to the District of Shahabad,) to the queries contained in the Society's circular of the 8th February last.

From Rajah Kalikrishna, dated 25th March, proffering his services as the medium of communication between this Society, and the Committee of agriculture and trade in Great Britain.

From Lieut. C. Brown, dated Jubbulpore 9th March, in reply to the Secretary's letter of the 24th February. He states that a quantity of Otaheite sugar-cane was forwarded in December last, to the Collector of Ahmednugur on account of the Bombay Government, and in reply to the solicitation of the Secretary, in behalf of this Society, to have a supply for the Calcutta Nursery, expresses his willingness to meet the request, in the ensuing season.

From Mr. F. Campbell, of Midnapore, acknowledging the receipt of cotton and tobacco seed and asking for sugar-cane.

From Mr. R. J. Homfray, dated Burripor, 6th March, furnishing a short account of the wild silk worm, or "Tusuck Pokah."

From the Hon'ble Mr. Melville, suggesting (in reference to the teak seed presented) that the offer of a medal be made to the person who may plant the greatest number of trees in one year. Alludes to the discovery by Dr. Burt of a fine and permanent yellow dye from the teak tree leaf.

From Dr. Burt, dated 9th April, enclosing copy of a communication to the Secretary to the Asiatic Society, on further experiments made on the dyeing properties of the teak leaf.

From H. Walters, Esq., dated 10th April, presenting on the part of Lieut. Rainer, junior assistant in Arracan, two rice husking machines, one made of bamboo basket-work, the other of wood, together with a buffaloe plough, also specimens of Arracan black and red rice.

From J. R. Colvin, Esq., dated 20th and 21st March, forwarding the 2nd last part of Dr. McClelland's Report in Assam, with coloured sketches.

Memo. These have since passed through the Committee of papers and are now in the Press.

From Joseph Wallis, Esq., dated 11th April, reporting upon two specimens of cotton, presented by Mr. Crane at the last meeting, grown at Singapore from seed originally Pernambuco and Bourbon.

The Pernambuco kind is described by Mr. Wallis, as "decidedly of most inferior quality, being coarse, harsh, short in staple and very weak."

Of the Bourbon, Mr. Wallis speaks more favourably. "It is fine and silky, and of pretty good strength of staple; yet not quite so strong, as it ought to be, its complexion is good also." Mr. Wallis values this cotton, with reference to the latest advices from Liverpool, at about 9d. per lb. The seed is represented to be smaller than usual in this description of cotton, but does not consider this as an unvariable criterion, in contrasting the quality of the wool, and very appositely asks, "how it is that we some times find the fibre and other fruits improve in either the flavour or the volume of pulpy and fibrous matter, when the seed itself becomes much diminished under improved cultivation."

From the Secretary, presenting some Guinea grass seed and brown corn, also several sorts of peas and beans all from Cape seed, and gleaned after having plentifully supplied the table.

Memo. It is probable that in a short time, the Society may render itself independent of foreign aid, by raising in its Nursery supplies of all sorts of garden seeds, at one third the expense at which they are now imported.

From Capt. Stacy, dated Allyghur 2nd March, with a sample of Pernambuco cotton.

From Dr. Helfer to Sir E. Ryan, dated Moulmein 1st March, giving a very favourable report in the experiments now making by Mr. Bell in Pernambuco cotton, and requesting to be supplied with good tobacco seed, which Dr. Helfer thinks will answer admirably.

From W. Blundell, Esq., to Sir E. Ryan, dated 28th February, stating that the American cotton seed sent from the Society had failed.

Memo. All the same seed tried here has vegetated most freely. Dr. Helfer has discovered that a caterpillar abounds in the cashoonut trees, which yields a good strong description of silk.

From Dr. Helfer to Dr. Wallich, soliciting a supply of tobacco seed.

The thanks of the Society were ordered for the above contributions and communications.

[Harkara, April 15.

The following resolutions, passed at a General Meeting, on Wednesday the 12th April 1837, were not inserted in the general notice of proceedings, as the drafts required revision.

Premiums for Treatises on Agriculture and Horticulture.

Proposed by Mr. Walters (as an amendment to the motion brought forward by the Revd. Mr. Dox in February last,) seconded by Mr. Robinson, and Resolved—1st. That a premium of two thousand rupees be offered for the best work on Indian Agriculture in all its branches, founded on experience in the country, to be presented to the Society on or before the 1st May 1840.

Resolved—2nd. That a premium of one thousand rupees be offered for the best work on the Horticulture of Bengal, to be presented to the Society on or before the 1st of May 1840.

Resolved—3d. That the premium of one thousand rupees be offered for the best work on the Horticulture of the Western Provinces, to be presented to the Society on or before the 1st of May 1840.

Resolved—4th. That the Society reserve to itself the right of refusing to grant any of the above premiums, if the works on the above subject are not such as it approves.

Resolved—5th. That the Secretary do invest in Government Securities the sum of four thousand rupees for the payment of the above premiums.

Resolved—6th. That the authors who may receive any of the above premiums, shall, within six months after the receipt thereof publish the treatises to which such premiums shall have been awarded, or the Society shall have the option of publishing, in case the Authors shall neglect to do so within the time above prescribed.

Resolved 7th. That the Secretary do advertise in all the public journals four times in each year the proposed premiums.

Gold and Silver Medals to be awarded annually for the best samples of Staple products.

Proposed by Mr. Walters, seconded by Sir E. Ryan, and

Resolved—That Gold and Silver Medals be awarded annually to be producers of the best samples of the Staple Products of British India, under such conditions and arrangements as may be determined on by a Committee appointed for that purpose.

Notice of Motion to be given on all questions relating to Finance.

Propositions submitted by the Committee of Papers and carried nem con.

Resolved—1st. That notice of motion be given on all questions relating to Finance, at a General Meeting preceding that on which the subject is to be disposed of, in order that members who take an interest in the question, may have an opportunity of signifying their assent or objection either verbally or in writing, and that all such notices be recorded in the journals along with the other proceedings.

Resolved 2nd. That motion of which previous notice has been given, take precedence of all others.

Resolved—3rd. That the same rules are applicable to all motion involving points of importance, and that no resolution be passed at the same time that it is brought forward, unless the case be urgent.

Resolved 4th. That the above resolutions be added to the Standing Rules of the Society.

Rules of the Society to be revised.

Resolved, that the Rules of the Society be revised by the Committee of Papers, and brought forward, in an amended form, at the next General Meeting to be confirmed.

MEETING OF THE MEDICAL AND PHYSICAL SOCIETY.

Proceedings of a Meeting of the Medical and Physical Society of Calcutta, held at the Asiatic Society's apartments, on the 1st of April, 1837

A letter was read from A. Gilmore, Esq., Assistant Garrison Surgeon, requesting that his name might be withdrawn from the Society.

The following communications were then read and discussed.

Mr. Downes's case of injury of the Knee-joint.

Mr. Young's account of the employment of Veratrum, Intestinal Worms and Hospital Gangrene.

Mr. Downes's patient was a young man, who fell from a peepul tree, a height of about 15 yards. In his descent he struck his knee so violently, that a piece of wood penetrated the joint and at the same time his chest and abdomen were seriously injured. Upon examination an extensive wound of an irregular ragged appearance presented itself upon the front of the knee, communicating with the interior of the capsular ligament; the patella was found to be fractured, and a portion of the bone projecting through the wound. The joint was frightfully swollen, and the patient appeared to be in a state of collapse. The wound was dressed, the leg and thigh supported by a splint and placed in as easy position. At the first, the injuries of the thorax and abdomen threatened to be serious, but active treatment soon removed all troublesome symptoms from these parts. Profuse suppuration in the joint ensued and pus together with large quantities of synovial matter were discharged by the wound subsequently an abscess formed in the upper part of the knee, and this was opened and discharged pus and syphilis. The inflammation was subdued by appropriate remedies, and after it had somewhat subsided, Mr. Downes approximated the broken ends of the bone by the application of broad straps of adhesive plaster, supported by roller; after a time slight motion was employed and the patient, when Mr. Downes left him, bid fair to possess a very useful joint. The paper was accompanied by a drawing of the parts. The author remarks upon the interesting nature of the case as shewing the extent to which in important joint like the knee may be injured and yet recover.

Mr. Young states, that he has received some Veratrum from London and that he has made use of it in 3 cases of the dolorous and 2 anomalous cases of nervous pains in the arm. The employment of the drug was attended by the most marked success fully equal to the accounts stated by Mr. Turnbull in his work. It appears to Mr. Young, that local pains if not always relieved always may be removed by rubbing the part affected with an ointment composed of lard one oz. Veratrum 15 grains.

Mr. Young's second communication was a case of death, produced by inflammation of the Heum caused by an immense collection of large worms, (Lumbrici,) some 30 or 40 in number, which were contained in the intestine period. Mr. Young believes this man's life might have been saved, if the nature of the disease had been known during life, and turpentine employed to remove the worms.

The reports upon Hospital Gangrene contained an account of the progress and destructive character of that disease in the 7th and 8th Regiments of Nizam's Infantry, where it appears to have been raging in February, 1835. None of the cases had a fatal termination, though many of the ulcers were of a horrible extent. Every boil, burn or scratch, became tainted during the continuance of the disease. The persons chiefly attacked were Hindoos of the most sordid habits who to save their allowance, subsisted entirely upon parched gram, and watery vegetables, without any admixture of animal food. Only two Mahometans suffered, and the exemption of this class is attributed to the more nourishing system of diet which they indulge in. The treatment consisted chiefly in improving and supporting the constitution of the patients by bark, wine, &c., and the sores were dressed with ointments composed chiefly of turpentine, Myrrh, opium, cinchona and zinc, and with lotions of myrrh, opium and sulphur of copper, afterwards when the sloughs came away, they were dressed with sticking plaster and bandages.

Mr. O'Shaughnessy then submitted to the Society some observations upon the construction of an extensive Galvanic Battery, which he is about to manufacture. He stated, that

It is proposed to construct at the Medical College in Calcutta, a Galvanic Battery of 1000 cups on Mullin's principle, for the purpose of exhibiting the extraordinary experiments recently described by Mr. Crove and others, and for carrying on original researches in Electro-magnetism and Galvanism.

The leading object of the proposal is to ascertain the extent of the diurnal variations in Electro-Galvanic intensity, so remarkable in Mr. Crove's experiments, to trace if possible, the effect of our tropical position on the amount of their intensity and to compare its variations with the diurnal barometric changes.

He has calculated that a sum of 2,000 rupees will enable him to construct the apparatus required, but as he cannot have recourse to the Government to do this, in connection with the Medical College, the expense of an experimental investigation, he proposes to collect the sum required by a subscription. As a return to the subscribers he undertakes on the completion of the apparatus, to give a course of lectures at the Medical College on Voltaic Electricity and Electro-magnetism, but he wishes it to be distinctly understood, that the battery is to be considered the property of the Medical College.

The Professor proceeded to exhibit to the Meeting the effect of a small Battery, which he had constructed up in this principle. It contained only 12 cups, but its action was extremely powerful. It decomposed water with astonishing rapidity, and then exploded the resulting mixed gases. Platinum and iron wires were instantly melted at its poles. Muriatic acid was readily resolved into its elements, so that the liberated Chlorine in a short time bleached a solution of sulphate of Indigo, with which had been previously mixed, and decomposed a solution of iodine of Potassium, enabling the fluid to turn to color a solution of starch, and performed some other very interesting experiments connected with the Magnetic action of the apparatus.

Upon witnessing the effects of the Battery a discussion arose amongst the Members, with regard to the propriety of contributing a portion of the Society's funds towards the promotion of such an important scientific object, as that proposed by Dr. O'Shaughnessy.

The state of the Treasury has been enquired into, and was found that the funds never before were in such flourishing condition, there was a balance of between five and six thousand rupees in the Union Bank, nearly the whole of last year's subscription being still due and it was stated, that the present yearly receipts exceeded the estimated outlay by upwards of a thousand rupees.

It was then proposed by Mr. Egerton, seconded by Dr. Corbyn, that the Society should head Dr. O'Shaughnessy's subscription by a donation of five hundred rupees, as it was the undoubted province of the Society to promote scientific enquiries amongst other objects of its constitution, and no more fitting or legitimate occasion for so doing than the present one could offer itself to their notice, since the scheme contemplated by Dr. O'Shaughnessy, embraced the consideration of some of the most important questions in Physical Science.

This was unanimously agreed to by the Meeting.

BIENGL MEDICAL RETIRING FUND.

A Quarterly General Meeting of Subscribers to the Bengal Medical Retiring Fund, was held on Monday the 10th Instant. On Mr Surgeon James Ranken being called to the Chair, the following Report was read:

"At the last Quarterly Meeting the Committee of Management had the pleasure to announce that three annuities offered, and that the funds were such as to enable them to offer two others in addition and also, that one of the former had been accepted by Mr. Superintendent Surgeon Walter Arkell Venour. At the period fixed for opening the letters in reply to the offer of the above mentioned three annuities, only eight besides that of Mr Venour had arrived, and the writers all declined accepting them for the present year. Upon this the Committee were enabled to offer one to Mr. Surgeon Neil Maxwell, who thereupon paid up the sum stipulated in the Fund table, and retired from the service.

"Thus three annuities were still remaining at the disposal of the Fund, and to prevent loss of time, every Subscriber who had been 17 years in the service was written to, to offer him the Annuity in case it should come to his turn; and it was requested that the replies be sent so as to reach the Committee on, or before the present date.

"There have been eight admissions to the Fund since the last Meeting viz Surgeon James Ronald, and Assistant Surgeons Henry Sill, John Colpoys Smith, William M Buchanan, J. H. W. Waugh, Frederick Lunnell, Edward W. Larnibutt and John McCosh. Of these Messrs. Lunnell and Larnibutt returned from Luugh, and Mr McCosh was absent on sick leave and did not return until after the period for joining the Fund had expired, but he was entitled to admission under Article III of the Fund Deed. And the other five gentlemen were enabled to offer such reasons for their not having joined before, as to satisfy the Committee of the propriety of admitting them.

"Mr. Assistant-Surgeon Thomas Sibbald has stated that he does not consider himself a Subscriber to the Fund, although he had previously requested his name to be enrolled on the List of Subscribers, and had actually given his vote on the election of the Secretary: besides which, the Committee have reason to think a clause rendering it compulsory for him to join the Fund, may have been inserted in his Covenant. Under these circumstances the Committee have been forced to submit the correspondence for the consideration of the Right Honourable the Governor-General in Council, and to report his Lordship's decision on the case.

A special Meeting of Subscribers, in accordance with Article 15 of the Fund Deed, was held on Saturday the 4th of February last, to elect a manager in the room of Mr. Assistant Surgeon M. J. Bramley deceased; when Mr. Assistant Surgeon E. W. W. Raleigh was duly elected.

"As the proposition by Messrs. Raleigh and Hope on the question of altering the Articles of the Fund Deed, which limit the time of retirement upon the Annuity to 17 years, to the shorter time which may be fixed by the Hon'ble Court of Directors as the period of service; and the proposition of the Medical Officers of the Sirhind Division, to alter Article 32 of the Deed, relating to the terms upon which the Annuity is granted to the Members of the Medical Board, or before the Subscribers, it is unnecessary to do more than merely refer to them here. The votes of Subscribers are daily arriving and the result will be daily notified in the usual manner.

"Another question referred to the Subscribers is the payment of arrears of salary of the last Secretary.

"At the request of Mr. Assistant, Surgeon G. N. Cheek, documents have been furnished him, relating to his exclusion from the Fund, in order to enable him to appeal his case to the Hon. Court of Directors.

"In consequence of the great difficulty they have experienced in procuring accurate accounts of their Funds, a request has been made to the Government by the Committee, that Pay-masters shall remit the amount of their collections in a monthly bill in favor of the Secretary, who will endorse it over to the Sub-Treasurer, and accompany each such remittance with a descriptive roll of the Officers paying the amount, time of payment, and for what month paid. This request has been acceded to, and a Treasury note for the aggregate of the sums so received, will be issued by the Sub-Treasurer in favor of the Committee of Management, bearing interest at 5 per cent. per annum from the 1st of the month, in which the subscriptions were received. By this plan, which will come into operation on the 1st May next, the Committee will be enabled to ascertain at any time the amount of their Funds, and to call upon any Subscriber who allows his subscription to fall in arrears, for payment.

"The accounts of receipts during the Quarter have not yet been rendered, the expenditure has been as follows :

Advertising.....	4 8 0
Office Establishment and Salary of Secretary,	750 0 0
Refund to Mrs. Burnard of the amount of subscription of the late Surgeon R. N. Burnard, (this Officer having died before the Fund came into operation,).....	443 1 10

Total Company's Rs. 1,198 3 9

The total Funds in the hands of the Sub-Treasurer are as follows :

Appropriated Funds Sa. Rs. 86,340 or Co.'s Rs. 92,096.

Unappropriated Do. Sa. Rs. 75,503-4-3—or do. 80,536-13-0.

Proposed by Dr. Bryce, seconded by Dr. Innis, and carried unanimously, "that the Report now read, be confirmed and adopted."

Proposed by Dr. A. R. Jackson, seconded by Dr. D. Stewart, and carried unanimously, "that the thanks of this Meeting be given to the Chairman."

MADRAS CHAMBER OF COMMERCE—TRANSIT AND TOWN DUTIES.

The Government of Bombay, the resources of which have been largely benefited by commerce, is unable from the humiliating position in which it is placed with regard to the management of its own funds, to contribute in an efficient manner towards such public improvement as would relieve that commerce from the serious obstructions and inconveniences which now stand in its way. Works of great public utility, and those in the immediate vicinity of the seat of Government, have to be carried through in part, and in some instances entirely, by private subscriptions. A few familiar instances will serve to show how the hands of Government are fettered in this respect from doing good, and display, in a striking point of view, the niggard policy, which placed the administration of our affairs under the supervision of the Supreme Council, not a single member of which is qualified from personal knowledge, to legislate disinterestedly for the advantage of the subordinate presidencies. In the first place we have the bridge at Thanaah for the purpose of connecting the Islands of Bombay and Salsette with the mainland of India. This public work, the expense of which would be a mere trifle to the Government treasury, must be undertaken at the cost, principally—perhaps for aught yet known, entirely, of private individuals. The commodities which would be carried along such a bridge would pay a revenue to Government, and for the improvement of that revenue the expenditure of a sum, insignificant in the extreme when the benefits to be attained are taken into consideration, is forbidden by the anomalous laws which at present regulate the destinies of India. The Apollo Pier next comes under the review. The increasing importations of cotton and wool have made it necessary that more extended accommodations should be provided for their being landed. One would think that out of the enhanced duties levied upon these commodities in consequence, a small sum—for a large one would certainly not be required, might be spared for enlarging the Pier at which the boats from all parts of the Coast discharge their cargoes; but no; Government is compelled in its necessity to accept, in the most gracious manner possible, the assistance of its subjects, (who have contributed largely to the object,) and the Apollo Pier will be widened at the joint expense of Government and private traders. We may advert also to the manner in which the alterations at the Church and Bazar Gates, so essential to the public convenience, must be carried on. Government will not open its coffers to meet all the expenses which are to be incurred, on this head, but generously affords, as in the above instances, the people of the Presidency an opportunity of maintaining their maintenance by contributing towards the completion of these improvements. But the evils of that system, which has so completely placed the Governments of Bombay and Madras in leading strings, do not end in the enumeration of instances such as the above,—they extend over the whole of India, and are experienced in every branch of the public service. The pressure of taxation is unequal, and the very reasons which ought to operate against the continuance of oppressive imposts are brought forward in their defence; provisions are cheap in the Bengal provinces owing to the inequality of taxation; and public burdens are, generally speaking, more vexatious both in themselves and in the modes of their collection in the minor presidencies, than in that which has benefited so much from Mr. Macaulay's legislative wisdom. The scales of pay and allowances in the three armies of India are far from being uniform and in this respect more resemble the forces of three distinct powers than the collective military strength of one great empire. More we might say, but we should have so much to fill with that time and space would fail us for the purpose.

We refer our readers to a copy of the resolutions passed at a meeting of the Chamber of Commerce on Thursday last. From these they will perceive that that body is determined to agitate the matter of the Transit and Town duties, and as a first step have resolved to petition the Governor-General in Council on the subject. Let us advise the whole body of the people strenuously to support them in this appeal to the supreme power. We do not think that such a petition, so supported, could possibly be heard in vain; but should such be the case, let the appeal be made to higher authority—to authority before which even Lord Auckland in the plenitude of his power must bow. Let the indignation of both Western and Eastern India be proclaimed throughout the British Empire, and redress will speedily be obtained. Bombay Gazette, March 25.

At a Special General Meeting of the Chamber of Commerce, held on Thursday the 23d instant, the following resolutions were severally proposed and passed:

1st.—Resolved, that a petition to the Right Hon'ble the Governor-General of India in Council be prepared, setting forth the impediments to the Commerce of Bombay from the vexatious and oppressive Transit and Town Duties now levied, and urging the policy and expediency of immediately abolishing them in this presidency, and on the same terms as has already been done in Bengal and Agra.

2d.—Resolved, that as the trade throughout the interior of this presidency is entirely dependent on roads, the abolition of the Transit and Town Duties on this side of India is not likely to produce all the benefit which ought to result from such a measure, owing to the want of roads in many places where they are required, and the wretched and unserviceable condition of those which now exist.

That although the Bombay Government has shewn the great interest it takes in improving the internal communication of the presidency by introducing a department for this particular duty, yet the limit placed on the amount this Government can sanction, forms an insurmountable obstacle to the introduction of any extensive measures for the public advantage, and the reference it is perpetually called upon to make to the Supreme Government, retard improvement and prevent the development of the resources of the country so rapidly as would otherwise be the case.

3d. Resolved, therefore, that the Supreme Government be petitioned to set apart annually an adequate sum from the revenues for improving the internal communication throughout this presidency.

4th.—Resolved, that the Managing Committee of the Chamber be authorized to frame the petition, and when prepared, to submit the same for the approval and signatures of the members, and that an advertisement be published in the newspapers, soliciting the support and signatures of all who feel interested in the subject.

5th.—Resolved, that the foregoing resolutions be published in the Bombay newspapers.

W. McCALLUM, Officiating Secy.

BOMBAY CHAMBER OF COMMERCE.

The first half yearly Report of the Madras Chamber of Commerce will be found in another page. It is a very interesting document and bears abundant evidence of the value of such an institution not to the Mercantile Community only but to the public in general. Nor do we believe that the advantages of the Chamber are confined even to the governed, for we look upon the exertions of a Society, constituted as that is, of perhaps still greater benefit to the authorities, by pointing out to them some of the more glaring evils of the Government, and offering the honest advice of parties whose interests, notwithstanding the ancient prejudice, to the contrary, are and must be indissolubly connected with their own.

If we have any fault to find with the half yearly report it is at finding it so short, serving rather as an index to the proceedings of the Chamber of Commerce than an account of what they have accomplished. It would be impossible perhaps to enter into further particulars without making a half yearly report inconveniently long; and on this account we cannot help regretting that they should have determined on giving an account of their stewardship every six months instead of every quarter. But perhaps the laws of the Chamber are not like those of the Medes and Persians; in which case we may yet hope for a Quarterly Report.

Nearly all the questions in the Report have been frequently discussed in our own columns and in those of our contemporaries; it will be unnecessary therefore to notice them generally; but we cannot help directing particular attention to the mails alluded to under the Head Post Office arrangements. The charge of 4 Annas on Ship letters is very properly remonstrated against; but even this tax is not so bad as the practice of charging double postage, and so in proportion, on letters exceeding 3 rupees. We can easily understand the reason of taxing letters by weight when they have to be taken on men's shoulders; but there certainly ought to be no restriction of that sort on ship-letters; or, at all events, the limit should be extended to one ounce, the weight at which any single letter may be sent through the Post Office at home bearing single postage. The hardship of this regulation respecting the weight of ship-letters is the more felt by people in England frequently write on thick fool-cap which generally exceeds the weight of 3 rupees a sheet. We have often received half a dozen single English ship-letters at a time all bearing double postage in Madras.

We observe that the Chamber have determined on taking a part of the Old Court House which is now undergoing a thorough repair. Attention is made also of a Resolution by which parties desiring to be Visiting Members may become so on the introduction of a Member of the Committee—but it is not said on what terms they are to be admitted. We would again urge upon the Chamber to take up the subject which we have once or twice alluded to, of converting the centre room of the Court House into a public room—keeping their own Chamber to themselves. We are persuaded that this matter only remains to be taken in hand by one or two of the Committee of the Chamber of Commerce to be carried into immediate effect. Twenty rupees per among the Voting Members resident in Madras; and the rupees from Non-Residents would, we should imagine, raise a sum enough for all the purposes required.

REPORT OF THE COMMITTEE OF THE CHAMBER OF COMMERCE

At the First Quarterly Meeting of the Chamber of Commerce the proceedings of the Committee were submitted and approved. It now appears to them better both for the sake of record and for the information of the Chamber that their proceedings from the commencement should be condensed into a Report, and that hereafter a similar report should be submitted half yearly.

OPENING OF THE COMMITTEE'S PROCEEDINGS.—COMMUNICATION WITH GOVERNMENT, AND WITH MERCHANTILE BODIES CONNECTED WITH INDIAN TRADE.

The first care of the Committee, after they had entered upon their Office, was to solicit for the objects of the Institution the countenance and support of the Madras Government with permission to correspond with the public departments for the purpose of obtaining such information as might be necessary to facilitate the Committee's inquiries. The approbation and concurrence of the Right Honorable the Governor in Council in the objects of the Chamber was readily expressed and a promise given that every information that could be obtained from Government or their Officers, should be afforded to the Committee. Letters were at the same time addressed to the East India and China Association in London, and to the Chamber of Commerce in Bengal. From the former of course no reply has yet been received. With the latter the Committee have been in frequent communication on subjects of mutual interest to the two Presidencies. From the Bombay Chamber of Commerce a communication was subsequently received, in which occasion was taken to proffer the assistance and co-operation of that Chamber, on all subjects on which it could be useful, and the office was readily accepted and reciprocated.

INDIA SUGAR BILL.

Communications having thus been opened with the principle bodies connected with Indian Trade, and the countenance of Government having been obtained, the first general question that occupied your Committee's attention was the New India Sugar Bill; which, although it had not at that time been officially promulgated in this Country, was known to have passed the two Houses of Parliament. It was understood that the benefits of that measure had been withheld from the Presidencies of Madras and Bombay, under the impression that those two Presidencies were almost entirely dependent on Foreign sugar for their Home Consumption. Under the conviction that this impression was erroneous, the Committee applied for and were obligingly furnished with a statement of the quantity of Sugar imported into Madras during the official years 1835-36 from which it appeared, that of 238 tons imported 222 were the produce of Bengal, a little more than one ton imported from England, and only 15 tons of which a large portion was sugar-candy imported from Foreign Settlements. Having thus practically satisfied themselves that the supposed grounds for the exclusion of Madras from the benefits of the measure were mistaken, the Committee were prepared, when the bill was promulgated, to submit to the Chamber, for their adoption to the House of Commons, praying for a participation in the advantages of the bill; which Petition was adopted and signed by all the Members of the Chamber and forwarded to the East India and China Association to be presented in the manner that might seem most expedient to them. A copy was also transmitted through the Madras Government to the Court of Directors with the favorable recommendation of the Right Honorable the Governor in Council. In forwarding the original Petition to the East India Association, the Committee took occasion to notice to that body the fact, that this Presidency was the only one that had received no relief from the burthen of Transit Duties (Bombay having been partially relieved by their abolition in some district) and that this circumstance arose solely from the impossibility of raising an equal amount of Revenue from other sources of taxation, so the surest method of enlarging the sources of Revenue was to raise the prosperity of the people by encouraging the cultivation of valuable productions of the soil by which it was intended to be inferred that if the prayer of the Petition were granted the double object would be attained of relieving the petitioners from an invidious exclusion from privileges to which they had an equal claim with the Merchants in Bengal and of furnishing the means of relieving the Commerce of Madras from the still more injurious burthen of Transit Duties. If this fact is sufficiently urged, as no doubt it will be, the Committee are sanguine that backed by the considerations noticed in the Petition by the support that it has received from Madras Government and will doubtless receive from the Court of Directors as well as by the obvious justice of the case the prayer will eventually be conceded.

BULLION OFFICE.

The next question to which your Committee's attention was directed was the Establishment at Madras by Government in the absence of a Mint, of an Office for the purchase of bullion, a subject on which it will be remembered the Mercantile community of this Presidency addressed the Government before the institution of the Chamber but without success. The grounds on which the Supreme Government had declined acceding to the former request of the Merchants which were not made known at the time, were communicated to your Committee for their information and replied to by them. It will not be necessary that they should detain you by detailing the arguments brought forward on either side since they have the satisfaction of being able to state that they have been informed (in a letter from Government dated 25th March) that "the Supreme Government have sanctioned the establishment of a depot at Madras for the purchase of bullion at the ordinary mint rate, that is, with a seigniorage of 2 per cent."

OPUM.

At an early period after the formation of the Chamber, your Committee felt themselves called upon to resume the consideration of the exclusion of Madras from the benefits of the Opium Trade, and a letter on the subject was addressed to Government. The arguments on which that conclusion and the refusal of the Supreme Government to accede to the former application of the Mercantile Community rested. The admission that the only reason for allowing Bombay to share in the Trade was the impossibility of preventing the practice of smuggling the Drug in that Presidency and the necessity of providing by means of a Deputy upon Pa-sea for the direct route to Bombay "an equivalent for the charges of the circuitous and more dangerous routes by which the article was before" (under the smuggling system) "conveyed for export," the implied admission that the object sought was to obtain for the Revenues of Bengal the sole benefit of the Trade—the certainty that the withdrawal of the restriction would lead to an increase of the Revenues of Madras thereby compensating any possible diminution of the Revenues of Bengal. The obvious impropriety of placing as it were a premium upon smuggling by making that the ground of extending to Bombay privileges not allowed to Madras the fallacy of the opinion that the local situation of this Port was a natural impediment to its profiting by the export of opium manufactured in the Northern Provinces and the propriety at any rate of leaving this matter to be decided by experience—all these points were briefly reviewed; and finally the rights which the merchants of Madras placed under a common government with the rest of India had to look to that Government for an equal share of support and encouragement with the other Provinces, was strongly but respectfully urged. The Committee have received a reply to their communication conveying, they regret to say, an unfavorable decision on the part of the Supreme Government. The following extract will inform you of the grounds on which that decision has been come to. "His Lordship, in Council adheres to the opinion that it would be extremely injudicious and very injurious to the Revenue at present derived by the Government of India from opium, to allow of any measures calculated to extend the production of the drug on the continent of India and to create further competition in the markets of China." That the arguments with which the Committee respectfully urged their just request are not met by the above grounds of refusal must be sufficiently apparent to the Chamber—and it now remains for them to decide upon the course most fitting to be adopted for the attainment of the object sought for in vain, by the application to the Supreme Government. A strong and energetic remonstrance addressed to the Court of Directors through the Madras Government, in which the arguments that have already been used in favor of the removal of the restrictions upon the Trade in opium should be repeated, and any arguments that might occur should be respectfully urged, will probably suggest itself as the most fitting and effectual course that under present circumstances can be adopted. The Committee cannot but believe that such an appeal having for its object the removal of restrictions operating injuriously upon the Commercial prosperity of Madras and compromising the independence of this Presidency will receive the strong support of the Madras Government, and it may well be hoped that the partial considerations upon which the Government of India have acted will not meet with the concurrence of the Home Authorities when placed in contrast with the arguments which will be brought forward in favor of the concession they have refused.

TRANSIT DUTIES.

To enable them to adopt some definite course in the important question of the Transit Duties, the Committee applied to Government to be furnished with statements showing the past collections of these duties and other information which was essentially required before they could come to any conclusion or offer any suggestions that they could hope would be effectual on the subject. It was not found convenient to furnish these statements, but the Chamber will learn with satisfaction that the Board of Revenue are engaged in enquiries having the same tendency as those on which it was the intention of the Committee to enter, and that that board have expressed their intention to communicate with the Committee as soon as they have sufficiently considered the subject.

WAREHOUSING ACT.

Shortly after the publication of the Act authorizing the Governments of the three Presidencies to declare any Port within their Territories a Warehousing Port, the Committee requested to be informed of the intentions of the Madras Government in respect to the Establishment of the system at this Port, and they have received the satisfactory assurance that the Government have authorized the introduction of the system at Madras and that the Board of Revenue are now making the preliminary arrangements to bring it into operation. The Committee were obligingly furnished with a copy of the Act by the Collector of Sea Customs and their opinion was asked and given upon certain subsidiary Rules proposed for adoption on the final introduction of the system. Subsequently, however, they became informed that the construction placed upon the Act by the Collector of Sea Customs was such as to limit its operation in a manner that would render it almost if not quite nugatory. By the 10th Clause it is provided as follows— "and it is hereby enacted that upon the re-exportation by Sea of goods imported and Warehoused under Bond for the duty, as provided in this Act, within the period during which such goods are by this Act permitted to continue in warehouse and upon payment of all reserved duty which may be due on account of such goods, and of any charges or penalties that may have been incurred on account of the goods, the Bond executed at the time of lodging the goods in Warehouse shall be deemed to have been discharged and be cancelled accordingly." It was understood that the construction put upon the above Clause by the Collector of Sea Customs was to the effect that the full benefits of a free Bonding system, which exempt from the payment either of Import or Export Duty, all goods imported on Bond for the purpose of re-exportation were not to be granted and that the only convenience to be derived from the proposed Act was the remission of that portion of the Import Duty which is now returned in the shape of Drawback and that the suspension of the remaining duty until the time of Export which intended accommodation it was clear would seldom be availed of as in fact it would amount to no accommodation at all to the large body of the Mercantile Community, to whom the additional expense of go-down rent would be a greater consideration than the interest of the money paid as Import duty and recovered as Drawback. As soon as they were informed of the construction thus put upon the Act, the Committee addressed a letter to the Collector of Sea Customs, noticing the extreme disappointment which would be experienced by the Mercantile Community if the Law were thus limited in its operation and pointing out the benefits of a free Bonding system as practised in Europe and the advantages that would attend its introduction on a similar footing at Madras. The Collector was requested in the event of the Committee having been correctly informed as to his interpretation of the Act, to represent the matter to Government with a view to the earnest application of the Mercantile Community being forwarded if necessary to the Supreme Government for a revision of the Act so as to admit of the Establishment of the system at Madras on the same footing as it is established in England. To this communication no reply has yet been received.

CAPTAIN CHADWICK.

The Resolution, of the Special General Meeting of the Chamber, expressive of their thanks to Captain Chadwick of His Majesty's Ship "Andromache," and to his officers and men for their exertions in the suppression of Piracy in the Straits of Malacca, were conveyed by the Chairman to that Officer, who in reply expressed the highest gratification at the compliment paid him by the Chamber.

POST OFFICE ARRANGEMENTS.

Several points connected with the arrangements of the Post Office, have come under your Committee's consideration, and it was considered necessary to address the Post Office Committee in Calcutta respecting the charge levied upon ship letters amounting to 4 annas upon a single letter and a proportionately higher sum upon larger packets. The effect of this new tax, viz. the practice almost universally resorted to on the part of the Public of transmitting their letters in packets opened at the Houses of Agency, by which practice, the object of the tax was almost entirely defeated, was pointed out to that Board. At the same time it was stated as the Committee's impression that the Mercantile Community and the Public at large would not object to a moderate charge upon ship letters in consideration of the greater security afforded by the Post Office to Correspondence forwarded through that Department; and it was proposed that as in London 2½ was charged for every packet not exceeding three ounces, so at Madras 2 annas should be levied upon every packet of moderate size and weight, the trouble of registering double or single letters being the same and no additional expense being incurred in transmitting double letters by sea. Another point was noticed in the same letter to the Post Office Committee, viz. the irregularity in the delivery of ship letters, some Commanders having kept their packets on board for several days after their arrival, and others carrying them on to Calcutta without delivering them at all. This inconvenience as well as the practice of dividing packets at the General Post Office when above the average weight of the clark, and forwarding one portion one day and one another, formed the subject of a communication received from the Bombay Chamber of Commerce, who requested the co-operation of the Madras Committee in endeavouring to obtain a remedy for these evils. The reply of the Post Office Committee was to the effect that these subjects had all been under their consideration, and that in their Report already sent into Government, such remedies had been recommended in each separate case as had appeared most conducive to the united interests of Government and the Public. Before leaving this subject it will be as well to mention that the Committee have had under their consideration the means of expediting the clark, between Calcutta and Madras, a matter of much importance to the Mercantile Correspondence between this place and the Metropolis. Before they could come to any conclusion, however, on the subject, they required information on certain points particularly as to the expense of a mounted clark compared with runners and the local facilities for maintaining horses, &c. in the districts through which the tappal runs, and on those points information has been requested from Government.

SCALE RATES OF AGENCY AND COMMISSION AND GODOWN RENT.

The Chamber will not require to be reminded, that at their first Quarterly meeting a Scale of Rates of Commission and Agency and Godown Rent were submitted by the Committee and approved by the Chamber, that scale has since been invariably in force.

SALES OF GOODS IN ENGLISH CURRENCY, CONVERSION AT 25. PER RUPEE INSTEAD OF 8. PER PAGODA.

Another proposal emanating from the Committee has been approved of by the Chamber, viz. that sales effected upon invoices in currency the amount should hereafter be converted into the Currency of India at the rate of 2 shillings per rupee instead of 8 shillings per pagoda. The Resolution of the Chamber to adopt this course for the future was made known by an advertisement published in all the papers at the Presidency.

SEA CUSTOMS' TARIFF.

At the commencement of the present year the Collector of Sea Customs furnished the Committee with a copy of the Tariff proposed for 1837, with a view to their suggesting any alterations that might occur to them. A few suggestions were offered, but whether they have been adopted the Committee are not informed.

DISPATCH OF THE HUGH LINDSAY.

In December last the Committee received a Communication from the Chamber of Bombay requesting their co-operation in an address to the Supreme Government, expressing a strong wish that the Hugh Lindsay might be despatched to Suva in January, and that Mr. Lindsay was accordingly addressed by the Committee to that effect. The Secretary to the Government of India upon the subject the reply they received was that the despatch of the Hugh Lindsay had been ordered by the Supreme Government previous to the receipt of their letter.

RAIL ROAD ON THE BEACH.

In January the Committee received a letter from the Secretary to Government, stating that it was in contemplation to lay down a Rail Road along the face of the bulwark and requesting them to give their opinion as to the best mode of making such a work most extensively useful. It did not appear to the Committee that there would be any means of rendering a Rail Road on the Beach generally useful to the Merchants of Madras unless branch Roads extending into Black Town to the neighbourhood of the principal Warehouses could be established at the same time. They therefore suggested to the Government, that in order to make the proposed Road available for the Merchants whose Warehouses were situated in Black Town, certain branch Roads should be laid down, the direction of which was pointed out in communication with Captain Cotton of the Engineers. From communication subsequently held with Captain Underwood, the Superintending Engineer, there appears to be some apprehension that the width of the streets through which it was proposed the branch Roads should run, will not admit of their being laid down, and there the matter at present rests.

SICCA RUPEES.

One of the latest subjects to which your Committee's attention has been directed, is the inconvenience arising from the partial introduction of the Company's rupee into the accounts between the Presidencies of Bengal and Madras and the expediency of establishing an universal currency in the accounts of the three Presidencies. In connection with this matter, they have addressed the Bombay and Bengal Chambers desiring their co-operation, in an address to the Supreme Government, requesting them as far as practicable to recall their Bonds at present outstanding in sicca rupees for the purpose of renewing them into Company's rupees, and as belonging to the same subject the Accountant-General was written to respecting fees levied on the renewal of Bonds in his Office. It was requested that the fees which are now demanded in sicca rupees, (one rupee on each Bond renewed) should hereafter be charged in Company's rupees as already obtained in Calcutta. This latter subject, as regards the promissory notes of the Company's loans, has been referred to the Accountant-General in Bengal; to whose Province it appears to belong, but the application has been readily acceded to in the case of Tmjore Bonds by the Accountant-General here, with whom the renewal of these Securities solely rests. No reply has yet been received from the Chambers of Calcutta and Bombay.

APARTMENTS FOR THE CHAMBER.

No permanent arrangement has yet been made respecting a room for the Meetings of the Chamber; it is in contemplation to take a portion of the old Court House which is now undergoing thorough repair. As soon as it is ready a part of the building will be taken and fitted up. The committee passed a resolution at one of their late Meetings, to the effect that parties wishing to become visiting Members of the Chamber, might become so on the introduction of any member of the Committee, and that one or two of the Madras, Bombay and Bengal papers should be taken in together with the Price Currents of each Presidency, for the convenience of Members. A very useful set of charts has been kindly presented to the Chamber by Government and had been bound up. These charts will always be available for reference together with the Committees Books of correspondence, and their proceedings to Members visiting the Chamber.

APPOINTMENT OF A SECRETARY.

It only remains to be mentioned that on the resignation of the late Honorary Secretary Mr. Hart, whose valuable services were justly appreciated by the Chamber and were recorded by a vote of thanks at the last Quarterly Meeting, Mr. Arthur Maclean was appointed Secretary to the Chamber on a salary of 200 rupees per mensem.

CONCLUSION.

Your Committee have thus laid before you as briefly as possible the whole of their proceedings and of the proceedings of the Chamber from its Institution to the present period. The Sugar, Honding, Opium, and Mint questions, all of them involving very deeply the Mercantile interest of this Presidency, have all come under your Committee's review, suggested naturally by circumstances which have arisen since the formation of the Chamber, and the Committee cannot but consider it most fortunate that the Chamber has been formed in time to meet these large and important questions as they successively arose. The successful result of one of their representations has been noticed in this Report and (notwithstanding the unfavourable reply that has recently been received from the Supreme Government on the Opium question,) your Committee indulge a well grounded hope that the equally strong representations that have been made upon the other subjects noticed above, as well as the future representations of the Chamber, will be productive of results equally beneficial to the Commercial interests of Madras.—Madras Spectator, April 15.

UNCOVENANTED SERVANT WIDOWS' FUND.

Pursuant to public notice, a meeting of Uncovenanted Servants took place in the Town Hall yesterday at 9 o'clock A. M., for the purpose of taking the requisite steps for the commencement, from the 1st of May next, of a Fund to provide for the Widows and Children of members of that body. There were about forty-five persons present, and the proceedings were characterised by unanimity and attention to the business brought before them.

Mr. Robert Leslie was called to the chair.

After which a Report was read detailing the steps which have been taken since the last Meeting in October 1836 for giving effect to the resolution entered into at that time. These chiefly consist in having circulated to the various public departments in the Upper and Lower Provinces and at the Presidency, a blank form accompanied by a pamphlet containing the rules and rates of subscription to the Fund, together with queries as to the willingness of parties to subscribe. Returns to these have been received from the majority of the offices, and the result is that one hundred and fifty-seven persons have expressed their readiness to join the fund, while a good many of those who, from being unmarried, or from other circumstances, do not at present require the assistance which it proffers, have testified their satisfaction with the objects, which it contemplates, and have offered their good wishes for the success of the plan.

The Committee have provided for the maintenance of children by requiring a subscription of 4 Rs. for each, which will secure them a pension in event of the decease of their parents, of 16 Rs. per mensem; boys till sixteen years of age, and girls till married, or settled in life.

The Meeting then proceeded to the election of Directors, when Messrs. R. Kerr, N. Campbell, J. B. Plumb, C. Francis, A. Heberlet, W. Ryland, H. Martindell, R. Smith, E. Wilkinson, M. Johnston, W. Byrn and R. Leslie were appointed, and at the recommendation of the former Committee, Mr. D. Clark was confirmed in the Office of Secretary and Accountant to the Fund. Before breaking up, the Meeting rescinded a former vote on the subject; and it is now provided that the re-marriage of Widows shall be no bar to their again enjoying the benefits of the Fund, in case of the decease of their second husbands. Some opposition was made to this clause, but many persons seeming to consider it equitable, and tending to relieve the fund of incumbents, it was carried by a large majority.

Circulars are to be forthwith sent to all the Government offices, in order that those who intend to subscribe may state the amount of pension they are desirous of securing to their families, the age of their children and such other information as may be requisite. Parties at the outset of the fund are to have the option of paying six months' subscription in advance, or by monthly instalments; but if they elect the latter, in case of their not surviving the six months, their widows will not be entitled to any pension, but the amount subscribed will be returned to their representatives. After the six months, the subscriptions will be payable monthly.

This is an outline of the proceedings, but an authenticated Report will be published general information, which may be expected either to-day, or in to-morrow's paper.—Scott's Compendium, April 12.

At the last general meeting held at the Town Hall on the 10th October, 1836, it was determined, that the Uncovenanted Servants' Widows' Pension Fund should be established on the 1st of January 1837, subject to such modifications as might hereafter appear expedient, consequent on the circulation of the pamphlet which was ordered to be printed explanatory of the principles of calculation observed in drawing up the scheme especially with the view of making the fund compulsory on all persons in the service.

In pursuance of this determination, your Committee published a report 80 copies of which have been distributed among the offices at the presidency and 168 copies in the lower and western provinces; the circulation of which your committee were enabled to effect without any expence, through the liberality of government, which allowed them to be forwarded free of postage. Most of the circulars thus conveyed have been acknowledged, and from the replies which have been received, the prospects of a speedy accomplishment of the desirable object in view, has appeared to afford very great satisfaction, and the expression of this feeling has induced the Committee to convene this meeting for the purpose of immediately opening the proposed pension fund.

The following statement will serve to shew the number of persons who have signified their willingness to subscribe, as well as the number of persons who have declined to support the fund.

Willing to subscribe	157
Unwilling, being bachelors	38
Ditto no reason assigned or opposed to the principles of annuities	74
For making the fund compulsory chiefly in regard to married men	104
Against compulsion	61

A majority, it will be perceived, is in favor of the fund being made compulsory on all persons, under the idea, perhaps, of such being indispensable to the stability of the fund, but which notion arises from a misconception of the principles upon which the fund is based. These principles have already been explained, as being analogous to those of annuity societies, than which nothing can be more equitable, more safe, more free from speculative considerations and less liable to be affected by adventitious circumstances. That a sufficient number of lives is necessary to constitute a fund of this description is readily admitted, but the number of those who have already expressed their willingness to support our fund, is sufficient to ensure to its success and permanency, even if no further additions were made to it. But your Committee confidently expect that additional support will be extended to the fund as persons become familiarized with its principles, and are by the Government referred to it for a provision for their families. Besides the circumstances of the uncovenanted servants generally are such, as to render compulsion altogether impracticable, your Committee are firmly convinced that to have recommended a scheme on any other principles would have been only to mislead their constituents, and would have met with a denial of assistance from the Government.

With advertence to the earnestness displayed at the last general meeting, for a provision for children, your Committee, previous to publishing their printed report, after deliberate consideration, recommended to their constituents a scheme, distinct from the Widows' Fund, the features of which are as follows:—A subscription of 4 rupees per month for each child will entitle it to receive, on being left an orphan, 16 rupees per month, if a boy till he attains the age of 16, if a girl until married or settled in life. In the absence of a table or disbursements for children in this country, which it would take years to construct, but which must necessarily precede the formation of a matured scheme on actual data and absolute experience, your Committee cannot do better than recommend the plan they have submitted.

Having performed what was expected from them, particularly in regard to the establishment of a fund, which will provide for the destitute widows and fatherless children, your Committee resign their trust into your hands, but the Committee cannot conclude, without the expression of their acknowledgements to their Secretary, Mr. David Clark, for the assiduity and attention with which the business connected with the pension fund has been performed by him. From the manner in which the Secretary has discharged the duties that have devolved upon him, the Committee are led to think that Mr. C. would prove a very useful secretary to the Fund, and they would beg to take the liberty of recommending him to the notice of the service for that office.

It now devolves upon this meeting to proceed to the election of an executive committee of direction for the management of the affairs of the Fund for the first year of its existence, selecting the officers from the list of intending subscribers now lying on the table, who in communication with, and with the concurrence of the Government officers, will frame such rules as may be thought necessary for the realization of the monthly subscriptions and the management of the fund generally.

Your Committee, in conclusion, would advert to the debt which has been incurred by them in consequence of your resolution of the 10th October last in publishing the printed report as follows:—

Amount balance due to the Committee as per the printed report.....	160	4	0
Expense same incurred.....	106	0	0
	436	4	0

Deduct donations received Co.'s Re..... 96 10 0

Balance due..... 337 10 4

This sum your Committee has every confidence you will aid them in liquidating, or authorize them, as the amount is trifling, to discharge from the first money which may be realized at the formation of the fund.—
Harkn, April 15.

A special general Meeting of the Uncovenanted assistants of Government was held at the Town Hall on Tuesday, the 11th instant.

R. Leslie, Esq., being called to the chair, the following report was read, moved by Mr. M. Cockburn and seconded by Mr. C. Lindstedt.

(The Report was published in Saturday's paper.)

Resolved 1. That the report just read be published in the newspapers for general information.

Moved by Mr. Geo. Hill, seconded by Mr. P. Sutherland, and carried nem. con.

Resolved 2 That the undermentioned gentlemen be the Committee of Directors for the first year with power to fill up vacancies.

N. Campbell, J. B. Plumb, E. Wilkinson, R. Smith, R. Kerr, A. Heberlet, C. Francis, H. Martindell, R. Byrn, M. Johnston, R. Leslie and W. Ryland.

Moved by Mr. W. Byrn, seconded by Mr. C. Kerr, and carried nem. con.

Resolved 3.—That the Directors immediately open the fund by sending circulars to those wishing to subscribe; calling upon them to state the monthly sum they desire to secure for their families for an anticipated declaration as to their ages; the number of children, and such other information as may be necessary.

Moved by Mr. G. Hill seconded by Mr. G. Poole.

Resolved 4.—That with reference to the recommendation of the Committee just read, Mr. David Clark be permanently appointed accountant to the fund, but that hereafter, the officers of the fund shall be appointed by the Directors.

Proposed by Mr. R. Campbell and second by Mr. G. Hart.

Resolved 5.—That the thanks of this meeting be rendered to Messrs. J. B. Plumb, R. Smith, and R. Kerr for the very essential assistance rendered by them in maturing this scheme.

Proposed by Mr. W. Byrn, seconded by Mr. N. Campbell.

Resolved 6. That subscriptions to the fund be paid month by month, and not for six months in advance, as is contemplated by the present tables; but that, with the view of imparting stability to the fund, no benefit shall accrue from the fund to any party till after the expiration of six months from the date of the establishment of the fund; such individual, however, who pays up his six months' subscription may derive immediate benefit.

Proposed by Mr. W. Byrn, seconded by Mr. W. Balston.

Resolved 7.—That all persons now in the service of Government, who may hereafter subscribe, must pay up the subscription from the date of the establishment of the fund.

Proposed by Mr. W. Wilkinson and seconded by Mr. G. Hornett.

Resolved 9.—That a subscription be immediately set on foot for the purpose of paying off the expenses incurred for printing the pamphlet, and such other sums as are mentioned in the report, and that the secretary take measures for accomplishing this object.

Proposed by Mr. W. Byrn, seconded by Mr. C. Lindstedt, and carried nem. con.

Resolved 8.—That a widow on re-marriage is not deprived of her right to pecuniary support from the fund, should she become a widow again.

Proposed by Mr. P. Sutherland, seconded by Mr. G. Lindstedt.

Resolved 10.—That the thanks of this meeting be given to the chairman for his conduct in the chair.

The meeting then closed.

ARMY RETIRING FUND.

At a Meeting held at Agra, on the 22d of March 1837, for the purpose of considering the propriety of taking prompt measures with regard to the establishing of a Retiring Fund for the Indian Army.

Lieut. Col. Roberts having been requested to take the chair—Captain Boulton, 47th Regt. N. I., addressed the Meeting as follows:—

GENTLEMEN,—Previously to our commencing the business for which we have this day assembled, I should wish, with your leave, to offer a few observations, to which I entreat your kind and patient attention. Nobody, I believe, doubts the necessity for a Retiring Fund on a large and liberal footing, that shall embrace the two grand objects—of a competent provision for those who may be willing but unable with their own means alone to avail themselves of it, and the removal from the Army of the higher grades of officers,—for on the removal of these, and of these alone, depends that fair, general and permanent acceleration to promotion to which we all look. By the late revised and enlarged System of retiring pensions granted by our Hon'ble Masters, and for which, as in duty bound, we are all duly grateful, a partial and temporary impetus has indeed been given to promotion—but this is all. It is by no means what is really wanted, affects only the juniors, inasmuch as none of the Colonels and Lieutenant-Colonels are ever likely to avail themselves of it, and is, after all, but temporary. It is therefore of the utmost consequence to us, that we should have some Retiring Fund, which by tempting the higher ranks to retire will give more general promotion, and that the plan of it shall be such as to secure a continuance of this happy result, otherwise after a short run, which would merely benefit a few, we should again be brought to a standstill. The Court of Directors have told us that they will sanction such a scheme when all, that is to say the armies of the three Presidencies, shall be unanimous; and here, Gentlemen, perhaps, lies the greatest difficulty, for it must ever be extremely difficult to obtain unanimity in a large and divided body. That the Indian Army, therefore, divided as it is into three distinct Presidencies should be long in coming to an unanimous decision on this, or indeed on any point, is only what might be expected. Each individual has probably, as is natural, his own particular ideas on this long agitated and much needed Retiring Fund scheme, but as our masters have acquainted us that they will not sanction one unless unanimity prevails regarding it, it is obviously absolutely requisite that not only individuals but that very many should concede their own opinions for the general benefit. Now, gentlemen, submit, that no plan that has yet been promulgated unites the grand advantages of competent provision, general and above all permanent acceleration to promotion by the removal of Colonels and Lieutenant-Colonels, and last and best of all general unanimity of approbation in so high a degree as Mr. Curnin's. To those who, like myself, do not understand the mathematical calculations on which it is founded, it may be sufficient to remark that they have been tested by three of the first calculators in London and proved to be good; we must therefore take them as we do the tables of an Insurance Office, to which we subscribe without thoroughly comprehending or even investigating them, on credit. To the projector, Mr. Curnin, the Army are, as I think, under very considerable obligations, to his efforts I believe are the revised Retiring Pensions recently published mainly attributable, and from his further labours much may yet I think be hoped. But, Gentlemen, is it altogether equitable (it is assuredly not handsome) to allow this humble individual, this poor man, this uncovenanted servant with a very large family dependant on him, to remain without any solid mark of our approbation? To the munificent generosity of an eminent individual now here, he, or rather we—for it was altogether for our sakes he went, was obliged for the very means of going to England. Ought we not, however, to do something ourselves and thereby prove that this Army is neither insensible to nor disinclined to reward the services of those who deserve well of it? Were it only for the purpose of encouraging others to exert themselves in our behalf, I should say we ought, and a small sum, a mere trifle from each of us would answer the purpose. It should be borne in mind the very great difficulties a man circumstanced as Mr. Curnin was, had to contend with in England, which may be unlearned from those experienced by Colonel Baker as set forth in the papers lately published in his defence. It should likewise be remembered, that Mr. Curnin (although through the kindness of the same eminent individual to whom he was indebted for pecuniary means his appointment was kept open for him) lost all the allowances of his situation during his absence on our affairs and for which, the paltry—the trifling subscriptions made for his family, which he left behind) to subsidize, by no means compensated. He has, therefore, besides running great risks of incurring the censure of the Home Authorities and undergoing great personal labour and anxiety, actually been a pecuniary sufferer on our account,—shall we, Gentlemen, allow this to continue? So, me have, I believe, an apprehension that this Fund would not be safe, but of this there can surely be no reasonable cause for fear; for if sanctioned the Court become its guarantee and will consequently of course ascertain its safety beforehand.

In conclusion, Gentlemen, I would just observe, that any prospect of promotion by an increase to the Army, seems now highly improbable. Government may possibly, if requisite, give us back our two companies and increase the numerical strength of troops and companies. If more is needed may not the plan now contemplated for an increase to our Cavalry to be by the transfer of Regiments from Madras, be acted on with regard to our Infantry also? May not many stations to the eastward and southward at least be garrisoned by Madras and Bombay troops—and thereby any increase to our Army rendered unnecessary? We should do well in my humble opinion to consider all this, and reflect on the consequent absolute and immediate necessity for a Retiring Fund; and as the advocacy of an active and intelligent person on the spot must prove highly beneficial

I would also advise that we should, if possible, secure it. An officer of rank, friendly to our interests, and who from the situation he has lately held would be likely to be listened to by the Hon'ble Court, is just now going home, and could be persuaded no doubt to undertake the advocacy of our cause. Recollect, Gentlemen, that this Fund will not in any way interfere with the purchase of Regimental steps, but that it is to a Retiring Fund alone that we can look for general and above all permanent acceleration to promotion; because, exclusive of all other causes, officers are not always to be found at the head of Regiments willing to sell out, and if found Regiments may not at all times be able to furnish the means required for the continued purchase of such costly steps. The Madras and Bombay Armies have already set us the example of petitioning, and as yet this good example has only been followed by two Regiments in our Army. This is a large station and should not, and I sincerely hope will not, be behind-hand in following up such good examples. The Propositions I intend laying before you, Gentlemen, are based on the resolutions of a meeting of the officers of the 68th N. I., held at Jummalpoore, on the 11th ultimo, and are as follow: viz.

Proposition 1st—by Captain Boulton, seconded by Lieutenant-Colonel Roberts,—That this meeting coincides in and approves of the resolutions passed at a meeting of officers held at Jummalpoore, on the 11th February 1837, viz.

1st. That this meeting being deeply impressed with the services rendered by Mr. Curnin to the Indian Army, are desirous of evincing their sense of his merit and exertions on their behalf, by something more substantial than mere thanks.

2d. That this meeting submit to their brother officers of the armies of the three presidencies that a subscription of four per cent, on personal allowances for one month, would raise a sum not unworthy of Mr. Curnin's acceptance.

3d. That Commanding officers of corps be solicited to collect the amount in their respective regiment, and lodge the same in the Union Bank, staff officers making their own arrangements in their respective departments.

4th. That this meeting cannot omit the opportunity thus offered them, of expressing their grateful sense of the liberality evinced towards Mr. Curnin by an eminent individual, whom they consider it unnecessary to name.

5th. That the Secretary to the Union Bank be requested to pay the amount collected to Mr. Curnin, at the expiration of the commercial year, by which time, it is hoped the whole will be collected.

6th. That this meeting, while they gratefully acknowledge the liberal conduct of the Hon'ble the Court of Directors in revising the Retiring Regulation, and granting pensions for length of service, beg respectfully to submit, that, the length of years and rates of pension for prolonged service, are not such as to induce field officers generally to avail themselves of the boon, and retire from the service; and as the object of the army has invariably been directed to the means of obtaining retirements amongst the higher grades as may enable them to enjoy in Europe, those comforts which they abandon in this country by relinquishing the service, they consider that this object can only be obtained by Mr. Curnin's Fund or some modification of it.

7th. That this meeting approve of a respectful memorial being drawn up, and submitted through the regular channel, to the Hon'ble the Court of Directors, praying their reconsideration of Mr. Curnin's Fund, or to grant to the Indian army such other fund as may be acceptable to the army and calculated to obtain the object in view.—Which was carried with only two dissentient voices.

Proposition 2nd—by Captain Boulton, seconded by Major Herring,—That one officer from each corps or otherwise, as it may be thought fit, be requested to form a Committee to draw up a memorial, based on the above resolution, to the Hon'ble Court of Directors.—Carried with one dissentient voice.

Proposition 3rd—by Captain Boulton, seconded by Capt. Douglas,—That the officers of such detached corps as may not feel disposed to draw up a memorial of their own be invited to subscribe to the above.—Carried with one dissentient voice.

Proposition 4th—by Capt. Boulton, seconded by Major Burroughs,—That the chairman be requested to write in the name and behalf of this Meeting to Colonel Craigie to request him to advocate the matter of our memorial with the Hon'ble the Court of Directors on his arrival in London.—Carried unanimously.

Proposition 5th—by Captain the Hon'ble H. Dalzell, seconded by Major Burroughs,—That Colonel Swiney be also requested to join himself with Colonel Craigie for the abovementioned purpose.—Carried nem. con.

Proposition 6th—by Captain Boulton, seconded by Major Godby, that each officer be requested to affix his signature, and also that of any others by whom he may be so authorized—that a copy of these proceedings be sent to the Agra Ukhbar and Englishman for publication.—Carried.

Proposition 7th—by Lieutenant Curtis, seconded by Captain Douglas—That subscriptions from each Regiment shall be collected when the opinions of the Bengal Army on the subject of remunerating Mr. Curnin are ascertained.—Carried.

The Meeting then elected the undermentioned officers as their Committee:

Lieut.-Col. Roberts, Eur.	Captain Douglas, 14th Regt.
Regt.	Hon'ble Captain Dalzell,
Major Herring, 37th Regt.	Artillery.
Captain Boulton, 47th Regt.

A vote of thanks was then passed to Colonel Roberts, the Chairman, for the ability and zeal with which he conducted the business of the Meeting.

A similar vote was also passed in favour of Captain Boulton for his zealous and indefatigable exertions in forwarding the cause.

Cal. Cour., April 5.]

At meeting held at Nussersabad on the 12th April, 1837, for the purpose of taking into consideration the propriety of adopting measures with reference to the establishment of a Retiring Fund for the Indian army.

Colonel J. F. Dunlop, of the Artillery, being requested to take the chair, and having kindly complied, proceeded to address the meeting as follows:—

Gentlemen,—The subject to which our attention is now called, namely, the Retiring Fund proposed by Mr. Curnin, has already been so much discussed, that, perhaps little remains to be said thereon, or done by those who are not great financiers or much versed in the abstruse calculations which Mr. Curnin's plan involves, further than, reiterating in a memorial to the Court of Directors, their approval of the general principles on which Mr. Curnin's plan is based, expressing their anxious hope that the court will give the subject the further consideration that the combined interests of the East India Company and their army must justify, and that the present condition of the army loudly calls for; as well as their perfect confidence that the court of Directors will, after mature reflection, be satisfied of Mr. Curnin's plan bearing the character of stability, and that they will decide upon adopting it; either as it now stands, or with such modification as may be found necessary: and that in whatever shape they may put the plan into operation, they will firmly guarantee to the officers of their army the results held out to them by it in its present form: thus leaving detail to others better qualified for the task. And beyond this, gentlemen, I see not what we have to do, but to offer our sincere and hearty thanks to Mr. Curnin for the kind zeal and talent with which he continues to exert himself in our cause; and express to him our most sanguine hopes that his unremitting labors thereon may be crowned with success.

The chairman having closed his address, Captain Talbot, of the 8th Regiment N. I., next rose and spoke as follows:—

Gentlemen,—Before proceeding with the business on account of which we have just assembled, I beg your attention to such remarks on the subject as I have now to offer for your consideration, and request your patient attention for the few minutes which they will occupy. I believe I may assume that not an individual amongst us questions the necessity of such a Retiring Fund being established in our service as shall embrace the two-fold object of ensuring the permanent acceleration of promotion on a fair and general footing by enabling officers in our higher grades to avail themselves of its provisions for supplying a competency with their own means on which to retire from the army. It must be evident to all that promotion can alone be permanently and generally accelerated in our army, by the retirement of the seniors of its grades. We have every reason to be grateful for the revised system of retirement lately granted by our honorable employers, and which has indeed already given some impetus to promotion, though such as must necessarily be of a very partial and temporary description, affecting the juniors only. This, however, after all, is but of a limited kind, and by no means such as can ever meet the general wants of our army, for where are the Colonels or Lieut.-Colonels who are ever likely to avail themselves of it? The Court of Directors have intimated their readiness to sanction a retiring scheme, when the armies of all the presidencies shall have reached unanimity on the plan of such. Herein perhaps lies the greatest difficulty in the way of our success, unless we can again severally agree for the general benefit of the service to merge our individual partialities for our particular ideas and wishes on this point. We are already agreed that some fund of this kind is most requisite now perhaps, a married man may prefer a bonus fund, another some different plan, but with respect to the one I am about to refer to, we have already mostly agreed. The Government in this country has once recommended it, and Mr. Curnin, its originator, has been home, and has explained its principles for us, it consequently has this advantage in favor of unanimity over all others, viz. that it has already run the gauntlet of the three presidencies, and has gained its way over all the other schemes, and opinions with which we were lately inundated, so that we need for the most part only now remain consistent with ourselves and adhere to our already expressed wishes. To insure ourselves from a great loss of time in agitating others upon which we have no prospect of obtaining a tithes of such unanimity, and without this requisite unanimity we cannot look for any immediate sanction from the home authorities, or even the chance of its reconsideration by them. Our success, therefore, would appear to be certain, if individuals would but again concede their own opinions for the general benefit, and in urging you, gentlemen, to do so, I submit, that no other plan has been yet promulgated which so well unites the sound and two-fold objects embraced in this one, viz. competent provision, and the general and above all the continued, the permanent acceleration of promotion by the removal of Colonels and Lieutenant-Colonels.

The calculations upon which Mr. Curnin founds his plan have been tested for us by those who should be competent to understand such, and have been proved to be good, and by three of the first actuaries in London. We may consequently take them for granted (although we may not individually comprehend their data) in the same manner as we should those of insurances, or the like matters, of which we had not ourselves the means of investigating their grounds. I mean upon credit, and I conceive this remark may be sufficient to dispose of any necessity on our part for now entering into any examination of those details themselves; for my own part I acknowledge myself incompetent to do so. It appears to me, that the plan has earned for itself sufficient examination and ample test, and as such is fully worthy of our approbation. On this head, therefore, unanimity need not be defeated for want of ability on our parts to scrutinize the mere details. Gentlemen, it is the plan itself, the adoption of some one scheme for our general benefit, that now demands our unanimity in order to ensure the promised concurrence and sanction of our employers, and to that necessary feeling would I now solicit your attention. Without this fund, or one of a similar tendency, what prospects have we of any permanent and sufficient degree of promotion? What prospects have we now of any such material increase to the army as shall insure to us any thing like a general promotion? No; it is to such a fund as this only to which we can now look with any confidence of ensuring ourselves a general and permanent rise in our service.

Before concluding these observations permit me to explain why I have now refrained from alluding to two subjects which so just claim the gratitude of the Indian Army. I allude 1st to our undoubted obligations to Mr. Curnin, the projector of this fund, whose past efforts in India and at home have been unwearied on our behalf, and whose willing and consistent labours in our cause have not flagged, but are now as ready for our help as ever; and 2dly, to the disinterested generosity and liberality of the high minded and truly eminent individual to whom we are so deeply indebted for the real and lively interest he has throughout evinced for our undertaking. Gentlemen, my reason for not enlarging on these two subjects is—that the propositions I am prepared to lay before you, will, if carried, embrace a far more appropriate notice of such than any personal recommendation or exclusive opinion of mine could ensure; to both we deeply owe our public acknowledgments and thanks, and in respect of one of them bare equity alone, demands of us that our thanks should be embodied in a more solid and substantial manner than our mere approbation and thankfulness could convey to him; for these reasons, therefore, and not from any backwardness to enlarge on such upon my own part, I have here refrained from more particular allusion to those points in order that this meeting should have the opportunity of embodying and conveying for itself its own sense of them, which it will doubtless do more fully as well as more fitly and publicly, than any single expression of mine could prompt it to adopt. These propositions which I have to lay before you, are grounded on those expressed in a meeting of the officers of the 58th Regt. N. I., at Jumalpoore on the 11th of February last, and are as follows:

Proposition 1. By Captain Talbot, seconded by Captain Jones, Deputy Pay Master.

That this meeting coincides in and approves of the resolutions passed at Jumalpoore on the 11th February 1837, at a meeting of officers held there to the following purport.

1. That being deeply impressed with the services rendered by Mr. Curnin to the Indian Army, this meeting are desirous to evince their sense of the merits and exertions of that gentleman on their behalf by something more expressive than bare thanks, and beg to submit to their brother officers in the armies of the three presidencies, that a subscription of four per cent. on personal allowances for one month, might raise an offering not undeserving the acceptance of that gentleman, and the officers commanding corps, posts, &c., be requested to collect and deposit the same in the Union Bank, and that the secretary thereof be requested to pay the amount collected to Mr. Curnin, at the co-operation of the commercial year.

2. That this meeting cannot permit the opportunity now offered to pass without most cordially availing themselves of it, to express their warrant and grateful sense of the generosity and disinterested liberality evinced towards Mr. Curnin, by the eminently distinguished personage whom it cannot be necessary to particularize by name.

3. That this meeting, with the readiest and most grateful acknowledgments of the liberal conduct of the Hon'ble Court of Directors, in revising the retiring regulations and granting pensions upon length of servitude, beg, nevertheless, respectfully to submit that neither the years nor the rates of pensioning upon prolonged service, are such, as to induce field officers generally to avail themselves of that boon for retiring from the service, and as the invaluable object of the army has been directed to the obtaining of means for insuring retirement among the higher grades of it, of a nature competent to secure their enjoyment in Europe of the comforts abandoned in this country by their relinquishment of the service, they conceive that object can only be adequately obtained through Mr. Curnin's fund, or some modification of such.

4. That this meeting approve of a respectful memorial being drawn up, and submitted through the usual channel to the Hon'ble Court of Directors, praying their reconsideration of the above fund, or that they will grant to the Indian Army, such other fund as may be acceptable to it from being calculated to ensure the object in view. This, gentlemen, contains the substance of my 1st proposition.

Carried unanimously.

Proposition 2. By Captain Talbot, seconded by Captain P. Latauche, Major of Brigade.

That an officer from each corps (or otherwise), be requested to form a committee to draw up a memorial to the Hon'ble Court of Directors founded upon a preceeding resolution; that officers of detached corps, who are not disposed to draw up a separate memorial of their own, be invited to subscribe to it; and that each officer be requested to affix his signature, and also that of any others by whom he may be so authorized.

Carried unanimously.

By Captain Talbot, and seconded by Captain Farquharson, 8th Regt. N. I.

Proposition 3. That the Chairman be requested to write in the name and on behalf of this meeting, to Colonels Craigie, Swiney, and Frith, begging them on arrival in London to advocate the matter of the memorial with the Hon'ble Court of Directors.

Lost by a majority, as the sense of the meeting approved that the matter should be left solely to the Hon'ble Court's recommendation and treatment.

By Captain Talbot, seconded by Captain Jones, Deputy Pay Master.

Proposition 4. That a copy of these proceedings be sent to the Agra Ukhbar and Calcutta papers for publication.

Carried unanimously.

The meeting then proceeded to the selection of the committee for preparing the memorial, but the formation of such was postponed until to-morrow.

A vote of thanks was next passed to the chairman, Colonel Dundas, Artillery, after which the meeting adjourned.

The names of the officers present at the meeting at Nussacerabad.

UNION BANK MEETING.

In pursuance of the notice issued by the Directors of the "Union Bank," a numerous and respectable meeting of the proprietors took place yesterday (4th April) for the purpose of considering the expediency of increasing the capital of that establishment.

Captain Vint was requested to take the chair, when the business commenced by Mr. Bruce (Chairman of the Directors) reading the following Address:—

GENTLEMEN,—As Chairman of your Directors, I have to inform you, that we have called the present Special

General Meeting in order to recommend to you an addition to the Capital Stock of the Bank. This, if approved by the major 'v, will then be submitted (agreeably to rule) to a second General Meeting specially called, after one month's notice; by which it will have to be confirmed, before it is finally adopted.

The alterations which we contemplate, will be now laid before you in a series of propositions from your Directors, upon which you will express your sentiments.

In the mean time, I may shortly state their substance as follows.

The present Capital of the Bank (all paid up) consists of 600 shares of Co.'s Rs- 2,700, each, or..... 16,20,000
To each of these was added, a supplementary third, of 900 Co's Rs- making, for 600,.. 5,40,000

Total actual Capital 21,60,000

We now propose to fill up each share of 2,700 to an even sum of 3,000, which by the additional 300 will give..... 1,80,000

And to fill up each of the supplementary thirds of 900 to the even sum of 1,000, which, by adding 100, gives..... 60,000

Making the total new Stock thus added.... 2,40,000

Added..... 2,40,000

And which swells the capital from 21,60,000 to 24,00,000

Finally we propose to give each holder of the 600 original shares of 2,700, on his paying up the differences as above on all his old stock, an additional share of 1,000 Rs- new stock, which on 600 shares will give..... 6,00,000 and increase the total Capital of the Bank to 30,00,000

I may remind you in conclusion, that the Original Scheme of this Bank, was 50 lakhs of Sicca Rs equal to Co.'s Rupees 53,33 333-5 4, so that even with this addition we shall still be short of that mark, considered expedient ten years ago, by Sicca Rs. 20 lakhs.

After this arrangement shall be carried into complete effect, all the shares of the bank will consist of 1,000 Rs. each, with votes to all in proportion to stock held, which we consider will be much more convenient than the present uneven and unequal sums, besides affording greater facilities to transfers, and to small capitalists seeking for investment. I shall now direct the Secretary to read to you the proceedings of a special meeting of your directors, held on the 21st ultimo, at which we came to the unanimous resolution of recommending to you the above addition of capital, in the series of propositions which are now submitted for your approval and confirmation.

Proposition 1st.—That the present six hundred full shares of Company's Rupees 2,700 be increased to 3,000, each, and that the present six hundred supplementary shares be increased from 900 to 1,000 Company's Rupees each.

Proposition 2nd.—That upon these subscriptions being paid up, the old full shares shall be divided into three new shares of 1,000 each, making the whole number of these 1,800; which together with the 600 supplementary shares, will make in all 2,400 shares of 1,000 Rupees each or 24 Lakhs of Rupees.

Proposition 3rd.—That to the above 1,800 shall be added 600 new shares of 1,000 Company's Rupees or 6 Lakhs; making a grand total of 3,000 shares of 1,000 each or Company's Rupees Thirty Lakhs.

Proposition 4th.—That the 600 additional shares of 1,000 each now be created, shall in the first instance be offered at par to such Proprietors of the old full shares
